[Text] Bonn, 11 May (DPA) -- The political exchange of views between Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and Icelandic Prime Minister Gunnar Thoroddsen in Bonn today was characterized by the agreement of the two NATO partners on all important questions. Schmidt and Thoroddsen welcomed the American President's latest disarmament proposals, which the two superpowers intend to take up at the end of next month. With regard to the NATO summit in Bonn on 10 June, both countries agree that NATO must preserve its defense capability while also pursuing "disarmament negotiations on this basis."

Thoroddsen, who is paying an official visit to Bonn, explained to Schmidt his concern for fishery protection. He asked the chancellor to support Iceland's demands to the EEC for protection of the stocks of cod, which are becoming extinct, also outside Icelandic waters and for the removal of the EEC import duties on salted herrings and pollack fillets, which range up to 9 percent.

At a joint news conference with Thoroddsen the chancellor also stressed the agreement on the assessment of the Falklands conflict, the situation in Poland and East-West relations. He said the visit by the Icelandic prime minister is another contribution to "closer cohesion of the Europeans." He also announced that he will have a meeting with Thoroddsen and all Scandinavian heads of government during Kiel week at the end of June.

Schmidt gave a dinner this evening for Thoroddsen, who then also had a talk with Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher. Tomorrow the Icelandic head of government is to meet Federal President Karl Carstens.

POLISH OFFICIAL DISCUSSES REPAYING FOREIGN DEBT

LD111700 Hamburg DPA in German 1518 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] Bonn, 11 May (DPA) -- Edward Kowalczyk, deputy chairman of Poland's Council of Ministers, has been discussing economic problems, including the repayment of Poland's foreign debts, in Bonn. At a news conference today Kowalczyk, who has come to Bonn in his capacity as chairman of the Central Committee of the Democratic Party and at the invitation of FDP Chairman Hans-Dietrich Genscher, stressed the desire for rapprochement, at least between these two parties. FDP General Secretary Guenther Verheugen announced that he will respond to a reciprocal invitation this year.

Kowalczyk used this opportunity to describe his country's difficulties. He especially opposes Western sanctions, which he says are considerably worsening Poland's problems with regard to supplies of raw materials, spare parts and partially manufactured products. The sanctions are also making the return to normalization and to a state of social peace more difficult. Kowalczyk has previously stated that Poland currently has to use 75 percent of the receipts from its exports to pay the interest of its foreign debts.

He thanked FDP Parliamentary Party Chairman Wolfgang Mischnick for the concern he has publicly expressed about Poland's fate, a concern which is quite understandable. However, change can only begin when the Polish Government receives the broadest possible support. There can be no thoughts of reauthorizing trade unions before this happens. Kowalczyk, who also met Federal Economics Minister Count Otto Lambsdorff (FDP) and, Hans-Juergen Wischnewski (SPD), minister of state in the chancellor's office. Kowalczyk will pay a visit to the Baden-Wuerttemberg FDP before returning to Poland.

GENSCHER REITERATES SUPPORT FOR REAGAN PROPOSALS

LD111026 Hamburg DPA in German 0917 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] Bonn, 11 May (DPA) -- The U.S. President's disarmament proposals on Sunday showed the United States, "like us", supports the policy of detente, Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher said today in a West German radio interview. Part of this means to maintain defense efforts at the same time. This linking of detente and defence, raised in 1967 to the level of alliance doctrine in the NATO report of the then Belgian Foreign Minister Pierre Harmel, was also supported by the United States.

"It is clear...that the United States, like us, still most srongly approves of and supports the principles of the Harmel report...which, on the one hand, underscores firmness -- that means defense efforts -- and on the other hand, detente and disarmament." Now the Soviet Union must show that it is really ready for disarmament and that it does not just want upper limits for arms which already exist anyway.

In saying this Genscher was referring to the agreements sought during the NATO summit in Bonn 10 June, and stressed the three large disarmament offers existing to date. After the start of negotiations on medium-range missiles, at which the zero option had been submitted in Geneva as the maximum aim, Reagan now proposed the reduction of strategic long-range weapons. The Western offer on agreeing to confidence-building measures must be seen as the third large complex. "It is the Soviet Union's move," said Genscher.

DEMISE OF GERMAN-FRENCH TANK PROJECT REPORTED

DW110853 Frankfurt FRANKFURTER RUNDSCHAU in German 11 May 82 pp 1, 2

[Dirk Cornelsem dispatch]

[Excerpts] Bonn, 10 May -- Chancellor Helmut Schmidt has reconciled himself to the fact that he cannot push the development of a German-French tank though the Bundestag at this time. According to Bonn government circles on Monday, he will therefore have to notify French President Francois Mitterrand of the cancellation of the project on Saturday. Schmidt is to meet with Mitterrand this weekend in Hamburg.

The chancellor plans to point out to Mitterrand that the FDP Bundestag deputies continue to oppose the preliminary planning for the costly "tank for the Nineties," whereas the SPD faction would have approved the project with a majority, after the chancellor had changed the minds of Defense Minister Hans Apel and important deputies such as Karsten Voigt and Peter Meanning.

The reason for the project's failure -- the preliminary planning envisaged for 3 years was estimated to cost DM 150-200 million alone -- is the attitude of Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher (FDP) who, unlike Schmidt, is making no attempt to change the minds of FDP party members in the faction.

BRIEFS

COOPERATION WITH BULGARIA -- Bonn, 7 May (DPA) -- A program has been agreed between Bulgaria and the FRG for more intensive cooperation in plant and animal breeding and in feedstuffs, mechanization and food supply. According to the Ministry of Food, Agriculture and Forestry in Bonn, the second session of the joint commission of both countries in Plovdiv, Bulgaria, discussed the possibility of joint agricultural projects in third countries. [Text] [Hamburg DPA in German 0953 GMT 7 May 82 LD]

PREMIER'S OFFICE APPROVES OF REAGAN ARMS PLAN

AU111728 Rome ANSA in English 1545 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] Rome, 11 May (ANSA) -- Italy viewed with favor U.S. President Ronald Reagan's proposals for disarmament, according to sources at the premier's office today. Premier Giovanni Spadolini had been informed of the proposals in a personal message sent him by the White House chief prior to the public announcement. The American offer to begin arms reduction talks was clear proof of Washington's determination to go ahead with a balanced reduction of intercontinental missiles, Chigi Palace sources continued. This would give new impetus to the East-West dialogue so vigorously pursued by the Italian Government, as well, the same sources said.

PICCOLI ELECTED CHRISTIAN DEMOCRAT'S CHAIRMAN

AU111946 Rome ANSA in English 1940 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] Rome, 11 May (ANSA) -- Flaminio Piccoli was elected chairman of the Christian Democrat Party today to replace the outgoing chairman of Italy's party of relative majority, Arnaldo Forlani. The outcome of balloting conducted by the new DC national council was 114 votes for Piccoli, 66 blank ballots cast and 8 nullified. The new chairman left behind the job of party secretary, a post Ciriaco de Mita was elected to during the DC national congress, which concluded April 26.

PCI CENTRAL COMMITTEE MEETING ON MAFIA OPENS

AU112021 Rome ANSA in English 1945 GMT 11 May 82

[Excerpts] Rome, 11 May (ANSA) -- A note of alarm for the proliferation of organized crime in southern Italy was sounded today by the Communist Party expert on terrorism, Ugo Pecchioli, in a statement delivered here to open a party central committee meeting on the mafia in Sicily and the other two versions of the mafia rampant in the South, Calabria's (?drangheta), and the camorra in and around Naples.

The M.P. for the big opposition party declared that, "From the experience gained in the battle against terrorism we can draw precious lessons for the fight against the mafia and the camorra". After recalling the mafia-style slaying of the Communist Party regional secretary for Sicily, Pio la Torre, on April 30, Pecchioli said, "No idea, not even the possibility of a foreign connection, can be discarded in the search for the killers and their boss".

He then outlined recent inroads made by the mafia, the (?drangheta) and the camorra in their traditional areas and indicated the windfalls the mafia hopes to reap from the construction of NATO missile installations in Cosimo, Sicily. Reiterating his party's position on the deployment of the intermediate range nuclear missiles in Italy, Pecchioli said that, "Sicily must not be transformed into a nuclear missile launching pad in consideration of goals of the social and economic renewal of the island."

In another area of his statement, the Communist Party official warned that, "The power of the mafia has been extended into the banking system, it controls a conspicuous flow of financing and controls or directly runs industrial, agricultural and service activities". "At the same time", he continued, "the financial and political power of the mafia and the camorra has led to the revival of the drug market".

MANY USSR CARGO SHIPS BOUND FOR ARGENTINA

LD081356 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1300 GMT 8 May 82

[Report from the Canary Islands]

[Text] As a result of the dispute between Argentina and Great Britain over the Malvinas Islands, a veritable flood of ships flying the Soviet flag or chartered by the USSR have begun to arrive in the port of Las Palmas -- they are found for the Argentine ports of Buenos Aires, Bahia Blanca and Necochea, among others. The fact that some of these ports are not capable of taking large grain-carrying ships means that a greater number of ships with a smaller draft are being used. Between today, Saturday, and tomorrow, Sunday, it is reckoned that a total of 18 ships -- 12 of them grain ships -- will pass through. The Soviet Union gave Argentina a commitment to buy the grain and meat surplus which the South American republic cannot sell to Europe now because of the Common Market boycott.

USSR EXPULSION OF AIRLINE OFFICIAL CONFIRMED

LD111244 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1200 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] A Spanish Foreign Ministry spokesman has confirmed to RNE [Spanish Broadcasting Company] that the director of Iberia in Moscow has been expelled. When we spoke to the ministry a couple of minutes ago they still did not know whether (Sanchez Garcia) has been given a deadline for leaving the Soviet Union. We have also spoken to Iberia's management in Madrid, who are meeting at this moment to discuss the reasons for the expulsion from Spain of a member of Aeroflot's staff in Madrid. [sentence as heard]

BASQUE TERRORISM IMMOBILIZES NUCLEAR PLANT

NC111556 Paris AFP in English 1528 GMT 11 May 82

[Excerpt] Madrid, 11 May (AFP) -- The military wing of the Basque separatist movement ETA has scored a major victory by rendering technicians at the Lemoniz nuclear power plant, crucial to Spain's energy supply, too terrified to work. Following the murder last week of technical director Angel Pascual Mugica, 90 technicians of the Iberduero Company went on strike yesterday. Iberduero owns the power plant, under construction near Bilbao in the Basque region of north Spain.

Despite appeals from the Autonomous Basque Government not to yield to "terrorist blackmail", the technicians said in a communique that they could not live with "an unbearable family, personal and professional situation." Iberduero technicians, forced to live clandestinely, are tormented by both the fear of losing their jobs if they refuse to work and of being attacked. Since 1977, two engineers and three workers at the Lemoniz plant have been killed by ETA-M, the military wing of ETA, and frequently employees receive death threats.

The killing of Mr Mugica occured on the day that management of the Lemoniz plant was placed under the authority of the Basque Autonomous Government and no longer under Madrid. Since 1977 also, the terrorist organization has carried out 300 attacks against the plant and other Iberduero installations, causing damage estimated at about 29 million dollars.

THATCHER ADDRESSES COMMONS; SCORES BBC COVERAGE

LD111556 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1530 GMT 11 May 82

[By PA parliamentary staff]

[Text] Argentine withdrawal from the Falklands would have to be to a specified timetable if there was to be a cease-fire, the prime minister insisted today. During a noisy Commons question time she warned: "There are certain fundamental principles we cannot fudge in any way. The cease-fire must be accompanied by a withdrawal to a specific timetable — and in a comparatively short time."

As gloom gathered in Whitehall over the United Nations peace talks, Mrs Thatcher rejected demands by opposition leader Mr Foot for any deal or action to be prejudged by MP's. She also underlined the government's displeasure at some of the BBC's coverage of the crisis.

But one Tory MP -- less restrained -- described last night's "Panorama" programme as odious, and a subversive travesty which dishonoured freedom of speech. Mr Foot accused two "Tory newspapers" -- THE SUN and THE DAILY MAIL -- of hysterical bloodlust.

There were four calls by Mr Foot for MP's to be given the chance to judge the UN secretary general's current peace plan, before a final government decision was taken. Rapturous support came from the Tory benches when Mrs Thatcher replied: "No -- the government has this responsibility -- will shoulder that responsibility -- and will stand before this House and defend its decision."

Tory Mr Michael Neubert (Romford) began the questioning by accusing the Argentine of deliberately trying to spin out negotiations, to its own advantage. Mrs Thatcher said: "The negotiation will take a little time. I must make it clear that the fact we are negotiating does not close off any military options at all...

"There are certain fundamental principles which we cannot fudge in any way -- we must make it absolutely clear that the Argentines must not enter into those negotiations in the belief or on the condition that by the end of them, sovereignty is ceded to them." There were renewed Conservative cheers when Mrs Thatcher insisted that the government alone would decide, then be accountable to the Commons for its judgment.

Tory Mr Tony Marlow (Northhampton North) accused EEC countries of "flapping around like too many decapitated chickens" over their flagging support of Britain's stand. But the prime minister said the EEC had given Britain very staunch support right from the start. Mrs Thatcher said she "hoped and believed" the EEC would extend the ban on Argentine imports when it ran out next week.

Mr Foot concentrated on the role all MP's should play in judging the secretary general's proposals. "There are many important principles involved. The government had made some very wise departures from previous utterances on many of these matters. But the House of Commons has the right to make a judgment on this matter before any decision is made by the government which would enlarge the conflict."

Mr Foot said the government had been "very leniently treated" by MP's who should now be given the chance to consider the new peace plan. Mr Enoch Powell (Official Unionist Party, Down South) reminded the prime minister that MP's had never been asked to accept anything less than the "immediate and unconditional restoration of sole British administration." Mrs Thatcher insisted sovereignty could not be changed by invasion.

The media row was sparked by former consumer affairs minister, Mrs Sally Oppenheim (Gloucester) who made a bitter attack on the BBC "Panorama" programme on the Falklands. "For the most part," she said, "it was an odious, subversive travesty in which Michael Cockerell and other BBC reporters dishonoured the right of freedom of speech in this country."

Mrs Oppenheimer asked: "Isn't it time such people accepted that if they have those rights, they also have responsibilities?" Mrs Thatcher told her: "I share the deep concern which has been expressed on many sides, in particular about the content of the "Panorama" programme last evening. I know how very, very strongly many people feel that the case for our country is not being put with sufficient vigour on certain of the programmes -- I do not say all -- but certain of the programmes of the BBC."

The chairman of the BBC had given an assurance that the corporation was not neutral on the issue, said Mrs Thatcher. She added: "I hope his words will be heeded by the many who have responsibilities for standing up for our task force, for our boys, for our people and the cause for democracy."

For Labour, Mr David Winnick (Walsall N) slammed "government interference" saying it would be useful if some government ministers stopped "the constant intimidation of the BBC." Mrs Thatcher stressed that when the lives of Britons might be at stake "information which may be of use to the enemy or for discussions which can be of use to the enemy," should be taken into account on programmes. She added that the government expected the case for freedom to be put by those responsible for doing so.

Tory Sir Bernard Braine (South East Essex) said there was a rising tide of anger at the "treatment by the media at the presentation of any propaganda and defeatists views of an unrepresentative minority. Increasing numbers of people are tellingus this amounts to a sort of treachery." Mrs Thatcher said: "Our people are very robust and the heart of Britain is sound. I hope that individually people will make their views directly known to the BBC by letters or telephone calls."

Bur Mr Foot defended the BBC. "People are trying to do their duty in difficult circumstances," he said. And he asked the prime minister: "Would you take some steps to reprove the attitude of some of the newspapers which support you, the hysterical blood-lust of THE SUN and THE DAILY MAIL...the papers which bring such disgrace on the journalism of this country." Mrs Thatcher said the media were totally free to discuss and publish what they wished. "Equally, as you have just demonstrated, we are free to say what we think about them," she added.

Earlier, Mrs Thatcher had insisted that although some South American states might be behind the Argentines' sovereignty claim they "totally and utterly condemned the use of force." She added: "In any case, I am not circumscribed by the views of those countries, but by the interest of our people."

Tonight the Liberals and the Social Democrats entered the row over media coverage of the Falklands crisis by putting down a Commons motion condemning government attacks on the BBC. Mr William Rodgers of the SDP said that both parties found it deplorable that the prime minister and her senior colleagues should "turn their guns on the BBC." The prime minister last week told the Commons she felt at times that the Argentines and British forces were being treated as equals by the media. And reinforced her view with tough comments about "Panorama" reporting.

The motion backed by Liberal leader, Mr David Steel says that Liberals and Social Democrats regret the "intemperate attacks" made by the prime minister and senior colleagues on the BBC and its treatment of the Falklands crisis. It says that the attacks could lead to "permanent and unjustified damage to the reputation of the BBC at home and abroad." The motion calls on the Commons to assert belief that "free speech and honest reporting should not become the victims of government intolerance."

BBC Defends Itself

PM111257 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 11 May 82 p 1

[Text] The BBC last night denied claims by MP's and some of its audience that its Falklands coverage was biased towards Argentina.

It said: "The BBC is not, and has never been, neutral as between this country and the Argentine aggressor." Programmes had not been pro-Argentine, nor anti-British.

"The BBC applies stringent editorial tests in all circumstances. We are well able to recognise progaganda -- indeed, as the government has recognised, we have identified Argentine propagandist lies.

"The primary test we apply is whether what we are about to report actually adds to the understanding of the situation by our huge audiences. Coupled with that is our determination that in war truth shall not be the first casualty.

"It is because of the BBC's international reputation for telling the truth and for reporting accurately, honestly and dispassionately, that our Latin American service is being so determinedly jammed by the Argentines."

Mrs Mary Whitehouse said that last night's "Panorama" programme on the Falklands was a disloyal misuse of privileges. "The whole emphasis was on criticism and failure."

MORE SHIPS TO JOIN TASK FORCE IN SOUTH ATLANTIC

PM111301 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 11 May 82 p 28

[Naval correspondent Desmond Wettern report]

[Text] The missile destroyer Bristol sailed from Portsmouth yesterday, guaranteeing the navy's task force in the South Atlantic completely secure communications at sea with American warships if the need arises. The 7,100-ton ship is the only one in the fleet fitted with the American fleet satellite communications system, and is normally used as the flagship of British forces in NATO naval exercises.

The new Sea Dart missile destroyer Southampton, 4,100 tons, also sailed from Portsmouth yesterday. Her trials are to be speeded. The Royal Fleet auxiliary tanker Olna, 36,000 tons, also left, presumably for the South Atlantic.

At Devonport dockyard workers are making an all-out effort to get the Exocet missile-armed frigate Avenger, 2,800 tons, and the 4,200-ton Sea Wolf-armed Battleaxe ready for sea while the 3,200-ton frigate Minerva, also armed with Exocet, sailed for the South Atlantic yesterday.

Another departure from Devonport was the Royal Fleet Auxiliary helicopter support ship Engadine, 9,000 tons, whose crew includes a number of Women's Royal Naval Service aircraft mechanics. She is being used to ferry helicopters to Ascension Island. Meanwhile at Portsmouth, the paying-off for scrap of the frigate Londonderry, 2,800 tons, was officially rescinded.

NAVY HAS ISOLATED ARGENTINE GARRISONS ON ISLANDS

LD111810 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1716 GMT 11 May 82

[By Robert Hutchison, PA defence correspondent]

[Text] Royal Navy warships have now separated East and West Falkland -- and isolated the Argentine garrisons on the two islands, it was disclosed tonight. British frigates and destroyers are now making regular patrols through Falkland Sound in a bid to prevent supplies being ferried by sea and air from Port Stanley to West Falkland, according to informed sources.

It was during one of these patrols late on Monday night that an Argentine supply ship was engaged by an Amazon-class frigate, in company with other ships, firing at extreme range -- around eight miles. The attack happened just north of the Swan Islands, midway through the sound.

The target was just a blip on a radar screen, but within minutes of the ship opening fire with its 20 shots-a-minute 4.5 inch automatic guns a huge explosion was seen in the area of the Argentine vessel. Sources said tonight that the blast was caused by fuel exploding, probably aboard one of the support ships which had previously been trapped inside Port Stanley harbour.

Each flight is escorted by two Mirage fighters and again, at the weekend, a supply flight turned back when coming under fire from British warships. Sources now give Argentine air losses as two Canberra bombers, four Mirages and five Pucara ground attack aircraft -- the latter destroyed during raids on Goose Green and Port Stanley.

Officially Britain only claims that the Argentines have lost two Mirages, one shot down during an air battle on May 1 in dogfights with Sea Harriers and the other destroyed the same day by ground fire from Argentine forces. How the other two Mirages were lost is not yet known.

Meanwhile, Whitehall sources could not confirm the loss of a Super Etendard attack plane -- the type which launched AN-39 Exocet missiles on HMS Sheffield. It was understood to have gone down after running out of fuel. But it is known that the Argentines, who originally had only five Super Etendards delivered from France, are approaching friendly Third World countries, including Libya, to buy more.

The greatest problem now facing the task force is the continuing presence of Argentina's three remaining submarines. The two (?Salta) West German-built boats are believed to be inside the exclusion zone, but the other, a World War Two American Guppy class, has a longer range and could threaten British ships heading down to the Falklands from the supply base at Ascension Island.

Ship Hit Probably a Tanker

LD120132 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0120 GMT 12 May 82

[By Peter Archer, PA staff reporter onboard HMS Hermes]

[Excerpt] The Argentine ship attacked off the Falklands early yesterday -- sending a fireball into the sky as it blew up -- was probably a tanker, according to task force commanders. And a member of the staff of Admiral Sandy Woodward warned the Argentinians that if they were challenged at sea they should "surrender or face the consequences."

The fireball rose into the air and split the low cloud base. The size of the explosion suggested the ship was a tanker. The attack was mounted under the cover of darkness in the early hours of yesterday.

The frigate was on patrol in the southern approaches of the Falkland Sound -- the stretch of water dividing the two main islands -- when it spotted the enemy vessel. The British warship sent up a flare and the Argentine ship tried to run away. The task force frigate opened fire with its 4.5 inch guns.

"Ships should not run away when challenged," said a member of the admiral's staff. "Our intention is to accept their surrender. We would take people off before doing anything about the ships. By running away or doing anything hostile, they are sure of being attacked."

The incident was the latest in the continuing blockade of the occupied Falkland Islands by the task force. Senior officers said last night they were not aware of any enemy sea or air traffic around the Falkland capital, Port Stanley, for several days.

FOREIGN OFFICE DENIES DEADLINE SET FOR ARGENTINA

LD112142 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2118 GMT 11 May 82

[By Chris Moncrieff, PA chief political correspondent]

[Excerpt] The Foreign Office tonight firmly denied that the government, through Britain's UN Ambassador Sir Anthony Parsons, had issued an ultimatum or deadline to Argentina. A spokesman refuted suggestions that Britain was giving Argentina 24 hours to find out if it was serious about negotiating a settlement.

Government sources have always denied that Britain was imposing any kind of ultimatum. The government view is that while there is a channel open for negotiation, which could end the crisis without further bloodshed, it must be explored.

What Sir Anthony implied at the UN in New York today was that Britain is not prepared to be shunted into a sideline interminably, with her fleet poised off the Falklands, giving Argentina time to consolidate her invading forces on the islands.

'CAUTIOUS OPTIMISM' VOICED OVER UN TALKS

LD120538 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0330 GMT 12 May 82

[Excerpts] The pope's visit to Britain will be called off next week unless there is an end to hostilities over the Falklands. The warning came last night from Cardinal Basil Hume, archbishop of Westminster, when he returned to London after being summoned to Rome.

In New York -- when peace talks at the UN ended for the night -- both the British representative and the UN secretary general Mr Javier Perez de Cuellar voiced cautious optimism. But in London the mood was one of pessimism. All now hinges on the UN talks. Last night, Britain's UN representative, Sir Anthony Parsons, said they were making progress after marking time on Monday.

After his second meeting of the day with the secretary general he spoke of getting "some interesting proposals." But a little more time was needed... "a few more days."

"I think we made some progress. I am rather encouraged," said the secretary general. But negotiations were at "a very delicate stage" and needed a lot more work.

SOVIET RECONNAISSANCE AIRCRAFT TRACK TASK FORCE

LD120724 London BBC Domestic Service in English 0700 GMT 12 May 72

[Text] The assault part of the British task force has been tracked by Russian reconnaissance aircraft. They swooped low over the group of ships just after a mail drop from an RAF aircraft. Our correspondent on the troop ship Canberra, Robert Fox, reports on the Russians' action and on the continuing preparations for a possible assault on the Falklands.

[Begin recording] The two Russian aircraft, long-range Tupolev Bear reconnaissance planes, swooped over assault units of the task force at about midday. The ships had just received mail in parachute containers from an RAF aircraft out of Ascension. The Bears are thought to have a range of up to 8,000 miles and could have come from either Conakry in Guinea or Cuba. It's believed the Russians have tracked the British task force continuously with both aircraft and intelligence-gathering ships. The Argentines themselves have looked at the various naval units, both from civilian ships and from Boeing 707 aircraft overflying the fleet.

Onboard the Canberra, training for the assault has intensified, with special intelligence briefings and courses on survival in the open and first aid in battle. From the stern of the ship the sound of live firing or ammunition from machine guns and rifles is more frequent, and the continuous physical training -- jogging and running -- with full kit, goes on relentlessly. [end recording]

GOVERNMENT SPOKESMAN DISCUSSES GREEK RELATIONS

NC111146 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1030 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] Commenting on an article that was published today in a morning newspaper accusing President Kiprianou of destroying the bridges between Nicosia and Athens, the government spokesman stated the following:

The president of the republic has not destroyed the bridges. He is systematically working for the complete restoration of relations between Athens and Nicosia, despite the intense undermining of this effort by the opposition and part of the press.

In reply to a question on what President Kiprianou exactly meant with the phrase in his last speech in Larnaca -- I believe that the Greek prime minister was convinced in good faith that there may be some divergence in the Democratic Party-AKEL program from the line we have defined -- the government spokesman said that this means that Papandreou's sincere intentions are not doubted.

Referring to a statement by the government spokesman in Athens that President Kiprianou does not intend to change the minimum program despite any pressure, the government spokesman said that it concerns a misunderstanding. The president, he added, had not referred in his speech to pressure on the Democratic Party-AKEL cooperation, but to pressure connected with the Cyprus problem.

In reply to another question on whether President Kiprianou agrees with the characterizations AKEL uses for the Papandreou Government, the government spokesman referred to the two last speeches of the president of the republic.

In reply to a question connected with the recent trip to Athens by Greek ambassador in Nicosia Zakharakis, the government spokesman said that as is the custom, the Cyprus Government knew of Zakharakis' trip to Athens and his return. There is nothing strange, he added, in the entire affair.

In reply to another question as to whether there is any truth in press reports that the Greek Government intends to downgrade its embassy in Nicosia, the spokesman said that the issue has not arisen.

PARLIAMENTARIANS AGREE TO VISIT SOVIET UNION

NC081117 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1030 GMT 8 May 82

[Text] It was officially announced today that an interparty delegation of the Cyprus House of Representatives under the body's chairman, Ladhas, will visit the Soviet Union from 28 June to 5 July at the invitation of the Supreme Soviet. The delegation will be made up of AKEL Secretary General Papaioannou, chairman of the Democratic Rally Kliridhis, parliamentary spokesman of the Democratic Party Galanos and EDEK Chairman Lissaridhis. The written reply of the Cyprus House of Representatives to the Supreme Soviet invitation was handed today by Ladhas to Soviet Ambassador Astavin.

CONSULAR, OTHER AGREEMENTS WITH TUNIS SIGNED

TA071715 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 7 May 82

[Text] Agreements envisaging the development of Turkish-Tunisian relations were signed in Ankara today by the foreign ministers of the two countries. In a speech at the signing ceremony, Turkish Foreign Minister Turkmen expressed the belief that the agreements would begin a new stage in Turkish-Tunisian relations. Tunisian Foreign Minister es-Sebsi said that Tunis attaches importance to its relations with Turkey and that it wants to develop these relations in the future.

The air transportation agreement signed between Turkey and Tunis envisages the state of airline services between the two countries after the national airlines of the two countries determine the details.

A Turkish-Tunisian consular agreement envisages the mutual opening of consulates and the better protection of interests in this way.

The two countries also signed an agreement on the extradition of criminals and another agreement on judicial cooperation in legal and commercial issues.

The Tunisian foreign minister held a news conference after the agreements were signed. Replying to a question, he expressed his country's grief over the Armenian terrorists' attacks against Turkish diplomats abroad. To another question, the minister replied that Tunis supported Turkey's attitude regarding the Cyprus problem and that it considered the intercommunal talks the only way to solve the problem.

On the Middle East Es-Sebsi said that the PLO should be recognized as the only legitimate representative of the Palestinian people and that Israel should withdraw from all the occupied Arab territories.

ECONOMIC MEETING WITH GDR BEGINS IN ANKARA

TA112049 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 2000 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] The joint Turkey-GDR economic committee meeting began in Ankara today. Economic and commercial relations between the two countries are being assessed during the meeting. The meeting is also dealing with the cancellation of the existing bank agreement between Turkey and the GDR and replacing it with a free foreign currency system for trade. The Turkish delegation at the talks is headed by Foreign Ministry Economic Affairs Department Director Umut Arik and the GDR delegation is headed by the GDR Ministry for Foreign Trade General Director Jochen Steyer. The meeting will last for 3 days.

NIGHTLY CURFEW LIFTED IN ANOTHER 3 PROVINCES

TA111803 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 11 May 82

[Communique No 19 by the 3d Army and Erzincan, Corum, Giresun, Gumshane, Ordu, Rize, Samsun, Amasya, Sinop, Sivas, Tokat and Trabzon martial law command]

[Text] The nightly curfew applied in the 3d Army martial law region will be lifted at 0100 on 13 May 1982 in the provinces of Sinop, Tokat and Gumshane. The citizens in the area are hereby notified.

[Signed] Gen Selahattin Demirciolgu, 3d Army and martial law commander.

EUROPEAN COMMUNITY

EEC MINISTERS' MEETING ON FARM PRICE ISSUE ENDS

NC111746 Paris AFP in English 1742 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] Brussels, 11 May (AFP) -- European Common Market agriculture ministers broke off talks here today after disagreeing on EEC farm prices, British Minister Peter Walker announced. They decided to meet again on Monday to resume discussions.

FRANCE

MITTERRAND PLANS TO VISIT GREECE IN AUGUST

NC102015 Paris AFP in English 1944 GMT 10 May 82

[Text] Athens, 10 May (AFP) -- French President Francois Mitterrand will go to Greece on an official visit in August, official sources said here today. The sources said the exact date of the presidential visit will be announced later.

During his visit, Mr Mitterrand will have talks with President Konstandinos Karamanlis and Socialist Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou. The French president will then spend a week on a private cruise in the Aegean.

Will Visit Indonesia

PM111321 Paris LE MONDE in French 9-10 May 82 p 3

[Text] Mr Mitterrand will make an official visit to Indonesia next winter at the Jakarta government's invitation. French diplomatic sources specify that that visit will probably take place in early 1983. It will be preceded by a visit to Jakarta by External Relations Minister Cheysson in the fall. Indonesian head of state President Suharto made an official visit to France in November 1972.

IRISH REPUBLIC

PRIME MINISTER DEFENDS STAND ON FALKLANDS

LD111606 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1555 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] Irish Prime Minister Mr Charles Haughey today defended his government's controversial stand on the Falklands crisis. He described Dublin's bid to end a Common Market ban on trade with Argentina and initiate new United Nations activity as "the only sane and resonable course to take."

And in a statement in the Dail, he claimed Ireland had not acted out of "any spirit of animosity" towards Britain, but "rather in a desire to help." Ireland's action last week in approaching other EEC states and generating fresh UN moves was sharply criticised in Britain, and is said to have threatened Mr Haughey's close working relationship with Mrs Thatcher.

Today Mr Haughey dealt in detail with the conflict over what he at one point referred to as "the Falklands or Malvinas Islands." He stressed that Ireland had from the outset regarded Argentina's armed intervention as contrary to the rule of law, but had deliberately refrained from taking a position on the issues.

Tuesday of last week, however, there were indications that diplomatic and economic pressure was simply viewed as complementary to military action, he said. "The world seemed to be standing by while young lives were being lost." Mr Haughey said Ireland's bid to get an emergency UN Security Council meeting had been postponed following the secretary general's efforts to find a negotiated settlement. But Dublin was ready to reactivate its call if necessary.

He claimed that even though an informal session of EEC foreign ministers last weekend had not backed an Irish request to end trade sanctions, the outcome of those discussions had been satisfactory. "It has given many of our partners who have reservations about military action a chance to reflect on the situation," said Mr Haughey.

Beside Mr Haughey on the Dail government bench was Mr Paddy Powers, the defence minister who last week accused Britain of being the "aggressors" in the South Atlantic. The prime minister was heard by a representative from the British Embassy, but no Argentine diplomats were in the House for the statement.

NETHERLANDS

GOVERNMENT COALITION IN DANGER OVER BUDGET

NC111016 Paris AFP in English 1007 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] The Hague, 11 May (AFP) -- Netherlands Prime Minister Andreas van Agt's centre-left government is in danger following new reservations on proposed budget cuts from the Socialist partners in the coalition. The Christian-Democrat premier said on his way to a cabinet meeting today that the situation was "very difficult." He added that he was "not convinced the government will survive this affair."

The Christian Democrats want to make drastic cuts in next year's budget, largely affecting social spending, notably health services and unemployment benefits. Last month, the Socialists appeared to have agreed to a compromise, after suffering a reverse in local elections, but their leader, Joop Den Uyl, said after a cabinet session yesterday that "Mr van Agt's proposals are in part inacceptable to the Socialists."

The coalition has suffered a series of crises since it was put together after general elections in May last year.

FBIS DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 093 13 May 1982

CONTENTS

EUROPEAN COMMUNITY

Commission Backs Extension of Argentine Sanctions B 1

AUSTRIA

Visiting Nicaraguan Delegation Receives Credit E 1
Meetings Held [WIENER ZEITUNG 12 May] E 1
Polish Deputy Premier Gives Press Conference E 1
Kreisky Plans Peace Mission in Washington, Moscow E 2
[KRONEN-ZEITUNG 13 May]

BENELUX

NETHERLANDS

Six Socialists Resign From Van Agt's Cabinet F 1
Minister Van Mierlo Discusses Eurogroup Meeting F 1
[DE VOLKSKRANT 6 May]

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Bahr Welcomes Reagan's Disarmament Proposals J 1
Exchange of FRG, USSR, RSA Agents Reported J 2
Commentator Views Future Army Developments J 3
[FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE 11 May]

FRANCE

Marchais Interviewed on Falklands, Poland K 1
French National Freed in Soviet Spy Exchange K 2
Briefs: Ambassador to PRC K 2

ITALY

Zagladin Interview on Poland, Other Topics L 1
[L'UNITA 10 May]

PORTUGAL

Spokesmen Differ on Success of General Strike M 1
Defense Minister Unhappy With Recent NATO Session M 1
[DIARIO DE NOTICIAS 8 May]
Pope Arrives in Lisbon for 4-Day Pilgrimage M 2
Assailant Apprehended M 2

NORDIC AFFAIRS

FINLAND

CP Chairman Calls for Deputy's Resignation P 1
[HUFVUDSTADSBLADET 8 May]
CP Leaders Comment on CPSU Criticism in Moscow P 1
Aalto Interviewed P 3
'Party Line Will Not Change' P 3

NORWAY

Human Rights Action Against Turkey Pursued P 4
[AFTENPOSTEN 7 May]

SWEDEN

Libya Will Be Compensated for Training Program P 4
New Visa Policy for Poles To Be Established P 4

UNITED KINGDOM

UN Negotiations Move Toward Difficult Issues Q 1
'Promise of Progress' Q 1
Defense Ministry Says 2 Argentine Planes Downed Q 3
Sea King Helicopter Lost; Crew Rescued Q 3
TV Crew Robbed; Released Outside Buenos Aires Q 3
Argentine Prisoners Released for Repatriation Q 4
One Officer Detained Q 4
France's Mitterrand To Visit London 17 May Q 5
Poll Shows Support for Government Declining Q 5
Commons Media Committee Attacks BBC Coverage Q 5
Ministry Reports Third Argentine Plane Downed Q 7
Unnamed Task Force Ship Damaged Slightly Q 7

CYPRUS

Rolandhis, Puja Exchange 10 May Dinner Speeches R 1
Puja Departs R 1
AKEL Criticizes Ioannidhis' Candidacy R 1

GREECE

Soviet Official Zamyatin To Visit Greece 8 June S 1
[ELEVTHEROTIPIA 12 May]
Military Maneuvers To Be Held in Aegean 8-12 June S 1
Syria, Others Reduce Oil Prices to Greece S 1

TURKEY

Haig Arrives for Official Visit on 13 May T 1
Paper Lauds Haig's Visit, Discusses Agenda T 1
[HURRIYET 10 May]
PRC Envoy Seeks More Economic Ties With Turkey T 2
PRC Envoy Departs T 2
FBI Handling of Diplomat Murders Faulted T 3
[TERCUMAN 7 May]
Turkish-Cypriot Constitution Said To Be Weak T 3
[TERCUMAN 8 May]
Pakistani Industry Minister Departs Turkey T 4

COMMISSION BACKS EXTENSION OF ARGENTINE SANCTIONS

LD121514 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1502 GMT 12 May 82

[By Geoff Meade, PA staff reporter in Strasbourg]

[Text] The EEC commission today backed the extension of trade sanctions against Argentina for a further month. In the face of opposition from some Common Market countries to the renewal of the existing Community-wide embargo, the commission decided to recommend EEC foreign ministers to continue the measure until June 17.

The news, which will be greatly welcomed by the British Government, was disclosed by EEC Commission President Gaston Thorn during a debate on the Falklands crisis in Strasbourg today. He said the commission had decided in Strasbourg this morning to suggest that the ministers extend the sanctions until June 17 when crucial talks on the future of sanctions are due to be held this weekend. [sentence as received]

The suggestion only applies if the UN Security Council Resolution 502 has not been implemented. The commission's decision increases the pressure on Britain's partners to continue supporting the UK, despite growing concern over military action in the South Atlantic.

The Irish Government is still pressing for an immediate end to sanctions. Irish Premier Mr Haughey has indicated that his country will lift the trade ban unilaterally when it runs out next Monday, whatever other Common Market countries decide.

Meanwhile West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt is leading calls for an immediate cease-fire.

British Foreign Secretary Francis Pym has been working hard to convince the rest of the Community that Britain is intent on a diplomatic solution as a priority. The existing ban on all Argentine imports into the EEC has barely begun to bite. But the government feels its renewal is an important psychological weapon against the regime.

Announcing the commission's backing for an extension of the sanctions, Mr Thorn told the European Parliament: "I feel, however, that I need to stress that the commission proposal, as is quite proper, goes hand-in-hand with instruments which could allow the embargo to be lifted before this date, once negotiations on the basis of a peace plan have been embarked upon by the parties concerned, pursuant to 502."

He hoped the latest mediation efforts would prevail, and that peace would be safeguarded with no further escalation "along the wrong lines." He said a negotiated solution should be reached as rapidly as possible because hundreds of people had already died.

He stressed the commission condemned the armed intervention by Argentina, and deplored the escalation of violence.

VISITING NICARAGUAN DELEGATION RECEIVES CREDIT

PA112031 Managua Domestic Service in Spanish 1200 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] From Vienna, the capital of Austria, we have learned that the government of that kindred country will sign an agreement with Sergio Ramirez Mercado, representative of the Junta of the Government of National Reconstruction of Nicaragua, granting a credit of up to $8 million, 100,000 Austrian schillings [as heard], to be used to improve our balance of payments. The credit was granted by Austria for a period of 30 years [break in transmission], with very soft terms.

Ramirez Mercado's visit to Austria ended with a donation of 10,000 tons of wheat to Nicaragua, of which 5,000 tons will be delivered this year and the remainder in 1983.

The Nicaraguan delegation headed by Ramirez Mercado arrived in Vienna on Sunday. Last night the delegation had a working supper with Foreign Minister Willibald Pahr. This afternoon, Ramirez Mercado will meet with Socialist International leader Bruno Kreisky.

Meetings Held

AU121212 Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 12 May 82 p 3

[Summary] Sergio Ramirez Mercado, representative of the Junta of the Government of National Reconstruction of Nicaragua, yesterday paid a courtesy visit to Nationalrat Chairman Anton Benya in Vienna. Reynaldo Antonio Tefel, Nicaraguan minister of social security, was received by Austrian Minister for Social Administration Alfred Dallinger. The two ministers will discuss social security problems, with special emphasis on the Austrian social security system, in the hope to thus make a contribution toward social development in Nicaragua.

POLISH DEPUTY PREMIER GIVES PRESS CONFERENCE

AU121735 Vienna Domestic Service in German 1600 GMT 12 May 82

[Friedrich Ortner report on Polish Deputy Premier Rakowski's press conference in Vienna 12 May -- recorded; passages in quotation marks in Polish with superimposed German translation]

[Text] After a 2-day visit to Vienna, Polish Deputy Premier Rakowski, who conducted talks with Chancellor Kreisky, met the Austrian press. Particular interest was devoted to the fate of the still-interned leader of the banned independent trade union, Solidarity. Walesa's release is currently out of the question; a possible visit to Poland by the pope this year is becoming more and more unlikely; and the Warsaw military regime will not allow itself to be diverted from the road of so-called normalization. These are, in brief, the most important statements made by the Polish deputy premier today.

Rakowski said nothing new as far as the gist of the matter is concerned. His arguments are well known: As far as Walesa's internment is concerned, Rakowski said: "We do not regard it possible today, on the basis of what we know about the situation in our state, to release Mr Walesa from internment at this moment. We believe that we are acting correctly. Whether we are really acting correctly history may judge sometime later." The deputy premier credited the Solidarity movement with a historic role. But now the time for critical reflection has come. A return to a trade union movement as it existed prior to August 1980 is no longer possible. Rakowski was unable to tell what the new trade union movement should look like, however, Rakowski did not deny that the idea of Solidarity is still alive, that people demonstrated for it on May Day and on 3 May.

But from his viewpoint the background of the events was the following: "The mere fact that there were demonstrations should not scare us. I will recall that on 28 April this year 1,000 internees were released, and that there was a further dismantling of the state of war, which should show everyone the direction, the road on which we are embarking. And these were also our intentions.

Additional topics broached by Rakowski at his press conference were: If the West wants to have the money lent to the Poles returned, it should let the Warsaw Government implement the economic reforms embarked upon. Warsaw has the Hungarian model in mind not only in the economic respect. Rakowski also believes that the Catholic Church will continue to cooperate with the government, even though it is impossible to unambigously describe the present relations. These are good and bad. Walesa's former negotiating partner also had an explanation ready to show how the interlocutor who was esteemed as liberal, particularly in the West, has now become Jaruzelski's most effective propagandist abroad: He had always warned the Solidarity people, Rakowski said, to remain on the soil of reality. But they did not want to do that.

KREISKY PLANS PEACE MISSION IN WASHINGTON, MOSCOW

AU130754 Vienna KRONEN-ZEITUNG in German 13 May 82 p 3

[Kurt Seinitz report on 12 May interview with Chancellor Kreisky in Vienna]

[Text] Vienna -- In view of the threatening world situation Bruno Kreisky is again taking an international initiative: The chancellor, who yesterday received an urgent message from Polish party and government chief Jaruzelski through Polish Deputy Premier Rakowski, will head a 3-member delegation of the Socialist International which in the very near future will fly to Brezhnev in Moscow and to Ronald Reagan in Washington.

Kreisky yesterday said to KRONEN-ZEITUNG: "We do not want to thrust ourselves upon the gentlemen in Moscow and Washington, but we have established this East-West committee because we consider the collapse of understanding at all levels between Washington and Moscow as the most dangerous and threatening development in the world at present. As far as I am concerned, I will now certainly devote all my energy to endeavors to help solve this problem," the chancellor said, mindful of his already "historical" missions in the Middle East in the mid-seventies.

The preparations for the "thaw" missions of the Socialist International's 3-member committee -- Foot (England), Jospin (France), and Kreisky -- to Moscow and Washington are at any rate already running in high gear. "It is important for us to know if we are wanted there at all," Kreisky says, dampening exaggerated hopes. "It won't do if one merely receives us, listens to what is worrying us without even sitting down, and then lets us go again with a few comforting words. There must be some substantial results." As has been learned from quarters close to the chancellor, this Moscow and Washington mission of Kriesky's could fit in precisely with the time schedule of Brezhnev and Reagan preparations for their summit meeting in October, the venue of which might be Austria.

In his new East-West contact, Kreisky will concern himself especially with Poland. Kreisky believes that this "time bomb" and hotbed of unrest constitutes a threat to peace in all of Europe, a fact of which Moscow especially needs to be reminded. Poland's Deputy Premier Rakowski will take home with him today Kreisky's ideas and proposals regarding an all-European East-West framework for solving the Polish crisis. Kreisky's optimism is rather limited, though: "We can only wait to see how they will now react to this. But if they continue their course, getting more and more deeply into trouble, then they are heading for civil war or even something worse. And we know from history that civil wars in Poland tend to drag the whole continent into the problem. The world looks bad enough as it is. Are the current wars not enough? Must we have another war emanating from Poland? Something must be done now to stop the fateful course of events."

NETHERLANDS

SIX SOCIALISTS RESIGN FROM VAN AGT'S CABINET

NC121834 Paris AFP in English 1821 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] The Hague, 12 May (AFP) -- The six Socialist members of Dutch Premier Andreas van Agt's left-of-center coalition cabinet today decided to resign following an extended dispute over proposed budget cuts, parliamentary sources said here. The Socialists opposed planned cuts in social expenditures, covering mainly areas of public health and unemployment benefits.

Political circles here believed Mr van Agt would continue to head a minority government with the remaining two members of the coalition, his own Christian-Democratic Party and the neo-liberal "Democracy 66" group.

MINISTER VAN MIERLO DISCUSSES EUROGROUP MEETING

PM130929 Amsterdam DE VOLSKRANT in Dutch 6 May 82 p 3

[Jan Luijten dispatch: "Minister Defends Peace Movement"]

[Text] Brussels -- Dutch Defense Minister van Mierlo again made a plea at a meeting of the NATO Eurogroup in Brussels on Wednesday [5 May] that the questions raised by the peace movement should be taken seriously and attempts be made to find answers. He warned his colleagues from the European NATO nations of the danger to democracy if the only answer to these questions is further rearmament.

On Wednesday evening Minister van Mierlo said at the end of the Eurogroup meeting that he had again raised the question of the peace movement and had spoken about it in some detail. Since there is also a peace movement in the United States, it is clear that we are not dealing here with a "regional sickness," the minister said.

According to the minister it is a question of how long a democracy can base its defense on the strategy of nuclear deterrence, a strategy which embraces so many paradoxes and with which people have problems. NATO cannot ignore these questions, the minister said. He warned that the limits of nuclear strategy come into view if politians do not search for answers which could remove the unrest among people and the causes of war. If NATO continues along the old road of ever-greater armaments, a dilemma will arise, "whether democracy empties nuclear strategy of meaning or whether nuclear strategy empties democracy of meaning," Van Mierlo said.

He also spoke about the problem of defense spending and advocated closer European cooperation when buying military materiel. Endeavors to reach closer cooperation within Europe and with the United States have reached an impasse. The lack of cooperation leads to a situation in which defense costs are 30 to 40 percent higher than they need be, the minister said. This is the reason why the Eurogroup is exerting cautious pressure on the U.S. Government to reverse an amendment made by Congress in Washington. According to this amendment U.S. troops can only be equipped with U.S. materiel.

There was discussion in the corridors of NATO headquarters in Brussels on Wednesday of the possibility that Dutch General de Jager (at present chief of the Dutch Defense Staff) could become chairman of the NATO Military Committee. This would make him the highest-ranking officer in the alliance. On Wednesday the senior officers in the Military Committee discussed a successor to Canadian Admiral Falls, who is chairman until next year. Gen de Jager is one of the candidates and has a good chance of becoming chairman.

BAHR WELCOMES REAGAN'S DISARMAMENT PROPOSALS

DW121307 Cologne Deutschlandfunk Network in German to East and West Germany 1020 GMT 11 May 82

["Excerpts" from reporter Heribert Schwan interview with Egon Bahr, disarmament expert of the Bundestag SPD faction; date and place not given -- recorded]

[Text] [Question] The reaction from the East and the West to Reagan's latest initiative has been most different. Bonn in particular welcomed the disarmament proposal of the American President. Did the Federal Government act too rashly?

[Answer] No, it didn't because we have been urging the Americans for months to resume talks with the Soviet Union and to sit down and discuss the limitation of nuclear weapons. Now they are doing it and we can't complain that they are doing it.

[Question] Isn't Reagan's proposal aimed rather at restructuring armament than at disarming?

[Answer] Yes and no. First, we do not yet have the details of the Americans' proposals. What is known so far is very general. Second, there is no American proposal which would be acceptable to the Russians at a first glance, and there is no Soviet proposal which would be acceptable to the Americans at first glance. We must assume that both sides will enter into negotiations with positions which they know, without saying it, will not be acceptable in their original form.

This is a concern of a secondary nature. The first concern was that SALT II was not ratified by America, that a great arms program was initiated instead, and that no one could say whether or when they would start talking with each other again. Now they want to talk with each other again, at least the Americans want to talk to the Russians. I think, therefore, that it is important for the Russians to accept this offer from the Americans. The discussions on the substance and content of the proposals must take place at the negotiating table and not through the news media.

[Question] You don't think that Reagan wanted to make a sign for those who do not believe that the Americans are serious about negotiations?

[Answer] Naturally I believe that one swallow doesn't mean it's spring -- even two would not. You must view things in connection with the speech given by Secretary of State Haig in late April -- a speech which contains the remarkable sentence that the Americans want to and must enter into a cooperation phase with the Soviet Union in the interests of security. You can view Reagan's statements or proposals in connection with what the U.S. secretary of state said 14 days earlier.

I consider it quite possible that those who have hoped or feared that America would insist on a confrontation course are now disappointed. I believe that American foreign policy is normalizing and that following a phase of armament decisions, it is returning to a line of permanent negotiations on all levels. That is important.

My objection or my skepticism is whether Reagan's proposals really include all weapons systems between those on the strategic level and those being negotiated on in Geneva: This is not quite clear. A new gray zone must not come about, that is, a category of weapons systems which will not be negotiated or settled and where efforts will be made to fill gaps in a particularly good or bad way. I mean that sea-based cruise missiles must be included.

[Question] Nuclear powered submarines or the construction of a new type of bomber have certainly not been dealt with yet.

[Answer] No, submarines and intercontinental or strategic bombers are included in SALT II. Sea-based cruise missiles are not included in SALT II, however. I consider this a particularly dangerous area because nobody knows how to check or verify it. The Russians and the Americans -- or better, the other way round -- the Americans and the Russians are inclined to promote activities in this field. That would be a new and dangerous increase in the arms race in the mid-eighties with nobody knowing how to get it under control.

[Question] Don't you think it would have been more honorable for the American President to at least ratify the SALT II agreement negotiated in 1979?

[Answer] Nobody likes to slap his own face. Once he had said that this treaty was unacceptable to him, he couldn't suddenly accept it. He wants to replace it with something better. You can say that arms technology has made great progress in the years since then, if you want to call this progress. The necessity to supplement this treaty is uncontestable.

[Question] Even though critics say that Reagan's proposal will rather lead to a change in armament than to disarmament? How can it be explained that a year ago the American President was tightening the arms screw, while now he suddenly shows a readiness to negotiate and hold talks with the Soviet Union?

[Answer] Nobody can be the winner any more. There is no superiority to be gained or exploited by cornering the other and dictating to him. I believe that a realization of this prompted the American President to go to the table and make proposals.

[Question] Do you think that this will give a new impetus to East-West detente?

[Answer] I hope so and I am certain that the Geneva negotiations will gain in substance because the American side cannot conduct the Geneva negotiations without Paul Nitze knowing about his government's approach to strategic weapons.

EXCHANGE OF FRG, USSR, RSA AGENTS REPORTED

LD122016 Hamburg DPA in German 1857 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] Hamburg, 12 May (DPA) -- Eight Germans have been released in what the Federal Government has called the largest international exchange of agents in recent years. Federal Minister for Inter-German Relations Egon Franke stated in the news program on First German Television this evening that those released are already in the Federal Republic. He said that they had been serving either life or long prison sentences.

Further details were also given in the program of the multiple exchange. In exchange for the Soviet agent, Major Aleksey Koslov, imprisoned in South Africa for espionage, six Germans were released from GDR prisons, a seventh from a prison in Czechoslovakia and the eighth from a camp in Angola and returned to the Federal Republic today.

According to the television program the authorized representatives of Bonn and East Berlin, ministerial director Edgar Hirth and GDR lawyer Wolfgang Vogel played an important part in the swap. The intelligence employees were handed over at the Herleshausen-Wartha border crossing point. The six members of the federal intelligence service had served almost 10 years of their sentences.

It was further stated on the program that, as well as the Federal Republic and the GDR, the Soviet Union, the CSSR, South Africa and Angola were involved in the exchange.

In addition to the German agents, the South African Johan van der Mescht, who had been captured in Angola, was also released. He told the press in South Africa today that 2 weeks ago he was taken from Angola, where he had spent 4 years in prison, to the GDR. On Tuesday he learned that his release was imminent. After being handed over, he returned home immediately from the Federal Republic accompanied by South African secret service personnel.

It is not known whether other agents have been released in connection with the multiple exchanged.

COMMENTATOR VIEWS FUTURE ARMY DEVELOPMENTS

DW111145 Frankfurt FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE in German 11 May 82 p 1

[Commentary signed Ein: "Adaptation"]

[Text] Time is a central element of strategy. Security policy means thinking in long periods of time. Preventive measures must be taken in 1982 to preserve the Bundeswehr's combat strength in the coming decade. If we kept to the current practice -- some 15 months of military service, generous dispense from military service, lack of incentives to reenlist, frequent misuse of the right of conscientious objection -- the personnel strength of the armed forces would decrease by 50 percent in the early Nineties; the years with low birth rates will cut gaps in the army. Offsetting this lack calls for creativity -- and new laws.

This has been realized by the so-called long-term commission which has been comissioned by the Defense Ministry to investigate the future development of the armed forces. The experts are making useful suggestions. Their implementation will cost money. The conceptions are full of political explosives. The idea to prolong military service time will not be viewed enthusiastically by politicians prior to Bundestag elections.

A parliament postponing the handling of problems, however, would be negligent. A populace assuming the defiant "without me" attitude would be acting against its own interests. Our geostrategic position is condemning us to be particularly vigilant militarily. Nobody wants a war, but if we want to prevent it, we must have a minimum of forces to maintain our "alliance ability" in the military NATO alliance. The German contribution to common defense is reaching just the lower limit of necessities. The divisions, air squadrons and naval forces provided by us have been the results of a political compromise. When the Bundeswehr was created, its classic armament was not supposed to be stronger than that of the French Army. That is no longer valid, but an extension is not demanded either. Our allies can rightly demand our adhering to commitments. Viewing the work of the long-term commission on this background, all its suggestions are without sharpness because the strategic mission has not been changed, it must simply be adapted to our time.

MARCHAIS INTERVIEWED ON FALKLANDS, POLAND

LD130202 Paris Domestic Service in French 1815 GMT 12 May 82

[Interview with Georges Marchais, general secretary of the PCF; place not given -- live or recorded]

[Excerpts] [Question] without giving too many examples, Mr Marchais, as regards foreign policy you have often denounced the Socialist Party's Atlantism, its European policy. Now, in the name of the union -- of government unity -- are you dismissing your ideas on the subject?

[Answer] No, not at all. What has been the PCF's consistent foreign policy? France is part of the Atlantic alliance, I agree. We have never made France's departure from the Atlantic alliance a condition of our agreement with the Socialists. Therefore, well, we are in the Atlantic alliance. However, we are not in NATO and it is out of the question that we should rejoin NATO. Neither the government nor Francois Mitterrand has ever raised the question and no one is raising it today.

Very well. What, then, have we decided as a point of agreement, what conclusions have we drawn from our respective positions? First, we are opposed to military blocs, to the policy of blocs. We have agreed to struggle together to move toward the dissolution of military blocs. This is a common stand to both of us. Third, [as heard] we believe that we should advance on the road to disarmament, not unilaterally, but by ensuring the security of every state, every people, in a balanced manner. We are fierce supporters of a policy of disarmament. This is an area of understanding with the Socialist Party. As you can see, we have no reasons for a dispute in this field. Then, you can say, there are various matters, such as the Middle East. Mitterrand went [interrupted by questioner]

[Question] Let us take the Falklands since they are topical.

[Answer] Let us take the Falklands. What is the Communists' position on this? It is an extremely simple one. We say: Cease fire and negotiate. This is our position.

[Question] In the case of the Falklands you are denouncing British imperialism. Let us imagine that one of the French islands in the Pacific or in the Indian Ocean were occupied by a foreign power. What would the position of the PCF be? Would it ask the French Government to intervene with military means or, should the French Government decide on military intervention, would the PCF and the Communist ministers oppose it?

[Answer] Anyone carrying out aggression against national territory would find the Communists ranged against him.

[Question] Including against the French islands?

[Answer] We settled the question a long time ago. As for the Falklands, this is our position. We say: Cease the fire and hold discussions at the United Nations. Blood will be shed for these islands, the existence of which, until a few weeks ago, was unknown to anyone apart from a few Argentines and a few Britons.

[Question] There remains a very painful problem in Europe of which we have not spoken, that of Poland. It is increasingly obvious that the Polish people are not accepting the Jaruzelski regime. Do you, the PCF, continue to support this same Jaruzelski?

[Answer] We have never backed whoever it may be. It is not up to us.

[Question] You have not condemned the military coup.

[Answer] I understand your question well enough. It is not up to us. To back this or that government is the affair of the people concerned. What was our position in December? It was thought that Poland was on the brink of disaster, on the brink of civil war. We are not among those who want to push other people into a bloody revolution when we ourselves propose a democratic path in order to bring about the changes we deem necessary here. Therefore, we believed that everything should be done to try to prevent Poland from knowing the drama of a civil war. Secondly, we believed that a civil war in Poland would not fail to have repercussions on the situation in Central Europe, with possible dangers to peace. Thirdly, we believed that a civil war, (?while creating) extreme tension in Europe, would not create the best conditions for the Poles -- and it is up to them and them alone to carry out the deep economic, social and democratic reforms which they must carry out. That is why we thought this state of emergency, which was declared in order to prevent this fateful threshold being overstepped, was, if I may say so, a lesser evil which would still leave the door open to the socialist renewal undoubtedly wanted by the Polish people. This is the basis of our position and it remains so. I must say this because it is important for France and the French people. You know as well as I that France and the French people enjoy a certain authority in Poland. I believe it would be a good thing if, without any question of interfering in their internal affairs -- because I repeat that it is their affair -- France were to favor this stand.

FRENCH NATIONAL FREED IN SOVIET SPY EXCHANGE

NC121627 Paris AFP in English 1555 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] Paris, 12 May (AFP) -- A French national was one of eight Western agents exchanged this week for Soviet master-spy Aleksey Koslov, an authoritative source said here today. The source refused to name the French agent or say how he had been arrested by the Soviet authorities.

(Press reports in South Africa, whose police caught Major Koslov in 1980, said that a Briton and more than one Israeli were also among the "very important" Western spies involved in the deal, along with a South African soldier.)

BRIEFS

AMBASSADOR TO PRC -- Paris, 10 May (AFP) -- Charles Malo has been appointed new French ambassador to China, the Foreign Ministry announced today. Mr Malo, 57, will replace Claude Chayet (?in Beijing). [Excerpt] [Paris AFP in English 1315 GMT 10 May 82 NC]

ZAGLADIN INTERVIEW ON POLAND, OTHER TOPICS

PM121307 Milan L'UNITA in Italian 10 May 82 p 5

[Unattributed commentary: "CPSU-PCI: Zagladin Moderates Many Assessments"]

[Text] Under the headline: "Moscow Tells Berlinguer: Enough; Let's Be Friends Again," the daily LA REPUBBLICA published on Saturday a lengthy interview with Vadim Zagladin, CPSU Central Committee member and deputy chief of the CPSU international relations section.

In his introduction to the conversation, which covered the main topics of the present international situation, LA REPUBBLICA correspondent Sandro Viola mentions "a static moment, almost of suspense, for the whole of Soviet politics," linked partly, according to many people, "to the maneuvers for the succession to Brezhnev," who is described as "a enfeebled man, whose government activity must have been reduced to little or nothing."

But, the paper's correspondent points out, "Time presses, at least as far as the economy is concerned." "There are the usual signs of chaos" and "there is a background of stagnation." "In the first quarter of this year the production results in 26 production sectors (almost all the essential sectors) fell well below the plan figures. Overall industrial production should have increased 5.25 percent but instead it increased by barely 1.5 percent. Meanwhile all Moscow is complaining about the shortage of many goods, especially food products." "Moscow politics," LA REPUBBLICA'S correspondent says, "is in a wait-and-see phase and the only movement that can now be perceived is directed at modifying the functioning of the economic system, at breaking the inertia if possible and introducing more efficient criteria into it before it collapses."

Discussing the decisions to be taken at the coming Central Committee plenum on the "agricultural program," Zagladin went as far as to use the word "reform," which he subsequently expunged from the text of the interview with Viola. Moreover, Zagladin refers to the 20th congress, which is something, unless we are mistaken, which Soviet leaders have not done for some time. Having thus described the framework for the meeting, the newspaper proceeds to report the questions and answers.

Let us examine the points discussed, many of which concern the issues raised in the recent PCI-CPSU polemic.

For instance, the economy. Zagladin says: "We need to introduce a new kind of economic organization, characterized by a more productive than administrative profile. Hence the need to find new management methods based on production incentives. But it is not easy to find -- as we are trying to -- new methods of stimulating production because we still face technical and psychological obstacles." Particularly with regard to agriculture the CPSU leader says: "We also intend to modify the economic methods of agricultural management so as to reduce the weight of administrative interventions this time."

These are interesting remarks reminiscent of other remarks, contained in L'UNITA's reply to the polemic in PRAVDA 26 January, which states that "We are convinced that the Communist Party in those countries (the Eastern bloc countries -- L'UNITA editor's note) will succeed in leading a well-directed reform process and crises will be avoided. And with our criticisms and sincere considerations we wish to help to encourage this task of regeneration." Zagladin's remarks seem different in tone from the remarks against the PCI published by various CPSU press organs. It is difficult not to compare the oft-repeated charge that the Italian communists are not working for peace, with Zagladin's assertion that "We feel in solidarity with the PCI's battle against the deployment of the new missiles in Italy and consider ourselves its allies in the peace struggle...." In this context too, it should be pointed out that the Italian communists are fighting against all missiles, within the framework of practical and principled action aimed at facilitating negotiations to reach a balance at the lowest possible level.

Similarly with regard to Poland, Zagladin states -- and this is the first time that the Soviets have issued such an assessment -- that the 13 December coup was "a tragic necessity." In this connection the Soviet leader resumed the polemic with the PCI: "By adopting the stance that they did against us," he says, "the Italian comrades made a mistake -- perhaps the biggest mistake in their party's history."

But it really does seem difficult to reconcile the assessment regarding the "tragic necessity" with this renewed polemic. [PCI Secretary General] Enrico Berlinguer said in his report to the Central Committee back on 11 January that "We cannot agree to the Polish problem being reduced to the question of whether the 13 December military intervention was inevitable.... The regeneration that was needed was obstructed and challenged by the persistance of dogmatic and conservative stances and by conflicts within both the leadership groups and the party .... At the same time we have pointed to the responsibility of the USSR and other Warsaw Pact countries for a policy that has, in general, been characterized by substantial incomprehension of the extent and nature of the Polish crisis and by mistrust and reservations regarding the regeneration process in which major sectors of the Polish United Workers Party [PZPR], Solidarity and the church were involved and which has been reflected not only in a persistent ideological and political campaign but also in open and direct political interventions in the PZPR's life and decisions.

It should be added that even the incidents of the past few days confirm the restrictive and limited nature of the attempt to reduce everything to the question of the "tragic necessity" of 13 December and also the evident need, expressed by the Italian communists, to deal with the ensemble of historical and political causes of the Polish tragedy within the broader context of the experience of socialism in Eastern Europe.

Another significant topic of Zagladin's interview are USSR-Chinese relations. The Soviet representative mentions positive domestic events, arguing as follows: "I hope that the changes for the better that have recently occurred in China will eventually be reflected in their foreign policy too." Here too there is an evident contrast between these assessments and the harsh polemics with the PCI in previous Soviet stances regarding the resumption of relations with the CCP.

Last, disarmament and relations with the United States. Zagladin indicates a Soviet willingness to conduct a dialogue, claiming that the USSR was the first to propose a summit meeting with the United States and stressing both the need for proper preparations for the October summit and the need to defuse the threat of war, linked with the question of halting the arms race.

SPOKESMEN DIFFER ON SUCCESS OF GENERAL STRIKE

LD120450 Lisbon Domestic Service in Portuguese 2230 GMT 11 May 82

[Excerpts] As the 24-hour general strike ordered by the General Confederation of Portuguese Workers [CGTP] was virtually over, the government called it a failure while the organizing federation described it as a better success than the 12 February strike.

Manuel Lopez of the CGTP held a news conference to assess the effectiveness of the stoppage: [Begin recording] Today's general strike has been a success and fully corresponded to the expectations and requirements of the present situation. The percentage of support is in the region of 60 percent. Admittedly, the effectiveness of the strike was slightly higher in some sectors and slightly lower in others, compared with the 12 February general strike. What is significant is that today's stoppage has been a bigger success than that of 12 February. [end recording]

The day was marked by some incidents. A bomb exploded in Oporto. In Lisbon the incidents left some with injuries. On the state railway lines, in Sintra and Cascais, there were sabotage attempts by placing obstacles on the tracks. At Cabo Ruivo bus depot, there were clashes between picketers and those ignoring the strike call, resulting in three bus company staff members and a policeman being injured.

In a provisional assessment of the stoppage, Marcelo Rebelo de Sousa, secretary of state to the cabinet, had this to say: [Begin recording] In general as well as in sectorial terms, the percentages of support for today's stoppage, as ascertained by us, are lower than those recorded in the CGTP's attempted strike on 12 February. These lower percentages of support were particularly notable in the public service, commerce, essential sectors of industry -- some of these of fundamental importance to our exports, such as textiles -- in agriculture and services in general.

The normality which prevailed throughout the country was only disturbed by flagrant abuses of the application of the strike law by groups of provocateurs who appeared on various occasions invoking their status as pickets. [end recording]

DEFENSE MINISTER UNHAPPY WITH RECENT NATO SESSION

PM121357 Lisbon DIARIO DE NOTICIAS in Portuguese 8 May 82 p 3

[Text] "NATO's support for reequipping the Portuguese armed forces is insufficient," Defense Minister Freitas do Amaral confirmed on his arrival in Lisbon yesterday, adding that if the current situation does not soon change significantly, Portugal could review the "granting of facilities on Portuguese territory to Atlantic member countries."

At the brief meeting which he held with journalists following his return from Brussels, where he took part in meetings of NATO's Defense Planning Committee and of the Eurogroup (association of European NATO members), Freitas do Amaral began by referring to the stance adopted by the alliance countries regarding the Malvinas conflict, in which the hypothesis of a negotiated political solution is a source of satisfaction.

From the agenda of the Brussels meetings the defense minister summarized the appraisal of various military planning problems and the organization of the coming Bonn summit at the level of heads of state.

However, he emphasized that the issue of the organization's military assistance for Portugal assumed particular prominence when he stated before the delegates present that that assistance, "despite being recognized by the Atlantic alliance as a significant expression of solidarity among the member states," not only "has not produced the necessary extensive and sustained results which were to be expected," but also, in many instances, "did not exceed the normal payment by some countries for the facilities granted by Portugal." It is incomprehensible, Freitas do Amaral continued, that "bilateral military assistance for countries not belonging to NATO has been substantially increased, while support for Portugal is reduced." This state of affairs, which cannot be accepted by the Portuguese Government, could lead the latter, "if the situation does not soon change significantly to review its attitude within NATO and to reconsider the granting of facilities to the alliance countries on national territory."

Freitas do Amaral also explained that, as regards Spain's joining the Eurogroup, he merely refused to accept that that country should be formally invited to join the association when there was no such invitation to Portugal, which had to apply for its membership.

POPE ARRIVES IN LISBON FOR 4-DAY PILGRIMAGE

AU121545 Rome ANSA in English 1540 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] Lisbon, 12 May (ANSA) -- Pope John Paul II arrived in Lisbon today (at 1230 GMT) to begin his four-day pilgrimage in Portugal and to thank the Madonna of Fatima for having saved his life when he was shot at by a Turkish gunman on May 13, 1981. On hand to welcome the pontiff at the airport were top Portuguese leaders, including head of state, General Antonio Ramalho Eanes and members of the Catholic hierarchy led by Cardinal Antonio Ribeiro, patriarch of Lisbon.

As soon as he stepped off the plane, John Paul, in a gesture that has become traditional with him, kneeled and kissed the ground. Two Portuguese Air Force T-38 planes escorted the pope's "City of Ravenna" Alitalia jet as soon as it entered Portuguese airspace.

Travelling with the pope were 15 church prelates including Cardinal Secretary of State Agostino Casaroli and the deacon of the Sacred College, Carlo Confalonieri who turns 89-years-old on July 25. The distance travelled between Rome and Lisbon was 1850 kilometers.

Assailant Apprehended

NC130747 Paris AFP in English 0727 GMT 13 May 82

[Text] Lisbon, 13 May (AFP) -- Portuguese police today identified as a 32-year-old Spaniard a man who approached and insulted Pope John Paul II here last night, while wearing a priest's clothing and carrying a dagger. They said Joan Fernandez Krohn -- who was overpowered by papal security guards -- was also carrying a file containing documents.

He was questioned for three hours by police last night at Fatima, where the pope arrived last night to visit the shrine of Our Lady of Fatima, and later transferred to the capital here. A Portuguese Roman Catholic Church spokesman said the man uttered a torrent of insults about the pope's policy towards communist countries, and about liberal reforms in the church since the second Vatican Council.

Speaking in Spanish, the man also accused the pope of being too interested in his native country, Poland, the spokesman said. According to witnesses, the man was so enraged that he fell on the ground at the pope's feet before security men could seize him. But the pope blessed him, without commenting or showing emotion.

The pope, in the anticipated presence of millions of pilgrims, was to pray at the shrine here today to give thanks for his recovery from an assassination attempt in St Peter's Square in the Vatican a year ago today.

FINLAND

CP CHAIRMAN CALLS FOR DEPUTY'S RESIGNATION

PM111521 Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 8 May 82 p 14

[Text] Communist Party of Finland Chairman Aarne Saarinen yesterday called on the party's controversial deputy chairman, Taisto Sinisalo, to resign of his own free will. This would improve the atmosphere at next week's extraordinary party congress, he said. There is a widespread call within the party that both Saarinen and Sinisalo should resign. Both have served as symbols of the split in the party, Saarinen said.

For his own part Saarinen repeated his irrevocable decision to resign from the party chairmanship. He was quite scathing about Sinisalo and the minority in the party. Commenting on Seppo Toiviainen's defense of Sinisalo, for example, he said that it might very well be true that Sinisalo is one of the men most hated by the bourgeoisie and the reactionaries, but that this did not necessarily need to be something positive.

"The truth is that for a very long time now not a single Communist has been elected to represent Kymmene Province (Sinisalo's constituency). Perhaps the majority of the workers' movement has begun to feel alienated from Comrade Sinisalo," Saarinen said.

In his speech Saarinen also repeated his proposal for an all-party government. According to Saarinen, a government composing all important parties in the Eduskunta would stress the Eduskunta's power and influence.

"Up to now the trend has been in the opposite direction, the standing and importance of the government have increased and the Eduskunta has become the government's rubber stamp. The real importance of the opposition has also been considerably weakened and the forces of the opposition feel frustrated," Saarinen said.

The fact that under this new system the National Coalition Party would also have a share of government power was not a real problem, according to Saarinen. Today's National Coalition Party is not the same as the one which existed before the war and for a considerable time after. Thus it would not be a question of class reconciliation or ordinary government cooperation, but a new forum for struggle, Saarinen stressed.

CP LEADERS COMMENT ON CPSU CRITICISM IN MOSCOW

LD111952 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1430 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] The CPSU Politburo has presented extensive and detailed criticisms of the internal state of the Communist Party of Finland [SKP]. The talks between the parties were led on the CPSU side by Grigoriy Romanov, the Leningrad member of the Politburo, who seems to have inherited the position of the late Mikhail Suslov as the person with chief responsibility for relations with the SKP in the party leadership. The talks were also attended by Arvid Pelshe, the oldest member of the Politburo and Boris Ponomarev, chief of the international department.

Our correspondent Reijo Nikkila interviewed the SKP chairman and deputy chairman in Moscow.

[Begin recording] [Question] Chairman Saarinen, what was the atmosphere like at these talks?

[Saarinen] The usual good atmosphere, which we can say is very open and confidential. (?I should say) that in my opinion it was a pleasant occasion.

[Question] What is the view held by the CPSU leadership about the situation in the SKP now, just before the beginning of the party congress?

[Saarinen] Well, here, as well as at home, there is concern, and it is very understandable for the SKP is a very important Communist Party in capitalist Europe. The danger of a split is obvious, and against this backdrop it is very understandable that concern is felt here too. Comrade Pelshe expressed the view of the CPSU Politburo on certain phenomena within the SKP which they regard as negative. In my view there were some too-farfetched conclusions, but we now have at our disposal both Russian and Finnish written versions of this statement presented by Comrade Pelshe.

[Question] What will happen to this statement now?

[Sarrinen] We will make it known to the members of the party leadership and also to the delegation of the extraordinary party congress.

[Question] Chairman Saarinen, to what kind of negative matters does this paper pay attention?

[Saarinen] It includes, for instance, the so-called Finnish historical compromise and certain statements which are interpreted here at least as anti-Soviet attitudes and so forth.

[Question] Whose statements?

[Saarinen] Well Kemppainen and also Oiva Bjorkbacka, one of the members of our Secretariat, were mentioned by name.

[Question] Deputy Chairman Taisto Sinisalo, what is your appraisal of these talks?

[Sinisalo] Talks between the SKP and the CPSU at this level have always been a very important event from the viewpoint of our party's activity, and this meeting was now of quite exceptional importance, for our party is faced with really great difficulties and we are approaching very crucial days with the convening of the extraordinary party congress. The talks were very confidential, open and comradely, and they will certainly be of very great significance for the future of our party.

[Question] What is your view of this criticism leveled by the CPSU against the SKP?

[Sinisalo] The CPSU gave good reasons for its criticism. The message given by the CPSU Politburo to the delegation to be conveyed to the Central Committee and the delegates is very extensive. It deals circumstantially with certain problems that have been much discussed in our own country. They are phenomena well-known to the Finnish Communists and have, of course, aroused deep concern within both the CPSU and the membership of our own party. We understand that (?they) represent a correct apprisal of the bad situation currently prevailing in the SKP.

[Question] Did this trip help on the road to party unity?

[Sinisalo] I am convinced that it will make a positive contribution to the discussion at the party congress. It correctly emphasizes the responsibility faced by the congress and above all, it outlines ideological-political conclusions which will ensure for the party the foundations of organizational unity. In my view this meeting has been really of very great importance for our party. [end recording]

Aalto Interviewed

LD121520 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 0940 GMT 12 May 82

[Excerpts] The leaders of the Finnish Communist Party [SKP] returned home yesterday evening from a visit to Moscow. During the visit the Finns had discussions with representatives of the CPSU. The Finnish Communists were given an extensive report during the visit on Soviet views about the state of the Finnish Communist Party. A CPSU representative mentioned some Finnish Communists by name, accusing them of anti-Sovietism. According to the CPSU representative the Soviet Union does not like the concept of the so-called historical compromise either. This concept, or more correctly the Finnish possibility of historical compromise, was brought into the Finnish political language by SKP Secretary General Arvo Aalto.

On the telephone now is secretary general of the SKP, Arvo Aalto, who in a way brought the concept of historical compromise into the Finnish political vocabulary. Secretary General Aalto, what do you mean by this concept?

[Answer] Well, more exactly, perhaps 2-3 years ago I was asked by the [word indistinct] college of higher education to speak about the Finnish possibility of a historical compromise. In that connection I tried to describe chiefly the cooperation possibilities of the leftwing and the center, or to pose the question whether there were any prospects for such cooperation in matters important for the future of the nation in the coming decades. I expressed my own views about how this cooperation should grow to the level of new tasks and a new political content in order to meet the challenges.

[Question] This concept of yours has been much criticized lately. Do you still stand by your words?

[Answer] My speech has not been criticized in the form I delivered it, but the explanations of the speech have been criticized. I have never accepted the explanations as my own, and I could in the same way criticize the explanations. The speech contains, of course, some inaccurately formulated sentences, which make somewhat distorted explanations possible but in my view the content of the speech as a whole gives the correct view of my intentions, and I have no need for any reappraisals regarding that.

[Announcer] That was SKP Secretary General Arvo Aalto.

'Party Line Will Not Change'

LD121530 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1300 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] Arvo Aalto, secretary general of the Finnish Communist Party [SKP], says the CPSU's criticism of the situation in the SKP will not lead to any change in the line and strategy defined in the party's documents. The SKP described the CPSU's written criticism to the media in Helsinki today. The criticism will not, according to Aalto, have a decisive influence on the course of the SKP's extraordinary congress during the coming weekend.

The CPSU Politburo criticized some developments and acts which, in its view, threaten the SKP's Marxist-Leninist character and the party's unity. This direction of development and the acts may have a very negative effect on the internal political situation in Finland and on cooperation between the Finnish and Soviet peoples, it is said in the criticism. It also criticizes by name some SKP members, some of whom have already rejected the criticism.

NORWAY

HUMAN RIGHTS ACTION AGAINST TURKEY PURSUED

PM130817 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 7 May 82 p 9

[Excerpt] In the foreign affairs debate in the Storting yesterday Foreign Minister Svenn Stray made it clear that Norway would take an active part in the action to bring Turkey before the international court of human rights. "There is a limit to how far the Council of Europe's founding ideal and credibility can be upheld if we are not willing to make use of the machinery set up to monitor human rights," the foreign minister said. Stray attached great importance to the consideration that Norway should not stand alone in this action, but ally itself with the five other countries in question. "If this were not the case it would only give the Turks an advantage, if the action were less broad than expected," the foreign minister said.

The five countries preparing the action are France, Denmark, Sweden, the Netherlands and Norway, and the foreign minister informed the Storting that a meeting will be held in Oslo 14 May to prepare the action. "There is a considerably greater probability today that an action before the Human Rights Commission will be the outcome of the forthcoming deliberations at the political level," Stray said.

SWEDEN

LIBYA WILL BE COMPENSATED FOR TRAINING PROGRAM

LD121444 Stockholm International Service in Swedish 1000 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] A final settlement has now been reached with Libya in the so-called Telub affair [concerning the training of Libyans at the Telub Electronics Company in Sweden] following talks in Tripoli. The settlement is secret, but it means that the state-owned electronics company in Vaxjoe will pay a certain sum in compensation for the interrupted training of Libyan military personnel. The agreement must now be approved by the Swedish Government, which has promised to pay the compensation. It was the government which halted the military part of the Libyans' training at Telub. The Libyans then broke off the entire training program and left for home. So far the Telub affair has cost the state 57 million kronor, to which must be added the amount of compensation.

NEW VISA REQUIREMENT FOR POLES TO BE ESTABLISHED

LD131036 Stockholm International Service in Swedish 1000 GMT 13 May 82

[Text] The government decided today that as of tomorrow, Polish citizens must have a visa for entry into Sweden. Last December Poland temporarily cancelled the visa exemption between Sweden and Poland, which means that since then Swedish citizens have had to have a visa for entry into Poland.

UN NEGOTIATIONS MOVE TOWARD DIFFICULT ISSUES

LD121328 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1257 GMT 12 May 82

[By Tom McMullan, PA diplomatic correspondent]

[Text] Britain, it seems, is prepared to wait several more days to allow time to establish if Argentina is prepared to take part in serious negotiations about the Falklands. Talks at the United Nations over the past few days have been concerned with what are regarded as the easier aspects of the dispute. Now, it seems that the more difficult issues, particularly sovereignty over the islands, are being tackled. It is assumed that Argentine Foreign Minister Mr Costa Mendez has remained in Buenos Aires so that he is reflecting the agreed views of the junta when he passes instructions to the Argentine negotiator in New York.

American Secretary of State Mr Alexander Haig, it appears, found a division in the ranks of the junta during his shuttle diplomacy. This made it hard to obtain a binding decision. It is not underestimated in Whitehall that the difficulties in obtaining a diplomatic settlement are considerable. If Argentina agreed to withdraw its troops without a British recognition of its sovereignty, the regime is then faced with explaining the purpose of the invasion.

Mrs Thatcher could also face difficulties among her own backbenchers in presenting a settlement package containing elements of compromise. Mrs Thatcher has already pledged as an objective that a British administration will be restored. Yet Tory MP's have noted that Mr Pym was signalling a major shift in this position in his Commons statement last week. He said Britain was ready to accept an interim administration by a small group of countries acceptable to both parties. Because of the crisis, Mr Pym has decided to remain in London on Friday for talks with French Foreign Minister Mr Claude Cheysson. They had been due to meet in Edinburgh at a meeting of the France-British council. Mr Pym's talks with his French opposite number will cover not only the Falklands crisis but the increasingly bitter dispute in the Common Market over farm prices where Britain has exercised a veto.

Ministers have expressed irritation that the Community seems ready to bargain its support for Britain over the Falklands crisis with a concession by Britain on increases on farm prices. It was confirmed in Whitehall today that Britain has been in touch with Libya after reports that Argentina was seeking more Exocet missiles of the type used to sink the Sheffield. Libya was thought to be able to supply such missiles although the position was not clear. However, Libya, it seems, has given an assurance that no arms have been supplied by her to Argentina.

'Promise of Progress'

LD121340 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1252 GMT 12 May 82

[By David Healy, PA political staff]

[Text] MP's are to debate the Falklands crisis again tomorrow -- the fifth Commons debate on the matter since the affair began. The government has agreed to an opposition request for the debate. Foreign Secretary Mr Francis Pym will open for the government and Defence Secretary Mr John Nott will wind up.

Mrs Thatcher today chaired a meeting of the so-called war cabinet at Downing Street lasting nearly two hours. Ministers considered a report from Britain's ambassador at the UN, Sir Anthony Parsons, on the latest "interesting proposals" put forward by UN Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar. Sir Anthony telegrammed a lengthy report on yesterday's talks in New York to Downing Street overnight, together with a request for further instructions, and ministers prepared answers at this morning's meeting.

There is no doubt that the talks at the UN, on which the government up to now has not pinned much hope, have taken on a new impetus, but it is still to early to assess the likelihood of their success. Important questions still have to be resolved although Whitehall was giving away no details of the new proposals. They have, however, obviously been drawn up after close consultation between the UN secretary general and the Argentines.

Britain's position remains immovable -- that there can be no cease-fire without a firm and demonstrable commitment by Argentina to remove its forces from the islands, and also that any future negotiations must have no preconditions about sovereignty. No complete package deal has yet been proposed, but Mr Pym said that Britain was pursuing the negotiations "with the maximum intensity."

Mr Nott, with the chief of the general staff, General Sir Edwin Bramall, was today travelling to Southampton to see off the requisitioned QE2. Tonight, Mrs Thatcher is due to see the queen to bring her up to date on the latest military and diplomatic developments.

Mr Pym said overnight developments at the United Nations "held out some promise of progress." He was speaking outside 10 Downing Street after the meeting of the "war cabinet". He said: "We are continuing to work with all intensity at the UN. There were some developments overnight which held out some promise of progress -- and that's a good thing. But I must tell you many difficult problems still remain. We have had our hopes raised several times before, only to be dashed. And we must remember that. But we are doing everything we can to pursue our efforts and do hope we can make some further progress."

Meanwhile, ships from Britain's task force were continuing to enforce the no-go area "in and around" the Falkland Islands, the Defence Ministry said. But there were no reports of any military engagements in the past 24 hours. Ministry Spokesman Mr Ian McDonald told a news conference that anti-submarine patrols by air had continued despite bad weather. In a brief statement he said: "In the past 24 hours the task force has not reported any further engagements with Argentine forces. Ships of the task force have continued to enforce the total exclusion zone, patrolling the waters around and between the Falkland Islands."

Nimrod aircraft have flown more "surveillance sorties" in support fo the task force, said Mr McDonald. The weather in the area was said to be very bad with periods of fog and high winds. "Cloud cover is low and visibility therefore is poor," said Mr McDonald. Mr McDonald said the ministry had no authoritative report on the condition of the Falkland Islanders. "It is a matter of concern to us but we have no further information."

He said papers found on the Argentine fishing vessel Narwal -- attacked earlier this week -- had defined its mission in terms of surveillance and had referred to other fishing vessels. Asked about surveillance by Soviet vessels Mr McDonald said: "Surveillance by Soviet means is a regular occurence and does concern us but it does not constitute a threat and we take measures to minimise the amount of information Soviet surveillance achieves."

Mr McDonald said there were two great advantages which he would not readily give up. They were that Britain had very close knowledge of the position of the Argentine fleet and the uncertainty of the Argentinians about how much we know and do not know. He had no information about the identity of the Argentine ship sunk in Falkland Sound yesterday.

Turning to HMS Sheffield he said that one body was recovered and buried at sea from the Hermes. The remaining dead went down with the ship which had been designated an official war grave. A memorial service for the dead would be held in Portsmouth on Sunday.

Asked about material support from the Americans, Mr McDonald said: "There has been discussion and consideration of various categories of help which the Americans might give us following the statement by Secretary Haig. The support we have already for the task force from our own resources is sufficient to do the job we set out to do." On the other hand there were categories of help, logistic and otherwise, which would be useful and it was these which were being considered.

DEFENSE MINISTRY SAYS 2 ARGENTINE PLANES DOWNED

LD121826 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1813 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] Two Argentine jets were shot down by a Royal Navy warship inside the total exclusion zone near the Falklands today. The ship was attacked by three warplanes -- one of which escaped, said Ministry of Defence Spokesman Mr Ian McDonald.

He said the engagement was late this afternoon, London time. "One of the task force ships working within the total exclusion zone around the Falkland Islands was attacked by three A4 Argentine planes. The planes were engaged, two were shot down, and the other escaped. No damage or casualties were reported from any of our ships."

No further information on the incident was yet available. It was not known if the planes were shot down by the ship or attacked by British aircraft. The aircraft which attacked one of the British ships were American-made Skyhawk A4P's. They normally carry bombs.

Fifteen are known to be based on the Argentine carrier Twenty-five of May, and a further 68 are land-based -- believed to be on a southern Argentine airfield at Rio Gallegos. The aircraft have a range of 460 miles, which would be enough to take them from the mainland to over the Falklands. It is believed the aircraft were shot down by ship-borne anti-aircraft missiles.

Thick fog clouds the area, so it is understood that no Sea Harrier flights were mounted.

SEA KING HELICOPTER LOST; CREW RESCUED

PY122142 Paris AFP in Spanish 2119 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] London, 12 May (AFP) -- The British Defense Ministry has announced that a British Sea King helicopter belonging to the Royal Navy fell into the sea today within the total exclusion zone of 200 miles that surrounds the Malvinas.

The 4-man crew were rescued by two other helicopters of the same type [words indistinct]. It is not thought that the loss of this helicopter is linked to an Argentine military operation, the Ministry's spokesman said.

TV CREW ROBBED; RELEASED OUTSIDE BUENOS AIRES

LD122244 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2102 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] Three members of a British TV crew were found alive and well tonight four hours after being snatched at gunpoint from the steps of the Argentine Foreign Ministry in Buenos Aires.

A Thames Television spokesman said, however, that the crew, from the documentary programme "TV Eye," had been robbed. The three had lost everything of value including cameras, film and cash.

News of the release of reporter Julian Manyon, 31; camerman Ted Adcock, 39; and sound recordist Trefor Hunter, 38; was given to Thames by producer Norman Fenton, who escaped on foot as his colleagues were bundled into a car and driven off by gunmen.

Thames spokesman Mr Mick Rhind said tonight: "The gunmen took them 50 kilometres outside Buenos Aires and took everything of value they had. We are delighted that they are safe."

The four-man film crew had been attempting to interview Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez when the gunmen pulled up in a car and blocked the TV men's car.

As the gang dragged the men out to their vehicle Mr Fenton managed to escape. Mr Fenton told his colleagues in London that he believed the abduction was the work of a "freelance gang."

ARGENTINE PRISONERS RELEASED FOR REPATRIATION

LD130600 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0548 GMT 13 May 82

[By Robert Hutchinson, PA defence correspondent]

[Excerpts] The 189 prisoners who surrendered during the British recapture of South Georgia were handed over to the International Red Cross early today on Ascension Island. They flew out to Montevideo, Uruguay, from Wideawake Airfield aboard a chartered Martinair DC 10 jet with red crosses painted on its sides.

The 150 Argentine military and 39 civilians -- including two Uruguayans, two Chileans and one Spaniard -- were freed in brief formalities two and half weeks after being taken prisoner. Their repatriation began late last night when the first batch of prisoners landed by helicopter from the British ship which had brought them from the South Atlantic.

Captain Bob MacQueen, commander British Forces Support Unit, formally handed them over to the Red Cross. They were taken by minibuses to a small reception centre.

The Defence Ministry press officer reported,"Some looked a little apprehensive at this point. They were certainly happier when they emerged after the formalities, each lasting some 20 seconds, and gratefully accepted a cold drink as they were ushered to another bus which would take them to the waiting aircraft."

All the proceedings took place in the presence of three representatives of the International Committee of the Red Cross. The day before yesterday they had been flown out to the vessel to see the prisoners.

The team was led by Mr Andre Tschiffeli. The Red Cross team will be making a confidential report to Britain and Argentina.

The Defence Ministry statement said: "All the prisoners looked fit and well and were well clothed." The military prisoners still wore their uniforms onboard ship. They had been given plenty of opportunity to exercise on deck.

One Officer Detained

LD130926 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0917 GMT 13 May 82

[By Tom McMullan, PA diplomatic correspondent]

[Excerpts] An Argentine army officer wanted for questioning by Sweden about the death of a Swedish girl in 1977 was further detained today when prisoners taken in the recapture of South Georgia were freed. The Foreign Office said the Capt Alfredo Astiz, commanding officer of the Argentine troops on South Georgia, was being "detained for a few days." Sweden has asked Britain for permission to interview Capt Astiz, alleged to have been a senior security officer in Buenos Aires when the Swedish girl disappeared. The girl, Dagmar Heglein, was 17 when Capt Astiz was alleged to have shot her.

Britain is in touch with Sweden over the case, but the Foreign Office would not say if permission to interview Capt Astiz is about to be given.

FRANCE'S MITTERRAND TO VISIT LONDON 17 MAY

LD111736 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1720 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] French President M Francois Mitterrand is to visit London next Monday for talks with the prime minister, Downing Street announced today. The trip is expected to mainly involve arrangements for the world economic summit of major industrial powers at Versailles in June. It is in addition to the annual Franco-British summit expected later this year.

President Mitterrand is visiting the capitals of all the countries represented at the June summit. Monday's meeting follows the weekend conference of the Franco-British council in Edinburgh, which Mrs Thatcher, French Premier M Pierre Mauroy, Foreign Secretary Mr Francis Pym, and French Foreign Minister M Claude Cheysson are due to attend.

The Downing Street talks are also expected to include the Falklands crisis. The two leaders last met at the EEC summit in Brussels at the end of March.

POLL SHOWS SUPPORT FOR GOVERNMENT DECLINING

LD130848 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0838 GMT 13 May 82

[Text] Support for the government's handling of the Falklands crisis has declined, says a new opinion poll. Approval is down to 71 percent from 76 percent a week earlier and disapproval is up from 18 percent to 24 percent according to a Gallup poll in today's DAILY TELEGRAPH.

But it shows the Conservatives with a strong lead over the Social Democrat/Liberal alliance and Labour. Support for the Tories has shot up 13 1/2 percent to 41 1/2 percent since April -- 12 1/2 percent ahead of the alliance and 13 percent up on Labour.

Although the combined alliance vote is just ahead of Labour, the SDP shows a sharp decline over the last month -- reflecting its poor performance in the local elections -- down from 20 1/2 percent to 13 1/2 percent.

Mrs Thatcher's popularity is also improving -- 44 percent are satisfied with her performance as prime minister while 51 percent are dissatisfied, compared with 35 percent and 60 percent in April. But Mr Foot's reputation takes a slide with 71 percent thinking he is not providing a good Labour leader, against 61 percent last month.

The survey is based on 935 electors interviewed between May 5 and 10. Eight percent of the survey were "don't knows" and were excluded.

COMMONS MEDIA COMMITTEE ATTACKS BBC COVERAGE

LD121926 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1850 GMT 12 May 82

[By Andy Webb, PA political staff]

[Text] An unrepentant BBC chairman, Mr George Howard, tonight met the full fury of Tory MP's who accused the corporation of biased reporting of the Falklands crisis. Mr Howard faced a call for his resignation from Mr Winston Churchill, but insisted he had "nothing to apologise for," over Monday night's controversial "Panorama" programme.

Tory MP's left the packed meeting of the backbench media committee furious, dismayed and disappointed at the performance of Mr Howard and the director general-designate, Mr Alisdair Milne. One senior Conservative said: "It was the roughest meeting I have attended in all my years as an MP."

The meeting was called at short notice to allow MP's to vent their anger against what they claim has been biased BBC reporting and to let the BBC chiefs reply to the charges. It came the day after severe criticism of the BBC had been voiced in the Commons by Conservatives, which Mrs Thatcher herself seemed to share.

In the event, there were no holds barred. MP's description of the confrontation with Mr Howard were lurid. "He was absolutely crucified," said one. "He was roasted alive," said another. "There were blood and entrails all over the place." As MP's left the meeting, it was clear that the BBC chairman had failed to satisfy his critics in any way. "It was absolutely shocking," one senior MP commented. "The bloody lot should be sacked."

Another MP, from the moderate wing of the party, added bitterly: "I have never been to a meeting where two people have put up such a lamentable performance as Howard and Milne. There were no apologies and no contrition. The 'Panorama' programme, which caused more annoyance than any other 50 minutes of television in the last 10 years, had no adequate defence and no proper apology."

Mr Howard hurried away after the extraordinary meeting. He said: "I acknowledged the strength of feelings I heard. I fully acknowledge there were anxieties. It is true to say that I am not prepared to apologise for the ('Panorama') programme. It may have been misunderstood. Its purpose was to examine the views of those who did not agree with the government's policy and to answer them at the end with (Tory Party Chairman) Mr Cecil Parkinson."

In perhaps the most cutting remark of the heated meeting, Mr Churchill told Mr Howard bluntly: "In the last war we did not see fit to give equal time to the Goebbels' propaganda machine."

Mr Churchill said after the meeting: "I suggested that Mr Howard should have the courage either to sack those responsible for the 'Panorama' programme or to offer his own resignation." He said he had complained to Mr Howard about the "gross misrepresentation" of the views of Air Chief Marshal Sir Michael Beetham, who was alleged to have argued against the dispatch of the task force.

"In what appeared to be the only concession offered by the BBC chairman, Mr Howard agreed to look again at this section of the program and consider offering an apology." Mr Churchill stressed that he respected the independence of the BBC but in the "Panorama" case, "we feel there has been severe bias against British interests and the British task force."

In an almost unrelenting assault on the BBC, MP's also attacked comments by the managing director of BBC Radio, Mr Dick Francis, who was quoted as saying in Madrid on Tuesday: "The widow of Portsmouth is not different from the widow of Buenos Aires." It was pointed out to Mr Howard that the widow in Portsmouth might expect loyalty from the BBC as she paid the BBC's licence fee.

MP's expressed distaste at film in the "Panorama" programme showing an Argentine family with one of its members playing a guitar. They insisted that similar film could have been shot of British families. They also attacked the "servile and obsequious way" the Argentine ambassador to the United Nations was interviewed.

There was also an accusation that the BBC had broken its charter by causing offence to the public. There were more than 100 MP's at the private meeting but only two, Mr David Crouch and Dr Brian Mawhinney, offered any support to the BBC, insisting that the corporation had a right to say what it had.

Mr Howard staunchly defended the BBC's record of integrity and objective reporting. And he repeated the BBC's assertion that it was not neutral between fascism and democracy, the aggressor and the victim of aggression, and between Britain and a country with which it was virtually at war.

MINISTRY REPORTS THIRD ARGENTINE PLANE DOWNED

LD131258 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1202 GMT 13 May 82

[Text] A third Argentine Sky Hawk jet -- one of a number which attacked Britain's task force in the South Atlantic yesterday -- was shot down, the Ministry of Defence said today.

Yesterday, the ministry reported that two Sky Hawks had been shot down. Today spokesman Mr Ian McDonald said that a third was seen to crash into the sea during the engagement. There were no reported casualties among the task force, which was continuing its patrol and no reports of breaches of exclusion zone.

In variable weather -- described as "average early winter weather for the South Atlantic" — there were no reports of further engagements.

Mr McDonald announced that, after five weeks as the ministry's spokesman on the Falklands, he would be taking a three-day break. A colleague would take over his role.

UNNAMED TASK FORCE SHIP DAMAGED SLIGHTLY

LD131348 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1243 GMT 13 May 82

[Robert Hutchinson, PA defence correspondent]

[Text] A Royal Navy ship suffered "comparatively modest damage" during action off the Falklands last night. No casualties were reported and the damage to the unnamed ship has been repaired. She has now rejoined the task force operationally, it is understood.

Defence Ministry Spokesman Mr Ian McDonald refused to go into any details about the damaged ship. But it is believed she was hit after the shooting down of two Sky Hawk fighter bombers which were escorting supply flights into the Falklands.

A third Argentine Sky Hawk was seen to ditch into the sea. Afterwards, Argentine Sky Hawk aircraft mounted a series of attacks on the task force ships and it was during this phase that the damage was caused.

Later, a Royal Navy Sea King helicopter from HMS Hermes ditched into the sea. It was not involved in any action against Argentine forces. The crew was picked up safely.

Mr McDonald said he had no reports that the damaged ship had been hit by a torpedo.

ROLANDHIS, PUJA EXCHANGE 10 MAY DINNER SPEECHES

NC111806 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1630 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] Hungarian Foreign Minister Puja has reaffirmed his country's support for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Cyprus.

In answer to Foreign Minister Rolandhis' address during a dinner given in his honor last night, Mr Puja stressed that all foreign troops must be withdrawn from Cyprus, which, he said, must follow a nonaligned political course. Mr Puja added that Hungary will do everything it can to see these goals achieved sooner or later. The Hungarian minister also said that there is no political problem that can stop the development of the political relations between Cyprus and Hungary. He added that his country will do everything possible so that these relations may be extended further and become more friendly.

In his address, Mr Rolandhis expressed thanks for and satisfaction with Mr Puja's reaffirmation that Hungary firmly supports the Cyprus issue. He also expressed gratitude to all countries that support our cause because they believe in principles. Referring to the Cyprus problem, Mr Rolandhis said that Cyprus follows two parallel courses, namely the intercommunal talks for the solution of the constitutional structure and the territorial settlements and our activities in the international sphere. Our efforts in the international sphere, he said, are necessary and imperative, because through international support we can secure our national entity and create the framework that will constitute the basis to solve our problem.

Puja Departs

NC121055 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1030 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] Hungarian Foreign Minister Puja concluded his visit to Cyprus and departed to go back to his country. Puja ended his round of contacts this morning with a meeting with the Greek-Cypriot side's representative at the intercommunal talks, Mavrommatis. During his visit, the Hungarian minister met with President Kiprianou and also had talks with Foreign Minister Rolandhis. Puja was seen off at the airport by Foreign Minister Rolandhis, the Hungarian ambassador and other officials.

AKEL CRITICIZES IOANNIDHIS' CANDIDACY

NC111735 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1630 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] In a statement on Mr Ioannidhis' candidacy for the presidential elections, AKEL says the only thing Mr Ioannidhis will achieve is to further aggravate the election struggle and split some democratic forces by securing lost votes. In its statement, AKEL also says there is no supra party candidate in Cyprus, adding that formation of a union government is an utopia under the prevailing conditions of substantive differences of policy and tactics on the solution of the Cyprus issue.

SOVIET OFFICIAL ZAMYATIN TO VISIT GREECE 8 JUNE

NC121540 Athens ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 12 May 82 p 1

[Text] Leonid M. Zamyatin, President Brezhnev's press spokesman, member of the CPSU Central Committee, chief of the international relations department and head of the state news organizations and mass information media of the USSR [titles as published] will visit Athens 8-10 June.

According to our information, Zamyatin will visit Athens at the invitation of the KKE, and he will hold talks with its secretary general, Kharilaos Florakis, and other cadre of the KKE leadership.

According to certain appraisals, the visit of this senior Soviet official acquires particular political significance given the fact that it coincides with political developments in the area and that it will take place on the eve of Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou's meeting with President Reagan in Bonn.

Soviet interest in these developments is growing rapidly as indicated in an article by NOVOSTI's official commentator (Vladimir Katin), in which he says that:

Haig's visits to Ankara and Athens are aimed at granting extensive military and economic aid to Greece and Turkey in order to implicate both countries in the adventurous U.S. interventions in the Near East.

This will be Zamyatin's second visit. Earlier he participated in the 10th KKE Congress along with CPSU Politburo member Konstantin Chernenko. Of course, this visit will also concern cooperation between the KKE and CPSU as well as preparations for Soviet participation in the 11th KKE Congress to be held in October in Athens.

MILITARY MANEUVERS TO BE HELD IN AEGEAN 8-12 JUNE

NC121917 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1830 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] The National Defense Ministry has announced that, within the framework of the annual program for the armed forces training, a national exercise under the code name "Agamemnon 82" will be held from 8 to 12 June in the Aegean and northern Greece. Land, naval and air forces will participate in the exercise.

SYRIA, OTHERS REDUCE OIL PRICES TO GREECE

NC111831 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1800 GMT 11 May 82

[Text] In 1982 our country will save a total of $40.5 million in foreign exchange from reductions in oil prices effected until now by the oil-producing countries which supply us with oil.

As announced by Deputy Commerce Minister Papaspirou, in addition to reduced price for Soviet, Algerian and Libyan oil, Syria also has decided to reduce the price of its oil by $15 a ton, and from now on it will supply us with oil at $27.90 a barrel.

HAIG ARRIVES FOR OFFICIAL VISIT ON 13 MAY

TA131226 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1200 GMT 13 May 82

[Text] U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig arrived in Turkey today on an official visit. Haig was received at Ankara's Esenboga Airport by Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen. Later Turkmen and Haig made a statement to the press. In his statement, Turkmen stated that friendship and cooperation between Turkey and the United States is lasting and strong. Pointing out that Turkey appreciated the U.S. policies in connections with increasing NATO's defense and deterrence force, Turkmen said that Turkey supported the development of cooperation among the countries of the alliance. He recalled that Turkey was exerting all kinds of efforts to this end. Noting that Turkey was located geopolitically in a stormy and sensitive area, Turkmen said: An adequate cooperation between our two countries will allow Turkey to establish an effective defense force commensurate with the goals we share. Turkmen added that Turkey's being a strong country with a stable democratic system was to the benefit of the Western alliance. Turkmen concluded by saying that friendly talks to be held with Haig would greatly contribute to friendship and cooperation between the two countries.

In his statement, Haig said that Turkey was a valuable friend of his country and an irreplaceable member of the NATO alliance. Recalling that the NATO ministerial council would meet next week and the NATO summit meeting would take place in June, Haig said that his visit would give the opportunity of maintaining contacts before these meetings concerning future developments begin. Haig concluded by saying that the Turkish Government's and people's positive contributions to the security of the West was important for NATO and Europe as well as the promotion of world peace and stability.

PAPER LAUDS HAIG'S VISIT, DISCUSSES AGENDA

NC131000 Istanbul HURRIYET in Turkish 10 May 82 pp 1, 8

[Bulent Erandac report]

[Excerpts] Ankara, (HURRIYET) -- U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig, a friend of the Turks, will come to Ankara on Thursday, 13 May, where he will stay for 22 hours and have official talks with head of state Kenan Evren, Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu, Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen and Defense Minister Umit Haluk Bayulken. During these talks the Turkish-American dossier will be opened.

When Haig was NATO commander for Europe, he was in close touch with head of state Kenan Evren. When Fahri Koruturk retired as president of the republic, Haig paid a special visit to Ankara. Haig -- who defiantly told the Greek lobby "Greater aid must be extended to Turkey; the U.S. embargo is meaningless; Turkey is the most inalienable member of NATO" -- is coming to Ankara for the first time since he assumed office as Secretary of State.

Important matters will be taken up between the U.S. Secretary of State and the Turkish authorities during those 22 hours which will hardly allow him time to sleep. The first item on the agenda is Turkish-Greek relations. These are seven important Turkish-Greek questions. It will be stated emphatically that because of the perverse attitude of the Greek prime minister toward these questions, relations between the two countries have reached the freezing point. Finally, the acceptance of a principle at the law of the sea conference regarding territorial waters, which is bound to create problems in the long run, will be evaluated. Both the United States and Turkey voted against this agreement, and they are in a position to evaluate the situation in the most appropriate manner.

Turkey will include in the agenda matters such as militarization of the Aegean Islands, modernization of Greek forces in Thrace, conversion of the airfields on the Aegean Islands into military arenas, and the arming of Greece by France. Emphasis will be laid on the fact that the effects of the U.S. embargo still persist, and that developments in the Middle East necessitate an increased striking power of the Turkish armed forces. Turkey will demand greater military and economic aid.

As the Turkish aircraft industry will probably be established by either General Dynamics or Northrop, both American firms, the Turkish authorities will pursue the question of $1 billion in U.S. credit which this firm will need, payable over 10 years. The U.S. administration has begun to turn on the green light in this respect.

The U.S. Secretary of State will proceed to Greece from Turkey where he will have talks with Greek head of state Karamanlis, Prime Minister Papandreou and Foreign Minister Kharalambopoulos. He will have an opportunity to brief them on his contacts in Turkey and to evaluate ways and means of eliminating the outstanding problems.

PRC ENVOY SEEKS MORE ECONOMIC TIES WITH TURKEY

TA121532 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1440 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] Ankara, 12 May (AA) -- The special envoy of the Chinese Government, He Ying, who is currently visiting Turkey, said there was every opportunity for strengthening economic relations between Turkey and the People's Republic of China. In a statement he gave to ANATOLIA, He Ying expresses appreciation for the warm welcome he received from Turkish leaders, adding that his talks with Foreign Minister Ilter Turkman and Undersecretary Kamuran Gurum had been very useful.

China and Turkey have rich and complementary natural resources, which they could trade, as well as possibilities for the exchange of economic and technical know-how.

Pointing out that the world was presently experiencing stormy and restless days, the PRC official mentioned Afghanistan, the question of Vietnam, South African apartheid and Israeli expansionism in the Middle East, plus the most recent issue of the Malvinas (Falkland) Islands.

The Chinese Government favored efforts to strengthen cooperation among developing countries, as discussed at the south-north conference in New Delhi.

China considered itself a member of the Third World, member countries of which wanted to change the old war economic order. China wanted to cultivate friendly relations with all peaceful countries. He Ying said he believed the clash between the two superpowers was the main reason of world tension. Presently the Soviet Union was in the offensive while the United States was on the defensive.

PRC Envoy Departs

TA121657 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 12 May 82

[Text] PRC special envoy He Ying departed Turkey today after concluding his official visit. The promotion of relations between Turkey and the PRC were discussed during the talks held between the delegations of the two countries.

FBI HANDLING OF DIPLOMAT MURDERS FAULTED

NC120905 Istanbul TERCUMAN in Turkish 7 May 82 pp 1, 14

[Excerpts] TERCUMAN News Center -- It has been reported that the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) possesses documents concerning the names of Armenian terrorists in the United States, the centers they direct, and evey kind of information regarding attacks launched against our diplomats. It is difficult to understand why these Armenian terrorists, whose hands are stained with blood and about whom documents have been sent to Ankara, are not caught since their identities and centers of operation are known.

According to information obtained by the TERCUMAN news center, following the intensification of attacks on Turkish diplomats, the FBI started an "Armenian terror desk" within its own structure. By cooperating with the secret services of other countries, it has managed to secure extremely important information regarding the Armenian terrorist organizations in the United States. These documents and reports were forwarded to the Turkish Government by the FBI at the beginning of the current year. Among these secret documents, there are also pictures of a farm in Los Angeles where 22 Armenian terrorists organized attacks on Turks in the United States.

Despite all these developments, there is no answer to the question of why the FBI, which is familiar with the names and operation centers of the Armenian terrorists, does not take a more active stand in the matter.

It is surprising to know that requests made to the U.S. police to protect the Turkish honorary consul in Boston, Orhan Gunduz, the latest victim of Armenian terrorists, have gone unanswered.

Murat Sungar, political advisor to the Turkish Embassy in Washington, stated that there were several requests to the police to protect Honorary Consul Orhan Gunduz which went unanswered.

TURKISH CYPRIOT CONSTITUTION SAID TO BE TOO WEAK

NC121852 Istanbul TERCUMAN in Turkish 8 May 82 p 6

["Street Corner" column by Ergun Goze: "Cyprus and the Constitution"]

[Excerpts] No one, except the communists, can deny the fact that the 1961 constitution led Turkey first to 12 March and then to 12 September. This is because the 1961 constitution was exposed to the suggestions of certain circles which were prone to abuse it.

The Cyprus constitution, too, appears to have led Cyprus to its present chaos, which shows signs of deterioration. To put it briefly, the Young Fatherland [Turkish-controlled Cyprus], too, is suffering from the same maladies as its Main Fatherland. Since its Main Fatherland is still occupied with its own problems, it has not had the time to attend to those of the Young Fatherland.

Cyprus has such a luxurious constitution that it bewilders us. The constitution of Cyprus, which has not been recognized as a state even by Turkey -- it is recognized only as a federated state -- even grants government employees the right to strike. The doctors in Cyprus went on strike and they even refused to attend to urgent cases, telling patients "We are on strike."

You can imagine the extent of the rights granted to workers by a constitution that irresponsibly grants the right to strike to government employees. Let me give you an example to facilitate your thinking: In Turkey, members of trade unions have been arrested and taken to court, where the death sentence has been demanded for organizing ideological strikes and May Day meetings. In addition, strikes and lockouts have been banned. Whereas, in the Young Fatherland May Day pamphlets were distributed and May Day demonstrations were held in a manner that amounted to ridiculing Turkey. The slogans of the Revolutionary Workers Union (DISK) were noisily chanted, thus bringing about a very strange contrast between the Main Fatherland and the Young Fatherland.

Under these circumstances, it is frightening to think that there are eight political parties in Cyprus -- eight parties for a population of 120,000.

What good have these eight political parties done for Cyprus, where thousands of martyrs shed their sacred blood for and which has cost us billions of lira -- this piece of land which is an inalienable part of our fatherland? The answer to this question is manifested by the government crisis which has emerged from the recent elections.

This is not a government crisis. It is a constitutional crisis. The leftist parties in the Young Fatherland are under the strong influence of the Greek Cypriot leftist parties. As a result of this influence, a concept has developed which is not beneficial to the unity of the Young Fatherland and the Main Fatherland. On the contrary, it is detrimental. The meaningless provision in the constitution which stipulates that "the head of state cannot be elected twice" appears to have whetted their ambition as Rauf Denktas' term in office is coming to an end.

While here in Turkey a constitution is being drafted which will consolidate national unity and togetherness and prevent clashes among the state's organs, the situation in the Young Fatherland should not be overlooked. The final word we would like to say in this respect is this: Constitutions are not made by persons and commissions. They are determined by historic necessities and the circumstances prevailing at the time.

In writing these lines at a time when the honorable Ulusu is planning to visit Cyprus, I would like to stress my sorrow in this way: According to my friends coming from Cyprus, it is experiencing an atmosphere similar to that before 12 September. We believe that the honorable Ulusu will have a chance to study this situation on the spot.

PAKISTANI INDUSTRY MINISTER DEPARTS TURKEY

TA101746 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 10 May 82

[Text] Pakistani Industry Minister Soomro has said that agreement has been reached on cooperation between Turkey and Pakistan particularly in the field of industry. In a statement at Istanbul's Yesilkoy Airport before his departure, the Pakistani minister said that he invited a delegation of Turkish industrialists and businessmen to visit Pakistan.

Earlier, the visiting minister, accompanied by Industry and Technology Minister Mehmet Turgut, held talks with businessmen in Istanbul. In a statement during his talks with businessmen, the visiting minister said that the Turkish and Pakistani chambers of commerce could play a significant role in the promotion of trade relations between the two countries. Turgut said that an agreement in principle was reached in the fields of maritime transportation between the two countries as well as on the elimination of difficulties in communication.

DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 095 17 May 1982

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Mitterrand Arrives in Hamburg; Met by Schmidt J 1
First Round of Talks End J 1
Address Overseas Club J 1
Falklands Conflict Discussed J 2
Solidarity With UK J 2
Genscher Urges USSR Response to Arms Proposals J 3
Soviet Bank Official Talks With Finance Minister J 3

FRANCE

Cheysson Comments on Solidarity With UK in Crisis K 1
[LE MONDE 14 May]
Hernu Orders 5th Nuclear Hunter-Killer Sub K 1

NORDIC AFFAIRS

FINLAND

Communist Party Congress Begins in Helsinki P 1
Saarinen Calls for Unity P 1
CPSU Criticized P 2
New Leadership Elected P 3
Congress Deadlocked P 3

UNITED KINGDOM

Negotiations Continue Amid Politics, Diplomacy Q 1
Nott Cites Military Options [THE DAILY TELEGRAPH 14 May] Q 1
'Will Not Be Stalled' Q 1
Thatcher: 'No Sell-Out' Q 2
Soviets Protest No-Go Zone Q 4
U.S., UN Envoys Summoned Home Q 4
'Crucial Decisions' Possible Q 5
Parsons Comments on Visit Q 5
Pym Addresses Tories Q 6
Steel Raps 'Return to Jingoism' Q 7
'War Cabinet' Assembles Q 8
Nott Sees Time Running Out Q 8
Liberal Leader Notes Militancy Q 9
Parsons Returns to New York Q 9
Military Action Continues in South Atlantic Q 9
Port Stanley Bombed Again Q 9
Troops Raid Pebble Island Q 10
11 Argentine Planes Destroyed Q 11
Enemy Ships Attacked Q 11
'Miraculous Escape' of Warship Detailed Q 11
Leaked French Document Causes 'Embarrassment' Q 12
Ex-Intelligence Chief Views USSR-Argentine Ties Q 12
[THE DAILY TELEGRAPH 14 May]
DAILY TELEGRAPH Rejects Joint Administration [14 May] Q 13

CYPRUS

Kiprianou Appoints Azinas Army Commander R 1
[CYPRUS MAIL 16 May]
Official Statement R 1
President To Send Explanatory Letter to Greece R 1
[O AGON 14 May]
AKEL Congress Declares Support for Kiprianou R 2
Congress Ends R 2
USSR Reportedly Warned Turkey on Cyprus, Aegean R 3
[I KHARAVYI 17 May]
Kiprianou Appeals to New British Envoy on Problem R 3

GREECE

RIZOSPASTIS Criticizes Papandreou Policy Shift [16 May] S 1
Resolution Condemns Haig Visit, Nato Ties S 2
[RIZOSPASTIS 15 May]
Initial Talks 'Satisfactory' S 3
Papandreou Optimistic S 3

TURKEY

Turkmen, Haig Speak at Airport; Review Talks T 1
Greek Position on Spain's Joining NATO Rejected T 1
Pakistani Chief of Staff Arrives in Ankara T 1

OTHER COUNTRIES

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

L. American Envoys Ask Lifting of EEC Sanctions [TELAM] U 1

AUSTRIA

WIENER ZEITUNG Notes Opening of 27th MBFR Round [14 May] U 1
Vice Chancellor Reviews Talks in UN, Washington U 1
[WIENER ZEITUNG 14 May]
Foreign Minister Pahr Visits Mongolia for Talks U 2
[cross-reference]

SPAIN

Joint Spanish-Equatorial Guinean Communique Issued U 2
Venezuelan Official Seeks Support for Argentina U 2

MITTERRAND ARRIVES IN HAMBURG; MET BY SCHMIDT

LD141310 Hamburg DPA in German 1128 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Hamburg, 14 May (DPA) — French President Francois Mitterrand arrived in Hamburg at noon today for what is described as a private meeting with Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt. He and his wife were welcomed at Fuhlsbuettel Airport by Chancellor Schmidt and his wife and by Helga Elstner, deputy mayor of Hamburg. A private talk at the chancellor's house is planned for this afternoon. The discussion will probably focus on East-West relations and topical problems such as the Falklands conflict and setting new EEC agricultural prices.

In the evening Mitterrand and Schmidt will pay an official visit to the Hamburg Chamber of Commerce and the Overseas Club and attend a banquet in Hamburg town hall. Tomorrow, Schmidt and Mitterrand, accompanied by their wives, intend to visit Luebeck.

First Round of Talks End

LD141620 Hamburg DPA in German 1530 GMT 14 May 82

[Excerpt] Hamburg, 14 May (DPA) — French President Francois Mitterrand has expressed his satisfaction with the first round of talks with Chancellor Helmut Schmidt in Hamburg. In a break in the talk today, Mitterrand told a press conference outside the chancellor's house that the useful and important talks had made it clear that the longstanding good relations between France and the FRG would continue to remain good. He was pleased about the climate of the discussions and the favorable premises for his visit to Germany.

In particular Mitterrand stressed the "very friendly reception" and the "very personal nature" of the meeting in Hamburg. According to Mitterrand the discussion covered, in addition to numerous other topics, "certain aspects of world politics," the situation in the EEC and the preparations for the economic summit in Versailles.

The chancellor said that Mitterrand's visit to Hamburg, which was in return for Schmidt's visit to France, was an occasion for joy and satisfaction. The talks, on which there will be a press conference on Sunday, will be continued this evening. Before this Schmidt and Mitterrand will speak to the Overseas Club.

Address Overseas Club

LD142034 Hamburg DPA in German 1935 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Hamburg, 14 May (DPA) -- French President Francois Mitterrand and Chancellor Helmut Schmidt spoke of the good relations between France and the FRG and the influence of both states within Europe. In a speech to the Hamburg Overseas Club on Friday evening Mitterrand said there were occasionally certain differences of opinion between the two countries -- particularly with respect to future developments in Europe — above all, however, on international problems there is agreement between the two countries.

Speaking to the same audience Schmidt said that German-French friendship today has a reliable place in the thinking, feeling and actions of German and French peoples. The mutual will to strengthen this friendship creates additional trust even outside these two states. Schmidt expressed the conviction that the thoughts already formulated in February during his meeting with Mitterrand, for example on the handling of the difficult economic situation, remain valid and will continue to determine the policy of both sides.

Mitterrand, who in his nearly 1 and 1/2 hour speech stressed the preservation of European interests in the military and economic sphere -- also toward the United States -- described the conditions for a common policy as more favorable than ever before. In military policy the FRG and France -- which is not militarily integrated into NATO -- are very close and sometimes have identical interests. They do not always have the same strategies -- for example in currency policy -- but he does not know of a problem for which no agreement can be reached. Mitterrand emphatically rejected certain economic sanctions in peacetime and said that France has its freedom of decision and would not allow its bridges to be burned or its relations to be supervised by other countries.

Mitterrand went on to call for a correction in the military imbalance between the two great power blocks. Any superiority in arms on one of the two sides increases the dangers for peace.

After the speeches Mitterrand and Schmidt went over to the recently renovated square in front of the town hall and saw the famous Traber high-wire artists, clowns and entertainers in the spectacle of the Alster Fair, to which thousands of Hamburg people came.

Falklands Conflict Discussed

LD150840 Paris Domestic Service in French 0600 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] The subject of Great Britain was not altogether absent from talks between Francois Mitterrand and Helmut Schmidt yesterday in Hamburg. The French president and the West German chancellor spoke at length about the Anglo-Argentine conflict and also about the crisis of the agricultural Common Market. As you will hear, President Mitterrand criticized in barely concealed terms London's attitude toward its European partners:

[Begin recording] France will continue to be seen even more willing to maintain within European debates its capability of making a choice, of saying "no," although I would like this to happen only in particularly serious cases. It should not become common European practice for there to be merely an accumulation of mutually opposed "no's." One cannot awaken every morning with yet another vital interest in view, as some of our partners are doing by accumulating vital interests from morning till night and overnight. One might just as well speak of Europe as a thing of the past in that case. [end recording]

Solidarity With UK

LD151158 Hamburg DPA in German 1100 GMT 15 May 82

[Excerpt] Hamburg/Luebeck 15 May (DPA) -- Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and French President Francois Mitterrand have reaffirmed their wide-ranging agreement in important political questions. In connection with the British-Argentine Falklands crisis they said at a meeting with the press in Hamburg on Saturday that they did not want the internal EEC discussions to be linked with the international situation. Both countries would remain in solidarity with their ally Great Britain as long as the conflict lasts.

Nor is there any cause at present to lift the economic sanctions on Argentina imposed by the EEC countries, even if it is not easy for the FRG because of the intensive trade relations, Schmidt added. The chancellor expressed the hope that the substantial and personal political closeness between Paris and Bonn will be seen in and beyond Europe as a symbol of the stability, predictability and reliability of the two countries.

Schmidt and Mitterrand agreed that they see no connection between negotiations on farm prices in the EEC, which Great Britain has not consented to, and financial aid to Great Britain. His country is prepared to participate in EEC financial aid for the British budget, the French president said. However, should the contribution exceed the 800 European currency units currently being discussed, France will be inclined to say "no". Schmidt stressed that the present basis for the calculation of contributions of 1 percent of VAT should not be exceeded.

GENSCHER URGES USSR RESPONSE TO ARMS PROPOSALS

LD160948 Hamburg DPA in German 0818 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] Hamburg, 16 May (DPA) -- This weekend Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher again urged the Soviet Union to take the West's disarmament proposals seriously and to reply contructively to them. The CDU/CSU parliamentary party also called upon the Federal Government to work for a cohesive and determined policy by the West.

Genscher said on Saarland Radio Saturday that with the American President's offer on beginning the START negotiations on the reduction in intercontinental strategic weapons "a broader range of negotiations on disarmament now exists between West and East than at any time since World War II." He urged the Soviet Union to react to this disarmament offer "positively at least."

Deputy chairman of the CDU/CSU Parliamentary Group, Manfred Woerner, stressed in Bonn Saturday, a day before the start of the NATO foreign ministers' conference in Luxembourg, that relations with the Soviet Union must in future again be determined by a policy of active safeguarding of peace supported by all alliance partners. He said the joint statement planned for the NATO summit in Bonn 9-10 June must not be formulated in such a way that it "gives the Federal Government an excuse for a policy of further unilateral concessions."

Woerner demanded that provisions of guarantees, the granting of credits, technology transfers and other means should be used with regard to the Soviet Union in such a way as to influence Moscow toward a peaceful settlement of conflicts and toward worldwide political restraint.

SOVIET BANK OFFICIAL TALKS WITH FINANCE MINISTER

LD141754 Hamburg DPA in German 1633 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Bonn, 14 May (DPA) -- Federal Finance Minister Manfred Lahnstein met the President of the Soviet State Bank, Alkhimov, today for a 2-hour talk. According to a ministry spokesman the very businesslike and frank exchange of views centered above all on the West European-Soviet natural gas pipeline deal as well as all the credit issues in which the CEMA economic community and the West are currently involved.

It was learned in Bonn that Alkhimov came to the FRG with a delegation for talks with the German Bank. They will be discussing additional finance for the pipeline deal but the Federal Government is not involved, a spokesman stressed. The discussion also touched on other credit issues and the financial problems of several CEMA countries, primarily Poland.

CHEYSSON COMMENTS ON SOLIDARITY WITH UK IN CRISIS

PM141533 Paris LE MONDE in French 14 May 82 p 3

[Text] External Relations Minister Cheysson discussed the Falklands conflict in the National Assembly on Wednesday 12 May. In reply to a question from Mr Baumel (RPR, Hauts-de-Seine), Mr Cheysson said that that "war" could have very serious consequences "at the political and economic level, within the American continent, for that continent's relations with Europe, for North-South relations and for relations among the Western allies." He added: "The solidarity which we have shown with the United Kingdom is based not on a stance on the sovereignty question but on condemnation of the invasion of a territory by force....

"Our obvious solidarity with Britain -- the offended and humiliated country -- does not mean recognition of any sovereignty over the Falkland Islands. If negotiations are to be resumed, it is vital not to prejudge that sovereignty question. It is on that point that negotiations are now stumbling. New confrontations are being planned despite the call for an end to hostilities which the French Government solemnly made after the cabinet meeting on 5 May."

Questioned next by Mr Maurice Faure (affiliated to PS, Lot), Mr Cheysson said that this conflict would probably warrant a longer debate. He recalled that the French Government had imposed "a total embargo on arms, spare parts and munitions intended for Argentina. A few days later," he added, "the EEC -- in an unprecedented act -- banned all trade with that country.... The total embargo is due to end on the evening of 16 May, and its extension poses a serious problem, since people are tending to link this matter with others on which European solidarity has been markedly lacking."

HERNU ORDERS 5TH NUCLEAR HUNTER-KILLER SUB

NC141630 Paris AFP in English 1622 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Paris, 14 May (AFP) -- French Defence Minister Charles Hernu has ordered a fifth nuclear-powered hunter-killer submarine for the French Navy, a ministry official announced in Parliament here today.

The sub, known here as the SNA (nuclear attack submarine), is the last of a series planned a decade ago. The French hunter-killer subs, 72 meters (yards) long, with a speed capacity of 25 knots at a depth of 300 meters (900 feet), carry a crew of 70, including nine officers, and run on a 48 megawatt nuclear reactor.

The combined reactor heat-exchanger provides steam to two turbo-alternators. The sub is also equipped with four torpedo-launching tubes enabling it to lay mines or fire 533.4 millimeter calibre arms against surface targets.

Only two of the five hunter-killer subs -- the Rubis launched in 1979 and the Saphir launched last year -- are operational, with the others due to be put in service one-by-one from this year to 1988. The French Navy also has five strategic subs, launched between 1967 and 1977, with a sixth due to be ready for launching this year.

President Francois Mitterrand announced in July last year that a seventh strategic sub had been ordered and should be completed in 1990.

FINLAND

COMMUNIST PARTY CONGRESS BEGINS IN HELSINKI

LD141006 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 0500 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] The extraordinary congress of the Finnish Communist Party [SKP] opens in Helsinki today. The extraordinary congress will try to find a solution to the internal disagreements in the party and elect a new leadership as Chairman Aarne Saarinen resigns from the party leadership. The atmosphere of the congress is aggravated by the CPSU memorandum which alleges, among other things, that there is anti-Sovietism in the SKP. The memorandum may, however, turn the congress still more against the party minority, according to our political observer, Pentti Lumme:

[Begin Lumme recording] The criticism presented by the CPSU Politburo against the SKP in Moscow may affect the party's extraordinary congress in a way quite opposite from what was obviously expected by those who made the criticism. The SKP's fraternal party in the Soviet Union accused the SKP leadership more or less of everything that the party's minority here has accused the majority. The CPSU leadership also clearly expressed what has been assumed earlier: It expressed support for the views of the minority.

The majority has not swallowed this criticism without objections. Party Chairman Sarrinen said in a radio interview in Moscow that he could not agree with the CPSU appraisal in everything. Saarinen also said the same directly to the CPSU leadership at the Moscow talks, which lasted a good working day. First he greeted the CPSU leadership fraternally, and later stated it was guilty of irrelevances in its criticism of the so-called historical compromise and of exaggeration in referring to anti-Soviet phenomena in the SKP.

In Finland it has not been quite usual to discuss a dispute between Moscow and Helsinki as openly as is happening now. Diet deputies Aulis Juvela and Mikko Ekorre, who were branded as anti-Soviet and who have now joined the company of Arvo Kemppainen, have categorically rejected the accusations made by the CPSU leadership. Both have publicly voiced the opinion that the text of the CPSU's 10-page memorandum is of Finnish origin; in other words, in their view the CPSU has adopted the text drafted by the Finnish minority.

The reaction of the majority members, who have become the objects of slander, to the message from Moscow has been so strong that it will presumably aggravate the even otherwise difficult atmosphere of the extraordinary congress. This SKP extraordinary congress opens officially at the House of Culture in Helsinki at Midday. In practice, however, the congress has already been underway, for the most important committee of the congress, the Election Committee which discussed the election of leaders, started its meetings yesterday at the educational center of the Building Workers' Union in Siikaranta. [end recording]

Saarinen Calls for Unity

LD141732 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1430 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Aarne Saarinen, the chairman of the Finnish Communist Party [SKP], is demanding political unity from the party leadership in order to reunify the party. Saarinen, who opened the SKP's extraordinary congress in Helsinki today, stressed that only absolute discipline can save the unity of the Communist Party. Saarinen regards the government question as the sticking point in the SKP's problems. He noted that if the attitude toward the government cannot be unified, other problems will not be solved either. However, he doubted that the present congress would be able to solve all of the disagreements.

Chairman Saarinen also reiterated his view that the CPSU has made some far-fetched generalizations about anti-Sovietism in the Finnish fraternal party. According to Saarinen, it will be the task of the congress to consider the CPSU's views in an independent and businesslike manner -- without a surge of emotion -- and to take into account everything that is well-founded and worthy of note.

About 500 official delegates are attending the SKP's 2-day congress.

CPSU Criticized

LD151644 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1430 GMT 15 May 82

[Report on speech given by Aarne Saarinen, at SKP party congress in Helsinki on 15 May — passages in quotations marks are recorded]

[Text] Aarne Saarinen, chairman of the Communist Party, delivered a speech at the party congress such as has never before been heard at any Finnish Communist Party [SKP] meeting in Finland. The CPSU has certainly never been criticized by the SKP in words as harsh as Saarinen's. Saarinen criticized the CPSU in his speech as follows:

"The published statement of the CPSU's Politburo does not serve -- although it has apparently been thought otherwise -- the reunification development of the SKP; it seems in practice to act as the initiator and starting point of provocative activity. Our big, fraternal party managed to bring into this hall a striking weapon which has been used by a certain faction at will — and this is being done as the whole Finnish nation watches."

In addition, Saarinen accused the party minority of seeming to rely exclusively on the support of the CPSU. Saarinen asked what Finnish workers would think about such communists. Further, he stated outright that the CPSU had made a mistake in its assessments of the SKP.

"As greatly as I respect the CPSU -- its wisdom in general and its great positive role in world history -- I must note that even it can make a mistake. We now have one such mistake in front of us."

Saarinen also very outspokenly assessed, in the same way as the press attending the congress, the course of events in the congress hall. Saarinen did not see any signs of a reunification in the congress. Party unity has not progressed at this congress, Saarinen thundered. Saarinen, who is now relinquishing the post of chairman, predicted that division and confrontation would continue, possibly even more violently in future.

"The division into factions and antagonisms will, if possible, continue even more violently than before, and thus there does not seem to be anywhere near sufficient readiness to promote true party unity. All appeals and constructive views expressed in my report have largely fallen on deaf ears. The main emphasis has been on accusations and counteraccusations."

At the end of his speech Saarinen addressed a message to the CPSU leadership. "There is not, nor will there be any anti-Sovietism in the SKP [applause] nor any criticism of the CPSU if both sides honestly and consistently observe those principles and norms which we have jointly approved and which concern the independence of the parties and noninterference in each other's internal affairs."

Saarinen's speech was thus quite unusual; he said aloud what has so far only been whispered within the SKP. Saarinen is now the outgoing chairman of the party. If he were SKP chairman in the future, his speech would have moved the SKP to the forefront of those European communist parties which have been continuously quarreling with Moscow in the past few years in the name of Eurocommunism.

New Leadership Elected

LD152042 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 2000 GMT 15 May 82

[Excerpts] The Finnish Communist Party [SKP] has failed in its attempt to restore party unity. The 2-day SKP congress is about to end in a complete failure. The congress has elected a new SKP Central Committee, but the minority faction of the party has announced that it will not participate in the work of the Central Committee. This does not, however, mean that the SKP will be conclusively divided. The former deputy chairman of the party, Taisto Sinisalo, notes that the district organizations controlled by the minority faction are not planning to set up a new party.

Minister Jouko Kajanoja has been elected new SKP chairman. Diet Deputy Seppo Taiviainen, who represents the minority faction, has been elected deputy chairman. Arvo Aalto is to continue as the SKP secretary general.

Congress Deadlocked

LD161418 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1300 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] Jouko Kajanoja, the new chairman of the Communist Party [SKP], believes that the SKP will return to the party's ruling bodies in the near future. Kajanoja bases his view on the fact that before the congress and also during it a striving, exceeding factional limits, for a reunification of the SKP could be observed. Kajanoja intends to start talks with the minority immediately at the beginning of the week.

The SKP extraordinary congress ended late yesterday evening in an almost total deadlock. At the end of the congress the Central Committee elected Kajanoja as the new chairman, while minority Diet Deputy Seppo Toiviainen was elected deputy chairman, and Arvo Aalto secretary general. Toiviainen, however, refused to accept the post. The other minority representatives elected to the Central Committee and the Political Bureau also announced that they would refrain from working in the deciding bodies.

Toiviainen said this afternoon that the minority is ready for talks. Toiviainen said that the minority is also preparing its own initiatives for the solution of the situation, especially as regards the composition of the Central Committee, which has become a key issue. In the SKP the congress elects the Central Committee, and in the view of Diet Deputy Toiviainen a new congress should be convened, possibly next fall. Toiviainen described the minority's abstention from the work of the leading party bodies as a more serious matter than merely a show of bad temper. Toiviainen says that the minority is not, however, planning any demonstrations but will at this stage fight only for the unity of the SKP.

NEGOTIATIONS CONTINUE AMID POLITICS, DIPLOMACY

Nott Cites Military Options

PM141321 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 14 May 82 p 1

[Text] "The military options for the British task force range from "a long blockade of the Falklands to their repossession at an early date," Mr Nott, defence secretary, told the Commons last night.

He also said that "the amphibious forces" (which would be needed for an invasion on the islands) had arrived in the area to take "the measures if that proves necessary."

Speaking at the end of the latest debate on the Falkland crisis, Mr Nott stated: "We will not be hurried. The decisions will be taken at the proper time in light of the information and advice available to us. But we will not be stalled by Argentinian procrastination at the United Nations or anywhere else."

Mr Nott left MP's with the clear impression that an invasion would not be ordered until diplomacy had failed. He also indicated that final orders had not been given to the task force for action beyond the continued enforcement of the air-and-sea exclusion zone around the occupied islands.

He said that the task force would continue to remain under the closest political control with decisions coming from the daily meetings of the so-called "war cabinet."

Responding to criticism from some conservative MP's, the defence secretary said that at no time had the task force been held back from necessary action by diplomatic considerations.

'Will Not Be Stalled'

LD141520 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1458 GMT 14 May 82

[By David Healy, PA political staff]

[Excerpts] Defence Secretary Mr John Nott said the British task force "will do all that is necessary to accomplish their mission," in a hard-line speech to Tory party supporters today.

"The Argentine invasion of the Falkland Islands was an unprovoked and obnoxious act which the UN Security Council immediately condemned in Resolution 502," he told the centenary conference of the Scottish Conservative Party in Perth.

"We have made clear from the start our willingness to accept and abide by Resolution 502. The foreign secretary has worked tireless through succession of initiative to achieve a diplomatic solution.

"Our approach has been urgent, realistic, constructive and consistent in purpose. The Argentines have been consistent only in their inflexibility and intransigence. They persist in their illegal occupation of the islands and have taken no steps to withdraw.

"We cannot allow the present situation in the Falkland Islands to endure. Our diplomatic efforts are intended to bring it to an end peacefully, but these efforts have been and must continue to be accompanied by military pressure to force the Argentines to see sense.

"We have built up a pattern of increasing pressure in which each step -- the enforcement of the maritime exclusion zone, the retaking of South Georgia, the enforcement of the total exclusion zone, the warning to Argentine forces to stay close to their coast -- has been part of a logical and consistent sequence.

"Throughout, our military build-up has been under the closest political control by the prime minister and her minister most closely concerned. Our forces are now deployed. They are taking action to cut off the Argentinian garrison. They will not use unnecessary force, but they will do all that is necessary to accomplish their mission and to protect themselves from attack.

"I deeply regret the loss of life and waste of resources as a result of the engagements which have already taken place. But there is a principle at stake. It is that unprovoked aggression cannot be allowed and [as received] succeed. The rule of law must be upheld. The burglar must not be allowed to keep the spoils.

"We -- the government and the British people -- are determined to do what is necessary. We shall not sell-out the Falkland Islanders nor shall we renege on the principles which led Parliament and the people to will the dispatch of our task force. We will continue to do everything we reasonably can to secure a peaceful solution, but at the end of the day we are resolved, if we have to, to use force if that is the only way to achieve our objectives."

Mr Nott described the recapture of South Georgia as "brilliant" and said the task force had now successfully gained "a number of reverses" over the Argentinian forces. The Argentine fleet is now bottled up in port or close to the shore. It is worried and trying to avoid our nuclear submarines."

Throughout the conference's debate there was support and praise for Mrs Thatcher and the government in every action taken so far.

Mr Nott also told the conference: "The garrison on the Falklands is beleaguered. Its supply lines are cut. It may be that under cover of darkness or adverse weather, some supplies are getting through by air or sea. But this is quite insignificant compared with the supplies before the exclusion zone and the needs of the Argentine troops.

"The garrison know they are isolated from their friends, and they must be feeling very uncomfortable indeed when they think of the presence of the British fleet."

Mr Nott said Britain's options "range from a blockade of the Falkland Islands, to an early repossession by force of the islands if the diplomatic efforts at the United Nations fail.

"We are not going to be hurried. We will do whatever needs to be done in our own time. We will never, at any stage, be stalled by Argentine procrastination. It still remains our hope that military action of a major kind will not be necessary, but this depends on Argentina's willingness to withdraw her forces of occupation."

He said the search for a diplomatic solution would continue, "but equally relentless will be the military pressure."

Thatcher: 'No Sell-Out'

LD141816 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1800 GMT 14 May 82

[By Chris Moncrieff, PA chief political correspondent]

[Text] The prime minister warned tonight that a negotiated settlement over the Falklands "may prove unattainable," And gravely she told the Scottish Conservative conference in Perth: "Then we should have to turn to the only other course left open to us."

In a clear message to the growing numbers of Tory backbenchers who fear that the United Nations negotiations will end in a climbdown by Britain, she insisted there would be no sell-out. Repeating the phrase she used in Thursday's Commons debate, she told delegates: "The government wants a peaceful settlement, but we totally reject a peaceful sell-out."

She stressed that Britain still stood firmly by the United Nations mandatory resolution ordering the Argentine invaders to withdraw. But she said: "After six weeks we need to remind other nations that, if they believe in justice at all, they cannot be even handed between the aggressor and the aggrieved.

"Of course we will continue to negotiate. We will go on doing all we humanly can to reach a peaceful settlement -- a settlement in which the Argentines leave the islands they now occupy unlawfully."

Passionately she told the conference: "I hope with all my heart that the negotiations will succeed. I do not want to see one more life lost in the South Atlantic -- whether Argentinian or British -- if it can be avoided. "But I would not be doing my duty if I did not warn you in the simplest and clearest terms that, for all our efforts, those of Secretary Haig and those of the secretary general of the United Nations, a negotiated settlement may prove to be unattainable.

"Then we should have to turn to the only other course open to us. And that is why, as I have repeatedly said in the House of Commons, the government has done nothing in its attempt to find a diplomatic solution which forecloses any military action now or any military action for the future." She said: "The difficulties we face are formidable, but our determination to secure a just solution is relentless."

Earlier, the prime minister said: "We are gathered tonight in the shadow of great events with which we were confronted through no choice of ours, but in which we have been called once again, as so often in our island story, to stand for freedom and the rule of law -- both challenged by the unprovoked aggression of the Argentine junta. "The task has fallen to us -- but our service is to all who cherish liberty."

The prime minister did not mince her words. She said that the "coldly calculated invasion of British territory," was unlawful and unprovoked. "It must be ended. It will be ended." Mrs Thatcher said the principles went far wider than the future of the 1,800 islanders. The invasion was one of those insidious tests which, throughout history, evil had used to undermine the resolve of the good.

"The right to self-determination is enshrined in the United Nations Charter. If that right is weakened, small countries the world over will be at risk." Mrs Thatcher said aggression, which grows by feeding on example, must not be seen to triumph. "Our men and ships, now facing all the rigours of the South Atlantic in mid-winter, are there not only to secure the withdrawal of Argentine troops from territory which is not theirs but also that others may mark and learn that they shall not hold land they take by force."

In probably her toughest speech yet on the crisis, she denounced as untrue the Argentine claim that it had engaged in an act of decolonisation. "Over the years successive British governments, in company with the islanders, have sought to reach agreement with Argentina over the long-term future of the islands. The last of these meetings took place less than three months ago. Yet only three weeks later, an Argentine Navy ship landed about 60 Argentines on South Georgia without permission from us.

"We sought to solve that problem by diplomatic means." The Argentines had made no move to comply with the UN resolution to withdraw since the invasion on April 2. "On the contrary, they have poured in additional troops and equipment," said Mrs Thatcher. "There can be no doubt where the guilt lies."

Soviets Protest No-Go Zone

LD141938 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1903 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] The Foreign Office was tonight awaiting a full report on Russia's warning to the British ambassador in Moscow that Britain's air and sea exclusion zone was "unlawful". Sir Curtis Keeble was called to the Soviet Foreign Ministry today to be handed a protest -- the Soviet Union's first official approach since the conflict began in the South Atlantic.

The statement, as quoted by TASS, also said that charges of Soviet involvement in the crisis were provocative and "absolutely unacceptable."

A Foreign Office spokesman in London said that Sir Curtis was expected to telegram a report of his meeting to London, together with his recommendations. The Foreign Office would then decide "what, if anything, needs to be done." But the spokesman stressed: "The total exclusion zone remains in operation." Britain was allowed to implement it under the United Nations Charter. He said Foreign Secretary Mr Francis Pym would be "made aware" of the Russian protest.

The Soviet intervention is likely to increase pressure on Mrs Thatcher to seek a negotiated settlement, writes PA's diplomatic correspondent. Britain is already under heavy pressure from her allies to work for a peaceful solution. One argument is that prolonged hostility in the South Atlantic will work to the benefit of the Soviet Union.

It is assumed that Britain and those countries which back her -- in particular the United States and Western Europe -- will find their future relations with Latin America damaged because of the conflict. By questioning Britain's exclusion zone the Soviet Union can claim to be supporting Argentina, and this could produce dividends later in Latin America.

Diplomats were also questioning if the Soviet Union was issuing a significant warning by talking about Britain's arbitrary action in imposing the exclusion zone. The Soviets may have been indicating that Britain must be careful not to attack the ships of nations other than Argentina.

British officials have explained that if Britain declared war legally on Argentina merchant shipping would automatically be at risk. So far Britain has made it clear that only ships that are seen to be hostile are at risk. This seemed to exclude attacks on merchant shipping.

U.S., UN Envoys Summoned Home

LD142359 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2323 GMT 14 May 82

[By Chris Moncrieff, PA chief political correspondent]

[Text] The prime minister has summoned back to London the British ambassador to Washington, Sir Nicholas Henderson, and United Nations envoy Sir Anthony Parsons. This move suggests that there is a glimmer of hope over the intensive peace negotiations in New York, headed by the United Nations secretary general, Senor Perez de Cuellar.

The two ambassadors, who are expected to arrive at Heathrow some time early today, will first consult with senior Foreign Office officials. Then they will have talks both with the prime minister and Foreign Secretary Mr Francis Pym.

The two are not expected to travel to Scotland, where the prime minister, after addressing Scottish Tories in Perth, is due to meet the French prime minister in Edinburgh later today.

Their return suggests that Britain is now in possession of Argentina's latest proposals. The United Nations secretary general has so far been shuttling between the two parties in New York in a bid to resolve the problem without further bloodshed.

The two ambassadors' reports may be the decisive factor in whether Mrs Thatcher decides to launch a fullscale military invasion or stall for a while if a channel remains open for negotiations.

Sir Nicholas Henderson in particular will be able to provide an indication of how the United States is likely to react if Britain seeks to force a military conclusion. However, the recall of the ambassadors can also be seen as another signal to Argentina that Britain is gradually being forced to take a decision on military action. Only if it is evident that negotiations are likely to be fruitful can such a move be prevented.

'Crucial Decisions' Possible

LD150950 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0902 GMT 15 May 82

[By Chris Moncrief, PA chief political correspondent]

[Text] The summoning to London of Sir Nicholas Henderson, Britain's ambassador to the United States, and Sir Anthony Parsons, the permanent representative at the United Nations, indicates that the government may take crucial decisions over the Falklands crisis within the next 48 hours.

The two envoys will see Sir Antony Acland, permanent undersecretary at the Foreign Office later today. They will also see the prime minister and Mr Francis Pym, the foreign secretary, probably tomorrow.

No firm announcement has yet been made about the precise timing or whereabouts of these talks. But so far the prime minister has not changed her weekend arrangements. She is due to have talks in Edinburgh this evening with the French prime minister, Mr Pierre Mauroy and then to return by air to Chequers tonight after dinner.

It was being made clear that there were no plans for the two envoys to visit Scotland. They are expected to return to their posts on Monday.

Parsons Comments on Visit

LD151028 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0956 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Britain's top negotiator in the bid to solve the Falklands crisis peacefully arrived home today for talks "of the greatest importance" with Mrs Thatcher. Sir Anthony Parsons, Britain's envoy at the United Nations in New York, said today that he would be returning to America on Monday — and that things would then start to move very rapidly.

He arrived at Heathrow Airport shortly after Britain's Ambassador to the United States Sir Nicholas Henderson. The two men are to have talks with senior Foreign Office officials today, and will also meet Mrs Thatcher and Foreign Secretary Mr Francis Pym, probably tomorrow.

Sir Anthony said: "These talks do not denote panic, but there will be a general expectation when I get back to New York on Monday that things will then move very rapidly one way or another. "These talks I am having are of the greatest importance."

Sir Anthony, who has been involved in the negotiations being co-ordinated by UN secretary general, Senor Javier Perez de Cuellar, added: "My government suggests that the negotiations had reached a point when it would be useful to take stock and see me personally.

"I will be involved in discussions all over the weekend and will go back to New York on Monday. We are still in business. We are ploughing on, and you can never tell. The situation changes from day to day.

"I have been involved in all sorts of difficult negotiations over a period of 30 years and I have learned to keep an even temperament, one day up, one day down. It's like a seismograph. At the moment the seismograph isn't up or down — it is poised."

Interviewed on the BBC Radio Four programme, "The World At One", Sir Anthony was asked how much time was left to settle the crisis by negotiations. He replied: "We are talking in terms of days, not weeks," but declined to specify a date, saying that if he got it wrong "you will think I am a damned idiot."

He said: "We are getting to the heart of a number of difficult problems. It is quite impossible to speculate how they are going to come out." He asserted: "There is no question of a breakdown or anything like that. We are pursuing them all very actively."

Sir Anthony said the British Government would want to see the outcome of the UN negotiations as a complete package. "We could not say 'snap' to any single bit of it," he said. He went on: "The secretary general certainly feels that we are being sincere, that we are taking this very urgently, and that we are adopting a positive attitude."

Pressed again on how long he thought the present round of negotiations could continue, Sir Anthony said: "It is generally accepted in New York that we are certainly going through the weekend and probably the first half of next week." He added: "I am not going to try to set a deadline."

Pym Addresses Tories

LD151146 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1120 GMT 15 May 82

[By David Healy, PA political staff]

[Text] Foreign Secretary Mr Francis Pym said today the choice between peace and war over the Falklands now lies with the Argentines. In a speech at the Scottish Tory conference in Perth, he declared: "If they make the wrong choice they must face the consequences."

Mr Pym said the crisis had dominated the nation's thoughts, and this was right "because the principles at stake are fundamental not only for us but for the whole free world." Mr Pym underlined the "no sell-out" message which Mrs Thatcher delivered to the same conference last night.

He slated Argentina for its "effrontery" in claiming they were merely ending a colonial occupation. "If ever there was an example of the worst form of colonialism it was the Argentine invasion itself." He said Britain's strategy was "clear and consistent" in bringing diplomatic, economic and military pressure on Argentina to withdraw all its forces as required by international law.

Britain's supporters around the world recognised their aggression could not be allowed to succeed, the foreign secretary said. "If this is not clearly established, the rule of international law will be weakened and small nations throughout the world will have cause to glance even more apprehensively at unscrupulous neighbors.

"The government's hope throughout has been that Argentine withdrawal could be secured through negotiation. It is abundantly right for us to seek to achieve our objectives by peaceful means if that is possible." Mr Pym said Britain's negotiating position "has been absolutely firm from the beginning," but it was backed by the task force "and our clear readiness to use it."

Mr Pym, who was given a standing ovation when he arrived on the platform, said: "The purpose of negotiation is not to compromise on essential principles. It is to identify clearly those points on which we must insist and where there is room for flexibility to reach agreement. This is a difficult and delicate process.

"We have made and are still making every effort to achieve a negotiated settlement. I do not know whether it will in the end prove possible. What I do know is that if it does not, it will not be for lack of effort on this government's part. The country expects no less of us."

Mr Pym continued: "Through all these lengthy proceedings in which we have twice faced outright Argentine rejection of proposals which have been put to them by others, our determination to stand by our principles and the Falkland Islanders has never wavered. Talk of a sell-out is nonsense as all those who have been close to the events of the last six weeks know."

He said diplomatic and military strategies had been closely co-ordinated. That had been the main purpose of the prime minister's daily meetings, and we are all agreed on that. We have left no doubt in anyone's mind since the invasion and despatch of the task force that if a negotiated settlement in line with our principles and the rights of the islanders did not prove possible we would take whatever action might be necessary to end the illegal occupation and restore the islanders' freedom, way of life and choice.

"Here, too, our resolve has never wavered," the foreign secretary continued. "We said at the beginning of this crisis that the Argentine invaders must go. We say now — they must go.

"The UN Security Council itself with the whole moral and diplomatic weight of the nations of the world has told the Argentines that they must go. We have given them every chance to comply. We continue to work for a peaceful settlement. We want no more loss of life, but it cannot be repeated too often: The choice lies with the Argentines. If they make the wrong choice they must face the consequences."

Steel Raps 'Return to Jingoism'

LD151042 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1007 GMT 15 May 82

[By Chris Moncrieff, PA chief political correspondent]

[Text] Liberal Party Leader Mr David Steel today accused the prime minister of abandoning her reasoned approach to the Falklands crisis and returning to "flag-waving jingoism."

He told a meeting in Jedburgh: "There is no significant body of opinion in the House of Commons which believes in peace at any price. The vast majority of us across-party are agreed that the Argentine aggression must not be allowed to succeed.

"What is far more worrying is the strength of the 'war at any price' brigade in the Tory Party, backed by some of the popular press. The readiness of some editors and MP's to send other people's sons into battle is alarming. The prime minister, in the face of the Scottish Tory conference, yesterday abandoned her reasoned approach of recent commons debates and returned to flag-waving jingoism.

"At the outset of this crisis it was agreed that the Argentine military adventure was in part a deliberate distraction from the failure of their government's domestic policies." Mr Steel warned: "It is the duty of Parliament to see that the British Government does not make the same mistake.

"The force is there to be used if necessary, but priority must meet with diplomatic talks." "There is no need for reassurances from the prime minister about a sell-out. We know she would not be party to one. What is needed is more assurance that despite the obvious difficulty of getting the junta to take decisions, a supreme effort is still being made to avoid the calamity of a bloody battle on the Falklands."

Mr Steel will be dining with Mrs Thatcher and French Prime Minister M Pierre Mauroy in Edinburgh tonight.

'War Cabinet' Assembles

LD161038 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1029 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] The government's so-called "war cabinet" assembled at Chequers this morning for crucial talks on the Falklands. Also there were Sir Nicholas Henderson, ambassador in Washington, and Sir Anthony Parsons, permanent representative at the United Nations, who had been summoned to London for consultations. But Mr William Whitelaw, the home secretary, was not present. He has not yet returned after attending an Anglo-French meeting in Edinburgh yesterday.

Today's meeting had to decide whether there was any future in the negotiations at the United Nations. The government is increasingly pessimistic about their outcome following what is regarded as Argentina's intransigence over sovereignty.

Britain has throughout made clear that Argentina must comply with the Security Council mandatory resolution requiring their withdrawal from the islands forthwith. And the British Government will not consider a cease-fire unless it is accompanied by a total and verifiable withdrawal.

This, Britain insists, must take place without any pre-conditions about future negotiations. There is now a growing feeling that an invasion may not be much longer delayed.

Nott Sees Time Running Out

LD161316 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1312 GMT 16 May 82

[By Chris Moncrieff, PA chief political correspondent]

[Text] Mr John Nott, the defence secretary, said today that time was now very short for a decision on the military options. Speaking on the BBC Radio Programme "The World This Weekend," Mr Nott said that he did not think the current negotiations in the United Nations "can go on dragging on for very much longer."

He said that Sir Anthony Parsons, Britain's permanent representative at the UN had reported to the so-called war cabinet at Chequers this morning. Mr Nott: "I think the talks are still alive. There are greatest difficulties still in the way, but I am not totally despondent by what Sir Anthony has said this morning.

But time is not on the side of negotiations. I don't think they can go on dragging on for very much longer. It will be necessary in my judgment, within the course of the next week, for them to come to a head one way or another." He warned: "If we fail to achieve a peaceful settlement then we have no other choice but to pursue the military options much more vigorously than we have up to now."

Mr Nott said he thought Britain's total exclusion zone had been very effective. "I do not think we have ever claimed that some light supply aircraft have not got in. But to all intents and purposes the garrison there is totally isolated. They have not unlimited supplies of food and ammunition and water is a problem there as well."

Mr Nott was asked about the British "softening up" process on the Argentine garrison with assaults like that carried out on Pebble Island. He replied: "We will continue the softening up process of the garrison as part of our implementation of the total exclusion zone."

Mr Nott said the morale of the Argentine troops, particularly with the oncoming winter, must be low. "We must put ourselves in a position that if we decide so to do we are ready to assault the islands and repossess them."

He said: "We would not attempt an assault on the island nor would we attempt a long-term blockade unless we thought either one or other of these could succeed, and I do not wish to suggest that we have ruled out other options apart from the assault. If we were to repossess the islands undoubtedly there would be casualties. It is quite wrong to imagine that we can embark on such a course without there being losses."

Mr Nott was asked whether they had ruled out the option of bombing mainland Argentine bases. He replied: "We have not ruled out any option. But there are no plans to bomb the Argentine mainland. That would be a major escalation of the conflict. There are no plans to bomb the Argentine mainland at the present time." Mr Nott denounced suggestions that the cabinet was engaged in a sell-out as "nonsense."

He said: "There is not one of us in the cabinet pursuing the course that could lead to that charge. There is no question of a sell-out. It is a bad phrase and a silly phrase."

Mr Nott added that if Britain was forced to take the military option, "Time is very short when that decision will have to be taken."

Liberal Leader Notes Militancy

LD161412 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1346 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] Mr David Steel, Liberal leader, said today that there was a "militant tendency" in the Conservative Party. He said: "The trouble is that Mrs Thatcher instinctively identifies herself with that group. She belongs by nature to it. That is one of the problems."

Speaking on BBC Radio's "World This Weekend," he added: "I am quite sure the military leaders take a much more careful assessment. After all, it is their forces directly involved and I think they will make a very calm assessment of what to do."

Parsons Returns to New York

LD170928 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0915 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Britain's ambassador to the United Nations, Sir Anthony Parsons, flew back to New York by Concorde today after his weekend of talks in London and said that the Falkland Islands dispute would be settled "in a matter of days, not weeks."

He said: "It is difficult to say when things will be sorted out. I am going back after a weekend of intense discussions to continue negotiations in the hope of getting a settlement. More than that I cannot guarantee. I am never hopeful or otherwise. I am going back with a full knowledge of our government's attitude."

Asked about reports that Argentina was prepared to negotiate on the sovereignty issue, he said: "It is not unreasonable to expect them to do so. But their attitude has been like someone playing tennis." It was like him asking someone to play tennis providing he could be assured of winning.

Sir Anthony did not believe that military action in the Falklands area had had an adverse affect on any negotiations. He said: "I repeat, I am going back to continue negotiations and I will be seeing the secretary general soon after I arrive there. I play the ball where it lies and I hit it."

MILITARY ACTION CONTINUES IN SOUTH ATLANTIC

Port Stanley Bombed Again

LD150021 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0015 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Sea Harriers have carried out fresh bombing raids on Port Stanley Airfield, the Ministry of Defence said early today. The ministry added that other Harriers from the task force maintained air combat patrols.

This has been in support of the continuing close blockade of the Falkland Islands by the task group," the spokesman went on. He emphasised the comment from task force spokesman Lieutenant Commander Rupert Nichol that there was not a "total block of the exclusion zone."

The ministry spokesman added: "It is considered extremely unlikely that the Argentines have managed to move supplies by sea or air to the islands over the past few days during the aggressive re-inforcement of the blockade."

Troops Raid Pebble Island

LD151722 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1703 GMT 15 May 82

[By Alan Jones, PA defence staff]

[Text] British troops have staged a dramatic landing on the Falklands and blown up Argentine aircraft and an ammunition dump. The troops, probably dropped by helicopter, landed on a tiny island 80 miles west of Port Stanley during darkness Friday night and planted explosives.

About 10 aircraft, including Pucara ground attack planes, were destroyed and the ammunition dump blown up. The daring raid took place on Pebble Island on the northern tip of West Falkland. It is the first time the Defence Ministry has acknolwedged a landing by British troops on the Falklands since the crisis started six weeks ago.

The British troops involved in the raid returned to the task force and there were only two minor injuries. It is believed there were some Argentine casualties during the raid.

Ships from the task force, lying in stormy seas off the coast supported the troops by shelling the island. A number of marines from the crack Special Boat Squardron are believed to have been hiding on the Falklands for several days to report on the position of Argentine troops and to pave the way for a possible full-scale invasion. The Ministry of Defence refused to say which troops were used in Friday's raid, but it is believed that special squadrons were used.

Task force commander Admiral Sandy Woodward is concerned that a number of airstrips on the Falklands could be used to resupply the Argentine troops. "The fewer avenues there are for supplying the troops, the more effective our blockade will be," one Whitehall source said tonight.

News of the attack was given by Mr John Wright, deputy chief press officer at the Ministry of Defense, who is standing in for official spokesman Ian McDonald who is in the middle of a three-day break.

Mr Wright told a news conference: "I must emphasise that this was a raid and not an invasion of the Falkland Islands. It was a limited military action designed and executed as part of the task force's continuing role in enforcing the total exclusion zone."

Sea Harriers from the task force also launched a fresh attack on Port Stanley Airfield on Friday. The airfield and associated military installations were attacked, Mr Wright said. All the Harriers returned safely.

Argentina is believed to have 45 Pucara aircraft, each capable of carrying 3,720 lb of bombs and having a combat radius of 345 miles. A number are believed to be at Port Stanley with the main garrison of Argentine troops.

The Argentine-designed Pucara is a low-flying twin turbo prop plane which might be used to attack troops landing on beaches. It is officially described as a 'counter-insurgency' aircraft and was used by the Argentinian Air Force against guerrillas in north west Argentina in 1976. It is designed for ground attack and is armed with cannons and machine guns, bombs and rockets.

An improved version, with a heavier armament, is known as the Pucara Bravo. The Pucara's maximum speed is just over 300 mph, less than that of Battle of Britain Hurricanes and Spitfires.

11 Argentine Planes Destroyed

LD160606 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0558 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] Sea Harriers from the task force have made another attack on Port Stanley Airfield and its associated military installations, the Ministry of Defence said today. The attack took place yesterday and all aircraft returned safely, said the ministry spokesman.

This latest attack, the ministry stressed, was "part of the continuing task of enforcing the total exclusion zone." It followed yesterday's announcement of Friday's raid on an airstrip on Pebble Island, in the north of West Falkland.

The ministry confirmed today that 11 Argentine aircraft had been destroyed in Friday's attack -- six Pucara, one Skyvan and four unidentified light aircraft. No more details of yesterday's Port Stanley attack are yet available.

Enemy Ships Attacked

LD162130 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2109 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] Sea Harriers from the task force attacked two Argentine vessels in a harbour of the Falklands Sound this afternoon, the Defence Ministry said tonight. The vessels, believed to have been in the Falklands before the imposition of the total exclusion zone, were attacked with bombs and guns.

An MOD [Ministry of Defense] spokesman said: "We have no firm indication of the extent of the damage caused, although the crew of one of the vessels was subsequently seen to be abandoning ship."

'MIRACULOUS ESCAPE' OF BRITISH WARSHIP DETAILED

LD141326 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1247 GMT 14 May 82

[By Alan Jones, PA defence staff]

[Text] The British warship hit by an Argentinian bomb off the Falklands on Wednesday had a miraculous escape, it was learned today. For the bomb, launched from a Skyhawk fighter jet, went straight through the vessel without exploding.

The ship, a frigate, suffered only minor damage, which has now been largely repaired. The incident happened on Wednesday during a series of attacks by Argentinian planes on the task force.

Two Argentinian Skyhawsk were shot down by the "last ditch" missile Sea Wolf, and a third crashed into the sea. A second wave of jets launched a low level attack against British ships, and it was during this that the bomb was launched at a British ship.

The bomb went straight through the ship without exploding, one Whitehall source said today. It went straight through horizontally, no one was hurt and most of the damage has been repaired by men on board. One Whitehall source said the ship would not have sunk even if the bomb had exploded but it is clear that if it had gone off it would have caused a huge amount of damage.

It is understood that the Skyhawk jets came from the mainland and were not launched from the carrier Vienticinco de Mayo.

Defence chiefs believe the majority of the Argentinian Navy is just off Argentina's coast, keeping out of the extended exclusion zone. "We have been extremely successful at enforcing the zone," said one source. The 200 mile no-go area around the Falklands was extended to within 12 miles of Argentina's mainland last week as Britain stepped up the pressure. The Argentinian carrier is believed to be just off the coast.

The main worry for Britain's task force is still Argentina's submarines, which defence chiefs fear could launch an attack on British ships.

LEAKED FRENCH DOUCMENT CAUSES 'EMBARRASSMENT'

LD151416 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1330 GMT 15 May 82

[By Tom McMullan, PA diplomatic correspondent]

[Text] There was some embarrassment at the conference of the Franco-British council in Edinburgh today following the leaking in Paris of a confidential memorandum outlining the views of the French Foreign Minister, Claude Theysson, on Britain's "misjudgements" in the Falklands carisis. The conference, attended by senior politicians, academics, businessmen and civil servants, is designed to improve understanding between the two countries. Mr Cheysson and British Foreign Secretary Mr Francis Pym were intended to be guests at a dinner last night, but by mutual agreement held their talks in London instead.

Mrs Thatcher and French Premier Mr Pierre Mauroy will be speaking at dinner this evening. Foreign Office Minister Mr Douglas Hurd, at a morning session of the conference, sought to play down the significance of the memorandum, and said it provided an argument for not publishing secret memorandums. He pointed out that, whatever Mr Cheysson may have said to French officials, this did not alter the official position of the French Government, which had supported Britain throughout the crisis. Mr Cheysson, according to the leaked memorandum, warned his officials to note British misjudgments in the handling of the Falklands crisis.

He drew attention to the "self-importance" of the old imperial power. "The basic instinctive contempt for proposals put forward by Latins -- flashy foreigners -- the technocratic reation in the face of uncomfortable information, and the evident desire of the distinguished men of the Foreign Office not to allow the vulgar public and the no less vulgar politicians to get mingled with their sophisticated reasoning...."

According to a report in Paris, the head of the American Department of the French Foreign Ministry said Britain lived mistakenly in certain belief that the Argentines would never attack the greatest power of the last century.

Mr Cheysson said in a French television interview that it was sad the weekly FIGARO magazine had published details of the confidential ministry report. He just already denied expressing the views aired in the document.

EX-INTELLIGENCE CHIEF VIEWS USSR-ARGENTINE TIES

PM141535 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 14 May 82 p 5

[Bermuda correspondent dispatch: "Russia 'The Only Winner'"]

[Text] Russia is the only country which stands to gain from the Falklands crisis, according to Sir William Stephenson, the former head of British intelligence. He explained that even if Argentina held on to the islands Russian influence could be expected to grow because of the ruling junta's growing reliance on the Soviet Union.

Should the Argentines lose in their attempt to keep control of the islands, forcing President Leopoldo Galtieri to resign, the clandestine left might be encouraged to emerge once again.

Sir William, code-named Intrepid during the 1939-45 war, and whose responsibilities included control of British intelligence activities in Argentina, said the the oucome could well be partial Soviet control over the South Atlantic. "This would be complete if Namibia (South West Africa) were allowed to fall into the hands of the Moscow-backed SWAPO [South West African People's Organization] guerrillas, sharpening the threat to the South African harbour of Walvis Bay.

A Soviet diplomat stationed in Argentina started preliminary discussions on the Falklands with Argentine authorities about a year ago, he added. Sir William, who now lives in Bermuda, claimed the Russians must have tactical objectives which include listening posts to harbours; arms sales; and access to Argentine intelligence, particularly on United States sanctions in Central America.

DAILY TELEGRAPH REJECTS JOINT ADMINISTRATION

PM141441 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 14 May 82 p 14

[Editorial: "How Long?"]

[Text] Mr Pym's speech opening yesterday's fifth House of Commons debate on the Falkland Islands crisis will have done little or nothing to remove the anxieties of many Conservatives about the government's present policies. Some of those anxieties were expressed in this column yesterday. They centre on the possibility that, by continuing to fall in with Argentine delaying tactics in the talks with the United Nations, beyond the point at which the British task force is ready to take action to regain the Falkland Islands, the government may be embarking on a road leading to eventual appeasement and compromise with Argentine aggression. Mr Healey argued that the secretary general of the United Nations should be given all the time he thinks necessary to continue the discussions, and that he could be relied on not to pursue them needlessly. That is a very dubious proposition. The spirit of the United Nations, with which Senor Perez de Cuellar is honourably imbued, is for talk above all things.

It has been Argentina's aim all along to focus the dispute at the United Nations, precisely because it is the place where it is easiest to spin things out. Britain was right to agree to join the secretary general's efforts, but they have been going on for a week now without real signs of progress. How much longer? There will come a time, if it has not come already, when the mere fact of their continuation will begin to work against Britain and the possibility of using the task force effectively. Mr Pym gave no hint that the government has any time limit.

In his presentation, Mr Pym also seemed to be envisaging joint administration of the islands in the interim period -- with one or more other countries and possibly UN participation. This was a feature of the Peruvian plan which Argentina rejected but Britain accepted. Answering Mr Amery, Mr Pym assured him those proposals were now out of court, yet he still seems to hold to joint administration.

If this is the government's position, it is wrong. Britain must insist on full British administration of the islands for a least the interim period. It is only in this way that Britain would be able to keep all options open during discussions of a long-term settlement, which Mr Pym suggested could take "months." It would also ensure the only really satisfactory way of checking that complete Argentine withdrawal had taken place. The long-term settlement will have to take in more than many people seem to imagine, including the future strategic value of the whole area for Western defence. It will be essential to start the discussion with a clean slate and all options open. First, though, our task force must not be left lying about a day longer than needed.

KIPRIANOU APPOINTS AZINAS ARMY COMMANDER

NC160702 Nicosia CYPRUS MAIL in English 16 May 82 p 3

[Text] Maj Gen Yeoryios Azinas has been officially appointed commander of the Cyprus Army with effect from May 10. The appointment, made by President Kiprianou, was published in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE on Friday.

Major General Y. Azinas retains also his post as deputy commander of the National Guard. According to a report in I ELEVTHEROTIPIA, Y. Azinas will soon be promoted to the rank of lt general.

In the office of Cyprus Army commander, Y. Azinas fills the vacancy created by the death of the former Cypriot commander, seconded from the Greek Army, Gen. Pandelidhis.

With the setting up of the National Guard, most of the officers of the Cyprus Army have been posted with the National Guard. An official statement explained that it is not correct that the Cyprus Army merged with the National Guard. The Cyprus Army remains a legal entity even though nearly all its officers have been attached to the National Guard.

The same statement clarifies that though the National Guard, when established in 1964 came under the Ministry of Interior, has since 1978 been placed under the Ministry of Defence and that the two ministries are distinct even though the same minister heads both.

Official Statement

NC161843 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1630 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] A statement issued today stresses that neither now nor in the future does the government intend to alter the present structure of the security forces or bring about any changes in the way they are currently manned. The official statement reiterates that Deputy Commander of the National Guard Azinas has been appointed commander of the Cyprus Army for clearly formal and procedural reasons. The statement adds that the Defense Ministry bases the organization of defense and the security forces on the suggestions of its military advisers, who are experts and have broad experience in these matters.

PRESIDENT TO SEND EXPLANATORY LETTER TO GREECE

NC141024 Nicosia O AGON In Greek 14 May 82 p 1

[Text] President Spiros Kiprianou is preparing a new letter to Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou to explain in every detail why, in his opinion, the minimum program does not run contrary to the Athens-Nicosia line in handling the Cyprus problem.

Mr Kiprianou took this step after being given the Greek Government's views -- conveyed to him by Greek Ambassador Khr. Zakharakis -- and at the advice of his close collaborators, who pointed out that he must move soonest to smooth out relations between the two governments.

According to reliable information, the new letter will be sent tomorrow or Monday at the latest. The letter will stress the need for Mr Kiprianou to visit Athens for talks with the Greek prime minister at the earliest possible moment. According to the same information, Mr Kiprianou has already made a verbal request for a meeting with the Greek prime minister to discuss with him the disagreement between Athens and Nicosia, but his request met with no response.

Mr Kiprianou's letter was to have been sent last Tuesday but was postponed because of Mr Papandreou's visit to Algeria.

Reports received by O AGON from authoritative sources say that Mr Kiprianou did not brief even the Council of Ministers on the contents of Mr Papandreou's letter [to him]. He confined himself to saying that the difference is not "serious" and that it will soon be bridged.

AKEL CONGRESS DECLARES SUPPORT FOR KIPRIANOU

NC152101 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1630 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] In a resolution to President Kiprianou, the 15th AKEL congress declares its full support for the AKEL-Democratic Party cooperation and the minimum program on which this cooperation is based. The resolution also expresses full support for Mr Kiprianou's candidacy as the joint presidential candidate of the cooperation for the next presidential elections.

At the same time, in a message to the Turkish Cypriots, the congress notes that Greek and Turkish Cypriots must solve the Cyprus issue together because, if they do not solve it, others will solve it in order to serve their own interests. The message also says AKEL will continue to struggle for rapprochement and sincere cooperation between the two communities.

The congress has also passed various other resolutions on international and domestic problems. Among other things, it has passed a resolution on the questions of refugees, missing persons and enclaved people as well as a resolution to the UN secretary general on the Cyprus issue.

Congress Ends

NC161206 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1030 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] The work of the 15th AKEL congress ended in Nicosia today. The congress was closed with an address by AKEL Secretary General Papaioannou, who stressed that the patriotic democratic people of Cyprus expect the complete smoothing of relations between the Greek and Cyprus Governments. He said: AKEL will heartfully hail and applaud such an imperative, pleasant development.

Mr Papaioannou said that sincere friends and allies of both President Kiprianou and Greek Prime Minister Papandreou are the genuine patriotic democratic forces, the forces, he said, which allied on the basis of the AKEL-Democratic Party [DIKO] minimum program and those which could join this democratic cooperation. He added: The interest of both Greece and Cyprus is in the close and sincere cooperation and concord of the Greek and Cyprus Governments on the basis of principles.

The congress also approved a declaration to the Cypriot people that stresses that Cyprus' most power weapon in its struggle is the unity of the patriotic democratic forces and the establishment of a solid internal front. The declaration adds that the democratic cooperation between DIKO and AKEL is open to all those who agree with the line and policy included in the minimum program.

In connection with the Cyprus problem, the declaration says that the internal aspect of the problem will be resolved through the intercommunal talks under the auspices of the UN secretary general, and the external aspect through international conference within the UN framework. The tactics of the struggle are: the all-sided internationalization of the Cyprus problem; the recourse again to the United Nations in the case of a deadlock in the intercommunal dialogue with the goal not to abandon it but to strengthen it, and to hold an international conference on the Cyprus problem; the decisive resistance to any partitionist plans; and the strengthening of our defense organization.

In conclusion, the declaration addresses a message to the Turkish Cypriots for the waging of a joint struggle. The new AKEL Central Committee and the Central Control Committee met earlier and unanimously elected the new AKEL leadership. Mr Papaioannou was reelected AKEL secretary general.

USSR REPORTEDLY WARNED TURKEY ON CYPRUS, AEGEAN

NC170932 Nicosia I KHARAVYI in Greek 17 May 82 p 1

[Text] In clear language the Soviet Union warned Turkey to desist from any action related to Cyrpus and the Aegean which might create tension in the area. The Soviet warning was delivered in a verbal note delivered by the Soviet ambassador in Ankara to Prime Minister Ulusu. According to our verified report the Soviet warning was delivered last April. The verbal note also mentions that the USSR closely follows the developments taking place in the area and that it is concerned over reports on plans to climax a situation of tension related to Cyprus and the Aegean.

In its verbal note the Soviet Government also warned Turkey that it would not remain an impassive spectator should there be any deterioration in the situation in the area. In reference to this, we recall that during the period from February to April there were strong rumors -- also echoed by the imperialist organs in Cyprus -- that "Turkey is planning dynamic actions" as a result of Papandreou's visit and domestic political developments.

KIPRIANOU APPEALS TO NEW BRITISH ENVOY ON PROBLEM

NC141713 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1630 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] President Kiprianou has stressed once again that if Cyprus is to survive as an independent, sovereign, territorially integral, united and a nonaligned state, then the occupation troops must be withdrawn immediately and every idea of division must be abandoned. Speaking today at the ceremony on the presentation of credentials by the new British high commissioner to Cyprus, Mr Wilberforce, President Kiprianou reiterated that lack of progress toward a Cyprus solution is basically due to the presence of Turkish occupation troops in Cyprus and to the Turkish tactics of division. He added: The solution of the internal aspect of the Cyprus issue must come about through negotiations between the two communities. Mr Kiprianou said the Greek Cypriot side will continue the dialogue in order to exhaust all possibilities and, if the dialogue ends in a deadlock, the Greek Cypriot side will not have any other option but to again raise the Cyprus issue at the UN General Assembly or the Security Council.

President Kiprianou expressed his regrets because Britain, as a guarantor power, had not exerted every effort to prevent the invasion and because, after the invasion, it did not adopt the appropriate measures to restore the order that had been disturbed. He added: We continue to believe that Britain is in a position to play a very significant role, possibly together with other countries, in an endeavor to persuade Turkey to abandon its intransigent stance. President Kiprianou stressed that despite the disagreements and friction of the distant as well as recent past, there is always ground for the improvement of relations between Britain and Cyprus: and on the part of the Cypriot side, everything will be done to develop bilateral relations to the highest degree possible.

Presenting his credentials, new British High Commissioner Wilberforce referred to the close and old relations between his country and Cyprus and gave assurances about the strong interest in Britain for a peaceful solution of the problems of Cyprus. The British Government, he said, welcomes and follows closely the efforts being exerted, under the UN secretary general's auspices, for the promotion of the dialogue between the communities in Cyprus, a fact that is essential for a settlement. Mr Wilberforce added that his government supports a final and lasting settlement based upon the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Cyprus.

RIZOSPASTIS CRITICIZES PAPANDREOU POLICY SHIFT

NC161700 Athens RIZOSPASTIS in Greek 16 May 82 p 16

[From the "Current Issues" column: "No to Foreign Overlordship"]

[Excerpts] Yesterday's arrival in Athens by Haig, the cold war minister and herald of a limited nuclear confrontation, is totally contrary to the peaceful sentiments of the Greek people. The people's grand and unifying demonstrations during the past few days in the capital and in the country's main cities only confirmed the will of the Greek people to be rid of the regime of dependence upon imperialism and of the U.S. bases in our country. They were a loud expression not only against Haig's presence in our country but also of the concern among our people caused by the government's increasing concessions before imperialist pressure and by the government's repeated reneging from earlier declarations on critical national issues.

The government argued that organizations which took the initiative in these people's demonstrations, that is the KKE and the Greek Communist Youth, KNE, were motivated by narrow party interests and goals. Is it narrow party interests which are served by the struggle against the promoters of war, for the withdrawal of nuclear weapons and removal of foreign bases from Greek territory? If so then why did PASOK, which today is the ruling party, declare before the election and even more recently its opposition to the presence of foreign bases and nuclear weapons in our country?

The government of PASOK invited U.S. Secretary of State Haig to Athens for talks, as it alleges, for the purpose of solving our critical national problems. The rightwing and its press lauded, without any reservations, this government action. The government press, which only a few months ago lauded "the proud Greek position" on the veto and reservations toward the NATO communiques, turned itself to literary outbreaks about the "rift" and "tension" in the relations between the KKE and PASOK.

These press reports only reflect the climate created by a series of developments, actions and statements by the government. These government actions, as we can conclude today, were simply aimed at smoothing the ground for today's presence by Haig in Athens and for the forthcoming NATO summit conference in Bonn within the framework of which Papandreou will also meet Reagan.

In his interview with the U.S. ABC Television Network, the prime minister inaugurated, from the position of his government, a severe condemnation of existent socialism and at the same time he carefully avoided any burning questions related to foreign bases in our country and our relations with NATO. In the same interview, the prime minister also described the denuclearization of the Balkans as an impossible vision, thus fundamentally undermining all relevant declarations in support of this goal.

What followed was the cancellation of the Al-Qadhdhafi visit to Athens, the criticism of the Democratic Party, DIKO-AKEL cooperation, and the Haig visit as a conclusion. At the same time the government continued to reiterate its declarations that the goal of removing the military bases from Greece and the entire Mediterranean continued to be valid.

Acting barely 24 hours before Haig's visit to Greece, the government introduced in the Chamber of Deputies a bill approving Spain's accession to NATO and, once again, confirming the establishment of an AWACS airfield at Aktion. Now to what degree the strengthening of NATO by the addition of one more country as a member leads to the dissolution of the military coalitions or to what degree the provision of new facilities, mainly financed by our own country (not a "dime" from NATO), promotes the goal of removing the foreign bases could only be explained by the PASOK government.

The Greek Government invited Haig to Athens after having first approved, unreservedly, of Spain's accession to NATO and by maintaining total silence over the question of the unilateral removal of nuclear weapons (which the government spokesman promised would be accomplished within 1 or 2 months after the new government took over authority), and without explaining what sort of time schedule it would demand for the removal of the bases. It now conducts negotiations with the U.S. side on all of our national issues.

The basic demands of the governemt are for U.S. guarantees for our eastern border and a return to the pre-1974 operational control of the Aegean.

By criticising the reneging of the PASOK government and by calling on the people to demonstrate against Haig, the KKE does not disrupt the people's unity of spirit. The people's unity of spirit remains intact and is based on the unyielding demands: The U.S. bases must go and the regime of dependence upon imperialism must be dismantled. This is the main issue of interest to the Greek people. This is the issue upon which the government must act.

It is true that the rightwing -- over and above its literary flights about "tricks" and "family quarrels" in the relations between the two parties — is happy with the criticism conducted by the KKE against PASOK's government and it encourages a clash with all available means. Deep down, however, it is also happy with the government's reneging which causes criticism from the KKE.

The PASOK government must see and it must turn its policy toward implementing its declaration and the peoples demands for removing the bases, abolishing the regime of foreign overlordship, and supporting national independence.

RESOLUTION CONDEMNS HAIG VISIT, NATO TIES

NC152120 Athens RIZOSPASTIS in Greek 15 May 82 p 11

[14 May resolution of the democratic people of Athens]

[Text] All of us, the workers of Athens, who gathered here tonight at Sindagma Square in response to the patriotic invitation of the Athens party organization of the KKE, feel the imperative need to declare our strongest indignation over the visit to our country by the U.S. war minister, A. Haig.

At the same time we also express the feelings of deep concern of the great majority of Athenian democrats over the talks which the representative of U.S. imperialism and former NATO chief will be having with the Greek Government. These talks portend nothing good for the true interests of our country.

The policy of the aggressive NATO coalition toward our fatherland's national issues have been stated. It is also well known that the presence here of the representative of U.S. imperialism has only one goal: to perpetuate U.S. overlordship in our country; and to prevent the removal from our country of the bases of death which play an important role in the fulfillment of imperialist cold war plans in the area.

This is why the proud Athenian people express their strongest opposition to Haig's presence here. They cannot remain unmoved in the face of these U.S. aspirations which can only amass hardships for our country. Our national independence cannot become the object of bargaining. The government cannot handle such critical national affairs "behind the backs" of the Greek people.

We call upon the government to respect the will of the Greek people as expressed with even greater strength during the last election through the victory of the democratic forces; to call upon the Americans to remove their bases within a scheduled time limit.

— Our country must withdraw from NATO.

— The U.S. imperialists and their nuclear weapons must leave our country now.

— Out of Greece with the undesirable Haig.

This resolution will be presented to the presidium of the Chamber of Deputies with the request that it be read to the body and to the government in accordance with the Chamber's regulations. [dated] Athens, 14 May 1982.

Initial Talks 'Satisfactory'

NC151544 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1500 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] U.S. Secretary of State Haig, who arrived shortly before noon in Athens from Ankara, has had a private meeting at Kastri [Papandreou's private residence] with Prime Minister Papandreou. He then had a meeting attended by the prime minister, Foreign Minister Kharalambopoulos, Deputy Foreign Minister Kapsis and other officials. The talks were continued during a working luncheon.

Prime Minister Papandreou made this statement after the noon talks: As a Greek Government we have had the opportunity to present all problems, whether they deal with Greek-Turkish relations or with Greek-U.S. relations or with Greek-NATO relations and, certainly, of course, the Cyprus issue, which always remains high on the list of Greek priorities.

I wish to emphasize that the discussions were sincere and direct and that we found a positive spirit on the part of Mr Haig and the United States. I would like to explain that no issue was solved; that today's discussion and the meeting which will be continued late tonight are not meant to solve any issues but rather to define and set the framework for further dialogue which will lead, we hope, to a solution for Greece, independently proud -- a solution which will guarantee the territorial integrity of our country. I am satisfied with today's discussions, the prime minister concluded.

Papandreou Optimistic

NC161954 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1830 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] In an interview he gave to Hellenic Radio and Television, ERT, on the results of the visit and talks with U.S. Secretary of State Haig, Prime Minister Papandreou stressed, among other things, that Haig's statements on his departure indicated the general climate which prevailed during their nearly full day of meetings yesterday. No problems were solved, he said, but there was a full evaluation of all problems facing our country, whether Greek-Turkish affairs, Greek-NATO relations, or relations between Greece and the United States. There was a general presentation by the Greek side and Haig commented on every position taken by our side. His reaction ranged from acknowledgment to understanding, and even respect, for the positions of the Greek Government which express the political will of our nation and people.

Replying to a question on the triangular, as it is described, problem of Greece-Turkey-NATO, the prime minister stated: Our position is well known. The Turkish threat is clear. This is something we can establish from the history of recent years, particularly from 1974 to date; in other words, from the Cyprus tragedy on.

It is clear that the abilities of Turkey to carry out these aggressive claims are dependent upon two factors:

1. The Greek ability to deal with such a threat. In other words, the strengthening of the Aegean balance as a prerequisite for peace. Naturally, the United States plays a very important role due to the military aid which it gives to both countries and which, if this were not taken into consideration, could truly overthrow the Aegean balance.

2. The will of the United States, but also, perhaps, more generally the NATO allies, to make it clear to Turkey that any active claim upon Greek national territory would find them face-to-face.

These issues were presented lucidly and it is clear that Haig had complete knowledge. He was personally involved in the negotiations which led to the return of Greece to NATO's military wing. I can state that from this understanding and knoledge it is possible -- without promising anything specific -- that something positive may result.

More generally, I must state that these discussions were not held for the purpose of solving issues but in order to set the general political framework within which a Greek-U.S., Greek-NATO dialogue may operate which will cover all critical national issues. I admit that I am satisfied by this first discussion, this first exchange of views, and I am optimistic that the nationally proud policy followed by our government and the genuine multidimensional foreign policy will truly open up new prospects for our nation and our people.

[Question by unidentified interviewer] Mr Prime Minister, you have repeatedly declared at international forums throughout the world the Greek Government's multidimensional and greatly significant foreign policy. The impression is the United States has some different views on this foreign policy. What impressions have you gathered from Mr Haig?

[Papandreou] I am pleased with this question. The Greek Government has expressed reservations about NATO and EEC communiques. On a number of major foreign issues we have different positions. What I stress is that the United States, as it expresses itself through the responsible Secretary of State Haig, does not question the Greek people's right to chart their own course in foreign policy. And I believe this is really something which our people must feel. Our people themselves are responsible for charting the nation's course. On such a basis and within such a framework the possibilities of developing positive relations with the United States are real -- they not only exist, they are real. [end recording]

TURKMEN, HAIG SPEAK AT AIRPORT; REVIEW TALKS

TA151039 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig has left Turkey. Haig held a news conference at Esenboga Airport before his departure. In a statement before Haig's news conference, Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen said the talks showed there is an atmosphere of confidence and full understanding between the two countries. He added that, in particular, the issues of defense and economic cooperation were discussed and that the possibilities for increasing ties in the fields of trade, technology and science were also discussed. Noting that international and regional problems were also reviewed, Turkmen added that the two countries shared views regarding the principles and approaches to the solution of these problems. Turkmen noted that relations between Turkey and the United States have reached an auspicious period and that the two countries aim at adding new dimensions to the Turkish-U.S. partnership.

Haig said that his contacts in Ankara had brought results that were beneficial and satisfactory for both sides. Haig noted that he found the recent developments in Turkey very positive and remarkable and that successful results have been obtained, especially in the struggle against terrorism and in the economic field.

Noting that during his contacts in Ankara he had been informed of activities concerning a return to democracy in Turkey, Haig said the United States believed in the program for a return to democracy and that it supported the program. Haig said the United States is opposed to international terrorism and that it vehemently condemns the attacks directed against Turkish diplomats in foreign countries. In reply to a question, Haig noted that the United States is in favor of resolving Turkish-Greek disputes and the Cyprus problem through negotiations.

Haig concluded by saying that Turkey has a vital role in insuring security and stability in the eastern Mediterranean and the Middle East. Haig left for Athens after his news conference.

GREEK POSITION ON SPAIN'S JOINING NATO REJECTED

TA141031 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] Foreign Ministry Spokesman Ambassador Nazmi Akiman has said that it is out of the question for Greece to approve with reservations a protocol which will enable Spain to join NATO. The Greek Government spokesman had announced that they consider the approval they will give for Spain's membership in NATO as a question of procedure with the precondition that no changes are made in the borders of the sea commands in the Mediterranean.

Replying to a question on the issue, the Foreign Ministry spokesman said: The issue of the borders of the command control areas in the Mediterranean cannot be put forward as a precondition for Greece's approval of a protocol which will enable Spain to join NATO. It is not a question of approval of preconditions. Furthermore, it is natural to constantly review and, if necessary, alter the command control borders in the light of the changing defense needs of the NATO alliance. In fact, the principles envisaged by the Rogers Plan in connection with the command control organization in question confirm our view.

PAKISTANI CHIEF OF STAFF ARRIVES IN ANKARA

TA161635 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] Pakistani chief of the General Staff, Gen Mohammad Iqbal Khan, arrived in Ankara today as the official guest of head of state and chief of the General Staff Gen Kenan Evren. The visiting general was received at the airport by deputy chief of the General Staff Gen Necdet Oztorun. The Pakistani chief of staff is expected to begin his talks tomorrow. General Iqbal Khan will depart Turkey on Friday, 21 May, after he visits Izmir and Istanbul following his talks in the capital.

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

L. AMERICAN ENVOYS ASK LIFTING OF EEC SANCTIONS

PY141944 Buenos Aires TELAM in English 1855 GMT 14 May 82

[From the transmission to the "British colony resident on the Malvinas"]

[Text] Brussels, 14 May (TELAM) -- The ambassadors who represent Latin American nations at the headquarter of the European Economic Community here today formally asked the organization's Council of Ministers to revoke the sanctions against Argentina instituted at Great Britain's request after the outbreak of the Malvinas crisis last month.

The EEC member countries agreed to Britain's request to cut imports from Argentina for a period of 30 days, ending next Monday, May 17. The foreign ministers of the EEC countries are to meet on Sunday to decide whether the sanctions should be continued or allowed to lapse.

In recent weeks, several Community members have criticized Britain's disproportionate use of force in the Malvinas area, saying they had no intention of giving London a blank cheque. Ireland has gone so far as to call for outright revocation of the sanctions, saying that they served only to support Great Britains's escalation of war in the South Atlantic.

The Latin American ambassadors urged the EEC council to take into account the efforts now being made to achieve a peaceful solution to the conflict and not renew the sanctions against the Argentine Government.

AUSTRIA

WIENER ZEITUNG NOTES OPENING OF 27TH MBFR ROUND

AU141042 Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 14 May 82 p 2

[Text] Charges and countercharges marked the beginning of the 27th round of the Vienna talks on a reduction of forces in Central Europe on Thursday. The East charged the participating NATO states with "having for years obstructed any progress" by its sticking to the so-called "data question" (clarification of the controversial troop strength figures of the Warsaw Pact forces). The Western side again stressed that the solving of this "data question" and a common position -- that still has to be worked out -- on accompanying control measures constitute the basic prerequisites for the conclusion of a first troop reduction agreement.

At a press conference following the first plenary session of this round, GDR Chief Delegate Ambassador Andre Wieland declared that the accepted goals of the Vienna negotiations are more topical and pressing than ever before, in view of the "highest concentration of military potentials."

VICE CHANCELLOR REVIEWS TALKS IN UN, WASHINGTON

AU141050 Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 14 May 82 p 2

[Text] Vice Chancellor Fred Sinowatz returned to Vienna yesterday after after a 1-week visit to the United States. During this visit, he held a number of important talks in New York and Washington, especially with UN Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar, U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig and -- what was noted as a rare exception -- President Reagan's Security Adviser William P. Clark.

His talk with the UN secretary general focused primarily on the Falklands conflict and the endeavors to solve this conflict at the conference table. Perez de Cuellar also declared that he planned to make up for his visit to Austria, which he had to postpone, in the summer — in connection with one of the two big UN conferences that are going to be held then in Vienna. Sinowatz declared that Perez de Cuellar expressed satisfaction in the talks that the UN conference center in Vienna is now going to be built after all.

It was regarded as a minor sensation that Sinowatz's talks with Haig, which were scheduled for 30 minutes, lasted for more than 1 hour. Haig gave an outline of the big world-political problems from the U.S. viewpoint, and Sinowatz informed the secretary of state about his visit to the USSR that directly preceded his trip to the United States. Haig also announced that the U.S. Consulate General in Salzburg will be reopened.

FOREIGN MINISTER PAHR VISITS MONGOLIA FOR TALKS

For Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME coverage of Austrian Foreign Minister Pahr's visit to the Mongolian People's Republic, including reports on an honorary dinner, talks and meetings with officials, see the Mongolia section of the 17 May Asia & Pacific DAILY REPORT.

SPAIN

JOINT SPANISH-EQUATORIAL GUINEAN COMMUNIQUE ISSUED

LD151346 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1000 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] At the end of the visit to Spain by the president of Equatorial Guinea, the Madrid and Malabo governments have issued a joint communique in which they describe the climate of cordiality and spirit of collaboration in which all the talks held at the highest level during President Obiang's 3-day visit to Spain have taken place. As well as reaching concrete agreements for delegations from the two countries to hold frequent meetings and control the progress of the scheduled [cooperation] program, the Spanish prime minister and President Obiang agreed on the need to promote Spanish private investment in Guinea to contribute to the ordered development of the country.

Finally, the joint communique reports the invitation to Prime Minister Calvo-Sotelo to pay an official visit to Equatorial Guinea in the near future.

VENEZUELAN OFFICIAL SEEKS SUPPORT FOR ARGENTINA

LD160928 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 0900 GMT 16 May 82

[Text] President of Venezuela's Argentine solidarity committee, Gonzalo Garcia Bustillos, arrived in Madrid early this morning at the start of a tour of EEC countries to rally greater support for Argentina in the Malvinas conflict, as well as European support in general. Garcia Bustillos, who is secretary to the presidency in Venezuela, said at Barajas Airport that although this is not seen in Europe, all of Latin America supports Argentina. The Venezuelan committee will stay in our country for 3 days and will meet King Juan Carlos, the prime minister and the leader of the opposition.

DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 096 18 May 1982

EUROPEAN COMMUNITY

EEC Ministers Extend Argentine Sanctions 1 Week B 1
Italy, Ireland To Drop Embargo B 1

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Genscher Views NATO Conference, Reagan Proposals J 1
Lambsdorff Discusses Trade With PRC Official J 2
Apel Rejects Reducing First-Strike Capability J 3
Briefs: Housing Construction Cooperation J 3

FRANCE

Expanded Economic Role in Pacific Sought K 1
[LE MONDE 12 May]
Government Opens Case Against Argentine Captain [LATIN] K 1

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Colombo Explains Dropping of Argentine Sanctions L 1
Spadolini Makes 'Major Statement' to Industry L 1
Jun 6 Local Elections Temper Party Relations L 2

NORDIC AFFAIRS

DENMARK

Jorgensen Welcomes Reagan Arms Initiative P 1
[AKTUELT 11 May]

FINLAND

New SKP Chairman Discusses Party Status P 1

SWEDEN

Social Democrats Want NORDSAT Decision Deferred P 1
[SVENSKA DAGBLADET 9 May]

UNITED KINGDOM

Mitterrand Arrives for Talks With Thatcher Q 1
Reaffirms Solidarity Q 1
Healey Still Sees Chance for Peaceful End Q 1
Envoy Returns to UN for 'One More Go' at Talks Q 2
Task Force Helicopter 'Ditched'; No Casualties Q 3
Loss of 2 Helicopters Over S. Georgia Revealed [TELAM] Q 3

OTHER COUNTRIES

CANADA

Nuclear Cooperation Agreement Signed With Egypt U 1

GREECE

Papandreou Affirms Support of Sandinists' Cause U 1

NETHERLANDS

Deputies Concerned Over Armed Forces Materiel U 1
[NRC HANDELSBLAD 8 May]

TURKEY

Evren Receives Romanian Foreign Minister U 2
Air Force To Purchase 120 Planes From FRG U 2
Saudi Minister Makes Stopover in Ankara U 2

EEC MINISTERS EXTEND ARGENTINE SANCTIONS 1 WEEK

NC172140 Paris AFP in English 2123 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Luxembourg, 17 May (AFP) -- The 10 members of the European Economic Community (EEC) today decided to extend for a week their ban on all imports from Argentina, imposed April 16 because of the Falklands conflict, a British spokesman announced here.

The British spokesman announced the decision just 45 minutes before the sanctions measure was to expire at midnight local time.

Eight of the 10 EEC members accepted the prolongation on a community basis, while Italy and Ireland, citing internal problems, said they had agreed to extend the punitive measure for seven days without being bound by EEC solidarity.

Observers here said the down-to-the-deadline decision had been taken in order to avoid influencing, one way or the other, the peace talks conducted by United Nations Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar, who earlier in the day said the negotiations were in their final phase.

The 10 EEC foreign ministers first met for two hours without reaching a decision, and then broke for an official dinner bringing them to table with participants in the North Atlantic Council, which was being held at the same time here.

The ministers gathered once again after dinner, with observers believing that Italy and Ireland might refuse to join the others in extending the trade sanctions, which the EEC's Executive Commission had said should be prolonged for a further 30 days.

Italy'y representative had earlier pointed out that the Socialists and Christian Democrats in the Italian governmental coalition had come out clearly against continuing the sanctions.

French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson, warning against the risk of making a change which would "modify one of the elements in the Anglo-Argentine negotiations" at a time when the UN secretary general considered that the search for a negotiated solution was entering its final days, nevertheless paid homage to the Italians' "heroic" decision to go along with the original sanctions against a country whose population is almost half of Italian origin.

Italy, Ireland To Drop Embargo

LD172240 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2230 GMT 17 May 82

[By Geoff Meade, PA staff reporter in Luxembourg]

[Text] Britain suffered a major setback tonight when Italy and Ireland opted out of EEC trade sanctions against Argentina.

All the Common Market countries agreed to carry on blocking Argentine imports for another seven days -- but after that Italy and Ireland will drop the embargo.

The collapse of solidarity came at eleventh hour talks between EEC foreign ministers in Luxembourg.

With one hour to go before the existing Community ban on Argentine imports expired, British Foreign Secretary Mr Francis Pym discovered that he had lost vital moral support.

A Foreign Office spokesman said in Luxembourg tonight that the month-old sanctions will continue for another week.

Meanwhile, Italy and Ireland will consult with the EEC Commission to ensure there will be no distortion of trade with Argentina when they drop the embargo.

The spokesman said: "The Community is united that, at least for the next seven days, there will be no imports from Argentina into Community countries."

When asked what the government's reaction was, he said: "It's a great deal better than nothing." The outcome is, however, a serious defeat for Britain, anxious to maintain total Community support in the fight for the Falklands.

Italy finally backed out in the face of growing opposition at home to action against Argentina, where 40 percent of the population is of Italian extraction. Like Ireland, Italy was also concerned about backing escalating military conflict in the South Atlantic.

Irish Premier Charles Haughey had already warned that, because of his country's traditional neutrality, it would be difficult to continue displaying a united front with a country engaged in battle.

Despite firm assurances from Mr Pym tonight that Britain's first priority is a diplomatic settlement of the Falklands crisis, both countries felt unable to continue their support.

Even the promise of a total ban on Argentine imports for another seven days is little comfort to the UK. Mr Pym had wanted renewal of the agreement for at least one more month.

Earlier today, he warned his colleagues that a weakening of support in Europe for trade sanctions might be misinterpreted in Argentina. A lessening of the impact of sanctions would do nothing to improve the chances of a peaceful solution.

EEC Commission officials in Brussels will now urgently be working out the technical details of how to implement a trade ban involving only eight of the 10 Community countries.

The crucial issue is to ensure that there is no surge of imports from Argentina when Italy and Ireland lift their embargoes in seven days time. Both countries have indicated that they will not take advantage of the situation or do anything to distort trade.

GENSCHER VIEWS NATO CONFERENCE, REAGAN PROPOSALS

DW171309 Saarbruecken Saarlaendischer Rundfunk Network in German 1705 GMT 15 May 82

[Reporter Gasper interview with FRG Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher; date and place not given -- recorded]

[Text] [Question] The NATO foreign ministers conference in which you are to participate opens tomorrow night in Luxembourg. With a view to the Bonn NATO summit in June, the aim is to create more security without calling cooperation with the Soviet Union into question. What does this brief formula mean?

[Answer] It expresses what is contained in the Harmel Report of the sixties, namely that the NATO allies want to do everything necessary with regard to defense policy, such as guaranteeing a balance, on the one hand, while doing everything in the way of cooperation, negotiations, dialogue and detente to contribute to an improvement in East-West relations, on the other. This naturally includes negotiations on questions of disarmament. Therefore, the alliance stated 1 year ago at the Rome NATO foreign ministers conference that disarmament policy is an integral part of our security policy. Security policy means making the necessary defense efforts to ensure a balance, while at the same time doing everything possible to achieve a balance through disarmament at as low an arms level as possible.

[Question] Mr Minister, you just said that disarmament is an integral part of our security policy, of Western security policy. As a whole the disarmament business is rather difficult. Negotiations are taking place in Geneva on the reduction of medium-range nuclear missiles. In Vienna there are armed forces reduction negotiations involving Central Europe. Then there are talks on intercontinental nuclear weapons. A European disarmament conference is also envisaged. Mr Genscher, all this is so difficult and complicated that a normal citizen cannot understand it. Why can't negotiations be conducted in one big conference since one aspect is dependent on another?

[Answer] These are all parts of a policy aimed at disarmament. Because of the complicated nature of the matter, no progress could be achieved in individual fields if negotiations took place at one conference. One thing can be said now: With the offer of the American President to begin START negotiations, negotiations exist now as never before in postwar history.

I would like to point out some individual elements: Negotiations are taking place in Vienna on the reduction of conventional armed forces in Central Europe. That means troop reduction negotiations for Central Europe. At the resumption of the Madrid CSCE round in the fall, negotiations will take place on a European disarmament conference. That was a Western suggestion. The disarmament conference will aim to agree on confidence-forming measures from the Atlantic to the Urals to decrease the danger of surprise attacks, a danger which must be realistically reduced because of the different strength of conventional forces due to strong Soviet superiority. Talks are taking place in Geneva on medium-range missiles, and now negotiations on intercontinental missiles are supposed to take place. This means that all fields of armament will be included in the negotiations. It is now up to the Soviet Union to react positively in all these fields to the far-reaching Western proposals.

[Question] Have the last proposals of the American President been roughly coordinated with the NATO allies, and can you say whether all NATO member states will follow Reagan's conceptions?

[Answer] We will spport all these proposals because all of us were for the SALT treaty envisaging the limitation of intercontinental systems. Reagan is going further now. He does not just want to install a ceiling, he is suggesting a reduction of one-third of the warheads in the first round of the START agreement. In other words: In contrast to SALT, the Americans now suggest real disarmament. It is now up to the Soviet Union to react positively.

There is still no Soviet answer to the Western suggestion to completely renounce medium-range missiles on both sides; there is still no positive answer despite year-long negotiations on armed forces reductions in Central Europe in order to achieve a balance of conventional armed forces; there is still no concrete agreement of the Soviet Union to accept introduction of confidence-building measures from the Atlantic to the Urals.

The West has made far-reaching disarmament and arms-control proposals in four important fields -- the Soviet Union must make a move now. We expect, we hope and we urge the Soviet Union to eventually show a positive reaction to this wide-spread disarmament offer of the West. The people of Europe are waiting for a positive answer from the Soviet Union.

[Question] Minister Genscher, the disarmament and negotiation offer has from the beginning not wanted to call NATO's defense preparedness into question. In other words: NATO must do everything parallel to the negotiations to maintain its defense preparedness, its ability to defend itself. Another obvious question in this connection: Once Great Britain has withdrawn some naval units sending them to Argentina, does NATO's defense ability in this field still exist?

[Answer] I hope that a quick, peaceful solution of the problem will solve the matter you have mentioned.

I would like to say a word about the motives of the disarmament proposals. With these far-reaching proposals the West wants to avoid an arms race, by avoiding an arms race it also wants to avoid the increase of security hazards. On the contrary, we want to create more security through disarmament. We believe that the armament expenditures we have to bear would be better used for prosperity in our own countries and even better for the development of Third World countries.

I believe that this brings up a special question with regard to the Soviet Union because the Soviet Union makes its citizens bear a far greater arms burden, measured by the gross national product, than we are bearing in Western social systems, and because the Soviet Union is doing relatively little for the development of the Third World. Public development work of the work of the Federal Republic, for example, is more than twice as high as that of all all communist countries together.
Safeguarding peace, developing prosperity in our own countries, social justice in our own countries and the development of Third World countries demand a positive Soviet answer to our disarmament proposals. It is obvious that considerable economic problems exist in communist states. They could certainly be solved more easily if the Soviet Union would be prepared, according to our offer, to decrease the arms burdens step by step and used the freed assets for other, more peaceful means.

LAMBSDORFF DISCUSSES TRADE WITH PRC OFFICIAL

LD171052 Hamburg DPA in German 0909 GMT 17 May 82

[Excerpts] Bonn, 17 May (DPA) -- Chaired by Federal Economics Minister Otto Graf Lambsdorff and the Chinese Foreign Trade and Economic Relations Minister Chen Muhua, the German-Chinese joint commission began 3 days of consultations in Bonn today.

At the start of the meeting, Lambsdorff stressed the interest in broadening economic cooperation with China. He said that in 1981 German-Chinese trade amounted to DM4 billion, and while this does not represent a particularly high volume, the increase of 17.8 percent in German imports from China was clearly above the growth in German imports as a whole. China's export companies showed a high capacity for innovation and adaptability and adjusted well to the needs of the German market.

In 1981 they supplied goods worth DM1.7 billion to the Federal Republic, while German firms exported goods worth DM2.3 billion to China. The Federal Republic is thus China's largest European trading partner, and 27 German firms are permanently represented there.

The aim of the commission's discussions is to facilitate working conditions for German companies in China. Lambsdorff sees fresh possibilities for cooperation in tapping important Chinese offshore oil deposits. He said that the German prospecting company Deminex, which in the past took part in oil prospecting in China within the framework of international consortiums, is interested in actively participating in tenders to the China National Offshore Oil Corporation for concessions in offshore areas. He said that cooperation could also be deepened in prospecting projects on the Chinese mainland, and suggested talks on participation by German plant manufacturers in equipping Chinese offshore oilfields.

Lambsdorff said that in view of China's consistent financial and foreign currency policy the Federal Government would continue to make unconditional export guarantees available to China within the framework of international regulations. He hopes that the still open questions concerning an agreement with Beijing on investment promotion and protection, which has been under negotiation since 1979, would soon be settled. Such an agreement would create much more favorable conditions for private investment and for Federal Government guarantees for capital investment.

The negotiations with Beijing on a double taxation agreement will continue in June.

APEL REJECTS REDUCING FIRST-STRIKE CAPABILITY

LD171354 Hamburg DPA in German 1140 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Bonn, 17 May (DPA) -- Federal Defense Minister Hans Apel (SPD) rejected the possibility of the Atlantic alliance renouncing a nuclear first-strike capacity. In a Deutsche Welle interview today, Apel said that in the future the West must also continue to be able to safeguard peace in Europe "in that with our military threats and possiblities we create deterrence, that is to say peace, and thus give the Soviet Union no chance to find out how we would react if it attacked us."

According to Apel, by renouncing part of its deterrent, the West would not only weaken itself unnecessarily, "but war would become calculable again for the Soviet Union. In addition to deterrence by conventional forces and to being strong, the West needs nuclear weapons. Over the past 37 years it secured peace. At present there is a great danger that NATO itself is getting into danger with regard to questions of nuclear strategy.

Apel stressed that it is urgent that the path of detente continue to be followed. Security policy must lead beyond the military aspect to genuine confidence-building, arms control and disarmament, under the condition that "all this can be checked and that the other side also adheres to it."

BRIEFS

HOUSING CONSTRUCTION COOPERATION -- Bonn, 17 May (DPA) -- Cooperation between the FRG and the Hungarian People's Republic in housing and urban construction has developed very satisfactorily. This was the opinion expressed in Bonn today by Dieter Haack, minister of construction, town and country planning, and Kalman Abraham, Hungarian minister of construction and urban development, who has spent 5 days visiting the Federal Republic. Their talks also focused on problems of energy supplies and the export of building materials and on the deepening of cooperation. [Text] [Hamburg DPA in German 1306 GMT 17 May 82 LD]

EXPANDED ECONOMIC ROLE IN PACIFIC SOUGHT

PM171233 Paris LE MONDE in French 12 May 82 p 8

[Patrice de Beer report]

[Text] The saminar held in Paris last week on the Asian and Pacific area ended on Friday 7 May with a lengthy meeting centered on Mr Mitterrand. The ambassadors who attended the meeting will in a few weeks' time inform the Quai d'Orsay of the results of the considerations prompted by the meeting, thus ensuring "followup." According to one delegate, the meeting "must not be a loud fanfare with nothing to follow."

How can France's presence in this region be increased? It will take long-term combined efforts by the government and the private sector. This is what Mr Cheysson said, adding that in the North Pacific "We have no economic or banking representation, we are not represented politically.... We are not represented there at all unless as an intermediary between those who want to sell, produce and purchase there and France.... France's future there depends almost entirely on the economic situation," as was seen during Mr Mitterrand's visit to Tokyo. But "France is too small to tackle such distant problems" and must "act within the EEC framework" to be "competitive."

The actual definition of the Pacific was one of the topics of the discussions. Is it all one, from Japan to Australia, from China and the USSR to California? Or is it rather composed of regional subgroupings centered on a "Japanese-Californian tandem?" France must be more amply represented there, must develop its political, economic and cultural footholds and must join all relevant bodies so that the countries of the area will become accustomed to dealing with it.

These were the topics discussed by Mr Mitterrand, who stressed the shifting of the world axis toward the Pacific and the importance of Japan which, with its considerable strength of expansion, is, like it or not, at the heart of the matter. This is one of [presidential adviser] Mr Attali's favorite subjects. One of the preconditions for a French presence is that there be French people everywhere, not just in the overseas territories. Once it is represented in the area, France must become one of its powers, not by virtue of the territories that it controls there but by means of multifaceted activities.

GOVERNMENT OPENS CASE AGAINST ARGENTINE CAPTAIN

PY150128 Buenos Aires LATIN in Spanish 2139 GMT 14 May 82

[Excerpts] Paris, 14 May (LATIN-REUTER) -- France today began legal procedures against Argentine Navy Captain Alfredo Astiz, who is suspected of being involved in the disappearance of two French nuns in Argentina in 1977, court sources reported today.

A Paris court has used the common practice of opening a case against a person called X, Astiz according to the sources, for the illegal arrest and detention of Alice Dumont and Leonie Duquet. The court has named an investigative judge, who has the task of questioning the suspect to see whether there is basis for a case.

Moreover, it is probable that his task will be carried out by a British judge and, depending on how the initial questioning goes, France can then ask Great Britain for Astiz' extradition, according to the source.

COLOMBO EXPLAINS DROPPING OF ARGENTINE SANCTIONS

AU180840 Rome ANSA in English 0805 GMT 18 May 82

[Excerpts] Luxembourg, 18 May (ANSA) — The European Economic Community split three ways late last night over the question of extending EEC trade sanctions against Argentina with a majority of seven agreeing to a compromise which will continue the sanctions for an additional seven days, until midnight next Monday. Italy, citing the EEC article which describes trade sanctions as matters for decisions at the national, and not Community, level, abolished the Rome government trade embargo against the Latin American state but maintained the boycott on military supplies.

In his statement of the Italian position on the extension of the sanctions, Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo told the meeting, "Italy maintains its solidarity with Great Britain following the violation of international law" with the Argentine seizure of the South Atlantic British colony on April 2. Colombo said that Italian solidarity with its Community partner is centered on "United Nations Security Council Resolution 502," passed the day after the Argentine invasion of the Falklands and calling for the withdrawal of Argentine troops and a diplomatic settlement of the controversy.

The foreign minister also referred to Italian support for the mediation efforts conducted by the UN secretary general. "As a concrete demonstration of our solidarity, we will maintain the arms embargo," the foreign minister said and added, "not having adhered to the extension of the sanctions does not alter the policy position expressed now and in the past."

SPADOLINI MAKES 'MAJOR STATEMENT' TO INDUSTRY

AU180845 Rome ANSA in English 0812 GMT 18 May 82

[Text] Milan, 18 May (ANSA) — Premier Giovanni Spadolini strongly urged industry leaders to return to the bargaining table to settle a series of expired national labor contracts covering some six million workers and described as "unjustified" business and industry charges that government negotiations on the cost of labor were "inconclusive." In a major statement delivered here Monday to Assolombarda, the industrialists' association in the most heavily industrialized region of Italy, the premier addressed himself to the decision announced last week by the national industrialists' association (Confindustria) to suspend contract bargaining until the cost of labor issue is settled.

Echoing the position declared by his industry minister, Giovanni Marcora, Spadolini said, "It is no longer the time for conditions, of any type. Negotiations on the cost of labor and dealings on contract renewal must be started up in the same frame of reference." According to the head of government, the crucial cost of labor issue and the government guideline for limiting pay increases to the same 16 percent ceiling set for the 1982 rate of inflation, along with the management challenge that 16 percent pay hikes are unrealistically high, can all be discussed with the trade unions at the bargaining table.

In reply to the charge of "inconclusive" government negotiations on the issue, levelled by Confindustria Chairman Vittorio Merloni last week, the premier said the accusation was "unjustified. The problems cannot be settled with a magic wand," he told the Milan industry leaders. "The government can ask the two sides to find a point of understanding and this might require a long time, a lot of patience and tenacity."

Spadolini then pointedly declared, "It is not correct to unload on the government those things for which the government is not responsible because the government will never commit itself to taking the place of labor and management in defining new measures for slowing or curbing the cost of labor. In the same statement, the premier reiterated the four objectives of government economic policy: Fostering a more competitive stance for the nation's business and industry; limiting the cost of labor — which he said was "not the only cause of inflation but a contributing factor" in order to pull Italy's rate of inflation down to the European average; cut the state deficit; tighten control over the monetary situation.

JUN 6 LOCAL ELECTIONS TEMPER PARTY RELATIONS

AU170910 Rome ANSA in English 0845 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Rome, 17 May (ANSA) -- The key to interpreting the sudden friendliness between the Italian Government's five coalition parties was provided over the weekend by political speech-makers as lying in the local administrative elections coming up June 6 in scattered municipalities up and down the Italian peninsula. "After the June 6 elections, the coalition parties will start discussing and deciding the platform for the last two years of the legislature," Social Democrat spokesman and former Minister Luigi Preti disclosed. Preti's statement was interpreted by most observers as just a more explicit way of saying what the Italian Socialist Party (PSI) printed in its newspaper Sunday: "We stick by our commitment to support ongoing moves aimed at solving, as much as possible, the most urgent problems at hand, just as we stick by our determination to effect an overall (political) clarification."

The coalition of Christian Democrats (DC), Socialists (PSI), Social Democrats (PSDI), Liberals (PLI) and Premier Giovanni Spadolini's Republicans (PRI) made news last week by making it through a whole seven-day period without any infighting to threaten the survival of Spadolini's ruling arrangement.

As many observers pointed out this morning, the June 6 round of municipal elections represents a test, however partial, of popularity for the coalition parties, which evidently want to see the results of the balloting before re-negotiating the terms of their alliance.

The forthcoming poll predictably influenced the speeches made Sunday by the leaders of the nation's major political parties. DC Chairman Flaminio Piccoli tried to convince the Socialists that it was not worthwhile to continue the polemics that have been straining relations between the two biggest coalition partners for the last few months.

Instead of fighting, Piccoli said, it would be much better to compete with each other over specific issues and, in the long run, over a sweeping reform to devise together with the nation's "democratic forces," the "only forces which are willing to confront the problems and hardships of our times."

As translated by observers, Piccoli's message to the Socialists was that they should continue to support the present ruling arrangement with the assurance that the DC will not shift its leftward allegiances from the PSI to the Communists.

In the same speech, Piccoli openly called on the government not to extend the economic sanctions it enacted against Argentina last month in compliance with a joint European Economic Community ruling of support for Britain in the Falkland Islands (Malvinas) war. According to Piccoli, "It would be a serious mistake" to extend the sanctions beyond their expiration date today, a mistake that "we advise our government not to make."

The Socialists, however, did not seem all that ready to quit their dispute with the Christian Democrats, whom PSI Finance Minister Rino Formica accused Sunday of thwarting reform efforts with their "immobilism." The PSI's moves to reform society, Formica charged, are hindered by the government's "predominant forces" as well as by the opposition. More explicitly, the finance minister said that the left was beginning to pay attention to the Socialists' reform proposals, but the DC often put up "irrational, gut reactions."

PRI leadership spokesman Oddo Biasini appeared relieved by the peaceful and "constructive" atmosphere that has come about in coalition ranks, "strengthening the government and giving it a chance to fulfill its tough but effective activities." According to Biasini, the new atmosphere was a recognition of the effective job the government has been doing.

DENMARK

JORGENSEN WELCOMES REAGAN ARMS INITIATIVE

PM171541 Copenhagen AKTUELT in Danish 11 May 82 p 10

[Excerpt] Moscow/Copenhagen -- Danish sources have expressed satisfaction with the new disarmament initiative [from President Reagan]. Prime Minister Anker Jorgensen said: "With this initiative there is now a concrete disarmament proposal from the Western side embracing everything from conventional arms through so-called Eurostrategic arms to strategic arms. The government welcomes these proposals, and we have also noted that the United States has declared its willingness in negotiations to give careful consideration to Soviet proposals.

"It is also the government's hope that the Soviet Union will give a positive reception to the U.S. initiative. The need for a dialogue and positive determination is especially necessary where disarmament and arms control negotiations are concerned. The military buildup has reached such dimensions that these negotiations must be promoted regardless of all disagreements," Jorgensen said.

FINLAND

NEW SKP CHAIRMAN DISCUSSES PARTY STATUS

LD171508 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1300 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] The new chairman of the Finnish Communist Party [SKP], Jouko Kajanoja, expects that the minority faction will return to party work within 2 or 3 weeks. Kajanoja said today that he based his opinion on the assumption that the SKP Central Committee, which was elected at the beginning of the week, will assemble in full for its first meeting. The Central Committee meeting will be held in about 3 weeks, on 4 June. Chairman Kajanojo hopes to map out during the beginning of the week the situation with minority representatives who refused to participate in the work of party bodies, and to agree on the manner and timetable for negotiations. Kajanojo says that he is aiming at a very fast timetable so that all elected Central Committee and Politburo members can participate in the meetings. Chairman Kajanoja completely refutes the idea of another extraordinary party congress demanded by minority delegates. In his view such a congress can be held in connection with the next regular party congress in 2 years. Chairman Kajanoja also reaffirms that he will give up his post as minister of labor. The relevant bodies of the Communist Party will make a decision to that effect in the future, Kajanoja says.

SWEDEN

SOCIAL DEMOCRATS WANT NORDSAT DECISION DEFERRED

PM171209 Stockholm SVENSKA DAGBLADET in Swedish 9 May 82 p 6

[Bjorn F. Hansen report]

[Excerpt] "A decision on funds for the NORDSAT project by the Riksdag should not be made until the current report on the tele-x project is ready. This report will be ready this summer." In a motion the Social Democrats in the Riksdag Cultural Committee do not directly reject NORDSAT, but they consider that the government was in too much of a hurry when it asked for funds in next year's budget to be able to begin the so-called study phase of the NORDSAT project. In their motion the Social Democrats state that the government's proposal for Nordic cultural cooperation by means of a satellite should be sent back to the government. The government should be urged to put forward a new and better researched proposal. The government has called on the Riksdag to grant 1.65 million kronor this spring, so that the NORDSAT study phase can begin. The proposal was preceded by a decision on NORDSAT by the Nordic Council of Ministers.

MITTERRAND ARRIVES FOR TALKS WITH THATCHER

LD171232 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1151 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] French President Francois Mitterrand today arrived for talks with Mrs Thatcher at Downing Street. Although the working lunch was primarily arranged to prepare ground for the Versailles summit next month, the Falklands crisis was expected to take up much of their meeting.

Mrs Thatcher greeted M. Mitterrand on the steps of No 10. He arrived with French Prime Minister Pierre Mauroy, who was also attending the discussions.

Earlier Mrs Thatcher had chaired a meeting of her inner cabinet, which was also attended by Attorney General Sir Michael Havers and admiral of the fleet, Sir Terence Lewin. Foreign Secretary Mr Francis Pym was not present -- he is at a NATO meeting in Luxembourg.

Reaffirms Solidarity

LD171636 Paris Domestic Service in French 1600 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] President Mitterrand a short while ago reaffirmed France's solidarity with Great Britain over the Falklands affair. The president has just had lunch with Margaret Thatcher and had held 3 hours of talks at Number 10 Downing Street. The French head of state said there are no new elements which might make France change its mind. French solidarity is a result of Argentina's intervention by force, he added. On the other hand Mr Mitterrand, who left London for Paris is a short time ago, stated that there has been no agreement on European problems, referring to the budget quarrel.

HEALEY STILL SEES CHANCE OF PEACEFUL END

LD170900 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0812 GMT 17 May 82

[By Andy Webb, PA political staff]

[Text] Shadow Foreign Secretary Mr Denis Healey claimed today that there was still a real hope of a peaceful negotiated settlement to the Falkland Islands dispute. He insisted that reports indicated that Argentina was prepared to accept the two fundamental conditions laid down in the Commons last week by Foreign Secretary Mr Francis Pym.

These were that Argentina should remove its troops from the islands and negotiate about the future of the Falklands without any preconditions on the sensitive issue of sovereignty. Mr Healey warned the government against "sending in new conditions at the last moment as the Argentines accept our old ones."

Speaking on BBC "Today" programme, he said he was worried about reports that after the weekend meeting of the so-called war cabinet, Britain did not intend sending a reply to the proposals put forward by the UN secretary general.

"All reports suggest that Argentina has now met the two fundamental conditions set by Mr Pym and supported by me. Mr Pym told us on Thursday that if Argentina accepted these fundamental conditions there could be flexibility on other points."

Mr Healey insisted that the task force should be used sensibly to support negotiations. This did not necessarily mean a direct assault on the islands but rather the possibility of a prolonged blockade.

"What worries me in all this talk of military action — which is being whipped up by sections of the gutter press -- is that we are losing sight of the fact that the government is committed to seeking a peaceful solution, that real progress has been made, and that our allies are concerned that we concentrate on making further progress as long as that possibility is there."

ENVOY RETURNS TO UN FOR 'ONE MORE GO' AT TALKS

LD171634 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1543 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] The prime minister said tonight that Sir Anthony Parsons, Britain's ambassador to the United Nations, had returned to New York to have "one more go" at persuading Argentina to pull out of the Falkland Islands.

"We have gone as far as we can," she said. "They are the invader. They are the aggressor. We are the aggrieved. It is up to them. If we want peace -- and I do -- and if they want peace, they can have it by withdrawing."

Mrs. Thatcher, interviewed by Peter Allen on LBC [London Broadcasting Company] said: "My guess is that we shall know this week whether we are going to get a peaceful settlement or not." The prime minister also said she "very, very much hoped" the pope would go ahead with his visit to Britain, despite the crisis.

Mrs Thatcher was asked whether she thought current talks at the United Nations could be the last chance of achieving some positive results. She replied: "I think it may be. After all we have been negotiating now for six weeks. I have looked at six sets of proposals. They have got nowhere. If the Argentine had really wanted to withdraw, and obey the Security Council resolution, we should have seen some sign of it by now."

The prime minister spoke of the "very fundamental difference" between a democracy in Britain, and a dictatorship in Argentina. She said, "General Galtieri said he was prepared to sacrifice some 40,000 lives for the Falkland Islands to keep them. I just thought, 'How dreadful'. He could avoid all the loss of life by withdrawing from the islands and carrying on the talks as before."

Asked whether she was prepared to sacrifice lives, she replied: "If an aggressor comes in by force to hold land, and continues to hold that land, and subjugate its people, there will be many other people in future who will be treated in the same way."

She said Galtieri had therefore to get out of the islands, and if he would not go by negotiation, "we make him go." Mrs Thatcher went on: "They did not want a peaceful settlement. They not only fired the first shot, they were responsible for the invasion."

And she disclosed: "They went straight to the barracks where our marines were expected to be, and they mortared and bombed those barracks heavily. But fortunately our marines were not there."

She said: "If the Argentines had wanted a peaceful settlement, they would have taken more steps than they have done. I have seen no signs that they have done this in the last six weeks.

"We have the right to defend our own territory, and the invader must not be allowed to succeed. These too are very important principles and ideals, and if they are flouted there will be no law in the world -- there will be international anarchy." She said: "I hope nobody will ever say that British subjects cannot look to us to protect them."

Mrs Thatcher was asked about the enormous personal stress the crisis was having on her. She said: "You cannot fight these battles without losing casualties. That problem I live with every hour of the day, and every hour of the night. But there are British people with something like 9,000 or 10,000 soldiers on the islands, and they look to us."

She said: "If we cannot get them off by diplomatic means, by economic means, we shall have to get them off by military means." The prime minister denied there was any division of opinion between herself and Foreign Secretary Mr Pym but said: "We argue about things, of course we do."

She said that when lives were at risk, one had to consider that, and the people's families. Mrs Thatcher said: "Galtieri invaded them to punish them because they did not want to be Argentinians, and they don't want to be under the rule of Argentina.

"If we succeed -- and I believe we shall -- we shall have quiet acclaim and approval of all who believe in democracy, and they will think that somebody stood up for international law."

Mrs Thatcher was asked whether she considered the gap between Britain and Argentina was such that there was very little hope of anything but an invasion. She replied: "There is always time before that. That is why our ambassador has gone back to the United Nations to have one more go to try and persuade them to pull back." She repeated President Galtieri's remarks about being prepared to sacrifice 40,000 lives to keep the Falklands. She said: "I don't understand it. He could stop it with an act of statesmanship. That is all it would need."

The prime minister said this would be of great benefit to the Argentine people. "But if they do not decide to withdraw, we will have to use force to get them out."

Questioned about the pope, Mrs Thatcher said: "It is a pastoral visit. I very, very much hope that he will come. So many people are looking forward to it. So many people have made endless efforts to see him and to organize things for him. I hope very much that he will come and get a very warm welcome in this country."

TASK FORCE HELICOPTER 'DITCHED'; NO CASUALTIES

LD180952 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0944 GMT 18 May 82

[By Alan Jones, PA defence staff]

[Text] A Sea King helicopter from the task force ditched early today, the Defence Ministry has announced. The crew was picked up without injury, said a brief statement.

It read: "Just after 1 a.m. this morning London time, a Sea King helicopter operating in support of the task force, ditched." "This was not the result of any action involving Argentine forces. The crew vacated the helicopter soon after it hit the water and was safely recovered by another helicopter. None of the crew was injured."

The ministry had no more details of the incident.

LOSS OF 2 HELICOPTERS OVER S. GEORGIA REVEALED

PY172134 Buenos Aires TELAM in Spanish 2040 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] London, 17 May (TELAM) -- The Defense Ministry recognized today -- 22 days after the event -- that during the operations carried out on the South Georgia Islands against Argentine troops, two British transport helicopters were shot down.

The concealment of this information for so long was justified by the spokesman as being in the interests of the country. He said that he reports on this event now because it has been circulating among journalistic circles for some time now. The report indicates that there were no casualties among British troops who were rescued by other helicopters. Asked further by a reporter on the possibility of casualties, given the nature of the confrontation, the spokesman resorted to the often-used no comment.

CANADA

NUCLEAR COOPERATION AGREEMENT SIGNED WITH EGYPT

LD171950 Montreal International Service in English 1900 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Canada and Egypt have signed a 30-year nuclear cooperation agreement. At a news conference in Ottawa, Federal Energy Minister [title as heard] Marc Lalonde made it clear that the agreement simply opens the door to future discussions on the development of nuclear energy for peaceful purposes. Mr Lalonde and his Egyptian counterpart, Mahir Abaza [name as heard], who is in Ottawa to sign the agreement, told reporters that pact marks another important step in increasing relations between the two countries. Among other things, the deal may include the possible sale of Candu nuclear reactors, the supply of uranium, implementation of joint nuclear research programs and the exchange of technology.

GREECE

PAPANDREOU AFFIRMS SUPPORT OF SANDINISTS' CAUSE

NC171747 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1700 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou this morning held lengthy talks at Kastri with a (75-member) Nicaraguan delegation headed by Sergio Ramirez Mercado, member of the 3-member revolutionary committee ruling Nicaragua. After the talks, the prime minister made the following statement:

[Begin recording] I feel particularly pleased at having met and talked with the delegation of Nicaragua's political leadership. On this occasion, I stated that the Greek Government wholeheartedly supports their struggle for independence, democracy and socialism. I also stated that — to the extent permitted by our strength and, of course, primarily at the diplomatic level -- we will support the cause of their struggle. We greet them with our best wishes and hope that we will also have other opportunities to meet again. [end recording]

NETHERLANDS

DEPUTIES CONCERNED OVER ARMED FORCES MATERIEL

PM171253 Rotterdam NRC HANDELSBLAD in Dutch 8 May 82 p 1

[Excerpt] The Hague, 8 May — Defense specialists from the Christian Democratic Appeal, Labor Party and People's Party for Freedom and Democracy Second Chamber groups want talks as soon as possible with Defense Ministry Secretary of State Stemerdink about the state of armed forces' materiel.

They want an explanation from Stemerdink after the tough criticism of the mobilization capacity of this materiel from Arie van Twigt, chairman of the Association of Military Technical and Specialist Personnel, reported in NRC HANDELSBLAD yesterday.

The secretary of state supported this criticism "in broad terms" yesterday evening and described the lack of spare parts due to lack of money as an important reason for the shortcomings.

Labor Party Second Chamber group defense specialist K. de Vries saw Van Twight's criticism as an indication of "lack of balance in materiel policy in recent years."

He said that it is "incredible that the previous cabinet -- despite all its pretensions -- left army materiel in such a sorry state according to experts." De Vries wants to know from his party colleague, Stemerdink, what steps he intends to take to return the materiel to the necessary good state of repair.

TURKEY

EVREN RECEIVES ROMANIAN FOREIGN MINISTER

TA151133 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Romanian Foreign Minister Stefan Andrei has arrived in Ankara. Andrei was received by Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen at Esenboga Airport. In a statement at the airport, Andrei said that his country attaches special importance to developing relations with Turkey. He expressed the belief that developing relations between Turkey and Romania will serve peace and security in the Balkans. Turkmen recalled that head of state Kenan Evren's visit to Romania opened the path to developing relations between the two countries and added that the contacts will be continued within this framework.

Evren received Andrei at Cankaya Mansion at 1100. According to information given by the press and public relations secretariat of the head of state's office, Andrei related to Evren Romanian President Ceausescu's views on the developing of relations and cooperation between the two countries within the framework of the meetings held between Evren and Ceausescu during Evren's visit to Romania in April. Andrei also briefed Evren on Ceausescu's views concerning recent international developments.

AIR FORCE TO PURCHASE 120 PLANES FROM FRG

TA141627 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 14 May 82

[Text] National Security Council member and Air Force Commander Gen Tahsin Sahinkaya has announced that 120 modern war planes will be purchased from the FRG within 2 or 3 years.

Sahinkaya concluded his official visit to the FRG and returned to Turkey today. In a statement at Istanbul's Yesilkoy Airport, Sahinkaya said that some of the planes in the Turkish Air Force are currently old and that the planes to be purchased are old but modern. He said that the integration of the new planes into the air force within 2 or 3 years is tantamount to forming a brand new air force. Sahinkaya said: To this end, we will exert every effort by utilizing our scientific and physical strength.

Sahinkaya then went to Ankara.

SAUDI MINISTER MAKES STOPOVER IN ANKARA

TA151558 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1550 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Ankara, 15 May (AA) -- Saudi Arabian Minister of Health Husayn al-Jaza'iri made a stopover in Ankara for informal talks with Turkish officials on his way home from Geneva where he attended the "WHO" congress. He will exchange views privately on cooperation in matters pertaining to health before leaving for home Wednesday.

Dr al-Jaza'iri met at Esenboga Airport with Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen who was himself waiting for the plane which will take him to NATO ministerial meeting in Luxembourg. The minister was welcomed by Turkish Foreign Ministry officials and Saudi Arabian diplomats.

DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 097 19 May 1982

CONTENTS

AUSTRIA

70,000 Attend Vienna 'Peace March' on 15 May E 1
[WIENER ZEITUNG 16 May]
OeVP 'Popular Initiative' Gets Strong Support E 1
[WIENER ZEITUNG 18 May]

BENELUX

NETHERLANDS

Fall Election Only Option in Coalition Collapse F 1
[DE VOLKSKRANT 14 May]

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Mitterrand, Schmidt Hold Press Conference 15 May J 1
[LE MONDE 18 May]
Schmidt Visits Defense Unit; Views Arms Questions J 1
SPD Welcomes USSR's Response to Reagan Proposal J 2

SPAIN

Calvo-Sotelo Hopeful on Gilbraltar Talks N 1
Navy Chief Cites Need To Replace Warships N 1
[EL PAIS 12 May]
Expelled Iberia Official To Leave Moscow 17 May N 1
Briefs: Basque Politicians Arrested N 1

NORDIC AFFAIRS

DENMARK

Government Stance on Arms, Free Zone Viewed P 1
[AFTENPOSTEN 12 May]

UNITED KINGDOM

Thatcher Views Use of Force If Talks Fail Q 1
Task Force Fleet Under Active Service Conditions Q 2
More Units Join Blockade East of Falklands Q 2

CYPRUS

Speeches, Material From 15th AKEL Congress R 1
Papaioannou Address [KHARAVYI 14 May] R 1
Kiprianou Message [I ELEVTHEROTIPIA 14 May] R 11
Soviet Delegate Speaks [KHARAVYI 15 May] R 13
Florakis Voices Solidarity [KHARAVYI 15 May] R 14
Cuba's Fernandez Speaks [Havana] R 16
Bilen Scores U.S., NATO [VOTCP] R 16
Political Resolution [KHARVYI 17 May] R 17
Business Group Critical of AKEL-DIKO Program [O AGON 17 May] R 20
Rolandhis Condemns Planned Ulusu Visit to North R 20
Briefs: Ataturkist Group Formed; Turk-Sen Congress R 20

OTHER COUNTRIES

NATO

Communique Calls for 'Authentic Detente' U 1

GREECE

Papandreou Meets in Athens With Nicaraguan Leader [Managua] U 1

70,000 ATTEND VIENNA 'PEACE MARCH' ON 15 MAY

AU171146 Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 16 May 82 pp 1-2

[Summary] Almost 70,000 young people -- representing 270 different groups and organizations, including the youth organizations of the Austrian Socialist Party, the Austrian People's Party, the Austrian Communist Party, and the Austrian Trade Union Federation as well as the Austrian Catholic Youth -- participated in the "peace march" held on 15 May in Vienna. At noon the participants gathered at several rallying points -- Vienna's major railroad stations -- and later marched from there to the vienna city hall square, where in the afternoon a rally lasting several hours, with speeches and a cultural program, was held.

Widely varying banners carried by the demonstrators criticized both East and West about equally, with slogans ranging from "A new job for Ronald, waiter at McDonald's" through "Against superpowers and supermen" to "No peace with Soviet troops in Afghanistan." Franz Kueberl, chairman of the Federal Association of Austrian Youth Organizations [Bundesjugendring] which had organized the peace march, said in his speech that it was immoral to let millions of people starve, giving them weapons instead of bread, and immoral of statesmen to arrogantly disregard the longing for peace. "Kueberl emphatically stressed the solidarity of the peace movement in Austria with that in the United States as well as with the peace initiatives in the GDR, in Poland and in Hungary."

After the rally some of the demonstrators [8,000, according to Vienna KURIER in German of 16 May, page 3] moved on to St Stephan's cathedral to attend an ecumenical peace prayer.

[Vienna ARBEITER-ZEITUNG in German of 17 May carries a brief front-page commentary by its chief editor Manfred Scheuch stressing that "misgivings that the demonstration might create the impression of being one-sidedly anti-American and would thus serve Soviet propaganda were not borne out," and that Austria's democratic youth "in an alarming world situation has raised its voice for peace in a highly impressive manner."]

OEVP 'POPULAR INITIATIVE' GETS STRONG SUPPORT

AU181135 Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 18 May 82 p 1

[Text] The popular initiative [volksbegehren -- a special type of referendum stipulated by the Austrian Constitution as a means of introducing a draft bill in Parliament through a signature drive] sponsored by the Austrian People's Party [OeVP] against the project to build a conference center building next to the Vienna UN City ended yesterday. Since the last polling stations closed as late as 1900 hours, the Interior Ministry will be able to announce the final returns only today.

As OeVP Secretary General Graff announced last night, the provisional number of signatures collected is 1,351,603. OeVP Chairman Mock called this a magnificent and sensational result. During the 8-day period of the popular initiative, the political parties had presented their pro and con agruments via the mass media [which included a live TV discussion between OeVP Chairman Alois Mock and Chancellor Bruno Kreisky on 14 May]. Yesterday OeVP Secretary General Graff declared in a last appeal to sign the initiative that "with every signature the chance will increase that the earmarked 7.5 billion schillings may be used more sensibly."

NETHERLANDS

FALL ELECTION ONLY OPTION IN COALITION COLLAPSE

PM181459 Amsterdam DE VOLKSKRANT in Dutch 14 May 82 pp 1, 8

[Excerpt] The Hague -- The Labor Party [PVDA] and the People's Party for Freedom and Democracy [VVD] Second Chamber groups yesterday made sure that the formation of a Christian Democratic Appeal [CDA] and Democrats '66 [D'66] rump cabinet with wide powers will be impossible. It was outgoing Prime Minister van Agt's intention to arrive at such a cabinet in order to carry out with the support of the VVD the public spending cuts which caused the collapse of the cabinet.

[VVD Second Chamber group chairman] Nijpels said yesterday that he had no enthusiasm for a "supporting role." His first wish was inclusion in a coalition comprising the CDA, D'66 and VVD, and if this were not possible early elections as soon as possible. He said that the VVD would not allow a cabinet whose function was to prepare such elections to do more than draw up a "technical budget" for 1983.

PVDA Second Chamber group chairman Meijer also stressed on Thursday that a CDA/D'66 rump cabinet need not count on the support of the Social Democrats if the cabinet puts forward proposals for spending cuts to which the PVDA ministers are implacably opposed.

This position adopted by the PVDA and the VVD has also ruled out the possibility that CDA Second Chamber group leader Lubbers's advice will be followed. The four major parties' Second Chamber group leaders, the speakers of the First and Second Chambers and the deputy chairman of the Council of State have all offered advice to the queen.

It appears from this advice that a majority in the Second Chamber is in favor of early elections, called by an interim cabinet appointed for the task. Second Chamber elections could then be held in September. The head of state will probably appoint a CDA formateur or informateur to investigate the possibility of such a cabinet. It is expected that the decision will be announced today, after consultations with the leaders of the Second Chamber's minor parties.

It is likely that a CDA politician will be appointed because that was the advice offered by the CDA, VVD and PVDA yesterday. Only D'66 wanted a D'66 informatuer to be appointed to investigate whether it is still possible to reconstruct the CDA-PVDA-D'66 coalition. But [Second Chamber group leader] Brinkhorst admitted that he thought the chances of a reconstruction attempt being made were small.

MITTERRAND, SCHMIDT HOLD PRESS CONFERENCE 15 MAY

PM181203 Paris LE MONDE in French 18 May 82 p 4

[Jean Wetz dispatch]

[Text] Hamburg -- Before leaving Hamburg to return to France after a detour to Luebeck, where an organ concert was put on for him in the cathedral, Mr Francois Mitterrand gave a press conference with Mr Schmidt Saturday, 15 May, in which he reaffirmed the excellence of French-German relations. The chancellor stated in particular that beyond even Europe "the substantial and personal proximity" which again emerged should be seen as "the sign of our firmness, reliability and continuity."

With regard to the British budget contribution, Mr Mitterrand said: "The Treaty of Rome must be respected." There is, therefore, no question of "reimbursing" spending which, in the London government'scase, is the result of its foreign trade. On the other hand France is willing to contribute to the aid requested by a country in difficulty.

Furthermore, no link could be established between internal European questions and a "given international situation." Recalling that France has never recognized British sovereignty over the "Falkland-Malvinas" Islands, the president hurriedly added that it does not assume the right to decide the issue. Thus, although "a degree of uncertainty" remains in international law, France nonetheless had to condemn the Argentines' use of violence. In addition, although as rapid a cease-fire as possible is desirable, it is impossible "to impose on the two sides solutions which they do not accept."

Will the sanctions adopted by the EEC members toward Argentina be maintained? The president did not think the word "sanction" was the appropriate one: The intention is apparently not to "punish" anybody but simply not to "fuel the conflict." In the present state of affairs, solidarity with Britain "does not justify novation of the community's policy." Chancellor Schmidt seemed to assert that idea even more categorically when he said that, in this conflict, the FRG attaches "priority" to its alliance with Britain. All those remarks did not dispel the feeling that the continuation of the confrontation in the South Atlantic is causing serious anxiety in Paris and Bonn and that the expressions of solidarity with London "as long as the conflict lasts," as the two interlocutors specified, would prevent them from exerting their influence to end the hostilities.

The arms problem led Mr Mitterrand to explain the way in which he understands the "zero option" proposed by President Reagan. In his view zero point will be "the point which the negotiators determine." Asking exclusively for nondeployment of the Pershing missiles "is not responsible." Expecting the Soviets to abandon their SS-20 missiles without receiving anything in return "is unreasonable," as would be the abandonment of the American "forward-based systems." In the final analysis it will probably be appropriate to envisage a solution somewhere between nondeployment of the Pershing II missiles and the reduction, if not total removal, of the Soviet SS-20 missiles.

As for whether the negotiations should take account of the French and British nuclear armaments, Mr Mitterrand was categorical on that score: "They can ask once, twice or 100 times and I will still say that it is out of the question." Moreover, the president said he wondered whether for some people that was a maneuver to establish "a condominium" in the world or an attempt to extend the Yalta agreements "to the planet."

SCHMIDT VISITS DEFENSE UNIT; VIEWS ARMS QUESTIONS

LD181640 Hamburg DPA in German 1500 GMT 18 May 82

[Text] Wiesmoor, 18 May (DPA) -- Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt visited the No 26 Anti-aircraft Battalion in Wiesmoor, (Aurich Kreis) this afternoon.

He said that unilateral disarmament is not the way to achieve arms limitation. He told the soldiers that one cannot bank on the other side disarming if one begins to disarm.

Great powers, he said, do not behave like charities. They have to safeguard economic and political interests. Occasionally they miscalculate, as was shown by the Soviet Union's commitment in Cuba and Afghanistan, although the Soviet Union is not bellicose on the whole. One should try to make it risky for an opponent to venture an attack and should conclude treaties fixing an approximate parity at the lowest possible level. This is why his government urged, and at times pushed, for disarmament negotiations. He was largely instrumental in devising and carrying NATO's dual decision, which has been proved absolutely right in view of the negotiations that have since been started or offered.

In his address the chancellor cautioned against underrating, in the debate on nuclear weapons, the effect of conventional weapons systems. The effects of a conventional war are no more harmless than those of a nuclear conflict. It is the job of the Bundeswehr and the Western defense alliance to prevent either happening.

He replied to questions put by soldiers on the controversial issue of getting women to serve in the Bundeswehr. He told them that he is not too keen on women being trained in the use of weapons. In view of the positive experience which women gain in the Israeli Army, he can imagine women serving in more jobs than the position of staff surgeons. It is illogical to call for equality but to reject service by women in the Bundeswehr. The debate on this topic will go on for a long time.

In view of future personnel problems he could imagine that the term of conscription could be extended and that more men could be enlisted to serve for a fixed period. But there will remain a few years to debate and decide these matters.

SPD WELCOMES USSR'S RESPONSE TO REAGAN PROPOSAL

LD181824 Hamburg DPA in German 1743 GMT 18 May 82

[Text] Hamburg, 18 May (DPA) — Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and leading SPD politicians were pleased today at the response by Soviet president and party chief Leonid Breznhev to President Ronald Reagan's disarmament proposals. Schmidt told the trade union congress in Berlin that he is "very proud" that Brezhnev has taken up the offer to negotiate on intercontinental strategic weapons. "It is about time for negotiations," the chancellor said to strong applause. Speaking also for Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, the chancellor said, he could say: "We are working with all our hearts and minds not only to get negotiations underway at last but also to see them conducted seriously and make them succeed."

SPD Chairman Willy Brandt described the Soviet response as "not dismissive." Although it does not justify exaggerated hopes, the Soviet leadership is clearly making a guarded response to the American proposals, Brandt said in Hamburg. [Passage indistinct]

Egon Bahr, the SPD disarmament expert, said in Bonn that it is important that the Soviet Union is prepared to discuss every reasonable proposal which takes account of the legitimate security interests of all concerned. Bahr conceded that the positions are still far apart. However, the organized dialogue that is now beginning provides the necessary chance.

Hamburg Mayor Klaus von Dohnanyi (SPD), according to the Hamburg press office, sees encouraging signs that one can emerge from the dangerous impasse of confrontation and the arms race after all.

CALVO-SOTELO HOPEFUL ON GIBRALTAR TALKS

LD181938 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1900 GMT 18 May 82

[Text] In Seville Prime Minister Calvo-Sotelo has said that the talks with Great Britain on Gibraltar are continuing at the scheduled pace and that he hopes that the two countries will begin negotiations before 25 June.

NAVY CHIEF CITES NEED TO REPLACE WARSHIPS

PM171325 Madrid EL PAIS in Spanish 12 May 82 p 21

[Text] "Most of our warships are of an excessive age, greatly exceeding the 25 years regarded on average as the maximum life in other navies," Adm Saturnino Suanzes asserted in his first statements since his appointment as navy chief of staff in January, granted to the EFE news agency. "Right now," Admiral Suanzes said, "what is really important for the Spanish Navy is the renovation of the service: In order to secure the facilities it needs, the navy regards nationalization [presumably, reliance on the domestic arms industry] as one of its principles."

"The navy feels proud of the prolongation of its ships' lives -- the result of a careful maintenance program," he added. "But with this we cannot succed in changing obsolete technology. For the renovation of the service we are confronted with a problem unparalleled in other services. A warship takes about 8 years from conception to commissioning. The aircraft carrier 'Principe de Asturias,' ordered in 1976 and being constructed in El Ferrol, will be launched this month. Its delivery to the navy is envisaged for 1986."

At least 60 percent of the resources earmarked for the navy in the new law on financing the armed forces will be invested in national industry, as far as shipbuilding is concerned. Spanish participation in maintaining the ships constructed will be 75 percent.

Suanzes believes that "comparison of the naval strategies of Spain and NATO reveals more similarities than differences," and that "joining NATO will not mean a significant effort for our personnel, since the aims of both strategies include controlling the Strait of Gibraltar and protecting maritime traffic."

EXPELLED IBERIA OFFICIAL TO LEAVE MOSCOW 17 MAY

LD171032 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1000 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] (Mariano Sanchez de Garcia), former Moscow representative of the Spanish company Iberia, will leave Moscow this afternoon in compliance with the expulsion order imposed by the Soviet Government. According to the Soviet Foreign Ministry, the Israel representative was performing activities not in accordance with his duties. Western observers consider this measure to be a reprisal for the expulsion from Spain of the director and an engineer of the Soviet airline Aeroflot accused of espionage.

BRIEFS

BASQUE POLITICIANS ARRESTED -- Basque Popular Unity [Herri Batasuna] Senator Miguel Castells and the Popular Unity deputy Anton Ibarguren were arrested by court order and put in preventive detention this morning in San Sebastian. According to reliable sources the reason for these arrests is their failure to pay bail of 50,000 pesetas ordered during the legal proceedings against them for their part in the incidents in Guernica during last year's visit to Basque Country by the king and queen. According to Popular Unity sources, the arrest order could similarly affect another 17 of the coalition's members who were also present during the Guernica incidents. [Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1200 GMT 13 May 82 LD]

DENMARK

GOVERNMENT STANCE ON ARMS, FREE ZONE VIEWED

PM141521 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 12 May 82 p 9

[Morten Fyhn article: "Anker Jorgensen Under Pressure"]

[Text] Copenhagen -- Growing concern within the Social Democratic government over the superpowers' rearmament and a rapidly growing peace movement have led to a broad and intense disarmament debate in Denmark in a relatively short time. But the official attitude to a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic area remains unchanged -- it must give increased security and be part of a broader European solution.

The government's attitude to the zone was formulated in close collaboration with the former Labor Party government in Norway. This means that Denmark is not interested in enshrining in a treaty the fact that the Nordic area is already nuclear-free. Nor in Denmark's opinion is there any point in the Nordic countries' entering into negotiations with the Soviet Union on the zone other than after detailed consultations with the other NATO members and with the alliance's clear approval.

The government in Copenhagen also takes the view that if consideration of a zone is to have any meaning at all Moscow must first be much more precise about what President Brezhnev really meant by his cryptic statements about Soviet willingness to make certain concessions affecting Soviet territory in the vicinity of the zone.

These views have been stressed several times by Foreign Minister Kjeld Olesen. They also have broad support from all the nonsocialist parties. It is to the left of the Social Democratic Party and particularly inside the Socialist People's Party [SE] that a divergent view is to be found. But there are also groups with a different view within the government party.

Denmark's attitude to the zone was also confirmed this spring in a comprehensive report on security policy and disarmament produced by a newly established semiofficial committee with a broad composition. The report's conclusion was that "it is hardly likely to be appropriate" to formally establish an isolated Nordic nuclear-free zone. The Nordic nuclear arms problems must be seen in a wider context, the report said.

But even if the Danish view of the zone remains unchanged, something new is beginning to happen in the country. Several people with central positions pointed this out to AFTENPOSTEN in Copenhagen recently. In Denmark -- unlike in other Nordic countries -- there has in the past been relatively little debate on security policy.

But factors such as Jens Evensen's zone demarche in the fall of 1980, the Norwegian Labor Party's national congress resolution last spring involving a decision to work for a zone, the rapidly growing Danish peace movement which receives substantial impetus from West Germany and the deterioration in the atmosphere between the superpowers in particular have created a new situation.

There are in addition the Danish Social Democrats' contacts with party colleagues in other countries, especially in connection with the Socialist International's heightened peace involvement and these help to influence attitudes in Denmark. These factors -- and also a clear eye for the peace movement's significance for domestic politics -- led Prime Minister Anker Jorgensen to set up a central body for debate and research.

The fact that, since the election before Christmas last year, Jorgensen's tottering minority government has largely sought support from the SF has also led to a situation in which the prime minister — it is claimed — is more willing to listen to the leftwing's security policy arguments. Inside the SF no attempt is made to hide the satisfaction at being able to win influence among Social Democrats in this as in other areas. For tactical reasons opposition to NATO has been toned down in favor of a more general support for disarmament.

On the nonsocialist side there is clear concern about what is happening among the Social Democrats on foreign and security policy. Many fear that the party is beginning to move away from its traditional policies. If the Jorgensen government falls -- and this could well happen at any time -- Denmark could find itself in a situation parallel to that in Norway. A possible nonsocialist government in Denmark would probably adopt a somewhat cooler attitude to the zone and give greater emphasis to the importance of supporting the superpowers' negotiations.

From time to time Jorgensen has expressed himself in a way which has given encouragement to the peace movement and helped to create the impression that the government is more positive toward individual disarmament proposals and to the zone in the Noridc area than it actually is. For example, Jorgensen expressed himself in clearly positive terms when Brezhnev made his moratorium proposal on the development of missiles in Europe. This led to Denmarks's expressing its reservations when NATO's defense ministers met recently and rejected the proposals. The Danish foreign minister was not happy about having to do this. Almost apologetically people there point to the prime minister's personal involvement and honest concern over the negative developments in East-West relations.

President Reagan's policies have also led Jorgensen to make strongly critical statements of U.S. policy in El Salvador. He has drawn parallels with the Soviet Union's role in Poland. Experts on Danish politics and on Jorgensen in particular would not be surprised if new Danish moves were to come as the time approaches for the deployment of NATO's new missiles in Western Europe. Before the 1979 decision by NATO, Denmark was one of the countries in favor of postponement. Privately both Jorgensen and other leading Danish Social Democrats are most negative about Reagan and U.S. Secretary of Defense Weinberger, for example.

The impression of almost semineutralist undertones in Jorgensen's often emotional commentaries on the international questions is often balanced by more sober statements from Foreign Minister Olesen. The conclusion must be that Danish foreign and defense policy remains unchanged. But, like their party colleagues in Norway and Sweden Danish Social Democrats have opened the door to and encouraged a broad debate on security policy and disarmament questions. It also seems clear that Denmark will play a more active role in NATO and the EEC in order to influence the superpowers' attitudes.

THATCHER VIEWS USE OF FORCE IF TALKS FAIL

LD181622 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1556 GMT 18 May 82

[Text] The Falklands crisis has now reached a critical stage, the prime minister warned in the Commons today. The Argentines' response to the latest peace proposals is expected "in a day or so", Mrs Thatcher told MP's.

But she left the Commons in no doubt as to the government's response if the latest move is rejected by the Argentines. No military action or option would be closed or delayed, and the government would not flinch from a settlement by force if a peaceful solution was not possible, Mrs Thatcher declared during question time.

She accused the Argentines of trying to spin out the negotiations. "We cannot have endless Argentine prevarication," she said. Her comments brought loud cheers from Tory backbenchers and prompted opposition leader Mr Foot to insist again that MP's should debate peace proposals before there was a major escalation of military action.

Mrs Thatcher rejected Mr Foot's request but she told MP's there would be a further emergency debate on the situation "later this week." "I believe this will be a critical week for deciding whether or not a peaceful settlement is attainable," she said. "I understand we expect a reply very shortly within a day or so. The government thinks it would be timely to have a debate later this week."

Tonight MP's were expecting the debate to be held on Thursday. Mrs Thatcher said that negotiations were still continuing but "substantial difficulties" remained. "We have been negotiating in good faith for six weeks and there has still been no sign of Argentine willingness to implement the Security Council's mandatory resolution. We cannot go on prevaricating. The Argentines are really trying to spin out the negotiations."

To cries of "no" from Tory MP's Mr Foot said the Commons should be able to debate the peace propositions before there was any major escalation of military action. Mrs Thatcher replied: "No military action can be held up in any way. To do so would be to give notice to the dictator, who is our enemy."

Her view was later reinforced in reply to Mr Gary Waller (C. Brighouse and Spenborough) who said it would be highly irresponsible for any actions to be delayed. "Not for operational reasons or in the interests of the forces' lives, but simply in order to consult people in this House, however eminent they may be."

Mrs Thatcher said: "I believe that any miltary action or option can not, and must not, be delayed by people who are extending negotiations. To say we should consult people in this House would give notice to the invaders of when we intended to take action."

Mrs Thatcher said such a move would be "constitutionally wrong and stupid and unjust" to the task force. "If we are not able to get a negotiated settlement most MP's and ministers in this House would not flinch from a settlement by force," Mrs Thatcher said.

Mr Jaime Craigen (Lab, Maryhill) brought the only ripple of laughter the House has seen in exchanges on the crisis. He suggested that Mrs Thatcher should have a "face to face meeting with the Argentine leader." But the prime minister replied: "I am a merciful person -- the answer is no."

TASK FORCE FLEET UNDER ACTIVE SERVICE CONDITIONS

LD181754 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1745 GMT 18 May 82

[By Robert Hutchinson, PA defence correspondent]

[Text] Task force commander Admiral Sandy Woodward has declared active service conditions for the British battle fleet and its accompanying merchant ships, Whitehall sources said tonight. The May 15 declaration was with Defence Secretary John Nott's approval and was the first since the Borneo confrontation 20 years ago.

It lasts three months and gives commanding officers increased disciplinary powers and allows direct orders to be given to masters of requisitioned or chartered merchant ships to take actions which could place their ships in danger. The masters are normally responsible for the safety of their ships, but this can now be overruled by the task force commander.

The move comes under the Naval Discipline Act, which all civilians linked with the Falklands forces, including journalists on board the warships, are subject to.

The merchant ships are the main target for the three months active service declaration, which covers a zone just north of Ascension Island down to the northern edge of Anarctica.

Commanding officers can now double fines for offenders from 28 days pay to 56 days pay and have greater powers to reduce ranks. They can also hold field general court martials instead of general or district court martials. Crimes like mutiny, desertion and cowardice will be treated exactly the same as under the articles of war.

From the ordinary sailor's point of view, he gets the benefit of not having to pay for any kit he loses and also he will now have free postage. HMS Sheffield, which was damaged two weeks ago in an Argentine missile attack, has been deemed to have been on active service.

The new status does not affect pay or pensions.

MORE UNITS JOIN BLOCKADE EAST OF FALKLANDS

PY190207 London BBC World Service in English 2120 GMT 18 May 82

[From "Calling the Falklands"]

[Text] Reports reaching London indicate that British troop transports and assault ships have now joined the aircraft carrier Hermes and the main body of the naval task force east of the Falklands. The assault group includes the Canberra with about 2,000 troops aboard. The Ministry of Defense in London has not yet commented on the reported linkup.

Meanwhile, more Harrier warplanes have joined the task force. They were taken out by container ship.

SPEECHES, MATERIAL FROM 15TH AKEL CONGRESS

Papaioannou Address

NC141200 Nicosia KHARAVYI in Greek 14 May 82 pp 3, 4, 5

[AKEL Secretary General Ezekias Papaioannou's opening speech to the 15th AKEL congress in Nicosia 13 May]

[Excerpts] First allow me to welcome the representatives of the brother parties from abroad who accepted our invitation and are with us today. We request they convey to the parties and peoples of their countries the warmest militant greetings of our party and people, together with our firm belief and determination to struggle so that the ideals of peace, freedom and social progress may prevail in our country and in the world. I also welcome our distinguished guests who accepted our invitation and are attending today's festive opening of the congress.

Dear comrades, in 2 months it will be 8 years since the junta-fascist coup took place and opened the gates to the occupying Atilla. For 8 years 36.4 percent of Cyprus has been occupied by Turkish troops, which at the same time are NATO troops. Not one of the General Assembly or Security Council resolutions on Cyprus has been implemented, and the Cypriot people's struggle continues to be one against occupation, anti-imperialism, for liberation, a struggle for the withdrawal of the Turkish occupation forces and of all other foreign troops from Cyprus territory, for the return of the refugees to their homes and possessions in conditions of security, as envisaged in the UN resolutions, for the tracing of the missing persons, for the liberation of the enclaved people, for the abolition of the "British Sovereign bases" and U.S. spy stations and for the complete demilitarization of Cyprus. It is a struggle for an independent, sovereign, territorially integral, nonaligned and demilitarized Cyprus in which Greeks and Turks, Armenians, Maronites and Latins all can live harmoniously and build a joyous and happy life for everyone.

The Cyprus problem is not and has never been a problem of differences between Greek and Turkish Cypriots but a problem of truly unbridgeable differences between Cyprus and imperialism, foreign occupation -- not because there are no differences between Greek and Turkish Cypriots -- but because even the differences that do exist, and which basically are created by imperialism, can easily be settled the moment the imperialist conspiracy and intervention in our internal affairs cease, the moment Turkish and all other foreign troops withdraw from Cyprus' territory. Imperialism has exploited both mistakes and chauvinism on both sides to create the current tragic situation in Cyprus and to promote its devilish partitionist plans.

Contemporary Cyprus history teaches us much. It teaches us that if AKEL had been heeded when it said that for waging an effective anti-imperialist liberation struggle, the Turkish Cypriots, or at least a significant part of the Turkish Cypriots, should also be drawn into it, had it been heeded on the appropriate tactics for the struggle, imperialism would have failed to lead the situation into its current stage.

The Cyprus problem in its current form presents two basic aspects -- internal and external. We Cypriots, Greeks and Turks, shall resolve the internal aspect in intercommunal talks under the auspices of the UN secretary general on the basis of the resolutions of the international organization and the summit agreements. No other, better procedure than that of the intercommunal talks exists, even though no substantive progress has so far been made in the talks. If we allow others to solve this aspect for us, we can be sure that the solution will be much worse.

Certainly we are struggling for the withdrawal of the Turkish occupation and all other foreign troops from Cyprus territory, the return of the refugees to their homes and possessions under secure conditions, as envisaged by the UN resolutions, the tracing of the fate of missing persons and the termination of the drama of the enclaved people.

This is the essence of the struggle we are waging. However, to refuse the talks until all these things have been accomplished not only does not contribute to the Cyprus problem's solution but also leaves the Cypriot people exposed before the United Nations.

Some people wonder: Shall we continue the intercommunal talks even though there may be no progress? As a procedure we do not intend to abandon it because, as we have stated, there is no better procedure for us. However, after we have exhausted all avenues and it has been proven beyond any doubt that there is no hope for progress, then we shall again resort to the United Nations so that they may help us by taking more effective measures to ensure the success of the intercommunal talks.

We have submitted proposals and we have accepted a solution providing for a biregional federation. We neither renege on nor abandon the solution we have proposed. We reject a confederation as a solution, a solution of faits accomplis, the solution of two separate states. However, some people continue to consciously or unconsciously confuse a biregional federation with two separate states or solution by a confederation. They are different things.

To what should we attribute the fact that the intercommunal talks so far have not made substantive progress? Not only to the fact that Ankara hides behind the other side's intransigence but also to the imperialist factor, which has not abandoned its criminal plans for the dissolution of the independent Cyprus state and for Cyprus' partition. We should attribute it to international tension, and specifically to the tension in the eastern Mediterranean and the Middle East.

Any recourse we make to the United Nations will not be a substitute for the procedure of the intercommunal talks as the solution of the Cyprus problem's internal aspect, but it will strengthen it. Any new recourse to the United Nations will also aim at guaranteeing a resolution for the convening of an international conference within the UN framework for the discussion of the Cyprus problem's international aspect. We reject a solution outside the framework and resolutions of the United Nations and of the summit agreements.

Such a conference should deal with the treaties Cyprus was compelled to sign in 1960 as an indispensable prerequisite for declaring it an independent state: The treaty of establishment with Great Britain, on the basis of which that country guaranteed itself 99 square miles and 32 other points of Cyprus territory for its "sovereign" bases, the right to use the roads, ports, airports and Cyprus airspace for military purposes and in fact refuses to pay even for the damage it causes through the privileges it has guaranteed. Not because we are prepared to exchange the land that is being used as "sovereign" British bases for money, no matter how tempting the offers may be, but because our firm demand is for dismantling the British bases and the U.S. spy stations on Cyprus territory and for a complete demilitarization of Cyprus. Furthermore, it is an unprecedented scandal that the Cypriot taxpayer should have to pay for foreign imperialist bases and other facilities.

We have only one demand with regard to the British sovereign bases and the U.S. spy stations: That they be dismantled and removed from our country. This is precisely what we shall demand at the international conference which will be convened within the UN framework for solution of the problem's international aspect.

Another issue that must be taken up at the international conference concerns the treaties of guarantee and alliance, which Cyprus was again forced to sign as a condition to declaring it an independent state: The treaties with Britain, Greece and Turkey on the basis of which Greece is permitted to station a military contingent of 950 and Turkey one of 650. These treaties, which were supposed to constitute a guarantee for Cyprus' independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, in practice proved to be the exact opposite.

All three guarantor powers proved to be aggressors against Cyprus. First the Greek junta, with the junta-fascist coup of 15 July 1974, then Turkey, with the invasion and occupation of 36.4 percent of Cyprus 5 days later -- which continues to date -- and Britain, helping the junta-fascist coup, actually permitting the tanks of the coupists to pass through the bases in pursuit of elected President Makarios in Paphos, where he had sought refuge, as well as helping the Turkish invasion and occupation of Cyprus territory.

How is it possible for the Cyprus people to trust this kind of guarantee, which in practice proved to be Cyprus' destruction and enslavement? The Cyprus people demand the abolition of these treaties and a replacement with guarantees from the UN Security Council or other credible international guarantees.

The international conference within the UN framework will exercise its favorable influence on the resolutions of the internal aspect of the Cyprus problem, which, as we have said, should be achieved through the procedure of the intercommunal talks.

However, there is one more serious issue which concerns the Cyprus problem. It is our defense shield. Cyprus is in no position militarily to repulse the aggressor because he has such a huge superiority in arms and forces. Furthermore, he has NATO behind him, which constantly arms him with new weapons and gives him all support. What the Cyprus people can and should do is strengthen their defense shield so that if they suffer a new attack, they will be in a position to put up a decisive resistance. This is an inviolable patriotic duty, and our party supports the strengthening of our defense shield.

The Cyprus problem will be solved first through our determined resistance to any imperialist plans for the dissolution of the independent Cyprus state and Cyprus' partition, through our insistence on the procedure on the intercommunal talks under the auspices of the UN secretary general for the solution of the Cyprus problem's internal aspect on the basis of UN resolutions and the summit agreements, through our ceaseless struggle for the withdrawal of the Turkish occupation and all foreign troops, through the international conference within the UN framework, which will take up the Cyprus' problem's international aspect of ridding it of all foreign troops and foreign military bases, through the multifaceted internationalization of the Cyprus problem and the recourse to the United Nations, which should be asked to undertake greater responsibilities and more specific measures for implementation of their resolutions, through the international support and solidarity, especially of our loyal friends and supporters -- the socialist countries, with the Soviet Union in the forefront -- the nonaligned countries and all the other peoples who support our just cause, through the new Greek Government, which attaches priority to the Cyprus problem and its internationalization -- for which we thank it, through Greece's withdrawal from NATO -- a measure, if implemented, that will have very favorable responses. Let us not forget that the Turkish troops occupying 36.4 percent of Cyprus are NATO troops and that it is NATO that supports Turkey in its intransigence.

A Greece outside NATO and inside the nonaligned camp will greatly serve not only the Cyprus people's liberation struggle but also its own vital interests. We do not claim that Greece's step for withdrawal from NATO is easy. However, it is not unachieveable provided there is a will and a determination. This is our own assessment, and in no way does it mean that we want to dictate our own policy to the Greek Government. It is purely an issue of the Greek people, which they can resolve. Greece is an independent country and makes its own decisions.

Since I have referred to the new Greek government, it would be a serious omission if I did not say that Maroudhas' recent statement has become the object of the most cruel exploitation by extreme rightists in Cyprus and Greece for the purpose of striking a blow at democratic cooperation between the Democratic Party [DIKO] and AKEL, undermining relations between Cyprus and Greece and bringing about Kiprianou's resignation.

However, I shall revert to this orchestrated antidemocratic and anticommunist campaign by the extreme right and some other people in another part of my speech. Our complete position on the solution of the Cyprus problem is: An independent, sovereign, territorially integral, federated, nonaligned and demilitarized Cyprus -- a center of peace, friendship and cooperation for all the people in the area.

Dear comrades, I will now pass to another chapter of the action report in which we discuss the internal political situation in Cyprus. The most significant, historic I should say, development in our internal political affairs has been the democratic cooperation between AKEL and DIKO announced on 20 April.

It is true that this cooperation constitutes a continuation of the cooperation that existed in the past both with President Makarios and President Kiprianou. However, an essential difference exists between the old cooperation and the current one in this respect: Democratic cooperation between AKEL and DIKO is based on a minimum program, which was discussed and decided upon jointly, and on measures for the program's implementation. It is a form of cooperation superior to the ones we have so far known in our country.

Contrary to what various anticommunists and anti-AKEL people have declared, our party is not participating in the new government which was formed and which has undertaken to implement the minimum program for democratic cooperation. However, AKEL has expressed its viewpoint to the president of the republic, as the minimum program stipulates, on the new government, but it is President Kiprianou who actually selected the new government's ministers.

Is the AKEL-DIKO cooperation, on the basis of the minimum program that was announced, a "popular minifront," as the extreme rightist Rally party leaders want to call it? Democratic cooperation between AKEL and DIKO is neither a popular "mini" nor a "maxi" front. It could not be under the existing conditions and the present stage, which is basically anti-imperialist, against occupation, for liberation. The popular front is something else. Social content dominates its program, while in the AKEL-DIKO democratic cooperation a content dominates which is anti-imperialist, against occupation and for liberation. The form of cooperation which was achieved between AKEL and DIKO and which is open to other democratic parties is directly connected with the stage of the struggle, and, as we have said, is anti-imperialist, against occupation and for liberation. It is on this stage that the broadest possible patriotic cooperation is necessary.

DIKO expresses and represents the national bourgeois class, which wants Cyprus to be truly independent, rid of every imperialist presence and foreign occupation. It wants Cyprus to be democratic and nonaligned. AKEL, which expresses and represents the working class, also wants a truly independent, sovereign, territorially integral, nonaligned and demilitarized Cyprus because such a Cyprus corresponds to the working class' and the working people's interests.

We did not cooperate with DIKO in order to change the social regime but to make Cyprus truly independent, federated, nonaligned and demilitarized. The interests of the national bourgeois class, which is expressed and represented by DIKO, are identical in these goals, with the interests of the working class and the working people expressed and represented by AKEL. The leadership of the Rally party expresses and represents the interests of that segment of the bourgeois class which identifies itself with the interests of imperialism and the foreign multinational monopolies. For this reason, it wants Cyprus to be a country subject to imperialism and the multinational monopolies.

As I said in the House of Representatives in reply to a question by the leader of the Rally party, the time for a popular front, a maxifront in fact, will come, but the Rally party's extreme right leaders will not like it at all. However, I doubt whether they and some others who want to appear as socialist leaders have the ability to understand what we are saying. For instance, the EDEK leadership is in a hurry for "socialism." But in fact, in cooperating with the Rally party leadership it completely ignores the stage of the struggle of the Cyprus people.

In order to reach the stage of the popular front, with social content as the dominant element, it is not possible to sidestep the present stage of the struggle. First we must liberate Cyprus, make it truly independent, so that we may advance to the stage of society's socialist transformation. Through the AKEL-DIKO democratic cooperation, on the basis of the minimum program, the two parties fully retain their independence and their ideological orientation. Each of the two parties belongs to a different ideological area. However, this does not impede them from cooperating on the basis of the program they have concluded for an independent, sovereign, territorially integral, federated, nonaligned and demilitarized Cyprus. I believe ideological credo of the two parties suffers no loss.

However, much talk has been heard about the change our people need. Of course a change is needed. However, the change that is needed is a change for the better, not for the worse, and it is not the Rally party or those who cooperate with it who will bring it about but the cooperating democratic forces of AKEL and DIKO. Change for the better is brought about by the natural agents of change, who are none other than the working class and the working people, who are represented by AKEL and the broad popular movement which cooperates with DIKO. Change for the better will be brought by implementation of the AKEL-DIKO minimum program which includes among its goals and aims:

A. The correct and equitable solution of the Cyprus problem through the guarantee of the Cyprus state's complete independence, the safeguarding if its sovereignty, territorial integrity, unity and nonalignment.

B. Cyprus' demilitarization.

C. The continuation of a correct nonaligned foreign policy.

D. The implementation of a correct internal policy which will guarantee:

1) The unity and cooperation of patriotic democratic forces and more generally of the people.

2) Permanent internal stability.

3) The protection and promotion of democratic institutions.

4) Combatting all kinds of anomaly and malpractice in the state and parastate machine.

5) The implementation of a sound democratic economic and social policy which will serve the interests of all the people as a whole, and especially of the economically weaker classes of the people.

6) The rapprochement of Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriots, restoration of mutual trust, friendship and cooperation.

The minimum program analyzes exactly how it understands the implementation in practice of these goals and aims. I do not intend to give the minimum program of the cooperating parties because it has been published and circulated in a brochure. It concerns a truly historic document which, tangibly implemented, will bring about the much desired change the people want. Both cooperating parties have taken the necessary measures for the program's implementation. In addition to the fact, as President Kiprianou has stressed, that the minimum program will be the government's official policy, which means that each minister will undertake responsibility to implement that part of the program which concerns his ministry, there will also exist an interparty committee at the highest level which will supervise the program's implementation and submit to the president of the republic its reports and recommendations.

The extreme rightists and other enemies of democratic cooperation spoke and still speak of a "directorate" and actually go as far as to make the ridiculous claim that the interparty committee which will supervise the implementation of the minimum program will be unconstitutional! The interparty committee is not a government committee. However, where does the constitution stipulate that an interparty or other committee cannot supervise, follow the implementation of a program that has been agreed upon by two parties, and submit its views and reports to the president of the republic?

However, there has been talk about an alleged supraparty candidate for president. First we should say that in this country there is no supraparty president, whether he is called Ioannidhis or anything eles. There are only persons who are not organized into parties. However, the essential thing in the case of the cooperation is that this takes place with parties, not with individuals. If they want, individuals have a position in the cooperation, but they should not place themselves above parties and political situations. Makarios' case was unique and existed under very different conditions which cannot possibly be duplicated.

A guarantee, a true guarantee, that a program which has been announced will be implemented are the parties which are cooperating on the basis of the program, not individuals.

Various clever people have already started making estimates regarding the results of the next presidential elections. They have begun concocting myths and percentages for the naive. Actually, a firm exists whose purpose is to concoct such percentages in the form of public opinion polls in order to shape public opinion. It is a very well-known imperialist game, which is played in such cases to create wrong impressions.

We say there will be one and only one round in the next presidential elections, because the candidate of the democratic cooperation between AKEL and DIKO, Spirol Kiprianou, will be elected triumphantly. Those people who have dreams of a second round and possibilities of success in it will be bitterly disappointed. In AKEL-DIKO democratic forces by themselves are in a position to elect the president in the first round, and this they will do precisely.

The next presidential elections could be described as the most significant since the declaration of Cyprus as an independent state, because they will be the first to be held after President Makarios' death in 1977. As is well known, no elections were held in 1978 because there was no candidate opposing Kiprianou.

What is at stake in these elections? The future of the people and country is at stake. The people will be called to choose between a president who is faithful to the Makarios policy for solution of the Cyprus problem and Cyprus' nonaligned foreign policy and who undertakes to implement, on the basis of the program which has been agreed upon, a propopulist economic policy serving the interests of society's economically weaker classes, and a candidate of the extreme right who supports a NATO solution for the Cyprus problem and who will transform Cyprus into a paradise for the large foreign and local exploitative capital at the expense of the working people. Bluntly and clearly, it concerns an election between a progressive bourgeois democracy and a completely reactionary situation inimical to democracy and the working people.

We do not have the slightest doubt that the people's unmistakable sense of judgment will support the AKEL-DIKO democratic cooperation, which constitutes a guarantee for the democratic course and propopulist solution of the working people's problems. Of course this does not mean that hard work will not be needed for the triumph of the cooperating democratic parties. We have already entered the preelection period, and in close cooperation with DIKO our party will embark on a cursade for the people's enlightenment so that the greatest possible majority can be guaranteed for Spiros Kiprianou in the first round.

The issue of the election of a "supraparty" candidate, regardless of who he may be, does not arise, and the ballots which will be cast for him and for the EDEK candidate will be lost ballots. Even if all the forces opposing the democratic cooperation rally around one candidate, as is their final plan, the democratic cooperation will win in the first round because it has superior forces.

Before concluding with the internal political situation I would like to say a few words about developments in the Turkish Cypriot community and the need for rapprochement between the two communities. The answer to the economic and other problems the Turkish Cypriot community faces lies in a mutually acceptable solution of the Cyprus problem. It lies in rapprochement between the two communities.

The issue of rapprochement occupies a significant position in the program of AKEL-DIKO democratic cooperation. The program stresses that "rapprochement between Greek and Turkish Cypriots is considered to be the most indispensable prerequisite for the viability of a mutually acceptable solution for the Cyprus problem. The restoration and consolidation of trust, friendship and cooperation between Greek and Turkish Cypriots will create the prerequisites for the peaceful coexistence of all of Cyprus' inhabitants.

"In order to achieve this goal it is necessary to uproot chauvinism and cultivate a spirit of mutual respect and esteem between Greek and Turkish Cypriots. It is necessary to avoid any actions, regardless of origin, that could offend the national dignity of Greek and Turkish Cypriots. Until a total solution to the Cyprus problem has been found, it is necessary to implement tangible and specific measures, like the payment of dues to Turkish Cypriot workers and working people who are entitled to them from the state fund for social insurance and provident funds, offering work in industrial or other enterprises and generally providing facilities in various sectors.

"It is necessary that the state and the Greek Cypriot side demonstrate affection and understanding for the economic and social problems of our Turkish Cypriot compatriots. The living standard of the two communities, within the framework of a united economy, should rise to the same level and both sides should manifest the necessary spirit of cooperation for the good and prosperity of the Cyprus people as a whole."

Our party and democratic cooperation attach significance to the problems of Armenians, Maronites and Latins. We stress the harmonious cooperation which currently exists and we stress that we shall work for even closer harmonious relations with everybody to the interest of all the Cypriot people.

Dear Comrades: Cyprus' economic situation occupied a special chapter in our party's Central Committee and the Central Control Committee action report. Cyprus, being a developing country, has margins for development in both industry, farming and stockbreeding as well as in tourism. The new economic policy outlined by the AKEL-DIKO minimum program, when put into practice, would make it possible to effectively deal with the problems of the Cyprus economy and achieve fresh and higher rates of development.

This new policy comprises: First: The continuous development of the Cypriot economy based on concrete programs and on the creation of employment opportunities. This means abandonment of the conservative economic policy of reducing the development rate because of the fear of overheating the economy.

Second: Elevation of the people's standard of living, particularly of the lower-paid. The great difference between those with low wages and those with high wages must be reduced while the big profits, the high incomes, must bear the burden.

Third: The protection and assistance to the middle class people. The interests of this class are closely interwoven with the interests of the workers, employees and peasants.

Fourth: A fairer distribution and redistribution of the national income for the benefit of the weak layers of society. This could be done in many and various ways, such as an increase in salaries of low-paid people and the improvement of social grants.

Fifth: Revision of financial and taxation policy in a way that would better and more effectively serve all the people, particularly those with low income. In connection with direct taxation, particularly on high incomes and big profits, this should be considered more fair than direct taxation, particularly the tax on broad consumer items that mainly strike at the working people.

Sixth: Within the framework of the mixed economy system, while the state will continue to encourage private initiative it will intervene whenever the private sector is unable or unwilling to undertake initiatives. It will also intervene whenever required by the general interest, and it will do so more actively and more decisively in the economic field with the establishment of state, quasi-state or mixed industrial units or with the nationalization of primarily vital fields for the benefit of all the people and the country's economy. Enterprises such as Cyprus Airways, the oil refinery and the marketing of petroleum products, the exploitation of bentonite and so forth could be 100 percent state-owned for the benefit of the state and the people. There are other enterprises which could be quasi-state or mixed enterprises and others which could remain in private hands. Under present conditions, this system of a mixed economy is the most appropriate.

Seventh: The process of placing water resources under a state-contolled representative central water authority; planned development with the construction of new dams as well as the southern water distribution network and the fair distribution of water. State control of water resources is more necessary than ever because of the crucial importance of this problem to Cyprus' economy.

Eighth: The continuation and completion of the program in connection with the housing of refugees and the implementation of the decisions regarding the housing of all the working people, particularly the low-paid, dealing with the problems of the relatives of missing persons, of enclaved people and of all the victims of the coup and the invasion. The housing program, particularly with regard to the refugees, is one of the most serious problems facing our people. Much has been done to deal with it, but much still has to be done for the refugees and for those with low income. The problems of relatives of missing persons, of enclaved people, and of the other victims of the coup and the invasion will be the focus of our attention.

Ninth: The implementation of concrete measures to combat tax evasion; the backing of the prices committee and of the marketing control service in order to more effectively carry out their task as well as the taking of measures to deal with inflation, stagnation, economic development and the trade balance deficit. There are many who, through various ways, evade tax payment, and these are no other than the wealthy businessmen. It is necessary to help the prices committee in order to more effectively carry out its task, while the marketing control service should function more effectively in order to combat profiteering and deal with inflation. The trade balance deficit must be faced by confining our imports to what is absolutely necessary and increasing our exports.

Tenth: The carrying out of special programs for the development of the economically backward mountain areas and the improvement of the living conditions for the people in these areas. It is a fact that as a result of urbanism and the adverse economic and cultural conditions that prevail mainly in the villages in mountain areas, these villages have virtually been deserted. It is imperative that the economic development of these villages be pursued by means of special programs so that their inhabitants are encouraged to stay there and even encourage those who have left to return.

Eleventh: Complete cleansing and backing of the cooperative movement. Our party has always been in favor of the democratization of the cooperative movement. And if what our party was saying had been accepted we would not have come to the state of affairs that was finally uncovered with regard to this most massive movement which has offered -- and is still offering -- so much to the people.

Twelfth: The implementation of special measures to elevate the position of women in society, particularly of the principle of equal pay.

Since its establishment, AKEL has been advocating the elevation of the woman's position in society and especially the implementation of the principle of equal pay. The woman must enjoy equal pay with a man for carrying out equal work.

Thirteenth: The implementation of special programs for the healthy employment of youths and the professional reinstatement of unemployed university graduates. The youths who constitute the society's gold reserves are entitled to healthy employment not only for the sake of their own interests but also for the interests of the Cyprus economy in general. The scientific potential of Cyprus is remarkable and it constitutes real capital for our country. It is imperative that we properly utilize this capital for the benefit of economy and for the elevation of our people's living and cultural standards.

Fourteenth: The completion of the plan for free education; the increase in the funds for scholarships and loans to students; gradual expansion of pre-elementary education and the establishment of a university. The AKEL stance has always been that the investments in the field of education are -- in a final analysis -- the best and most effective investments. The establishment of a state university in Cyprus, apart from contributing to the further elevation of our people's standards of education and to the saving of valuable foreign exchange, will also emphasize our entity as a state.

Fifteenth: The implementation of a general plan for free medical and medicinal treatment for the people. It is hoped that the state health plan, which has been pending for a long time, will be implemented during 1983.

Sixteenth: The special care for the handicapped and the increase in bonuses and grants. With the implementation of this new economic and social policy, Cyprus' national income will obviously be increased and along with this the people's living and cultural standards will also be raised.

Of course there are issues on which AKEL and DIKO continue to differ, in addition to the general ideological difference with regard to the social status -- this is not the proper time to resolve this difference -- and this refers to our association with the EEC. Our party insists that Cyprus' economic interests would be better served by the signing of a trade agreement with the EEC and not by our association with it or by becoming an EEC member.

However, what the AKEL-DIKO minimum program provides in connection with the economic, financial and social policy is very important and its implementation in practice will bring about substantial change for the benefit of the economically weak layers of society.

We, the AKEL members, declare that together with the DIKO members and cadres we will become the banner bearers for the implementation of the minimum program for democratic cooperation. We will completely fulfill our duties to the people.

Comrades: The AKEL-DIKO democratic cooperation that is based on the minimum program which has been announced and which simultaneously provides for measures for its implementation is an event of supreme historical importance for our people and their liberation struggle.

This cooperation has been hailed by the majority of the Cypriot people who, with resolutions and cables to the leaders of the two parties, approve of the minimum program and the cooperation that has been concluded.

But, naturally, the AKEL-DIKO democratic cooperation did not please the imperialist circles which see in this the failure of their plans for the accession to power of the extreme rightwing [Democratic] Rally leadership which would convert Cyprus into a protectorate of imperialism.

Moreover, this cooperation also failed to please the leaders of the Rally, EDEK, Center Union [EK], New Democratic Front [NEDIPA] and some others. But it is not democratic cooperation that should be blamed if the leaders of EDEK, EK, NEDIPA and others found themselves in the same boat as the extreme rightwing leaders of the rally. This is so because, as the minimum program stresses, the door of democratic cooperation is open to the democratic parties and quarters who wish to join it.

As I have stressed elsewhere in my address, the Maroudhas statement has become the object of the fiercest exploitation by the extreme rightwing in both Cyprus and Greece. The very same statement has been exploited, and is still being exploited, even by other political circles, not, of course, for the sake of the well-understood interest of either Cyprus or Greece.

We are of the opinion that the Maroudhas statement could have been avoided. If any clarifications were needed from the president of the Republic of Cyprus in connection with the AKEL-DIKO minimum program, these could have been sought and could have been given through diplomatic channels. Due to the way in which the Maroudhas statement was made, it was natural that it would create misunderstandings and become the object of exploitation.

It has been said that AKEL has insulted the prime minister of Greece, Mr Papandreou. But this does not relate to reality. What AKEL did was express its view on the Maroudhas statement, and it did so without fear or prejudice. The abusers and the merciless enemies of Greece's prime minister are others, and these are the ones who are today posing as his fanatical supporters.

We sincerely do not see any substantive difference between the line which the AKEL-DIKO minimum program outlines and what Greek Prime Minister Papandreou stated during his visit to Cyprus. We recall that in his first speech at Larnaca Airport on his arrival, Papandreou spoke about the continuation of the intercommunal dialogue in connection with the internal aspect of the Cyprus program and about exhausting all limits for substantive progress before appealing again to the United Nations. He reiterated this stance many times during his stay in Cyprus. The same stance is also included in the AKEL-DIKO minimum cooperation program. We will resolve the external aspect at an international conference within the UN framework. There cannot be any difference here either. The internationalization which we have been stressing has to be general and will simply help resolve the two basic aspects of the Cyprus problem: However, it cannot provide a solution by itself. Internationalization and intercommunal dialogue can admirably walk together. The one not only does not rule out the other, but strengthens it.

We repeat for the thousandth time that our struggle is against occupation, against imperialism and for liberation, and we are not going to terminate it before the Turkish and other foreign troops leave Cyprus, before the dissolution of the bases and the spy stations or before the complete demilitarization of Cyprus.

Addressing the new Greek Government and Andreas Papandreou, whose advent to authority were greeted by AKEL, we wish to tell them in all sincerity: "Beware of Greeks bearing gifts." It is others who are Greece's implacable enemies and not AKEL and the democratic forces of the Cyprus people. These others are imperialism and the extreme rightwing forces both in Cyprus and Greece who have never ceased to plan and to plot against both Cyprus and Greece. These are the forces which fanatically opposed PASOK and then, only 24 hours later, became its fanatical supporters. These are the ones who aspire for new anomalies to overthrow both the Papandreou government and the Kiprianou government.

AKEL and the democratic forces of Cyprus want close, very close, relations based upon principles between the Governments of Cyprus and Greece. In our opinion, the best way to smooth relations and tighten the bonds of alignment and support between Cyprus and Greece is through direct talks. AKEL is prepared to salute and applaud, from the bottom of its heart, the full and sincere restoration of relations between the Greek and Cyprus Governments. Such a development would block the road to the extreme rightists circles in Cyprus and in Greece who want anomaly for purely subversive purposes which serve foreign imperialist aspirations.

As to the EXORMISI article, a tool of PASOK, which was so abusive toward AKEL, we will not reply, because we truly care about good relations between Cyprus and Greece, and we firmly believe in the principles of nonintervention in our domestic affairs and in the domestic affairs of other countries.

Comrades, a delirium of anticommunist spirit has taken over the imperialist extreme rightists, the coupists and certain others who have joined ranks against the democratic cooperation between AKEL and DIKO. They truly rave because they know that this cooperation blocks the road to the extreme rightwing reactionary forces. It blocks the road to anomaly. It blocks the road to imperialism and to the partition of Cyprus. Everything about an above-party candidate is nothing but a camouflaged fraud. The lost vote does exist, but do not be surprised if all those who oppose the democratic cooperation find themselves in the very same front in support of only one candidate of their choice.

We declare that even if such a development should come about, the candidate of the democratic cooperation, Spiros Kiprianou, will be elected in the first round with an ample majority. Nothing can save the sinful leadership of the [Democratic] Rally, which shares responsibility with those who destroyed Cyprus. Neither unrestrained demagoguery and anticommunist spirit nor ample funds can save those who united their fate with the coupists and the extreme rightists, those who were repeatedly given the opportunity to join the democratic cooperation but who preferred division, personal hatred and passion.

From this official rostrum of the 15th congress of AKEL, we declare that the victory of democratic cooperation will be triumphant and the minimum program, which guarantees a true change for the better, will become a fact of life. This is guaranteed by our party, it is guaranteed by the democratic cooperation, it is guaranteed by the magnificent unenslaved people of Cyprus.

Long live the democratic cooperation of AKEL-DIKO!
Long live the patriotic, democratic people of Cyprus!
Long live the international communist and workers movement headed by the all-glorious party of Lenin!
Love live AKEL!

Kiprianou Message

NC141327 Nicosia I ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 14 May 82 pp 1, 8

[All quotations as published]

[Text] In a message to the 15th AKEL congress, which opened in Nicosia yesterday, President Spiros Kiprianou declared in his capacity as chairman of the Democratic Party [DIKO] that our basic mainstay is Greece and the harmonious cooperation between Athens and Nicosia must be safeguarded as the apple of the eye.

Referring to the same subject, President Kiprianou stressed: "I have a second, special reason to reiterate this stance today -- now that some difficulties have arisen in the harmonious cooperation with Athens -- and to state that I have been doing and will continue to do anything I can, as each and every one of us must do everything possible, to restore the spirit of the Athens-Nicosia cooperation that prevailed until yesterday. I am sure that the crisis will be a temporary one and that cooperation will be continued for the benefit of our national cause."

In his message, which was read by House of Representatives President Yeoryios Ladhas, the president of the republic referred extensively to the DIKO-AKEL cooperation and pointed, among other things, to the following: "The need to wage a more effective struggle to deliver the Cypriot people from the heavy consequences of the criminal coup and the Turkish invasion, to safeguard democracy and democratic institutions and to continue the course toward social and economic progress for all our people, have led our two parties to a joint agreement for political cooperation based on a joint minimum program for the salvation of the country.

"We are two parties with different philosophies and ideologies and with quite a number of other differences over many questions.

However, we have noted basic principles on which our views coincide, and we have arrived at a joint minimum program that secures peace, normality, economic and social progress and a permanent consolidation of democracy in our country, and above all — with a sense of responsibility and militancy -- secures the waging of a real struggle for freedom in our country.

"Placing the national interest above our partisan goals, and with a full sense of our responsibilities toward our country, we have arrived at cooperation and we are resolved to struggle together, with all our strength, for its salvation. We will not cease to have differences on a number of questions not covered by the joint program. Our parties will preserve their freedom and partisan independence, their political and ideological identity and physiognomy."

Referring to the national question, Mr Kiprianou said: Our basic aim is the peaceful solution of the Cyprus problem based on the decisions and the resolutions of the United Nations and on the summit agreements.

Our first goal is the withdrawal of the Turkish occupation troops, the ultimate goal being the complete demilitarization of Cyprus; the return of refugees to their ancestral homes, tracing the fate of our missing compatriots; the consolidation of the independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity and unity of our country; and the nonalignment of the Cyprus state. We are determined to consistently continue our nonaligned foreign policy.

We believe that the withdrawal of the Turkish occupation troops will result in a dialogue between the two communities, arriving more easily at results. Thus, our policy on the question of the talks is as we have already defined it. Together with our struggle for the withdrawal of the occupation troops -- because we believe that their withdrawal will assist in holding a substantive and constractive dialogue — inter-Cypriot talks are being held on the internal aspect of the Cyprus problem. These talks aim at an agreement for a real federation, at exerting intensive efforts to exhaust all limits and at finding out whether or not there is a possibility for progress, particularly on the basis of the recent guidelines by the UN secretary general. Should there be a deadlock, the Cyprus problem will be discussed again at the UN General Assembly or in the Security Council. And we will seek a decision on something more concrete that will be the subject of consultations between Athens-Nicosia.

"Along with this we will at the same time continue and intensify — in close cooperation with Greece -- our international crusade in order to secure the greatest international mobility by portraying the Cyprus problem as an issue of invasion and occupation and by putting emphasis on our demand for the withdrawal of the Turkish occupation troops. We have already opened this crusade with Greek Prime Minister Papandreou and we are continuing it in every direction.

"On the occasion of your congress, I wish to declare again that for me it is an act of faith that beyond the valuable support -- support for which we are grateful -- the socialist nonaligned and some Western countries of the liberal peoples of the world have shown, Greece is the basic mainstay of our struggle and that the harmonious cooperation between Athens and Nicosia must be safeguarded as the apple of our eye."

In conclusion President Kiprianou declared: "I am certain that the DIKO-AKEL cooperation on the basis of the minimum program will rally together all our democratic people in a determined struggle to face real dangers that exist and threaten our country and its course toward salvation.

"The victory of the united forces of our people appears certain. This is guaranteed by the will and the determination of our people. Those who cherish illusions will realize this very soon. Our people, being politically mature, have decided to save their country and they will do so."

Soviet Delegate Speaks

NC151050 Nicosia KHARAVYI in Greek 15 May 82 pp 1, 7

["Text" of address to the 15th AKEL congress by head of the CPSU delegation, Central Committee member, Moldavian Communist Party First Secretary S.K. Grossu 14 May in Nicosia]

[Excerpts] Dear Comrades: First of all allow me to express cordial thanks to the Central Committee of the Restorative Party of the Working People of Cyprus for its invitation to the CPSU delegation to attend the 15th congress of your party, and to sincerely wish your congress success and fruitful work.

Also allow me to fulfill the honorable mandate of the CPSU Central Committee and of General Secretary of our party's Central Committee Comrade L.I. Brezhnev to convey on their behalf warm greetings to the delegates of your congress, to the members of the brotherly AKEL party and to all the working people of Cyprus.

Your congress is being held in a difficult and complicated period. Today, the peoples of our planet are deeply preoccupied with the intensifying deterioration of international relations. The forces of imperialism, first of all those of the United States and of NATO, in seeking to stop the course of world history, to block the development of socialism, to drown the peoples' liberation movement, have deteriorated the world situation to an unprecedented level.

In order to camouflage their reactionary line, these forces are more and more broadly using the weapon of lies, delicate deceit; they launch one after the other hysterical propaganda campaigns about a so-called "Soviet military threat," "international terrorism," "strategic delay by the United States"; they invent stories about events in Poland, Central America, South and Southeast Asia; they exploit the British-Argentine conflict over the Falkland (Malvinas) Islands.

However, no lie or distortion is capable of concealing truth from the people. And the truth is that the threat to peace, the threat to the life of the people, to the very existence of civilization, comes from imperialism, the aggressive circles of NATO.

You, the Cypriots, from your own experience, know where imperialist intervention leads: It is precisely this which has led to the present tragic situation in Cyprus that has been going for so many years. The militaristic NATO circles have been seeking to employ all means in order to abolish the Republic of Cyprus, to convert your beautiful island into their own military bridgehead. And if the imperialist plotters have not yet succeeded in completing their deceitful plans this is due, first of all, to the fact that all the brave Cypriot people, their democratic patriotic forces, have risen to defend their country.

AKEL, the militant vanguard of Cypriot working people and the consistent defender of their fundamental interests, has been at the frontline of these forces. We, in the Soviet Union, know well that AKEL is the inspirator and organizer of the anti-imperialist struggle of the broadest people's masses, that your party has decisively contributed to the salvation of the independence and freedom of Cyprus. The Soviet communists see with deep satisfaction that the authority and influence of your party is continuously growing. This is convincingly proven by the impressive AKEL victory during the recent parliamentary elections. We wish to again congratulate you, Comrades, as well as to congratulate all the island's democratic forces and to wish still further strengthening of your party's positions.

The elevation of AKEL's influence and of all the island's democratic forces becomes still more important today when the situation in Cyprus is obviously becoming more acute, particularly because of the forthcoming elections for president. Your people are obliged to defend their freedom and independence under conditions of hard struggle against both foreign and local reaction.

We are confident that the working out of the AKEL-Democratic Party minimum program of cooperation is of great importance for the successful conclusion of the Cypriot people's struggle. The development of such a program, which is open to other patriotic organizations and personalities, is a proof of the recognition of the long struggle by the Cypriot Communists for the unity of the democratic and anti-imperialist forces of your country, which constitute the sole prerequisite for the repulsion of imperialist machinations and for a fair Cyprus settlement.

The Cypriots' struggle, which is full of self-denial, is rightly gaining the broad support of socialist countries, national liberation movements and world progressive public opinion. Referring to our own party, to our country, being genuine internationalists, we have always firmly supported and continue to support the Cypriot people's anti-imperialist struggle. The Soviet people are in deep solidarity with brotherly AKEL and with all the Cypriot fighters who rally against the attempts of the militaristic NATO circles, and in favor of a fair and peaceful Cyprus solution through constructive intercommunal talks, taking into consideration the interests of all the Cypriots -- Greeks and Turks alike -- based on the UN resolutions and the summit agreements. We are certain that the holding of a representative international conference within the UN framework could contribute to such a solution.

We know that there are forces in Cyprus which have been trying to distort the Soviet Union's position on the Cyprus problem by repeating the slanderous fabrications of imperialist propaganda. But it is obvious to all that in this way they want to cause a rift in the brotherly relations between the CPSU and AKEL, to strike at the traditional friendship between our peoples, to spread mistrust of the Soviet Union and the other socialist countries, to isolate Cyprus from its natural allies and real friends, to impose on your country the NATO plans for the partitioning of your island and its conversion into a military base.

Life itself decisively overthrows and rejects the malicious fabrications of imperialist agents in Cyprus. We once again declare from this official forum our firm faith in the banner of proletarian internationalism and our solidarity with brotherly AKEL and with struggling Cyprus.

Comrades, together with you we have listened with great interest to the detailed report to your congress by the prominent figure of the Cypriot and the international communist and workers' movement, AKEL secretary general, Comrade E. Papaioannou. We are once more convinced that the analysis by our two parties of basic events of international life coincides. And this is natural because both the CPSU and AKEL found their activity on the firm basis of Marxism-Leninism and of proletariat internationalism.

Allow me to thank you for your warm words about our party and country. We are proud of the really brotherly relations between the CPSU and AKEL, and we are confident that the wisdom and bravery of your party, the decisions of the present congress, constitute a guarantee for the complete triumph of the Cypriot people's fair cause.

Florakis Voices Solidarity

NC150822 Nicosia KHARAVYI in Greek 15 May 82 p 5

["Text" of address to the 15th AKEL congress in Nicosia by KKE Secretary General Kharilaos Florakis on 14 May]

[Excerpts] Dear Comrades: It is with special joy and emotion that I address your congress and convey to you all the warmest, comradely greetings of the KKE Central Committee and of all the communists of Greece. In you we greet all the members and supporters of the party of the Cypriot working people, AKEL, the martyr Cypriot people who have been struggling amid difficult conditions so that their country may live as an independent, nonaligned, sovereign and demilitarized country.

Dear comrades, today in Greece, following the defeat in the elections of the rightwing and the victory of the democratic forces, a new situation has been created. There is a relatively more democratic climate, and new possibilities have been created for the development and the intervention of the popular movement. Within the new conditions, our party is developing its struggle in the direction of a real political change in our country, an antimonopolistic change, an anti-imperialist and democratic change, that will open the road to socialism.

One of the primary targets of our struggle is our country's withdrawal from NATO, the expulsion of foreign bases and of nuclear arms and the promotion of the idea of a nuclear-free Balkan Peninsula.

We, responding to the feelings of the majority of the Greek people, have stressed our radical opposition to the various "bargainings" through which it is being sought to bring about an adjustment to the new state of affairs instead of breaking the chains of our country's dependence. Problems like those of NATO and the bases are not negotiable or exchangeable with any U.S.-NATO guarantees for our eastern borders, guarantees which have no practical value.

Our party has been struggling for a way out of the current crisis; for the abolition of immunity and the restriction of the powers of foreign and local monopolies; and for the advancement of the country toward an antimonopolistic development for the benefit of the working people. The PASOK government, however, reneging on its own policy and positions, is not only failing to strike at the numerous privileges of the great capital, but is sometimes even granting new privileges. The economic policy which the government has been following up to now not only is failing to resolve the people's chronic problems but is also creating more problems.

Dear Comrades, we deeply appreciate the firm line of cooperation and unity of all the patriotic and democratic forces of Cyprus which your party has been following and which constitutes the safest way for the salvation of Cyprus.

We believe that the cooperation achieved between AKEL and the Democratic Party [DIKO] and the minimum program, which includes such measures as the internationalization of the Cyprus problem, the democratization of public life, the opening of the Cyprus dossier and so forth, constitutes for conquest of the Cypriot people and a strong blow to the plans for the enforcement of a pro-imperialist Cyprus solution.

We believe that this cooperation is of more general importance, that it constitutes a substantive contribution for more positive developments in the Cyprus problem and that it must be protected from the attacks that the forces of imperialism and of the Cypriot and the Greek reaction have been carrying out against it.

Thus, the recent statement by the Greek Government spokesman criticizing the DIKO-AKEL cooperation has really caused surprise. This is a stark interference in the internal affairs of Cyprus, particularly at a time when the forces of imperialism have been trying in every way to strike at the authority and independence of the Cypriot Republic.

We really believe that a fair Cyprus solution arises through the strengthening of the efforts for a real internationalization of the Cyprus problem; through the struggle for the withdrawal of the Turkish and of all the foreign troops and of the foreign bases from Cyprus; and through the securing of substantive international guarantees for a nonaligned, sovereign and demilitarized Cyprus.

In any case, the unilateral confinement of the Cyprus problem within Western channels, the exclusion from a settlement of the socialist and the nonaligned countries of the region -- particularly of the Soviet Union -- which have been and continue to be decisive supporters of Cyprus, would lead to a Cypriot Camp David.

The intercommunal dialogue will acquire fresh possibilities and effectiveness within the framework of decisive activities for the internationalization of the Cyprus problem.

We consider mutual understanding and rapprochement of the Greek Cypriot and the Turkish Cypriot communities as exceptionally necessary, particularly at a time when imperialism and chauvinism want to perpetuate the two communities' mutual hatred in order to facilitate the partitionist plans.

Dear Comrades, our two parties -- the KKE and AKEL -- are not solely linked by close ideological and political ties. We are also linked by traditional friendship, joint long struggles and joint prospects. We have in front of us parallel goals. The problems of Greece and Cyprus are mainly problems of the joint anti-imperialist struggle. We want to assure you that we will do everything we can to further develop the friendship and cooperation between us.

Rest assured that the Greek Communists -- regardless of sacrifices -- will always be at the side of the martyr people of Cyprus, who are struggling for a nonaligned, independent, sovereign and demilitarized Cyprus.

Cuba's Fernandez Speaks

FL151841 Havana Domestic Service in Spanish 1818 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] Cuba reiterated its support for the sovereignty, territorial integrity, nonalignment and demilitarization of Cyprus during the 3d day of the 15th congress of Cyprus' Restorative Party of the Working People [AKEL] underway in Nicosia. The head of the Cuban delegation, Humberto Miguel Fernandez, a member of the Communist Party of Cuba Central Committee, spoke of the great dangers that progressive mankind is facing and strongly condemned the U.S. arms policy. The Cuban representative cited our commander in chief, Fidel Castro, when he said that peace would be preserved if imperialism understood that we were ready to die and fight for peace to the last breath.

Fernandez also noted the decisive effort of the Cypriot people for their freedom and social progress and their solidarity with the struggles of other nations.

The participants in the 15th AKEL congress issued a special resolution condemning the U.S. warmongering policy against the peoples of Central America and the Caribbean. The resolution rejects U.S. interference in the domestic affairs of independent and sovereign countries such as Cuba, Nicaragua and Grenada. It expresses the solidarity of the Cypriot Communists with the struggle of the Salvadoran people, whose revolutionary forces are waging a titanic struggle under the leadership of their legitimate representative, the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, to overthrow a genocidal tyranny.

The delegates to the AKEL congress also signed a special declaration in support of the Chilean people against the fascist military junta.

Bilen Scores U.S., NATO

TA180855 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 18 May 82

[Excerpts] The Cypriot Communists' congress ended with a call for unity. A Turkish Communist Party [TCP] delegation headed by Secretary General Bilen was also present at the congress.

Bilen addressed the 15th congress of AKEL held in Lefkosa [Nicosia]. In his speech, Bilen pointed out that the TCP shared AKEL's approach to the solution of the Cyprus problem, adding that the solution must first and foremost guarantee the Cyprus state's independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity and nonaligned position. Comrade Bilen then stressed the necessity for withdrawing the Turkish and all other foreign troops from the island and for eliminating the foreign military bases.

Noting that mankind was currently going through a very complicated stage, Bilen stated that for this reason all persons of good will, led by the communists, were channeling all their efforts to restrict the aggressive forces of the United States and NATO, to defend peace and to maintain the detente process. He added that peace-loving forces were receiving the strongest support in this struggle and the guarantee for the success of this struggle from the Soviet Union and other socialist countries.

Political Resolution

NC171103 Nicosia KHARAVYI in Greek 17 May 82 p 11

[16 May resolution on the political situation approved by the 15th AKEL congress]

[Text] 1. AKEL's 15th congress resolves that the AKEL-Democratic Party, DIKO, agreement is the principal characteristic that sets its seal on domestic political developments. The AKEL-DIKO agreement on the forthcoming presidential election is an agreement of principles. The joint minimum program and measures for its implementation are based upon this agreement.

The forthcoming presidential election takes on the character of a political battle of the utmost importance between the patriotic, democratic forces on the one hand and the forces of extreme rightwing reaction and imperialism on the other. As such, the election is a development of vast political significance for the future of the Cypriot people and for promoting the correct solution of the problems facing Cyprus and its people such as the line, the tactics and form of solution of the Cyprus issue, nonaligned foreign policy, democratic rights of the people, economic and social problems and others.

2. Our congress salutes the cooperation achieved between the two parties. It considers this as a superior form of cooperation and expresses the hope that more democratic, patriotic forces will, in the end, join up by placing the more general interests of the struggle conducted by our people above all else, thus expanding and strengthening this cooperation.

3. Our congress considers that the AKEL-DIKO agreement fully serves the supreme interests and requirements of our struggle, the necessity to block the road toward an advent to authority by the forces of the extreme rightwing Rally [Democratic Rally, DISI] and the election of a president by the democratic, patriotic forces.

4. By approving cooperation between our party and DIKO, the minimum program and the declaration and candidacy of Kiprianou for the next presidential election, our congress declares its conviction that the cooperating democratic, patriotic forces will face the battle of the presidential election with all their strength with the result that they will win a grand victory.

5. The congress establishes that during the period under review our people continued their staunch and ceaseless struggle for a just, peaceful and mutually acceptable, viable solution to the Cyprus issue and against the insistence of the U.S.-NATO imperialist circles and their flunkies for promotion and enforcement of their own plans for the solution of the Cyprus issue.

The period under review was one of firm dedication by our party to the proper line and tactics for the struggle, toward solution of the Cyprus issue and for defense against deviations and trends toward its abandonment.

6. Despite our party's efforts during this period to preserve and strengthen this unity of the patriotic democratic forces, serious rifts and division among these forces did occur. The basic reason for this state of affairs was the efforts of various parties and political and other forces to deviate from the known line and tactics, to sweep it aside and replace it by an indefinite and buccaneering line and tactics.

7. The period under review was also a period of increased anticommunism, anti-Sovietism and anti-AKELism. The extreme rightwing reactionary forces, primarily the ones united under DISI, which gives shelter and a political character to the coupists of EOKA B, copied the most reactionary circles of international imperialism and devoted themselves with real hatred -- particularly during the House of Representatives election -- to a mad anticommunist, anti-Soviet and anti-AKEL campaign.

Our party successfully repulsed this attack by the extreme rightwing reaction. As proved by the results of the House of Representatives election, our party won a considerable victory. It not only managed to emerge as the first party in votes received but it also contributed to the emergence of a democratic majority in the House, our main strategy and goal.

8. The 15th congress approves the resolutions of the Central Committee and the Central Control Committee of the party on the various phases through which the Cyprus issue passed during this period and the handling of the various related issues. Specifically the congress approves:

A. The resolution of the Central Committee and the Central Control Committee of the party to reject the U.S.-British-Canadian plan for a solution of the Cyprus issue but to insist upon the line and tactics for a Cyprus solution within the UN framework and on the basis of the UN resolutions and the summit agreements.

B. The May 1980 resolution of the Central Committee and the Central Control Committee of the party.

C. The resolution for firm insistence on the intercommunal talks as the most appropriate process, under today's conditions, for handling the issue within the framework of this resolution on the Waldheim "evaluation" which was the basis for commencing the new cycle of intercommunal talks which continue to this day.

D. The resolution of the Central Committee and the Central Control Committee of the party on the communal elections, the improvement board elections as well as on the House of Representatives election.

Promotion of unity of the patriotic, democratic forces being its main strategic goal, our party won a considerable victory by achieving a majority from the cooperating patriotic, democratic forces in the village communal authorities and improvement boards.

9. Our congress establishes that the intercommunal talks have to date marked no basic progress. This is primarily due to the intransigence demonstrated, and still being demonstrated, by the militarist dictatorial government of Ankara and by the reactionary chauvinist Turkish Cypriot leadership, which are encouraged and supported in their policy by the most reactionary circles of U.S.-NATO imperialism.

By pursuing this policy Ankara and the Turkish Cypriot leadership demonstrate absolute contempt toward the UN resolutions and the summit agreements and legalization of the faits accomplis of the invasion and the occupation as their primary goals. This policy falls under the more general aggressive policy of the U.S.-NATO imperialist circles and serves their more general aggressive plans for the area.

10. Our congress believes that the victory of the democratic forces of change in Greece and the efforts being made for presentation and further internationalization of the Cyprus issue are a positive factor and could contribute to the struggle being conducted by our people for a peaceful, just and viable solution to the Cyprus issue.

Our congress fully appreciates the alignment, solidarity and support provided by the Greek people and the Papandreou government to the struggling Cypriot people, and it stands in favor of a closer and more sincere cooperation between the Governments of Cyprus and Greece. If such a cooperation is to be mutually more beneficial and fruitful, it must be based upon the principles of equality, mutual respect, nonintervention in the domestic affairs of either and of strengthening the entity of the state of Cyprus.

Our congress also believes that efforts toward internationalization do not harm the process of intercommunal talks nor are intercommunal talks in any way an obstacle to the efforts toward internationalization. We believe that one process compliments the other and that both are imperative, one -- the intercommunal talks -- for discussing the solution to the domestic aspect of the Cyprus issue and the other -- internationalization -- for discussing the solution to the international aspects.

11. Our congress establishes that important political developments have taken place within the Turkish Cypriot community. The most important of these is the steady rise of the progressive forces which are in opposition to the chauvinist policy of the Turkish Cypriot leadership. These forces -- which are primarily represented by the Communal Liberation Party with Durduran as its chairman and the Republican Peoples [as published] Party with Ozgur as chairman, despite the extremely adverse and difficult conditions under which they are struggling -- managed to considerably increase their strength in the last election conducted within the Turkish Cypriot community. By contrast the party of Denktas lost more than one-third of its seats' in the Assembly and he personally managed with difficulty to collect only 51 percent of the votes in the "presidential" election, using the votes of the emigrants for this purpose.

12. In reviewing the domestic political situation, our congress lays down the following duties in summary:

A. We must struggle for the solution of the Cyprus issue on the basis of the resolutions of the UN General Assembly and the UN Security Council and the Makarios-Denktas and Kiprianou-Denktas summit agreements.

B. We must firmly and irrevocably insist on the correct line and tactics of the struggle for a peaceful, just, mutually acceptable and viable solution to the Cyprus issue, for settlement of the domestic aspect of the Cyprus issue through intercommunal talks within the framework of the United Nations and on the basis of the UN resolutions and the summit agreements; to protect this process against all trends toward its abandonment, extremism and buccaneering. At the same time we must strengthen the defense capability of the state of Cyprus.

C. We must conduct a decisive campaign for a further internationalization of the Cyprus problem at every international forum as well as through an appeal to the United Nations, at a suitable moment, should the intercommunal talks be wrecked as a result of the other side's intransigence.

D. We must more determinedly promote and insist upon the convocation of an international conference on the Cyprus issue within the framework and under the auspices of the United Nations for a settlement of the international aspect of the Cyprus issue.

E. We must make a real turn in our approach to our Turkish Cypriot fellow countrymen. Through a new rapprochement and the systematic cultivation of a suitable climate for restoration of mutual friendship, confidence and cooperation we must pull down the barriers erected between us by the imperialists and their agents. This will become a decisive contribution toward the solution of the Cyprus issue.

The government must play a more decisive role and it must adopt specific measures to promote and facilitate this new rapprochement, such as payment of pensions to eligible Turkish workers, reopening of Greek Cypriot businesses situated in the occupied areas and in the no-mans-land under UN supervision and employing Turkish Cypriots in them, etc.

F. To stabilize the cooperation achieved between our party and DIKO and to continue our efforts toward expanding and strengthening it through participation of other parties and patriotic, democratic forces.

Cooperation between AKEL-DIKO on the basis of the minimum program is our sure support of the struggle for the election in the next presidential election of the candidate supported by the cooperating parties, Spiros Kiprianou, and for blocking the road to the extreme rightwing forces of the Rally, preventing them from gaining authority. The severe outbreak of the reactionary circles and their satellites on the domestic front, in Greece and internationally, is firm proof and confirmation of the correctness of our decision for cooperation.

BUSINESS GROUP CRITICAL OF AKEL-DIKO PROGRAM

NC171035 Nicosia O AGON in Greek 17 May 82

[Text] President of the Republic Kiprianou stated he was seriously concerned over the differences which exist in Athens-Nicosia relations but he refused to say anything further on the issue. "This issue is at a very delicate phase and I can say no more," Kiprianou stated to a delegation of the Cyprus Chamber of Commerce and Industry, KEVE, in answer to KEVE's expression of concern over the Democratic Party, DIKO-AKEL minimum program on matters of economy.

The president received the delegation on Friday 14 May, and the meeting was on his own initiative. During the meeting KEVE pointed out to the president that the minimum program is contrary to the economic policy followed by the government to date. It warned him that investments would be stopped which could result in unemployment with great damage to the economy in consequence.

KEVE pointed out several points of the minimum program which, as it mentioned, are contrary to a free economy and its implementation could put a stop to investments, which are already at a low level.

ROLANDHIS CONDEMNS PLANNED ULUSU VISIT TO NORTH

NC171417 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1300 GMT 17 May 82

[Text] The Cyprus Government has strongly denounced the announced decision of the Turkish military regime that Turkish Prime Minister Ulusu will visit the occupied part of the Cyprus Republic. Instructions have already been given to Cyprus' permanent delegation at the United Nations to denounce this at UN headquarters and to circulate a document among the UN members.

In a statement on the Ulusu visit, Foreign Minister Rolandhis stresses that this visit represents a high-level political invasion in Cyrpus in addition to the military invasion. Mr Rolandhis adds: Through this action, the occupation power is violating repeated UN Security Council and General Assembly decisions on respecting the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of the Republic of Cyprus which the occupation power so brutally trampled underfoot through its invasion of Cyprus in 1974.

The foreign minister charges that, through this action, Turkey aims at giving legal entity to its occupation edifice by defying the verdict of the international community which disapproves of, and denounces, the recognition of a Turkish Cypriot federated state and recognizes only the lawful government of the republic and its sovereignty over the entire territory of the state of Cyprus.

Mr Rolandhis' statement further points out that the illegal and unacceptable visit by the Turkish prime minister constitutes an action that undermines the efforts for a solution of the problem and deals a blow to the developing process of the inter-Cypriot dialogue.

BRIEFS

ATATURKIST GROUP FORMED -- The Turkish Cypriot Ataturkist Leap Forward Association has been established. The founding members of the association met at the Saray Hotel in Lefkosa [Nicosia] to form the temporary administrative committee. Halil Fikret Alasya has been elected temporary leader of the association. [(Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 0415 GMT 15 May 82 TA]

TURK-SEN CONGRESS -- In an election held today in Lefkosa [Nicosia] Necati Taskin was reelected leader of the Turkish Cypriot Federation of Labor Unions [Turk-Sen]. The election took place at the 13th congress of Turk-Sen which ended today. There were no other candidates for the leadership post. [(Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 1930 GMT 15 May 82 TA]

NATO

COMMUNIQUE CALLS FOR 'AUTHENTIC DETENTE'

NC181245 Paris AFP in English 1235 GMT 18 May 82

[Text] Luxembourg, 18 May (AFP) -- A meeting of the 15 foreign ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization ended today with a call for "authentic detente," and a warning that Warsaw Pact countries must display "a sense of responsibility" in their deeds as well as in their words. The use of the word "detente" in a communique released after the end of the meeting was believed to be the first in an official NATO statement since Soviet troops intervened in Afghanistan in December 1979. It followed a day of intense bargaining for the use of the word by West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, according to another minister who attended the meeting.

The NATO ministers also:

--Repeated their support for Britain in the Falkland Islands crisis.
--Charged that continued "oppression" in Poland was "a violation of the United Nations Charter."
--Said that Soviet actions in Afghanistan were "unacceptable."
--Recognized that events outside the North Atlantic could affect NATO members' vital interest.
--Expressed satisfaction over Spain's upcoming entry into the alliance.
--Denounced "persistent violations of human rights stipulations in the 1975 Helsinki agreement on security cooperation in Europe, which was a basis for detente."

GREECE

PAPANDREOU MEETS IN ATHENS WITH NICARAGUAN LEADER

PA182155 Managua Domestic Service in Spanish 0000 GMT 18 May 82

[Text] Dr Sergio Ramirez Mercado, government junta member, met with Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou in Athens today. During this meeting in the Greek capital, Papandreou offered broad cooperation with Nicaragua to Ramirez Mercado. The two leaders met in Papandreou's residence in Kastri, on the outskirts of Athens. During the conversation, the Greek leader promised solid support to the struggle for independence, democracy and socialism being waged by the Nicaraguan Government and people.

The Nicaraguan delegation came to Athens on Saturday from Rome, Italy. The delegation had met previously with Karolos Papoulias, the Greek deputy minister of foreign affairs. According to news dispatches, it was decided at this meeting to establish full diplomatic relations between Greece and Nicaragua.

The visit by Dr Ramirez Mercado and his delegation to that East European [as heard] country falls within the framework of a Greek policy decision to establish closer ties with Central America. The Nicaraguan delegation's visit was preceded by visits of delegations from the Governments of Costa Rica and Honduras, in response to invitations from the Greek Panhellenic Socialist Movement, which is in power.

As is well known, the Nicaraguan leader is accompanied by Joaquin Cuadra Chamorro, minister of finance; Reynaldo Antonio Tefel Velez, president of the Nicaraguan Social Security and Welfare Institute; and Nora Astorga, deputy foreign minister, among others.

DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 099 21 May 1982

FRANCE

Cheysson Addresses Senate on Foreign Policy K 1
Changes in UK's EEC Membership Treaty Viewed K 6
Relations With Syria Possibly 'Normalizing' K 6
[LE MONDE 19 May]
Leftwing Parties Prepare for Commune Elections K 7
PCF Resolution [L'HUMANITE 12 May] K 7
PS Statement [LE MONDE 15 May] K 8
Mobile Land-Based Missiles To Replace Bombers K 9
[LE MONDE 16-17 May]

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Libya Wants To Pay Debts to Italy With Oil L 1
Jallud Meetings L 1
Trade Union Federation Calls Strike for 28 May L 1

NORDIC AFFAIRS

DENMARK

New Bill Will Test Government's Viability P 1
[BERLINGSKE TIDENDE 17 May]

UNITED KINGDOM

Troop Landings Begin as Negotiations Collapse Q 1
Negotiation Details Published Q 1
Thatcher Addresses Commons Q 3
MP's Vote Against Government Q 8
Vote Damages Labor Party Q 9
Pym Predicts Lightning Raids Q 9
Task Force Given Green Light Q 10
Argentine Troops Warned Q 11
LE MONDE Reports on Mitterrand's London Visit [19 May] Q 11
New Zealand Offers Use of Frigate for Task Force Q 12

CYPRUS

Ulusu Arrives; Airport Statements Reported [Bayrak Radio] R 1
Talks With Denktas, Cagatay R 2
Denktas Responds to Note [Bayrak Radio] R 3
Kiprianou Views Struggle for United Cyprus R 3

GREECE

Official Protests to Turkey on Ulusu Cyprus Trip S 1
Spokesman on Ulusu Remarks S 1
Canadian Governor General Leaves Athens 20 May S 1
Greece, Nicaragua To Establish Full Relations S 1
Papandreou To Visit Yugoslavia 26-28 May S 1

TURKEY

Second TCP Plenum Reviews Current Issues [Our Radio] T 1
Greek Protest on Ulusu Cyprus Visit Rejected T 2

CHEYSSON ADDRESSES SENATE ON FOREIGN POLICY

AB191708 Paris Diplomatic Information Service in French 1400 GMT 19 May 82

[Speech by French External Relations Minister Claude Cheysson in answer to questions in the Senate on 18 May]

[Excerpts] Mr President, I will not hide my embarrassment after these 10 speeches, considering their diversity. Some of them dealt in a very precise manner with no less precise topics while the others were more general in character. The last speech was an interesting judgement by a specialist on the so-called ambiguities of this government's foreign policy.

This policy was defined by the president of the republic and the government, which is responsible to the National Assembly. It has been explained to parliament and, of course, it commits all the members of the government. There is no clear line between foreign policy and internal policy. Where would it be anyway? Is energy a matter of foreign policy or of internal policy? This is also the case with European development and other matters. Therefore, our foreign policy is an expression of our needs and of our internal obligations. In this regard, I would like at once to recall the elements of our European policy because there is no doubt that for a country like France, its dimensions alone are sometimes not enough to express its ambitions or to find its resources and means of development. The European dimension must therefore be utilized according to our needs and aspirations to complement the French dimension. This becomes immediately obvious if we consider the political problems discussed by many of the speakers. Mr Machefer and Mr Matraja especially will agree that our weight considerably increases if in the Pacific or in Japan we can base arguments on Europe's dimension as well as its economic and political weight. This is also true of human rights when we talk about our relations with Eastern Europe.

Besides, this political dimension gave every value to the solidarity demonstrated by the president of the republic and the French Government in the early moments of Argentina's invasion of the Falkland Islands, an action of force which the Security Council has condemned in an enforceable decision. It is important that solidarity with the aggressed country should be total. I am not betraying any secret here by saying that France has been exemplary in this affair and in mobilizing all the European countries in support of Great Britain.

We must also use the European dimension in dealing with our economic problems. In this critical period and at the current level of unemployment, we must pool all resources to make progress possible whenever our men and workers are affected. This is why the joint agricultural policy remains one of the main elements of our external action. This policy is of interest to all agricultural workers who form an important sector of our economy. However, European policy cannot be confined to the joint agricultural policy. In Europe, there are other concerted joint actions which enable us to deal with current economic problems. Development of the European monetary system and industrial action in sectors where we need to act together, be it in the traditional sectors in which we must make our voice heard by all the other great industrial groups in the world in order to reconquer the community market which is sometimes too easily invaded or in the sector of advanced technology industries. In the absence of a market of the dimension of the European market and systematic European action, how could we promote scientific research and the very remarkable technological progress of our laboratories and research workers?

The European industrial space is part of our future as is the European social space because social progress must continue. It is more urgent and important than ever. This is one of the reasons why this government was voted into power by the French people. And this social progress must attain a sufficient dimension so that free competition will not obstruct or place too much burden on our economy. We will therefore continue on this path.

The Europe to which we are attached must not be a Europe of markets; it must not be a Europe of merchants. It is already the Europe of agriculturists. It must be the Europe of workers. Let us return to the community. To make progress, it must function and show itself. The Falkland Islands crisis has offered a unique opportunity. The joint agricultural policy must be pursued. New attempts must be made, but the promotion of this Europe entails a political will which has at its center -- as some people have pointed out -- the French-German entente which has never been as close as it is now and which has never before given rise to so many personal contacts and objective reasons for joint actions. This French-German entente must not be exclusive. This is why we have developed relations with Italy and Great Britain as well as with the less populated countries. Here also, personal contacts are necessary. It would be -- it was -- shocking that at the highest levels, relations assume a density corresponding to the dimension of the countries. I believe this is an element which sometimes embarrasses some of our neighbors and which must disappear.

Some people may say to us: "On Europe, you have the same policy as before." In fact, it is the same but you must have seen the differences through a few words I have spoken. Now we insist, more than ever before, on the Europe of workers which entails the search for industrial policies and a European space. More than ever before, we are insisting on realities. We are no longer talking about the creation of new structures, of new councils and of new European organizations. We want to tackle problems at their root. In Europe, France has at last found the firm voice that is necessary. It was not we who signed the May 1980 compromise on the reduction of the British budgetary contributions and we will not prolong it. There will be no new capitulation. There will be no new acceptance to introduce into the life of the community a principle which is not part of the Treaty of Rome, that is to give a community member state the right to automatic compensation in conformity with what is called the net balance.

Some people were surprised that right in the first days of this government -- what have I said? -- while the president of the republic had not yet assumed the position, he so clearly expressed his position on the issues of security and indicated where France stands when fundamental values are at stake. Where France stands is clear: It stands by the Atlantic alliance.

The sad events in Poland since 12 and 13 December have regrettably been a very clear illustration of the fundamental reasons for this orientation, which, though not designed by this government, is more emphasized than ever before. As Mr Claude Mont very rightly put it, France has particular ties with Poland which accounts for the profound emotion that burst forth in public opinion in France beginning in August 1980 on seeing the Poles again express their views and attempt to organize themselves into labor and other unions to regain some freedom of expression and movement. Then, in the night of 12 to 13 December came the announcement of suppression again, which is still continuing.

As Mr Mont said, this resulted from the fact that the established system was facing great difficulties in view of this human expression, this expression of freedom. That is what I stated on behalf of the French Government in the speech delivered at the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe held in Madrid on 12 February. Yes, we condemn what happened and we expect the promises made by General Jaruzelski 2 days after that sad December Sunday to be carried out; that is, we expect a political dialogue to be reestablished, the state of siege to be lifted and the detained to be freed.

We are complying with our previous commitments to Poland. We cannot go any further as long as -- and I repeat this -- General Jaruzelski's promise is not carried out. As a matter of fact, this is where we can see the difference between us and the concept of a society, such as it is, unfortunately on the other side.

This leads us to simple and clear positions in many other areas where some developments cause great distress in French public opinion: These are the occupation of Afghanistan -- rather the presence of foreign troops in that country -- and the occupation of Kampuchea. We find this particularly serious as it is a superpower that is involved.

Many years ago, the presence of American troops abroad was denounced in the Phnom-Penh speech. We shall not refrain from making the very same condemnation now. That causes difficulties in asserting our policy toward Eastern European countries with which we wish however to establish close ties.

Another difficulty in East-West relations is caused, of course, by the prodigious stockpiling of arms during the past years, particularly the arms that can reach only Europe: the so-called medium range conventional and nuclear weapons. We know their dangers and threats and we can also see their possible consequences on our alliance, and their effects on public opinion, which might yield to weariness and fear.

The response in this area lies in the construction of Europe -- this has already been said. It lies in particular in joint efforts to bring the balance of power down to its lowest possible level. Lastly, it lies in the restoration of trust. In this regard, the government hereby once again reaffirms its great hope for the first phase of the conference on disarmament in Europe to be eventually convened; that is for the resumption of the Madrid talks next fall to lead to this result -- as you remember, the talks follow those held in Helsinki.

But hopes and pressure must be brought to bear in the field of nuclear weapons in particular. In this field it is important that the Geneva negotiations on medium-range weapons achieve some progress and success. In this regard it is very interesting to note that some days ago, President Reagan proposed that negotiations on strategic nuclear weapons begin before 30 June. We wish for such negotiations, which are the appropriate framework for talks on medium range weapons. The negotiations -- I want to stress this -- are based on a proposal for a equal number of nuclear warheads on both sides, the number being lower than it is now. That is exactly the principle which inspires us, that is the search for a balance of power at the lowest level possible.

For progress to be made in these talks on armament, on nuclear weapons in particular, each side and each alliance needs some credibility. So, this implies the existence of the equipment now competing, unfortunately, at too high a level. This means that efforts aimed at arms limitation and balance of power imply continued efforts to boost defense to a level high enough for each party to really wish for progress in the negotiations. Of course this implies that France, too, which has chosen to maintain an independent defense policy and will continue it, should make its own efforts. You know that we are determined to do so.

Such efforts are fundamentally centered on deterrence. This is, in fact, our orientation. The prospective adversary must know with certainty that he is running a disproportionate risk compared with that he could gain from aggression.

As I have just observed, these different principles may imply some difficulty in the expression of our relations with Eastern European countries. Our political relations with the Soviet Union cannot become normal -- I repeat -- as long as the Soviet troops remain in Afghanistan. I assume that this kind of clear statement will remove all the ambiquity denounced a while ago by Mr Lecanuet.

On the other hand, we wish to maintain economic, technical and commercial ties with the Soviet Union, with all Eastern Eruope countries in our mutual interest and also to contribute, in this sphere, to relations which it is in everyone's interest to perpetuate.

Yes, everywhere there are violations we must denounce them. We must denounce recism and we have not failed to do so in words, which may seem ambiguous to some people but particularly clear to others compared with the words used before. We will never tire of condemning torture, and physical and moral oppression. We will never tire of intervening directly and indirectly every time we deem it necessary to do so.

Oh, this earns us many difficulties in our diplomatic relations with certain countries. But be it difficulty or ambiguity, we have chosen: We shall continue to intervene every time it is possible. Through nongovernmental organizations, you will find us every time human rights can and have to be asserted.

For the past few days a French warship has been patrolling in the international waters where so many of the so-called boat-people pass in search of refuge abroad.

The warship is not trying in any way to assault anyone, but it represents the French flag, the determination to secure the right of the refugees to free passage without falling immediately into the hands of the pirates. The example is only a few days old, similar examples will follow.

But we are not content with denouncing; when we can serve that right, we take commensurate risks. The embargo imposed against Argentina involves a commercial and economic risk; it even involves a political risk. As a matter of fact, it can cause misunderstanding with other Latin American countries. Yet, we maintain good ties with them. Meanwhile, I want to take this opportunity to reassure them of our condemnation of excesses in other regions, which makes us increase the number of our troops in the United Nation's force in south Lebanon. At the unanimous request of the Security Council, a new batallion will leave in the near future for that particularly difficult region in order to contribute to the implementation of the of the Security Council's decision. How many other examples of this attitude can I mention?

The assertion of the people's rights — therefore a right to self-determination, the full right of these people to shape their future, the right to express their desires and their right to adopt state structures. [sentence as received] Next, I would move on to the Middle East had I enough time and had I not noticed that none of the speeches paid particular attention to that issue.

Mr President, must one recall once more France's efforts to develop the Third World? Naturally, we have been giving priority to the countries with whom we are linked by old, specific relations or by treaties, that is: Francophone African countries, countries linked with the European Community by the Lome accords, Third World countries concerned by such and such a decision of the United Nations, the less advanced countries to whom the president of the republic himself has made precise commitments.

But, as you know, I am now dealing with my fourth priority. This effort at helping the Third World increases our own chances for revival and growth. In fact, you are aware of the extent to which our interests are linked in this sphere. Do not forget that in many cases we have joint economic interests. The economic and monetary disorder in the world does as much harm to them as it does to us.

With regard to the [word indistinct] of the raw material markets we are very isolated among the industrialized countries. However we will continue to assert that the present disorder is unacceptable and intolerable and that speculation on faraway markets fundamentally affects the lives of the weakest countries at the level of their export renevue and the cost of their main imports.

We are attempting a new experiment with Algeria. It is true that we need their natural gas immediately. That is part of our policy of diversification of energy resources. We are too dependent on oil and on our policy of geographical diversification in our purchases. We have signed the Soviet contract. We should balance this geographical source with others.

We therefore need Algerian gas, but giving a guarantee to that country, which has great development ambitions, for the resources it derives from this gas appears to us to constitute a highly valuable political demonstration.

What advantage do we give to Algeria? I have heard various percentages quoted in this hemicycle. In fact, as you are aware, there is no world price for gas. Japan buys all of its natural gas at a relatively higher price than we pay for Siberian gas.

With regard to the internal, legal implications, I am happy to confirm to parliament, through the Senate, that the budget proposals which will be presented to it in a few days' time will comprise, on the one hand, an article on the ratification of decrees on advances that have already been made and, on the other, an article fixing the price the government has to pay for the gas that will be delivered to France within the year 1982.

Finally, in the political sphere, in our relations with the Third World we can and we must find a confirmation of our policy of independence. We do not, in fact, intend to allow the quarrels existing in the South to degenerate into clashes between the East and West. Although we are totally committed to our allies in the Atlantic alliance when it comes to taking a stand between East and West, we feel free in our actions in the South. In this regard we systematically support policies which are truly nonaligned and I thank Mr Machefer for illustrating this fact in a way that the government wholeheartedly accepts.

This fact is now well known; for example, our relations with India, the possibilities which will be ours tomorrow in Southeast Asia and which the Association of Southeast Asian Nations recognizes and our prestige at the United Nations which no one, no parliamentarian who has been to New York these last few months, will contest.

It is true that this could lead to divergence with some of our allies, but the Atlantic alliance is not a bloc. It does not impose unity of behavior on its members. Apart from the construction of the defense system, which we still need at present, we have our independence.

Mr President, a lot remains to be said on the Pacific -- on which Mr Machefer opened new horizons -- about which we are thinking right now and where we should have a presence. The issue in itself deserves a debate all the more so because it is new for us, especially for the North Pacific.

And what should we say about Japan? Of course, our trip there enabled us to grasp current trade problems better, but the visit of the head of state -- the first visit made in history by a president of the French Republic to Japan -- made it further possible to see what links can be made between the problems facing the Japanese and the problems facing our own society. How can one pass through this world of advanced technology without it having an adverse effect on society and employment? The visit also enabled us to perceive matters of common interest between our two countries which suffer from lack of raw materials and which have markets which are too small and which, in order to express themselves independently, must often work together. This topic requires a long debate.

Mr President, this is the policy based on our internal needs that we express abroad. We do it clearly and simply. Very often we accuse the minister of foreign affairs -- and we are perhaps right in doing so -- of expressing our policy in a manner that is too abrupt, but we think that it is necessary to be clear in all circumstances.

This is the policy that we propose and for which parliament is responsible through the government. It is carried out through an alliance with our Atlantic partners, particularly the United States, through cooperation with our Third World partners, through a community with our European partners and in the search for peace.

Such are the four priorities that we have fixed for a policy which is independent because it is France's tradition and because it has an international calling, as independence does not signify equidistance between the powers but rather the connection between the various aspects of this policy, its intentions, its desires and the needs of the French people.

CHANGES IN UK'S EEC MEMBERSHIP TREATY VIEWED

AB201025 Paris AFP in English 1012 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] Niamey, 20 May (AFP) -- French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson said here today that a change in the terms of Britain's EEC membership might prove necessary to extricate the European Community from its latest crisis.

France was "ready to discuss" changes to Britain's membership treaty, he said during a two-day official visit to Niger by French President Francois Mitterrand.

Mr Cheysson said it was he who suggested to Mr Mitterrand that a speech he made in Algiers about Europe should include reference to "the nature" of Britain's membership of the Common Market.

In that speech, the French leader said: "The problem today after the Brussels decisions is not that of a majority or unanimity in the EEC Council of Ministers but that of the role Britain intends to play, and ultimately, depending on the answer to this question, that of Britain's presence or the nature of that presence in the community."

Mr Cheysson said that, to some extent, Britain already had a special status in the EEC, as it was not in the European Monetary System (EMS).

As to the budget problem, which was at the heart of the dispute between Britain and its nine partners, the system of "own resources" that formed the basis for EEC financing was not unique. He pointed to the European Coal and Steel Community (ECSC) whose resources were founded on different lines.

The French foreign minister declared that Britain "needs a big market" and that the United Kingdom would find it hard to withdraw from the community.

While not using the term "re-negotiation," he said he had "plenty of ideas" on the way British membership could be modified. On this occasion he kept them to himself.

In the immediate future, he said, the European court would no doubt be asked to hear the litigation between Britain and its partners. The matter could be submitted by Britain, the EEC Commission, the Council of Ministers or a member state, he said.

RELATIONS WITH SYRIA POSSIBLY 'NORMALIZING'

PM191513 Paris LE MONDE in French 19 May 82 p 3

["E.R." article: "Toward a 'Normalization' of French-Syrian Relations?"]

[Excerpt] The return of France's ambassador Henri Servant to his post in Syria could be the start of detente between the two countries. Mr Servant, who was recalled for consultations after the Rue Marbeuf outrage on 22 April, which was attributed to the Syrian special services, has resumed his normal duties, according to an authorized source.

This rather unusual "normality" may be the fruit of an implicit or explicit compromise. France rightly maintains that it has never officially accused Syria of being responsible for the assassination of Louis Delamare, its ambassador to Beirut, or for the Rue Marbeuf outrage. It has good grounds for saying this: The investigations carried out in the two cases produced no results.

Of course there is no smoke without fire but in the extraordinary interweaving of political organizations, special services and interests in the Near East, it is impossible to rule out, a priori, isolated initiatives, "blunders" and "provocations," well-informed circles indicate.

Nonetheless, when announcing the expulsion of two Syrian diplomats a few hours after the Rue Marbeuf outrage, Mr Gaston Defferre explained that the "guilty people" still had to be "exposed." Mr Claude Cheysson did not contradict the interior minister when he said the next day that the two diplomats were "not necessarily connected with that outrage." The chief commissioner of police subsequently stated that his services had not been warned that an attack was being planned on AL-WATAN AL-'ARABI, the pro-Iraqi Lebanese weekly published in Paris.

Mr Walid Abu Dhahr, the editor of that publication, has made an increasing number of statements over the past few days accusing the Syrian special services, among others, of planning new heinous crimes, which on Monday 17 May led the Quai d'Orsay to ask him to "show more moderation in the future."

Indeed the Paris government is determined to prevent France from becoming the battlefield for "inter-Arab warfare," in this case between Syria and Iraq. It is probably assurances given on this subject by all the Arab embassies in Paris -- including that of Damascus -- which are contributing to the "easing of tension" emerging from Mr Servant's return to Damascus.

At a more general level the French Government is aware of the fact that the deterioration in its relations with Syria will not be favorable to its relations with the Arab world which, whether willingly or unwillingly, takes great account of Mr Jafiz al-Asad's opinion. The Syrian head of state, who leads the only country which is "standing up to Israel," exerts undoubted influence. It was he who prompted the defeat of the "Fahd plan" for an Israeli-Arab settlement at the Fez "summit" last fall. That did not prevent Saudi Arabia from supporting it only last week against some states in the Gulf cooperation council which wanted to impose sanctions on Syria for the support it is giving to Iran.

It remains to be seen whether the Damascus government is prepared to give a positive response to the French Government's good will gestures.

LEFTWING PARTIES PREPARE FOR COMMUNE ELECTIONS

PCF Resolution

PM201257 Paris L'HUMANITE in French 12 May 82 p 3

[Apparent text of PCF Central Committee resolution adopted in Saclas on 11 May]

[Text] The PCF Central Committee adopted the following resolution yesterday:

The commune elections are drawing nearer. The Central Committee has taken note of the content of the first exchange of views which has taken place between the PS and the PCF on the voting system to be submitted to parliament for these elections.

The Central Committee recalls that the right has always sought and frequently imposed undemocratic electoral systems primarily to place the Communist electorate at a disadvantage. Our party has always fought for full respect for universal suffrage through proportional representation. The Central Committee reaffirms its attachment to that principle. The aim is to ensure the best method of exercising the representative democracy won by our people over the centuries, but respecting pluralism and French diversity in the fairest way.

One of the resistance's achievements was the establishment of a proportional representation system in the commune elections immediately after the liberation. The right rejected that voting system in the 1959 elections.

Now that it is in power the left can pave the way for a clear, honest and just voting system. Indeed, proportional representation enables the population to choose its representatives democratically. It ensures a fair and representative presence for all currents of thought. It guarantees the exercise of the minority's right to oppose, propose and monitor. That diversity, that wealth of ideas and contributions go hand in hand with efficiency and stability. The communes and the left itself are bound to benefit from this.

Today the right, which is stopping at nothing to thwart the new policy, wants to use the commune elections to hinder this policy and to prepare its reconquest of power and its revenge "from below." To that end, following the canton elections, it is planned to regroup and to put forward united lists. Thus it will attempt to capture communes from the left, even in very big cities, in order to subsequently use them as an "opposing power center."

This rightwing enterprise must be thwarted. To do that it is necessary to unite all the forces which refuse to allow the city halls to be turned into bases for action against the policy chosen by the majority of French people on 10 May 1981.

That is why the Central Committee advocates that the leftwing parties should present united lists for the commune elections in the framework of a voting system based on the principle of proportional representation.

Thus, in all the places where the left won in 1977, the elections will enable the inhabitants to confirm their previous choice by reelecting their commune councils with the mayor who led the union list to victory. Thus the communes won by the left in 1977 will be able to continue their administration in the service of the communes.

The adoption of such a stance by the leftwing parties would be in keeping with their pledges and in government and in many communes. It would create a unitary dynamism throughout the country. That would make it possible for the left to win new communes. And it would favor the forces of change. Democracy and union are crucial political questions. Thus the Central Committee expresses its intention to contribute to ensuring that the leftwing parties join together in these commune elections to fulfill the expectation and hope of the majority of French people.

In that spirit, a national conference will take the PCF's decision at the appropriate time.

[Dated] Saclas, 11 May 1982.

PS Statement

PM201301 Paris LE MONDE in French 15 May 82 p 10

[Text of statement adopted by PS National Secretariat on 13 May]

[Text] The text of the statement adopted by the PS leadership is as follows:

The 1983 commune elections will be an important opportunity for consolidating, expanding and implanting the left at local level.

The right, for its part, is planning a vast effort to try to curb the impetus of the forces of change in those elections, to limit the left's local influence and primarily that of the main majority party, the party which is the driving force behind this majority's policy, the PS.

The PS, however, will have one objective on that occasion: to consolidate one of the main bases of the policy of change by strengthening the left in the communes in which it controls the councils, by winning new city halls and by ensuring the left's presence in all city halls. It will act out of a concern to pursue and complete what was started in the 1977 election.

That is why the PS will implement in the 1983 commune elections the union policy which it has maintained in all circumstances, even the most difficult. The PS is the party of union, the party of the people's movement. It will ensure that the broadest possible unity is achieved in all communes on the basis of the union of leftwing parties in order to defeat the right, to defeat the adversaries of change.

The PS wants union lists to be drawn up for the first round since the present plan is to have a two-round election. Of course in drawing up those lists account will be taken of the nature of the local situation, the record of joint administrations and the results of the recent elections. In cases where it proves impossible to reach agreement on those bases, there will be separate lists in the first round on the understanding that union lists will be compiled in the second round on basis of the first round results in all areas.

The PS will play its role fully as the main force of change and unity. In each area, at the same time as seeking agreement between the two main leftwing parties (PS and PCF) the Socialists will approach the democratic groupings and organizations and prominent figures contributing to the policy of change in order to draw up lists based on a broad popular movement in the first and the second rounds.

MOBILE LAND-BASED MISSILES TO REPLACE BOMBERS

PM210847 Paris LE MONDE in French 16-17 May 82 p 13

[Text] The Mirage-IV aircaft will not be replaced as a carrier vehicle for strategic nuclear weapons and, in the next decade, a mobile strategic surface-to-surface missile will take over the nuclear bombing tasks entrusted to the Mirage-IV. This is disclosed by Defense Minister Charles Hernu in an interview with the specialized journal AVIATION MAGAZINE INTERNATIONAL dated Saturday, 15 May. Mr Hernu's remarks explain the decisions reached by the Defense Council at the Elysee Palace on 30 October 1981, when it approved the construction of a new model of strategic submarine, a new surface-to-surface mobile missile christened the SX and a tactical missile, the Hades, to replace the army's Pluton missile.

"The so-called SX mobile strategic surface-to-surface missile," the defense minister says, "should come into service at the beginning of the next decade, with a view to taking over from the piloted component of the strategic air forces," which at present consists of some 30 Mirage-IV nuclear bombers. "Recourse to a piloted component, which in the sixties made it possible to utilize a deterrent force very quickly, even before ballistic missiles are technically ready, has been rejected -- particularly for financial reasons." About half of the Mirage-IV's still in service will, however, remain so until the next decade, to deliver the ASMP (medium-range air-to-surface) nuclear missile.

With regard to the enhanced radiation weapon, otherwise known as the neutron bomb, Mr Hernu tells AVIATION MAGAZINE INTERNATIONAL that "thorough research is taking place into the radiation weapon, but no go-ahead has been given for its production." With regard to its actual effects in the field, the defense minister adds that "the enhanced radiation weapon could be used very close to the front line, where tanks are most heavily concentrated and easiest to locate. It makes it possible to use a much more extensive potential zone of fire, since human restrictions are less with regard to civilian populations.

Mr Hernu points out, however, that "on the other hand, there is the risk of the neutron weapon thus becoming a battlefield weapon," while France's principle is that "tactical nuclear weapons enable the president of the republic to issue a final warning to an aggressor threatening the national territory."

LIBYA WANTS TO PAY DEBTS TO ITALY WITH OIL

NC201136 Paris AFP in English 1119 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] Rome, 19 May (AFP) -- Libyan debts to Italy, a cause of growing economic friction between the two countries, was the subject of talks between Libyan Major 'Abd as-Salam Jallud and Italian leaders, it was reported here today. Maj Jallud, who is Libya's second-ranking official after Co'onel al-Qadhdhafi, held alengthy meeting yesterday with Italian Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini.

Despite estimated currency reserves of seven to eight thousand million dollars, Tripoli has not paid bills for work done by 50 Italian firms in Libya. The firms have formed a group to pressure the Libyan Government to pay debts of moe than 1,500 thousand million lire (about $1.15 million). Only about one-tenth of this money is covered by insurance, a reliable source said.

The large size of Maj Jallud's delegation -- which included Foreign Liaison Minister 'Abd al-'Ati al-'Ubaydi and Heavy Industry Minister 'Umar al-Muntasir -- appeared to show Tripoli's concern over the deteriorating relations between the two countries, analysts said. Libyan non-payment has caused serious problems both for large firms such as Fiat Industrial Vehicles and Pirelli Cables, and for medium-sized businesses. Some furniture-manufacturing firms in Pescare, Italy, are seriously threatened by the Libyan failure to pay for orders.

Meanwhile, the Italian Government was growing concerned over the potential for a fall in its trade surplus with Libya, as Italians understandably have become reluctant to deal with the country. Libyan officials have increased pressure for Italy to allow payment with oil. This solution would be acceptable to Italy if the oil is rated at the price of Libyan crude, sources said. Observers said Tripoli might be willing to accept a price for its oil from 50 cents to $1.20 below the going international rate for a barrel of crude. But while the two countries agreed last January to resume oil deliveries after a year's half, they have not made progress on agreeing on a price. In 1980, Libya was the second-largest supplier of crude oil to Italy, with 13 million tons sold.

Jallud Meetings

LD201030 Tripoli JANA in English 0935 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] Rome, 20 May (JANA) -- Staff Major 'Abd as-Salam Jallud last night received at his temporary residence in Rome the secretary general of the Italian Communist Party. It is worth mentioning that the Italian Communist Party is the second largest force in Italy where it has 32 percent of the voters which gives it an effective role in the Italian political life. Staff Major 'Abd as-Salam Ahmad Jallud currently visiting Italy yesterday met with the Italian Foreign Minister Mr Emilio Colombo.

TRADE UNION FEDERATION CALLS STRIKE FOR 28 MAY

AU201406 Rome ANSA in English 0805 GMT 20 May 82

[Excerpts] Rome, 20 May (ANSA) -- A four-hour nationwide walkout in industry and a four-hour general strike in the South have been put on the calendar for May 28 by the big-three trade union federation, the CGIL-CISL-UIL, to put teeth in a series of labor demands centering on a resumption of bargaining for national contracts covering some six million workers. The "Day of Struggle and Demonstration" was agreed to by the federation in the first unanimous vote cast by the leaders of the three groupings in a number of years.

A giant demonstration in Rome to back labor demands for new jobs and the protection of existing jobs in the depressed South was announced for mid-June when workers and masses of people on the unemployment rolls will converge on the capital.

DENMARK

NEW BILL WILL TEST GOVERNMENT'S VIABILITY

PM201455 Copenhagen BERLINGSKE TIDENDE in Danish 17 May 82 p 1

[Solveig Rodsgaard and Lisbeth Kundsen report]

[Excerpt] Prime Minister Anker Jorgensen has totally rejected the proposal that he should abandon cooperation with the Socialist People's Party [SF] in favor of an offer of a broad political agreement with the nonsocialist parties. This was made clear to Conservative Party leader Poul Schulter when he visited the prime minister's office for negotiations yesterday. In return the prime minister was clearly informed that he cannot count on the nonsocialist parties as a safety net, if the SF and the Radical Liberals are unwilling to vote for all the government's proposals.

Today there will be hectic negotiations at the prime minister's office and at various other ministries to draw up an overall picture of the propositions for which the government can count on a majority when they are laid before the Folketing on Wednesday [19 May]. In the course of the afternoon the government will have meetings with representatives of the Liberals, Center-Democrats and the Christian People's Party, and this evening there will be further discussions with the SF and the Radical Liberals. There is much to indicate that a clear picture of the Social Democratic minority government's survival prospects can only be expected after the first reading of the government's proposed legislation next Monday.

At his meeting with the Conservatives yesterday Prime Minister Jorgensen had been counting on winning support for the proposals in the March package for employment initiatives which are causing such problems in his negotiations with the SF. But because of the prime minister's refusal to abandon the SF as a cooperation partner in favor of the Conservatives, Poul Schulter said after the meeting:

"If the government gets into difficulties with one of the proposals in the March package and a proper cooperation agreement has not been worked out with the nonsocialist parties, it will not be we who save the government from falling. As long as the government chooses to work with the SF, we want a different government," he said. In a commentary Liberal Henning Christophersen told BERLINGSKE TIDENDE:

"Although I am not surprised by what has happened, I am nevertheless happy that the four nonsocialist parties have succeeded in sticking together in the present situation. It is clear that the Liberals are not prepared to go it alone but will keep in contact with the other nonsocialist parties." Last night the Conservative leader briefed the four nonsocialist parties on his meeting at the prime minister's office.

SF Chairman Gert Petersen said of the meeting between the government and the Conservatives: "The negotiations between the Social Democrats and the Conservatives have been without significance. If they did have any, it was that the government learned the useful lesson that there is no basis for an agreement with the Conservatives. This can only benefit its negotiations with us."

TROOP LANDINGS BEGIN AS NEGOTIATIONS COLLAPSE

LD211118 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1110 GMT 21 May 82

[text] A Royal Navy helicopter ditched in the South Atlantic today killing 21 British soldiers during a night of dramatic action off the Falklands. The Defence Ministry in London announced that a number of raiding parties from the task force landed on the islands during the night.

The raids are still continuing and early indications are that they are achieving their objectives. While the landings went on, war ships from the task force bombarded the islands around the capital Port Stanley as well as other areas.

The helicopter, a Sea King, ditched while troops were being transferred ready for an assault on the Falklands. Defence Ministry Spokesman Ian McDonald told a news conference that 30 men were on board when the accident happened.

He said: "Nine of those on board were rescued. One dead body was recovered. Twenty are missing presumed dead. The next of kin have been informed."

Mr McDonald also revealed that Harrier jets from the task force attacked the Fox Bay area of West Falkland during the night.

Mr McDonald said in a statement: "The task force has landed a number of raiding parties on the Falkland Islands during the night. These raids are still in progress. Early indications are that they are achieving their objectives."

"Bombardment from ships in the task force continued in the vicinity of Port Stanley and other areas in East Falkland. Harriers from the task force have mounted attacks in the Fox Bay area.

"All these activities have been directed against Argentine military targets including fuel and ammunition dumps and military stores."

The dramatic increase in military activity comes seven weeks to the day after Argentine troops invaded the Falklands. After weeks of diplomatic activity, the peace hopes finally faded last night, and government ministers warned the country that fighting was imminent.

One Whitehall source had said, "The military screw is being tightened quite quickly now."

The helicopter is the seventh the task force has lost since it set sail for the South Atlantic. Five Sea Kings and two Wessex helicopters have now ditched or crashed. The accidents are thought to have been caused mainly by technical faults caused by continuous flying in bad weather.

Negotiation Details Published

LD201330 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1321 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] Britain today published a detailed account of the diplomatic negotiations, up to last night, to try to find a peaceful solution to the Falklands crisis. Their publication is being taken as an indication that the government now considers these negotiations at an end.

And although Whitehall's reaction to the dramatic overnight intervention of UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar with his own peace proposals is not known, there is deep gloom this afternoon about the prospects of avoiding war.

The Foreign Office made it clear this afternoon that the government was still considering the "new ideas" put forward by the secretary general. Chief Foreign Office Spokesman Nicholas Fenn said: "This Argentine response means the rejection of our proposals... It is clear that the Argentine Government are not serious about continuing the negotiations."

He made it clear that Mr de Cuellar's ideas were separate from the publication of the British negotiation position and the Argentine reply. The text issued by Whitehall runs to 12 lengthy paragraphs, plus two annexes. It was agreed by the cabinet at Downing Street this morning.

It puts the blame for the crisis and for the failure to reach a peaceful settlement firmly on the Argentinans. The negotiations are summed up by the British Government in the 12th and last paragraph: "The present crisis was brought about by Argentina's unlawful act of aggression. In their subsequent attitude the Argentine Government showed that they had no respect either for democratic principles or for the rule of law. Britain stands firmly for both."

The papers also reveal a hitherto undisclosed sticking point with Britain -- Argentina's insistence that any deal should also cover South Georgia and other dependencies which have already been retaken by British forces.

Publication of the papers came just 90 minutes before Mrs Thatcher opened the sixth emergency debate in the Commons on the crisis with what is expected to be a major statement of the government's present intentions.

The papers set out a historical review of the peace moves since the beginning of the crisis, and says: "...It became increasingly clear that Argentina was not seeking an agreement but was playing for time in the negotiations in the hope of holding on to the fruits of aggression with all that this would imply for the international rule of law."

The text sets out Britain's negotiating stand, which is now well known. "Throughout the negotiations Britain, while being firm on the essential principles, has been willing to negotiate on matters where these principles were not breached."

Five points are listed on which Britain was willing to be flexible, even though this would have brought more advantage to Argentina than this country. In contrast, the papers say: "Argentina's final position in the negotiations speaks for itself."

They add that the other sticking points, in addition to the inclusion of the dependencies, were: Argentina wanted 30 days to complete the withdrawal of forces and for all forces to return to their normal bases, "thus requiring British forces to be enormously further away than Argentine ones."

Argentina insisted the UN should be exclusively responsible for the administration of the islands with observers from the two countries, and the administration to be free to appoint advisers in equal numbers from the Argentine and British populations of the Falklands. At the same time the Argentine flag would have been flown along with the British and UN flags.

Argentina insisted on free access for her nationals to the islands. "It was evident that Argentina hoped to change the nature of Falklands society" and its population make-up in the interim period and thus pre-judge the future outcome.

Argentina would not accept a provision stating that the outcome of negotiations would not be pre-judged. Argentine leaders continued in public to say that Argentina insisted on having sovereignty.

The text also revealed that Britain proposed that Argentina should withdraw its forces from the islands within 14 days, whereas Argentina wanted 30 days for the completion of withdrawal.

Whitehall said there was no doubt about British sovereignty, but successive British Governments had been willing without prejudice to include the question in negotiations with Argentina and new negotiations could discuss it.

Britain was ready to set a target date of December 31 this year for the completion of negotiations. Britain proposed that after withdrawal, the Falkland Islanders would be represented by legislative and executive councils, and be consulted by the UN interim administrator.

She was ready to agree that one representative from the Argentine population of the islands -- some 30 out of 1,800 people -- should be added to each of the councils. Britain was also willing to accept the presence of three Argentine observers on the islands in the interim period.

The papers also revealed that Argentina wanted not only free access for her nationals to live and work in the islands, but to buy property there. This was resisted by Britain, according to a spokesman, on the grounds that the islands would be swamped by Argentinians.

Thatcher Addresses Commons

LD201554 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1537 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] Even if the United Nations secretary general's eleventh hour peace "formulations and suggestions" were acceptable to Britain and Argentina, negotiations would take many days if not weeks, to reach either success or failure, the prime minister told the Commons today.

Opening the sixth Falkland Islands crisis debate, she said that although Britain is contacting New York for clarification of Senior Perez de Cuellar's aide memoire, "I believe that if we had a dozen more negotiations, the tactics and the results would be the same."

The prime minister said it was "inconceivable" that Argentina would now come genuinely to accept proposals of the secretary general which closely resembled Britain's own final peace plan. Mrs Thatcher told a packed, attentive house: "Argentina began this crisis. Argentina has rejected proposal after proposal.

"One is bound to ask whether the junta have ever intended to seek a peaceful settlement or whether they have sought merely to confuse and prolong the negotiations while remaining in illegal possession of the islands."

Of the UN secretary general's proposals, she said he had put to Britain and to Argentina "an aide memoire describing those issues where, in his opinion, agreement seems to exist and those on which differences remain." Mrs Thatcher explained: "The first group of issues -- those where he believes there is a measure of agreement -- will require further clarification in New York for, on some points, our interpretation would be different.

"The aide memoire states, for example, that Argentina would accept long-term negotiations without prejudgment of the outcome. The prime minster said: "This important phrase was, however, omitted from the Argentine response to our own proposals and is belied by a succession of statements from Buenos Aires.

"Those points where, in the secretary general's judgment, differences remain include: Aspects of the interim administration; the timetable for completion of negotiations and related duration of the interim administration; aspects of the mutual withdrawal of forces; the geographic area to be covered."

Mrs Thatcher: "Senor Perez de Cuellar has proposed formulations to cover some of these points. The secretary general, to whose efforts I pay tribute, has a duty to continue to seek agreement.

"But as our representative is telling him in New York, his paper differs in certain important respects from our position as presented to him on May 17 and which we then described as the furthest we could go. Moreover, it differs fundamentally from the present Argentine position as communicated to us yesterday.

"It is not a draft agreement but as the secretary general himself puts it, a number of formulations and suggestions. Some of his suggestions are the very ones which have already been rejected by the Argentine response to our own proposals.

"Even if they were acceptable to both parties as a basis for negotiation, that negotiation would take many days if not weeks to reach either success or failure. We have been through this often before and each time have been met with Argentine obduracy and procrastination."

"Argentina rejected our proposals -- it is inconceivable that they would now come genuinely to accept those of the secretary general's ideas which closely resemble our own. Even if we were prepared to negotiate on the basis of the aide memoire we should first wish to see substantive Argentine comments on it, going beyond mere acceptance of it as a basis for negotiation. These are the points we are making in our reply to the secretary general.

"At the same time we are reminding him .... The negotiations do not close any military options. The gravity of the situation will be apparent to the House and the nation.

"Difficult days lie ahead, but Britain will face them in the conviction that our cause is just, and in the knowledge that we have been doing everything reasonable to secure a negotiated settlement. The principles we are defending are fundamental to everything that this Parliament and this country stand for. They are the principles of democracy and the rule of law."

The prime minister told MP's: "Argentina invaded the Falkland Islands in violation of the rights of peoples to determine by whom and in what way they are governed. Its aggression was committed against a people who are used to enjoying full human rights and freedom. It was executed by a government with a notorious record in suspending and violating those same rights.

"Britain has the responsibility towards the islanders to restore their democratic way of life. She has a duty to the whole world to show that aggression will not succeed and to uphold the cause of freedom."

Earlier in her speech Mrs Thatcher said: "During the past 24 hours, the crisis over the Falkland Islands has moved into a new and even more serious phase." Proposals handed by Britain's ambassador to the United Nations, Sir Anthony Parsons, to the Secretary General on Monday for a peaceful settlement "represented the limit to which the government believed it was right to go."

"We made it clear to Senor Perez de Cuellar that we expected the Argentine Government to give us a very rapid response to them." The first indication of the Argentine reaction on Wednesday morning was not encouraging, Mrs Thatcher said.

"By the evening we received their full response in writing. It was, in effect, a total rejection of the British proposals. Indeed, in many respects the Argentinian reply went back to their position when they rejected Mr Haig's second set of proposals on April 29.

"It retracted virtually all the movement their representative had shown during the secretary general's efforts to find a negotiated settlement. The implications of the Argentinian response are of the utmost gravity."

This was why the government had decided to publish immediately the proposals Britain had put to Senor Perez de Cuellar. The government believes that they represented a truly responsible effort to find a peaceful solution which both preserved the fundamental principles of our position and offered the opportunity to stop further loss of life in the South Atlantic.

"We have reached this very serious situation because the Argentines clearly decided at the outset of the negotiations that they would cling to the spoils of invasion and occupation by thwarting at every turn all the attempts that have been made to solve the conflict by peaceful means.

"Ever since April 2 they have responded to the efforts to find a negotiated solution with obduracy and delay, deception and bad faith."

Outlining the history of the negotiations Mrs Thatcher referred to proposals originally advanced by President Belaunde of Peru and modified in consultations between him and Mr Haig, the U.S. secretary of state. "Britain was willing to accept these, the fifth set of proposals for an interim settlement. They could have led to an almost immediate cease-fire," said Mrs Thatcher.

"But again it was Argentina who rejected them. I shall not take up the time of the House with a detailed description of these earlier proposals, partly because they belong to those who devised them but, more importantly, because they are no longer on the negotiating table.

"Britain is not now committed to them," Mrs Thatcher said.

Turning to UN negotiations Mrs Thatcher said that on Monday Sir Anthony Parsons had presented to the secretary general a draft interim agreement between Britain and Argentina which set out the British positions in full.

"We made clear that the text represented the furthest that Britain could go in the negotiations. He requested that the draft should be transmitted to the Argentine representative and that he should be asked to convey his government's response within two days.

"Yesterday we received the Argentine Government's reply. It amounted to a rejection of our own proposals, and we have so informed the secretary general," Mrs Thatcher said. "This morning we have recieved proposals from the secretary general himself.

"I deal first with our own proposals. These preserve the fundamental principles which are the basis of the government's position:

-- "Aggression must not be allowed to succeed.

-- "International law must be upheld.

-- "Sovereignty cannot be changed by invasion.

-- "The liberty of the Falkland Islanders must be restored."

The prime minister added: "For years they have been free to express their own wishes about how they want to be governed. They have had institutions of their own choosing. They have enjoyed self-determination. Why should they lose that freedom and exchange it for dictatorship?"

The British proposals were contained in two documents. "First and mainly, there is a draft interim agreement between ourselves and Argentina.

"Second, a letter to the secretary general which makes it clear that the British Government does not regard the draft interim agreement as covering the dependencies of South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands."

On the dependencies, the prime minister said: "South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands are geographically distant from the Falkland Islands themselves.

"They have no settled population. British title to them does not derive from the Falkland Islands but is separate. These territories have been treated as dependencies of the Falkland Islands only for reasons of administrative convenience. That is why they are outside the draft agreement."

On the main features of the draft agreement Mrs Thatcher said: "Article two provides for the cessation of hostilities and the withdrawal of Argentine and British forces from the islands and their surrounding waters within 14 days.

"At the end of the withdrawal British ships would be at least 150 nautical miles from the islands. Withdrawal much beyond this would not have been reasonable because the proximity of the Argentinian mainland would have given their forces undue advantage."

Mrs Thatcher continued: "Withdrawal of the Argentinian forces would be the most immediate and explicit sign that their government's aggression had failed and that they were being made to give up what they had gained by force. It is the essential beginning of a peaceful settlement and the imperative of Resolution 502.

"Article six sets out the interim arrangements under which the islands would be administered in the period between the cessation of hostilities and the conclusion of negotiations on the long-term future of the islands.

"In this interim period there would be a United Nations administrator, appointed by the secretary general and acceptable to Britain and the Argentine. He would be the office administering the government. Under clause three of this article he would exercise his powers in conformity with the laws and practices traditionally obtaining in the islands.

"He would consult the island's representative institutions: that is the legislative and executive councils through which the islanders were governed until April 2," Mrs Thatcher said.

"There would be an addition to each of the two councils of one representative of the 20 or 30 Argentines normally resident in the islands. These representatives would be nominated by the administrator."

The clause had been carefully drawn so that the interim administration could not make changes in the law and customs of the islanders that would pre-judge the outcome of the negotiations of a long-term settlement.

"This provision would not only go a long way to giving back to the Falklanders the way of life they have always enjoyed but would prevent an influx of Argentine settlers in the interim period whose residence would change the nature of society there and radically affect the future of the islands.

"That would not have been a true interim administration. It would have been an instrument of change."

Clause three of the British draft agreement fully safeguarded the future of the islands and nothing in the interim administration would compromise the eventual status of the Falklands or the freedom they had enjoyed for so long.

Mrs Thatcher said that article six would require the administrator to verify the withdrawal of all forces from the islands and to prevent their reintroduction.

"We think it is likely that he would need to call upon the help of three or four countries other than ourselves and the Argentine to provide him with the necessary equipment and a small, but effective force." The purpose of this was to guard against any future Argentine invasion.

Articles eight and nine dealt with negotiations between Britain and Argentina on the long-term future of the islands. "The key sentence is the one which reads: 'These negotiations shall be initiated without prejudice to the rights, claims and positions of the parties and without prejudgment of the outcome,'" Mrs Thatcher said.

"We should thus be free to take fully into account the wishes of the islanders themselves, and Argentina would not be able to claim that the negotiations had to end with a conclusion that suited her," Mrs Thacher said.

Mrs Thatcher was challenged by Mr Alex Lyon (Lab York) who said: "If the rights and claims of the Argentines are being considered then the outcome of the negotiations may well be that we would cede sovereignty to Argentina."

But the prime minister insisted: "I have said that we do not prejudge the outcome. If the wishes of the islanders were to go to Argentina I believe that this country would uphold their wishes.

"But I doubt very much indeed whether the wishes of the islanders, after their experience, would be anything near that. Indeed, I believe they would recoil from it."

Mrs Thatcher said it had to be recognised that the negotiations might be lengthy, which was why there was another provision that until the final agreement had been reached and implemented, the interim agreement would remain in force.

Although the interim agreement did not restore things fully to what they were before the Argentinian invasion, it was faithful to the fundamental principles.

"Had the Argentines accepted our proposals, we should have achieved the great prize of preventing further loss of life," Mrs Thatcher said. "It was with this in mind we were prepared to make practical changes that were reasonable. But we were not prepared to compromise on principle."

Turning to the Argentine response, Mrs Thatcher said: "This revived once again all the points which had been obstacles in earlier negotiations. Their draft interim agreement applied not only to the Falklands but included South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands as well.

"They demanded that all forces should withdraw, including our forces on South Georgia, and return to their normal bases and areas of operation. This was plainly calculated to put us at an enormous disadvantage," Mrs Thatcher said.

"They required that the interim administration should be the exclusive responsibility of the United Nations which should take over all executive, legislative, judicial and security functions in the islands.

"They rejected any role for the islands' democratic institutions. They envisaged that the interim administration would appoint as advisers equal numbers of British and Argentine residents of the Islands, despite their huge disparity.

"They required freedom of movement and quality of access with regard to residence, work and property for Argentine nationals on an equal basis with the Falkland Islanders.

"The junta's clear aim was to flood the islands with their own nationals during the interim period, and thereby change the nature of Falklands society and so prejudge the future of the islands."

On negotiations for a long-term settlement, Mrs Thatcher said that while pretending not to prejudice the outcome, Argentine had stipulated that the object was to comply not only with the Charter of the United Nations, but with various resolutions of the Geneal Assembly, from some of which Britain dissented on the grounds that they favoured Argentine sovereignty.

"And if the period provided for the completion of the negotiation expired, they demanded that the General Assembly should determine the lines to which final agreement should conform.

"It was manifestly impossible for Britain to accept such demands." Mrs Thatcher said: "From the course of these negotiations and Argentina's persistent refusal to accept Resolution 502, we are bound to conclude that her objective is procrastination and continuing occupation leading eventually to sovereignty."

As MP's listened in silence to Mrs Thatcher, Sir John Biggs-Davison (C Epping Forest) intervened to ask if the proposals she was outlining were, like some earlier proposals, no longer on the table.

Mrs Thatcher told him: "These proposals have been rejected. They are no longer on the table." Replying to earlier interventions from Labour MP's, she said: "We really cannot go on and on. Someone has to make a decision and an assessement of the objectives of the Argentine junta."

And she told MP's: "The Argentinians do not want a negotiated settlement. They want sovereignty of the islands, and are using protracted negotiations in order to secure that objective. I do not believe they are genuine in their negotiations."

MP's Vote Against Government

LD202144 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2137 GMT 20 May 82

[Excerpts] Thirty-three Labor MP's tonight defied party leader Mr Michael Foot and voted against the government at the end of the crucial sixth Commons debate on the Falklands.

It was the first time since the Argentine invasion that such a vote had been forced in any of the emergency sessions and was in the teeth of a warning from an angry Mr Foot -- speaking at a private meeting of the Parliamentary Labour Party -- that such a vote would be misrepresented as a "stab in the back for those who have been sent into battle."

Voting was 296 to 33 on a procedural motion to close the debate. The rift came also despite a final assurance from the foreign secretary, Mr Francis Pym: "There is no question of the government having turned its back on the idea of a negotiated settlement."

Shadow Foreign Secretary Mr Denis Healey summed up the official opposition view that "the intrasigence of the Argentinians...has inevitably shifted the balance between diplomatic and military action in the next phase of handling this dispute. But both are still required."

Mr. Foot said the prime minister and the foreign secretary should go to the UN tonight to discuss the situation. "What you need do is to gain support in the UN organization, to sustain the secretary general in the propositions he has put to the British Government," he told Mrs Thatcher.

After the Argentine invasion, he said, there had been a sense of moral outrage about what had occurred. "However, we are concerned not only about the rights of the Falkland Islanders but also their lives."

For the Social Democrats, Dr David Owen said the prime minister had made a "very brave speech." No one could be in any doubt that the government had made a "very serious attempt to seek a negotiated settlement."

Labour leftwinger Mr Tony Benn (Briston SE), who later voted against the government, called for an immediate unconditional cease-fire and for a UN administrator on the Falklands. Sanctions must be stepped up and the fleet brought home. His speech was attacked later by former Labour Prime Minister Mr James Callaghan, who told Labour MP's that Mr Benn was doing what he had done since the last general election -- to challenge the party leadership.

Vote Damages Labor Party

LD202214 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2155 GMT 20 May 82

[By Chris Moncrieff, PA chief political correspondent]

[Text] Three shadow ministers who voted against the government over the Falkland Islands in the Commons tonight face almost certain dismissal from the opposition front bench.

Mr Michael Foot, the opposition leader, had earlier told a private meeting of Labour MP's that a vote would be interpreted in the country at large as "a stab in the back" for the task force.

Now Mr Foot can hardly be seen not to discipline those who have defied him and who have taken part in a division which has probably had a more damaging effect on the Labour Party than any other parliamentary event for decades.

The front-bench rebels were Mr Tam Dalyell (West Lothian), spokesman on science; Mr Andrew Faulds (Warley East), the shadow arts minister; and Mr John Tilley (Lambeth Central), a home affairs spokesman.

Mr Michael Foot is a deeply disappointed man tonight that some of his shadow team have defied his leadership and scorned his advice. All the signs are that the three recalcitrants will be wheeled into Mr Foot's office tomorrow and told brusquely that their front-bench services are no longer required.

If Mr Foot does not act swiftly and firmly, his authority as the party leader will be seriously and damagingly undermined. Scores of Labour MP's, repelled by the idea of dividing the Commons when the fleet is at sea and probably poised for an invasion, will be furious if Mr Foot does not sweep them out.

Pym Predicts Lightning Raids

LD210718 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0710 GMT 21 May 82

[By Andy Webb, PA political staff]

[Text] The war of attrition against Argentina will be stepped up with more lightning raids on the occupied Falkland Islands, Foreign Secretary Mr Francis Pym predicted today. But he insisted that the door to a negotiated settlement to end the crisis will be kept open.

Mr Pym was speaking on BBC Radio Four's "Today" programme following the announcement by UN Secretary General Mr Javier Perez de Cuellar that his attempt to find a peaceful settlement had broken down.

Mr Pym said: "The position is that in the absence of a peaceful settlement the military pressure will continue to build up and attrition against Argentina will continue. Our strategy all along has been to put on the squeeze and increase it."

Mr Pym did not rule out a direct invasion of the islands but said: "How he deals with his forces is a matter for the commander-in-chief. I would expect a series of raids rather like we saw on Pebble Island the other day and others we have heard of in recent days.

"I imagine there will be an increase in that sort of activity, but the actual decision remains with the commander-in-chief."

Mr Pym denied a suggestion that all diplomatic efforts to resolve the conflict had ended. "We know that the secretary general has concluded his attempts and that's unfortunate, but possibly right.

"We remain open all the time to further possible negotations. It may be that Argentina will change her mind. The door must always be open for that. At the end of the day whatever happens there must be a negotiated settlement of some kind. We hope it comes sooner -- but that does not look very likely. "

Mr Pym said Britain had been prepared to be flexible to achieve a peaceful settlement. "We are always open to suggestions. But what is necessary is for the Argentines to change their mind.

"They invaded the islands. They have no right to be there. They are under an obligation from the United Nations to go. They show no sign of it. All they have to do is adhere to the terms of UN Resolution 502 and get off the islands, then peace can break out again."

Mr Pym insisted that there was still a broad measure of support for the government's strategy in the House of Commons, despite last night's vote in which 33 MP's went into the lobbies against the government.

Task Force Given Green Light

LD201728 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1559 GMT 20 May 82

[By Robert Hutchinson, PA defence correspondent]

[Text] Task force commander Sandy Woodward has been given the go-ahead for a series of landings and hit-and-run raids on the Falklands, informed Whitehall sources said tonight. They ruled out a single "D-Day type" invasion but predicted a war of attrition -- forcing the 9,000 Argentine defenders into early surrender with minimum casualties.

Admiral Woodward must achieve repossession quickly and the British grip on the islands will now be tightened "quite steeply and quite quickly" it was being said tonight.

Over the past few days military pressure has kept pace with political and diplomatic moves. But now the government sees hopes of an immediate peaceful solution as quite dead, the sources stressed.

Defense chiefs hope that an all-out battle will not be necessary, and believe that picking off isolated and demoralised garrisons may be the best way of winning back the Falklands. But the 1,500 Argentine troops in West Falkland already suffering poor food supplies and services may be left to "stew in their own juice."

The limited British landings will be defended by surface-to-air Rapier missiles and light armoured vehicles like Scorpion tanks. More hit-and-run raids on supply dumps, like that mounted on Pebble Island last weekend will also be mounted.

The sources said Admiral Woodward now has a wider range of options than at any time, and the power to exercise them. But attacks on mainland Argentine air bases have been so far ruled out as there is no basic military need.

The report of seven SAS men arrested near the Rio Gallegos Airbase on the mainland has been acknowledged as untrue by the Argentines, but it is being seen as a warning to Britain not to try such a move.

Argentine Troops Warned

PY201652 Paris AFP in Spanish 1612 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] London, 20 May (AFP) -- The Argentine garrison on the Malvinas was warned early this morning by the British Defense Ministry's radio station that an invasion could take place within the next few hours.

The Defense Ministry's spokesman, Ian McDonald, indicated that the report came from several sources, British press and television among them.

The radio station, Radio Atlantico del Sur, which started broadcasting programs yesterday for the Argentine troops on the Malvinas, described the elite troops of the Special Air Service (SAS) [given in English] and their methods, terming them as ferocious.

The world soccer championship song was also played, as well as the song of the British group Queen entitled: "Under Pressure".

McDonald did not indicate whether the broadcasts had been prepared by the army's Pyschological War Service, the PSYOP. "If telling the truth is propaganda, then we should all be happy of being propagandists," he said.

The radio station seems to have caused disagreement within the government: British Foreign Minister Francis Pym and other members of the crisis cabinet are, it seems, particularly hostile toward the idea.

LE MONDE REPORTS ON MITTERRAND'S LONDON VISIT

PM201045 Paris LE MONDE in French 19 May 82 p 4

[Daniel Vernet dispatch]

[Text] London -- Mr Francois Mitterrand reaffirmed France's unequivocal but unenthusiastic support for Britain in the Falklands conflict in London on Monday 17 May. The president of the republic, accompanied by Mr Pierre Mauroy, had more than 3 hours of talks with Mrs Thatcher which were described as "fruitful and friendly" by the British side.

The original aim of the meeting was to prepare for the summit of the seven most highly industrialized countries which will be held in Versailles on 4 and 5 June. But Europe's difficulties and the South Atlantic conflict occupied an equal place in the talks. At a meeting with French journalists before returning to Paris, the head of state recalled the "immediate solidarity" which France showed with Britain after Argentina's use of force. "Argentina's initial action led to an unfortunate, logical result," he said. "And since then nothing has happened which has prompted us to change our opinion."

Mr Mitterrand expressed the hope that Security Council Resolution 502 might be implemented at the earliest opportunity but he hinted that France would not go back on its position if the hostilities escalate. In defining the objectives and means to be used "it is not for us to speak for Britain. It is the injured party and decided to act in the way it has. We cannot support an aggressive action de jure or de facto."

Although that is not exactly a blank check, Mr Mitterrand suggested that Britain's allies had little control over an "unfortunate, logical sequence of events" and that he could scarcely do more than advocate moderation as Mr Mauroy had done in his Edinburgh speech 2 days earlier.

That is why France is in favor of renewing economic sanction's which Mr Mitterrand preferred to describe as an "embargo" because their aim is "not to fuel the combat strength" of Argentina without implying a break with that country.

Compared with the Falklands crisis, the European quarrel seems rather petty. With regard to the British contribution to the community budget, Mr Mitterrand recalled that France wants to see the Treaty of Rome respected. "It does not recognize that Britain can claim a permanent right to reimbursement," he stated. "We can help it in a difficult situation but there is no question of creating an automatic response."

The president of the republic seemed fairly confident about the possibility of finding a compromise on a temporary 1-year agreement which will make it possible to set the European machine in motion again. "That is as much in the British interest as in ours," he said. Finally, he rejected any legal link between the British contribution and the increase in the agricultural prices. Questioned on whether the London government was isolated from its nine partners on that subject, Mr Mitterrand replied: "I hope so!" He stressed the fact that he had not negotiated with Mrs Thatcher, let alone reached an agreement enabling the European institutions to operate.

After this visit to London the president will have met with the six heads of state and government who will take part with him in the Versailles summit. In his talks with Mrs Thatcher he assessed respective positions on the three major subjects which he intends to have discussed at that meeting:

-- The remedies to the Western economic crisis: the revival of growth, its effects on interest rates and the definition of a new international monetary system, the inflation-unemployment duo, the introduction of new technologies and relations with Japan;

-- East-West relations: Mr Mitterrand does not want the Versailles summit to be limited to the economic aspect of this question but also wants it to examine strategy and armaments since a NATO summit will be held in Bonn a few days later;

-- North-South relations: the follow-up to Cancun, the energy subsidiary, self-sufficiency in food and the stabilization of raw materials prices....

Mrs Thatcher's economic policy, even if it is less radical than it seems, does not resemble the French policy and gives preference, with some success moreover, to the fight against inflation over the fight against unemployment, shows no enthusiasm for anything reminiscent of economic planning, market organization and the new international economic order. Nonetheless, Mr Mitterrand and his advisers are confident of the success of the Versailles summit and of the definition of a common position by the industrialized countries which goes beyond petitio principii which have not practical significance.

NEW ZEALAND OFFERS USE OF FRIGATE FOR TASK FORCE

PY201142 Paris AFP in Spanish 1120 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] London, 20 May (AFP) -- New Zealand Prime Minister Robert Muldoon announced here today that New Zealand has put at the disposal of Great Britain the frigate Canterbury in case of attack on the Malvinas Islands.

This frigate was built in Great Britain in 1969. It is armed with missiles and 115 and 20 mm cannons and can transport a Wasp type helicopter.

ULUSU ARRIVES; AIRPORT STATEMENTS REPORTED

TA202042 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 1930 GMT 20 May 82

[Excerpt] Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu and a delegation of 18 men accompanying him, who were awaited in the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus [TFSC] with great enthusiasm, arrived in Cyprus today for a 3-day visit as the guest of President Rauf Denktas. They were received at Ercan State Airport with a ceremony. The special plane landed at the airport at 1430. Denktas, Ambassador Inal Batu, Turkish Cypriot peace forces commander Lt Gen Kaya Yazgin, Turkish Cypriot Legislative Assembly Speaker Nejat Konuk, Prime Minister Mustafa Cagatay, Turkish Cypriot security forces commander Brig Gen Kemal Yavuz, ministers, leaders of the Turkish Cypriot political parties, other officials as well as a large number of students and citizens were there to welcome Ulusu.

Following the national anthem, Ulusu and Denktas reviewed the guard of honor and then Ulusu was taken to VIP lounge, where Denktas made the following statement:

[Begin recording] [Denktas] My Dear Prime Minister: On behalf of the self-sacrificing and loyal Turkish Cypriot Turks, I welcome you to this sacred soil won with the blood of our martyrs. Your visit is a historic and happy occasion from all points of view. You are the first Turkish prime minister to visit Cyprus. You represent the government formed by the glorious Turkish armed forces which were forced to stop those who wanted to disrupt the country. It is with great appreciation and gratitude that we are watching your efforts to preserve peace, to restore the democratic system and to bring economic relief to Turkey as well as the TFSC. I am convinced that your visit will be very beneficial. Our government as well as all other officials encouraged and inspired by this visit will engage with renewed enthusiasm in planned projects and work.

Our common aim is to establish a peace which will bar the renewal of frightful days of 1963 to 1974, to settle our economic and administrative problems and to insist on measures that will ensure the happiness of our people.

Moreover, your visit has given our people the occasion of expressing in your presence their feelings of gratitude and respect for their motherland. I wish a good stay to you, your spouse as well as all the other members of your delegation during their visit to this soil saved with the common sacrifice of the Turkish Cypriot fighters and the mehmetcik [nickname for Turkish soldier] as well as the support of our people and the motherland to which we are linked with strong ties.

[Ulusu] I am happy to be the first Turkish prime minister to visit Cyprus as the guest of Turkish Cypriot President Denktas. I am also happy to visit for the first time this beautiful place. The Turkish Cypriots who bravely struggled for years against oppression have attained their well-deserved independence through the peace operation of 1974. After forming their federated state, the Turkish Cypriots have started the process of advancing speedily in the political, economic and social fields. Naturally both during the years of struggle and the years in which they established their federated state, the Turkish Cypriots have received their greatest support from their motherland.

The Turkish Cypriots have not yet attained complete happiness. However, they have taken a very big stride in this direction. They are, first of all, enjoying an atmosphere of independence on their own soil. They have proved to the whole world that they are in favor of a negotiated solution and peace. Last year in August the Turkish Cypriot side presented to the Greek Cypriot community concrete and comprehensive proposals which have once more proved the Turkish Cypriot's determination for reaching a lasting solution and peace through negotiations.

The motherland government is supporting these proposals with the same determination expressed by the Turkish Cypriot community. Despite its difficulties, which are typical of an island economy, the Turkish Cypriot community has been able to use its limited resources as much as possible and has shown an exemplary effort in a bid to improve the lot of its members and to make its economy self-sufficient.

The motherland is making and will continue to make all necessary aid available in a bid to help the Turkish Cypriot community in its efforts of economic development. The Turkish Government will not shun any sacrifice that will bring happiness and prosperity to your community. I am convinced that during my visit I will have beneficial talks with President Denktas, Assembly Speaker Konuk, Prime Minister Cagatay as well as other officials. We shall review and assess the developments during the last 8 years including the projects that we jointly undertook. On this occasion I would like to extend to our Cypriot kinsmen the hearty greetings of their Turkish brothers. [end recording]

Following the statements, Ulusu accompanied by Denktas, left the airport for Lefkosa [Nicosia].

Talks With Denktas, Cagatay

TA210600 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 2000 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu, who is in Cyprus for a 3-day official visit as the guest of Turkish Cypriot President Rauf Denktas, has said that Turkey will continue to make all kinds of sacrifices for the sake of the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus [TFSC]. Ulusu met today with President Denktas and Prime Minister Mustafa Cagatay in Lefkosa [Nicosia] for talks. Deputy Mayor of Lefkosa Mahide Ergun presented the visiting Turkish prime minister with the golden key of the city.

In Kyrenia, Ulusu met with Turkish peace forces commander Lt Gen Kaya Yazgin. Denktas gave a dinner today in Kyrenia in honor of Ulusu. In a statement during the dinner, Denktas said that the arrival of the Turkish prime minister to the island would be remembered as a historic day of joy for Turkish Cypriots. He added that the solution of the Cyprus problem should be based on the Turkish Cypriot community's founding partnership in the independence and sovereignty of Cyprus and the equal rights of the two national entities in founding a partnership republic. Denktas pointed out that the effective guarantee of Turkey was necessary in an agreement to be reached for the solution of the Cyprus problem.

Noting that Greece was trying to use the Cyprus problem as a factor in its differences with Turkey, Denktas said that Greece was thus dragging the Greek Cypriot side to disagreement. Despite all this, the president said, we are continuing to exert efforts for a negotiated peace based on a positive and balanced solution. Recalling that following 1974, the Turkish Cypriots established their own federated state in the north of Cyprus, Denktas said that the Cyprus problem would be solved when the Greek Cypriots establish their federated state.

In his turn, Ulusu said that despite the harsh political and economic difficulties -- mostly caused by the Cyprus problem -- which are facing the young federated state, the Turkish Cypriot community has enhanced its concept of democracy. Ulusu added that the valuable contributions to peaceful efforts made by the federated state for attaining ajust and lasting solution in Cyprus was appreciated by various circles and was assessed by the public [sentence as heard]. The concrete and comprehensive proposals made by the Turkish Cypriot community last August, Ulusu said, were the most decisive signs of its desire to reach a peaceful solution to the Cyprus problem. Ulusu noted that the existence of a strong and homogenous Turkish community in Cyprus was important for the continuation of political stability in the region.

Ulusu continued: We are convinced that the Turkish Cypriot community, with the support supplied by Turkey as a natural result of our national cause, will play a most effective role in the preservation of the balance of forces in the island through the use of realistic and sensible policies in the solution of its existing political, social and economic problems.

Ulusu concluded by saying that he was sure that the Turkish Cypriot community, supported by Turkey and conscious of its historic task, would face any design or intrigue aimed at its life and property.

Tomorrow, Ulusu is expected to address the Turkish Cypriot Legislative Assembly and have talks with the members of the Turkish Cypriot Government.

Denktas Responds to Note

TA211201 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in English to Cyprus 1115 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] President Denktas has declared that the panic in which the Greek Cypriots are has become clear by their latest attempts in connections with Mr Ulusu's visit to the federated state. The president was referring to a note sent by the Foreign Ministry of the Greek Cypriot administration to members of foreign diplomatic missions in the south not to attend any reception given for Mu Ulusu by the authorities of the federated state or by the Turkish Embassy. Mr Denktas said that such Byzantine intrigues could have no effect on the freedom and autonomy of the Turkish Cypriot people. These impertinent protests, he said, could serve no useful purpose and showed the intention of the Greek Cypriots to maintain their unrealistic attitude.

The president recalled that during his visit to southern Cyprus early this year, the Greek prime minister, Mr Papandreou, had encouraged chauvinism and discord. However, Mr Denktas added: Mr Ulusu, visiting the liberated Turkish area of Cyprus at the invitation of the free and autonomous Turkish Cypriot community, had declared that Turkey would continue to support efforts to reach agreement for the establishment of a new Cyprus Republic based on partnership through the intercommunal talks.

KIPRIANOU VIEWS STRUGGLE FOR UNITED CYPRUS

NC202112 Nicosia Domestic Television Service in Greek 1700 GMT 20 May 82

[Address by President of the Republic of Cyprus Spiros Kiprianou at the inauguration of an indoor sports center in Nicosia on 20 May -- live]

[Excerpt] On behalf of the government, the people, and me personally, I would like to express our warmest thanks and gratitude to the Greek Government and the Greek people for their great contribution which has been of decisive significance in the construction of this sports center. [applause] The contribution of Greece toward similar projects has also been of great significance and I would like to express our gratitude for the new donations just announced.

I said earlier we want youth who are full of life; youth who will fight in the arena for the great, beautiful and true ideal; youth who will continue the struggle of our country and our people for liberty. Youth is related to struggles for liberty; the sporting spirit is related to the ideal of liberty and democracy. Tonight is a special and exceptional opportunity for us to declare that we will never allow anyone to undermine democracy and the democratic processes in this country. [long applause] And we will permit absolutely no one to raise obstacles to the sacred struggle of our people for liberty and justice and the restoration of their rights which have been trampled upon. [applause]

We are fighting for a Cyprus which is completely independent, territorially integral, sovereign, united and nonaligned -- a Cyprus which will be a place of peace and serenity. There can be no solution to the Cyprus problem without the restoration of our people's rights.

Most certainly the occupation troops must go, as soon as possible [applause] most certainly there must be safeguards for the inalienable right of the refugees to return to their ancestral homes [applause] most certainly there must be a solution in accordance with the UN resolutions, a solution which will guarantee -- permanently now -- liberty and the termination of foreign interventions.

Despite the hardships of the past 8 years, as a result of treason and occupation, our people in the free areas of Cyprus have managed to create great achievements. Our people created and they must have most certainly won world admiration for their militant spirit, dignity, and endurance. The mourning mothers, the relatives of the missing persons and the refugees have become the symbol of patience and militant spirit and admiration. These people who have never given in, in the face of all the hardships, will not give in no matter how many pressures -- no matter in what form -- may be exerted against them; nor will they accept solutions which will, later, be tantamount to acceptance of the faits accomplis or solutions outside the framework of the UN resolutions [applause] or solutions which would endanger the survival of this country. [applause]

International support is continually expanding. And it is in this direction that we are fighting hard and jointly. The Greek and the Cypriot Governments and I would like to particularly stress that the future is dawning much more hopeful with the active alignment of the Greek Government [applause] which fights with us for the restoration or our people's rights.

As long as the current situation in Cyprus continues we will continue to create; we will create and we will build; and we will build whatever might strengthen the necessary foundation for the continuation of the struggle for liberty, the struggle which is above all else.

In the field of sports, to which we attribute special importance, we will continue to make our contribution and I promise a continuation of my personal interest and the government's interest. We will do all we can to guarantee to Cyprus all the necessary means, all the necessary installations and foundations so that it can definitely reach an international level and become an international sports center.

We fight for liberty. We do not know when there will be an end to our people's suffering. The sooner this happens the better. What is important is not so much the time, nor so much the method and tactics. But what is important is the context of the solution, one which our people have a right to; it must be the solution to which Cyprus has a right as an independent state. What we ask is what all the free peoples of the world and all the independent states of the world have a right to enjoy. We ask for nothing more and nothing less. The context is of importance. This struggle will be continued until we are justified. It is a historic duty; it is a duty to our ancestors; it is a duty to those who sacrificed themselves; it is a duty to all those who suffered everything; it is a duty owed by the present generation to future generations.

OFFICIAL PROTESTS TO TURKEY ON ULUSU CYPRUS TRIP

NC201945 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1800 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] The Greek Government has protested to the Turkish Government over the visit by Turkish Prime Minister Ulusu to Cyprus' occupied territories. Our ambassador in Ankara, Papoulias, visited the Turkish Foreign Ministry and gave the Greek government's protest to Deputy Foreign Minister Gurun. The Turkish prime minister's visit to Cyrprus began today despite the previous announcement by the prime minister's office that it would be postponed because Ulusu was ill. This is the first time a Turkish prime minister has visited Cyprus' occupied territories since the invasion.

Spokesman on Ulusu Remarks

NC201959 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1800 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] Our country made a new protest today to the EEC member countries, NATO and the UN delegation in connection with Turkish Prime Minister Ulusu's statement on arrival in occupied Cyprus. The government spokesman, Maroudhas, made the following statement in this connection:

Ulusu's statement on a peace operation is contrary to the spirit and resolutions of the United Nations. Essentially it concerns an operation for the occupation of Cyprus' northern part, which has been recognized as such by the United Nations and mentioned by the United Nations as an invasion. Furthermore, Turkey has been asked by the international organization to withdraw its occupation forces from Cyprus. In addition, the fact that through a UN resolution a peace force has been established between the Turkish occupation forces and the Cyprus state is additional proof that the Turkish troops are considered internationally to be occupation troops.

Ulusu also spoke of a federated state, something which is also blatantly contrary to UN resolutions and completely contrary to the basis of the intercommunal talks, where discussions are being held on a federated zone. The government spokesman also stressed that the help Ulusu speaks about -- we call it an invasion -- predetermines how far we shall go on a compromise agreement. Once again this justifies the Greek Government's policy that the dialogue cannot produce results with the presence of the occupation troops and while Ankara predetermines and dictates its result.

CANADIAN GOVERNOR GENERAL LEAVES ATHENS 20 MAY

NC200927 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 0900 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] Canadian Governor General Schreyer, who paid a 4-day visit to Greece at the invitation of President Karamanlis, left Athens today for home. Schreyer was seen off at Ellinikon Airport by President Karamanlis, Prime Minister Papandreous, Chamber of Deputies President Alevras, members of the Council of Ministers, the armed forces commanders headed by Admiral Deyiannis, chief of the National Defense General Staff, and by other Greek and foreign officials.

GREECE, NICARAGUA TO ESTABLISH FULL RELATIONS

NC192231 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 2010 GMT 19 May 82

[Text] Greece and Nicaragua will establish full diplomatic relations and the two countries will soon open offices in Athens and Managua. Nicaragua's trade minister will arrive in Athens next week to sign a trade agreement.

PAPANDREOU TO VISIT YUGOSLAVIA 26-28 MAY

NC181846 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1800 GMT 18 May 82

[Text] Prime Minister Papandreou will visit Yugoslavia 26-28 May at the invitation of Federal Executive Council President Planinc.

SECOND TCP PLENUM REVIEWS CURRENT ISSUES

TA210822 (Clandestine) Our Radio in Turkish to Turkey 0500 GMT 21 May 82

[Statement by Turkish Communist Party Central Committee on the second party plenum, 19 May 1982 -- read by announcer]

[Text] The plenum of the Turkish Communist Party's [TCP] Central Committee has been held. The plenum reviewed prominent issues like the preservation of peace in our area, the transformation of Turkey into a factor contributing to that peace, the toppling of the military junta ruling the country and the struggle being waged for the establishment of democracy in our country. Ways were also sought to eliminate the impact of the military junta's aggression, which has caused heavy losses among our ranks, and the reasons that allowed such losses. Measures to be taken in a bid to preserve the party ranks were decided upon. The plenum also reviewed preparations underway for the fifth TCP congress.

The party plenum was held at a time when the reactionary military dictatorship in our country in its foreign policies has increased its dependence on U.S. imperialism and in the domestic front, has intensified its oppression not only of communists and the other progressive forces but of all the potential opposition forces as well. The plenum determined that this development creates a new phase in the military junta's process of dragging the country into a reactionary system.

The reckless efforts of the Reagan administration to increase armaments and international tension coupled with the reactionary military dictatorship's pro-NATOite and pro-American foreign policies have brought our country and our people to the brink of destruction in a nuclear war. The presence of Turkish troops in Cyprus, the deterioration of relations with Greece and the overt and covert destructive steps against Afghanistan, Iran and the continuous efforts for rearmament are fully against our national interests.

The plenum has appealed for a joint struggle by all citizens in order to allow Turkey to take its place, as soon as possible, among the world's peace forces, to establish a lasting friendship with all its neighboring countries, to dismantle NATO and U.S. bases in our country, to withdraw from NATO, to join the Nonaligned Movement, to withdraw unconditionally all Turkish troops from Cyprus and to purge the Balkans of nuclear arms.

All the peaceful efforts of the socialist countries -- led by the Soviet Union -- and the latest Brezhnev peace proposals made at the meeting of the Soviet trade unions have strongly been supported by the party plenum, which stressed the significance of the struggle for peace being waged in capitalist countries with the participation of Turkish migrant workers as well. The plenum categorically supported all democratic liberties. The plenum also stressed the party line concerning issues like efforts to topple the military junta so that a temporary national and democratic government can be established, the reviving of the struggle against imperialism and the monopolies, the democratization of the state mechanism and efforts to have elections for a constituent assembly [as heard].

The plenum also discussed and determined the TCP line in the event of a public referendum over a new constitution. It discussed the prospects of dealing a heavy blow to the military junta in the referendum with the unity of all political forces which oppose the elimination of the 1961 constitution as well as the working calss, the middle-classes and the masses of peasants. The TCP is in favor of a national and democratic constitution which will safeguard the interests of all these forces.

The plenum also determined all the tasks that await the TCP in order to provide the increased effectiveness in the peace struggle of all forces that favor democracy and to unite all these forces in a single national and democratic front.

Recently these forces have widened their area of effectiveness, and the movement for a unity of action is gaining strength. The plenum has assessed as a very significant step which contributes to the unity of all progressive forces the joint declaration by the TCP, the Turkish Labor Party and the Turkish Socialist Workers Party. The TCP will continue to exert efforts in a bid to enhance this unity.

The plenum has decided to further strengthen the struggle being waged in order to eliminate the inhumane pressures which Communists and other progressives are being subjected to in the dungeons and in order to liberate them.

The causes of the heavy losses suffered by our party last May were also reviewed during the plenum. The party experience proves that wherever the party conspiration [last word in English] was slackened, discipline was disregarded and factions appeared, the enemy attacked at that point and inflicted heavy blows to our party from these gaps. The fact that the growth of the party beginning with the 1973 campaign was not matched by work in the organizational and ideological fields has been seen as a factor that led to such heavy losses. The plenum reiterated that slackening the party conspiracy and discipline and tolerating the smallest factional stand or partisanship would be an inexcusable error.

The plenum stressed once more the vital importance of preserving the party ranks at a time when the detentions are being relentlessly implemented.

In an atmosphere in which the threats of a nuclear war mean the end of humanity, the TCP plenum noted the importance of the unity of the international communist movement in easing this situation. The plenum expressed its firm opposition to ideas expressed by the Italian Communist Party which were disapproved by the heavy majority of the brother parties.

The plenum reiterated the following statement: The TCP is following and will continue to follow the inspiring line of the great October Revolution, as well as the line of Marxism-Leninism and international proletariat.

GREEK PROTEST ON ULUSU CYPRUS VISIT REJECTED

TA201631 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] Turkey has rejected a Greek protest over the official visit by Prime Minister Ulusu to the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus [TFSC]. The protest, presented to Foreign Ministry Under Secretary Amb Kamuran Gurun by the Greek ambassador to Ankara this morning, notes that only one legal government exists in Cyprus and that, therefore, only the Greek Cypriot Government in the south of the island is authorized to issue official invitations to Cyprus. The protest claims that Ulusu's visit to Cyprus is in contradiction with international law and that it would have a procrastinating effect on the intercommunal talks in Cyprus.

Foreign Ministry Spokesman Ambassador Nazmi Akiman has said that the Greek protest has been rejected. In a statement, Ambassador Akiman said that it was recalled to the Greek ambassador that two communities under separate administrations existed in Cyprus. The spokesman added that it was out of question for the Turkish prime minister to require permission from the Greek Cypriots to pay a visit to the TFSC which is under the administration of the Turkish Cypriots. Akiman added that it was pointed out to the Greek ambassador that Turkey legally -- in accordance with international agreements -- intervened in 1974 in a bid to prevent the annexation of Cyprus by Greece and that this could not be termed an "occupation." The Greek ambassador was also told that though Turkey always supported the intercommunal talks in Cyprus, speeches made by the Greek prime minister during his visit to Cyprus had affected the talks negatively. It was explained to the Greek ambassador that the subject to be protested should be the addresses made by the Greek prime minister during his Cyprus visit.

In conclusion, Ambassador Akiman said that this step by Greece would not contribute to the positive atmosphere that is desirable in relations between Turkey and Greece.

DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 100

24 May 1982

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

DGB Demands No New Medium-Range Weapons in Europe J 1
Geneva Talks Resume J 1
SPD's Bahr Comments on Nuclear Disarmament J 1
Genscher Concerned Over NATO Loss of UK Support J 2
Bid for Joint FRG-GDR Disarmament Stand Fails J 2
Genscher: Didn't Fail J 2

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Parties Split Over Sanctions Against Argentina L 1
Government Denies Split L 1
Foreign Minister Colombo Meets Libyan Officials [Tripoli] L 2
Libya Pledges To Honor Debts L 2
Briefs: PRC, Pakistani Military Delegation L 2

PORTUGAL

Egyptian Minister of State Makes Official Visit [MENA] M 1
Confers With Balsemao [MENA] M 1
Visit Ends M 2
Four Members of Coalition Government Resign M 2
Prime Minister To Visit Mozambique, Zimbabwe M 2

SPAIN

Defense Minister Interviewed on NATO, Terrorism N 1
Full NATO Membership Expected on 2 June N 5
Navy Unveils Medium-Term Equipment Plan N 5

NORDIC AFFAIRS

FINLAND

'Truncated' SKP Politburo Meets, Plans Strategy P 1
[HUFVUDSTADSBLADET 20 May]
'SKP Should Leave Government' P 1
[HUFVUDSTADSBLADET 20 May]

NORWAY

Consultations on Siting NATO Stockpiles To Begin P 2
[AFTENPOSTEN 13 May]

UNITED KINGDOM

Text of Nott's 21 May Statement on Landings	Q 1
Thatcher Meets With Inner Cabinet 22 May	Q 1
Nott Details Argentine, British Losses	Q 2
Harriers Attack Argentines at Goose Green	Q 3
Goose Green Taken [THE DAILY TELEGRAPH 24 May]	Q 3
Whitehall: Operation Will Take One More Week	Q 4
Argentine Prisoners Had Not Eaten for 3 Days	Q 4
Frigate Suffered 'Serious' Damage on 23 May	Q 4
Casualties Reported	Q 5
Thatcher Replies to Pope's Appeal for Peace	Q 5
Pym Welcomes Extended EEC Argentine Sanctions	Q 5
Sea King Helicopter Crew Still Missing in Chile	Q 6
S. Africa Allegedly Supplying Arms to Argentina	Q 7
Cabinet Member Denies Early Election Rumors	Q 7
DAILY TELEGRAPH Details Reduction in Navy [21 May]	Q 8

CYPRUS

Kiprianou Says Turkish Policy Blocks Solution	R 1
Turkish Prime Minister Concludes Visit to North	R 3
Addresses Legislators	R 3
Visits Famagusta	R 3
Cagatay Dinner	R 4
Leaves for Turkey [Bayrak Radio]	R 4
Economy Talks [Bayrak Radio]	R 5
Payment Being Sought for Services to U.S. Planes [O AGON 24 May]	R 5

GREECE

KKE Scored for Papandreou Speech Incident	S 1
Papandreou Reiterates Support to Cyprus	S 1

TURKEY

Foreign Minister Warns Greece on Aegean Issue	T 1
Papandreou Aggravating Dispute	T 1
Prime Minister Returns From Cyprus Visit	T 1

OTHER COUNTRIES

EUROPEAN COMMUNITY

Argentine Sanctions Renewed Indefinitely	U 1

AUSTRIA

CSSR Foreign Trade Minister Arrives in Vienna [WIENER ZEITUNG 20 May]	U 1

FRANCE

Ministry Issues Statement on Beirut Bombing	U 1
Hernu Denies Report of UK Request for Planes	U 1

DGB DEMANDS NO NEW MEDIUM-RANGE WEAPONS IN EUROPE

LD202112 Hamburg DPA in German 1440 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] Berlin, 20 May (DPA) -- "There must be no deployment of new medium-range weapons in Europe." This demand was made unanimously by the 525 delegates to the DGB in Berlin today after lengthy debate. The DGB strongly supported the negotiations between the United States and the USSR aimed at withdrawing all medium-range weapons deployed in Europe and targeted on Europe. In the controversial debate, chairman of IG Metall Eugen Loderer, spoke against the deployment of new American medium-range weapons in Europe. He described the reestablishment and preservation of world peace as a central demand of all employees, and stressed: "It would be a fateful mistake to seek more security through more and more weapons."

Chairman of IG Chemie, Karl Hauenschild, spoke of a "wide decision" to refrain from a statement on the NATO dual decision because the deployment of new weapons was not a question that specifically concerns trade unions.

Geneva Talks Resume

LD211656 Hamburg DPA in German 1626 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] Bonn, 21 May (DPA) -- Bonn hopes concrete progress will be made during the new round of negotiations in Geneva on the limitation of medium-range missiles in Europe. The Foreign Ministry also expressed hope today that the Soviet Union will respond positively at the negotiating table to the Western proposal for a bilateral zero option, that is, the complete bilateral renunciation of land-based medium-range missiles.

This proposal, according to the Foreign Ministry, had been worked out in close consultation within the Western alliance and was emphatically supported by the Federal Government. The United States and the Soviet Union, following a 2-month pause, resumed their negotiations in Geneva on Thursday.

The Foreign Ministry underlined that the Federal Government, which had been decisively involved in realizing the Western position, will continue to participate actively and intensively in the consultations accompanying the negotiations. The Federal Government proceeds from the premise that U.S. President Ronald Reagan's proposal to begin American-Soviet negotiations on the reduction of intercontinental strategic missiles in June, and the willingness to negotiate expressed by Soviet General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev, will have a positive effect on the Geneva medium-range missile negotiations.

SPD'S BAHR COMMENTS ON NUCLEAR DISARMAMENT

LD230902 Hamburg DPA in German 2332 GMT 22 May 82

[Text] Bonn, 22 May (DPA) -- Egon Bahr, SPD Presidium member and chairman of the subcommittee for disarmament and arms control, proposed limiting all nuclear weapons to the territory of countries which own them, simultaneously producing a conventional balance in Europe. The SPD Presidium member, who received the Gustav-Heinemann citizens' prize in Rastatt on Sunday, defined the proposal as an attempt to create a nuclear-free zone in Europe while retaining an indispensable nuclear protective screen. However, without a conventional balance such a nuclear-free zone would not be realistic. Moreover, existing ties in East and West continue to be essential, since they guarantee joint security. This idea also has to counter anything that could lead to a severing of Europe's destiny from that of America's. Bahr sympathized with the suggestion by four formerly prominent U.S. politicians to refrain from first-use of nuclear weapons in Europe. This would only be possible, however, if an approximate conventional balance between East and West is achieved first.

Bahr said it is "baffling" that so far this has been understood as conventional arming. It is much better to negotiate with the Warsaw Pact for a balance of power through disarmament toward a lower threshold. In general, without a nuclear protective screen there can be no joint security. First it is urgent, however, to include tactical nuclear weapons in the disarmament negotiations, since without controlling them efforts for a conventional balance will remain "cosmetic."

GENSCHER CONCERNED OVER NATO LOSS OF UK SUPPORT

LD231412 Hamburg DPA in German 1259 GMT 23 May 82

[Text] Bonn, 23 May (DPA) -- On Second German Television [ZDF] Sunday evening Foreign Minister Genscher and SPD arms expert Horst Jungmann warned of a weakening in the NATO alliance through the withdrawal of British naval units from Europe. Genscher said that this should not become a "permanent" state of affairs. Jungmann said that he was particularly concerned about the fact that (?Britain) first withdrew its combat forces and then consulted its alliance partners.

Rainer Barzel [CDU], chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee in the Bundestag, said on ZDF in this connection that while one should not stab our NATO partner Great Britain in the back, the European Community, and thus also the Federal Republic, did not grant London a "blank check for military actions." The former CDU chairman also made it clear that EEC trade sanctions against Argentina should only be extended if there is a chance that the sanctions could be used as a lever to achieve a negotiated settlement.

Like Genscher, Barzel stressed that in the context of the war over the Falkland Islands, the practice of (?German) weapons exports must be reexamined to secure even greater curbs. [passage indistinct]

BID FOR JOINT FRG-GDR DISARMAMENT STAND FAILS

LD211846 Hamburg Domestic Service in German 1700 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher has failed to persuade the GDR to take a joint disarmament initiative at the UN General Assembly starting in New York in early June, DEUTSCHE DEPESCHENDIENST reported, quoting Bonn diplomatic circles. Genscher had envisaged such an initiative with his East Berlin counterpart Fischer, and had exchanged letters with him on the matter.

Genscher: 'Didn't Fail'

LD221528 Hamburg DPA in German 1353 GMT 22 May 82

[Text] Bonn, 22 May (DPA) -- FDP Chairman and Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher has advocated developing a political strategy in inner-German relations in order to identify in as many areas as possible means of cooperation and to seek to make progress. In an interview with Bavarian Radio Genscher warned on Saturday of the danger of narrowing the inner-German dialogue to the two points of reducing the minimum exchange levy for travelers from the West to the GDR and the continuation of the interest-free overdraft facility (Swing) granted by the FRG to the GDR. Once again, however, the foreign minister stressed that all issues have to be seen in the overall context.

The aim of Germans in the FRG and the GDR has to be to make Germany "virtually the motivating force" in the development of the East-West relationship. This also means that in the inner-German sphere exemplary arrangements would be possible. The FRG Government views inner-German policy as a European peace task.

Genscher said that the two German states' efforts to formulate a joint disarmament initiative for the forthcoming special session of the United Nations General Assembly cannot be said to have failed. Rather that such an understanding has not yet been achieved. On this point also we "have to keep on talking and should not throw in the towel."

PARTIES SPLIT OVER SANCTIONS AGAINST ARGENTINA

AU210908 Rome ANSA in English 0830 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] Rome, 21 May (ANSA) -- The Anglo-Argentine war over the Falkland Islands has given the five parties in Italian Premier Giovanni Spadolini's government coalition something new to fight about.

The issue of the latest quarrel between the coalition partners -- the Christian Democrats, Socialists, Social Democrats, Liberals and Spadolini's Republicans -- was the government's move to break away from the European Economic Community's trade sanctions against Argentina.

Italy's disassociation from the sanctions policy mainly stemmed from the pressures of the coalition's two major members, the Christian Democrats (DC) and Socialists (PSI), while the remaining three parties were more inclined, to varying degrees, to stick with the European partners.

(The Italian Government refused Monday night in Brussels to renew the sanctions the ten enacted last month against Argentina for its April 2 invasion of the British-ruled Falkland Islands (Malvinas). Eight of the EEC's ten member states voted to extend the embargo for one more week.)

The most critical of the government's stance were the Social Democrats, who have gone so far as to challenge the political alliance that has linked their party with the PSI for a long time. They issued a public warning today in the Social Democrat (PSDI) Newspaper, "L'UMANITA" that they are not willing to follow the Socialists "a half a meter down this path." In unusually tough language, L'UMANITA voiced bitterness that "democratic Italy, which seemed to have foregone betraying and waltzing", had "failed again" when it came to the test.

The PSDI mouthpiece was particularly caustic with the Socialist Defense Minister Lelio Lagorio, who "may be a fine minister.... but we would rather stick to Marshal Montgomery's side".

The latest outbreak of coalition infighting came at a bad time for the government, which is involved in a tough parliamentary battle against time to rush a revised severance pay law through to avert a referendum, on the books for June 13, proposing repeal of present legislation.

To get the revision through an opposition filibuster by the May 30 deadline, the government has announced plans to put each of the five articles of the legislative draft to a confidence vote.

Government Denies Split

AU211548 Rome ANSA in English 1545 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] Rome, 21 May (ANSA) -- "No criticial challenges" filled the air yesterday during a Rome Cabinet meeting held to discuss the Italian decision to drop trade sanctions against Argentina, according to a note released today by the premier's office which disclaimed press accounts of "sharp challenges" and an "animated debate" said to have developed in the Cabinet over the issue.

The note said that the issue of the Anglo-Argentine crisis in the South Atlantic has been handled with "consistent, punctual and complete information in the four Cabinet meetings" held for these discussions and pointed out that this fact has been "correctly acknowledged" by the Social Democratic public works minister, France Nicolazzi.

The reference was to Nicolazzi's statement of his party's opposition to the Rome government decision to drop the sanctions. Thursday, the minister advised the Cabinet that the maverick decision undermined Italy's "credibility" internationally and especially within the Western alliance.

FOREIGN MINISTER COLOMBO MEETS LIBYAN OFFICIALS

LD220026 Tripoli JANA in English 1739 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] Rome, 21 May (JANA) -- A meeting was held here last night included [as received] the secretary of the People's Committee of the Foreign Liaison Bureau, the secretary of heavy industry and the Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo.

They discussed bilateral relations and agreements included in addition to the economic and technical cooperation and trade exchange. The participants stressed the necessity of Italian companies' contribution to the transformation projects in the Jamahiriyah, within the mutual interests of both peoples.

Libya Pledges To Honor Debts

AU201947 Rome ANSA in English 1932 GMT 20 May 82

[Text] Rome, 20 May (ANSA) -- Libya pledged to honor all of the undisputed debts it has with Italian companies during the talks Tripoli's former Premier Abd as-Salam Jallud had in Rome this week with Italian Government officials.

A communique issued by the Italian Foreign Trade Ministry after a meeting in Rome today between Minister Nicola Capria, Libyan Heavy Industries Minister 'umar al-Muntasir and the governors of the two countries central banks, Aurelio Ciampi and (Rageb Misellati), said that both sides agreed to keep the matter of Libya's unpaid debts and Libyan crude exports to Italy separate.

In an interview published in Palermo's L'ORA daily today, Capria disclosed that the question of defaulted payments challenged by the Tripoli government will be handled in a meeting scheduled for May 28 in the Libyan capital.

But the banking system, the communique issued in Rome today stressed, has to be on guard, considering the extent of the Libyan debt, which was placed at a composite 1.2 billion dollars. The situation, the communique added, "carries the risk of creating a major crisis in trade between the two countries".

Jallud, the second in rank in the Libyan leadership, conferred with Italian Premier Giovanni Spadolini Wednesday and met in Rome today with Italian Socialist Party [PSI) Secretary Bettino Craxi for more than two hours.

A statement issued by the PSI, the second biggest party in Spadolini's government coalition after the Christian Democrats, said the two men discussed Mediterranean peace and cooperation, Italian-Libyan relations and ties between socialists in the region.

"Craxi and Jallud", the communique said, "confirmed their common desire to keep communication lines between the two countries open and promote the development of relations between their parties".

BRIEFS

PRC, PAKISTAN MILITARY DELEGATION -- Riva Trigosa, near Genoa, 22 May (ANSA) -- A Chinese military mission visited the Cantieri Navali Riuniti shipyards here Friday morning, the second such foreign mission to visit them in twenty-four hours. On Thursday, a mission from the Pakistani Navy was at the shipyards looking at naval pre-fabrication techniques and equipment such as stabilizer for ships being built for the Italian, Iraqi, and Ecuadoran Navies. [Text] [Rome ANSA in English 0810 GMT 22 May 82 AU]

EGYPTIAN MINISTER OF STATE MAKES OFFICIAL VISIT

NC202148 Cairo MENA in Arabic 1945 GMT 20 May 82

[Excerpt] Lisbon, 20 May (MENA) -- Egyptian-Portuguese talks began in Lisbon today. The Portuguese side was led by Foreign Minister Goncalves Pereira and the Egyptian side by Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Dr Butrus Ghali, who arrived in the Portuguese capital earlier today.

The talks, which lasted about 3 hours, were attended by Egyptian Ambassador in Lisbon Ahmad Mahir and the director of the Egyptian Minister's Office, Ambassador Sa'd Al-Fararji. MENA has learned that during this meeting a review was made of the international situation, African issues, nonalignment issues, and what is happening in Latin America.

A major part of the meeting was devoted to explaining the Egyptian diplomatic efforts for the establishment of just and permanent peace in the Middle East and the continuation of the peace process after the Israeli withdrawal from Sinai. The agency also learned that the Portuguese side expressed appreciation for the Egyptian peace efforts, while Dr Ghali expressed his thanks to the Portuguese Government for its consistent support for this process.

The two sides also reviewed bilateral relations, particularly in the commercial and cultural spheres. The Egyptian minister is scheduled to continue his talks with Portuguese officials tonight at a working dinner which will be given by the Portuguese minister in his honor.

Confers With Balsemao

NC212200 Cairo MENA in English 1908 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] Lisbon, 21 May (MENA) -- Egyptian Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Dr Butrus Ghali conferred today with Portuguese Premier Francisco Pinto Balsemao on the international economic situation, the latest African developments, Namibia and bilateral relations between the two countries.

The meeting also dealt with Egypt's efforts to establish a just peace in the Middle East. Balsemao paid tribute to President Husni Mubarak's efforts in the peace process.

Ghali also conferred today with the Portuguese parliament speaker and invited him to visit Egypt, and the Portuguese speaker accepted the invitation. Ghali also conferred with the deputy premier and defence minister on the European role in the latest Middle East developments and the Iranian-Iraqi war.

The Portuguese officials affirmed their country's support to the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty as a step towards a just, durable and comprehensive peace in the Middle East.

Ghali will convey a message tonight from President Husni Mubarak to President Antonio Ramalho Eanes.

Ghali had arrived here yesterday for a four-day visit at the invitation of his counterpart, Andre Goncalves Pereira.

Visit Ends

LD232106 Lisbon in Portuguese to Europe 1900 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] Bilateral relations between Portugal and Egypt will be strengthened mutually, Egyptian Foreign Minister Butrus Ghali [title as heard] said on his departure from Lisbon today.

The Egyptian minister ended an official 3-day visit to Portugal today, during which he held talks with Portuguese authorities which he described as positive and constructive.

FOUR MEMBERS OF COALITION GOVERNMENT RESIGN

NC220924 Paris AFP in English 0914 GMT 22 May 82

[Text] Lisbon, 22 May (AFP) -- Four Social Democrat members of the Portuguese coalition government have resigned in protest against parliament's refusal to amnesty 23 extreme-left prisoners.

The prisoners themselves began an unlimited hunger strike following yesterday's vote.

The Social Democrats in July last year, along with other opposition socialist members of parliament, committed themselves to an amnesty for imprisoned members of the Revolutionary Proletariat Party "on humanitarian grounds." Those who resigned included a vice-chairman of the parliamentary party and the chairman of the congress, the party's supreme body.

The members of the Revolutionary Proletariat Party have been in prison for three years, serving sentences for armed robbery in northern Portuguese banks in 1976 and 1977.

PRIME MINISTER TO VISIT MOZAMBIQUE, ZIMBABWE

LD192108 Lisbon Domestic Service in Portuguese 2000 GMT 19 May 82

[Text] It has been officially announced in Lisbon that Prime Minister Pinto Balsemao will visit Zimbabwe on 1 and 2 July. The trip, the first by a Portuguese head of government to that country, will tke place immediately after Balsemao's 3-day stay in Mozambique, which he will also be visiting for the first time. Meanwhile, semiofficial sources in Maputo say that during his visit to Mozambique the prime minister is planning to present important Portuguese proposals designed to boost bilateral cooperation. The same sources add that cooperation with Mozambique is currently being studied in Lisbon.

DEFENSE MINISTER INTERVIEWED ON NATO, TERRORISM

PM210931 Madrid ABC in Spanish 17 May 82 pp 25-29

[Interview in Madrid with Spanish Defense Minister Alberto Oliart -- date not given]

[Excerpts] [Question] Does the progress of the current process of ratification by the other Atlantic countries ensure Spain's joining NATO before the next general election? If so and if the outcome of the polls were a Socialist government, would it be easy to leave the Atlantic alliance?

[Answer] I believe that we will join NATO before the general election, just as I firmly believe that we would be unlikely to leave the organization, even if the Socialists won the election. For two basic reasons: First, I do not believe that, if they win, their triumph will be so resounding that they will govern with an absolute majority -- they would have to do so in coalition with other forces. I do not consider a socialist victory likely. Second, I believe that, even if the Spanish Socialist Workers Party triumphed, the Socialists would be pressured considerably by European reality, including the fact that other Socialist governments are the strongest pillars of NATO, for instance, the FRG.

As regards the process which you mentioned, we can only wait for the ratification procedure to be completed. Once it has, the United States will formally invite Spain to deposit the ratification of the treaty in Washington, and our country will be able to take part in the alliance's talks, both official and semiofficial. Nearing entry, the Ministry of Defense, like each of the three services, is considering the organization which we will have to set up in Brussels.

It is necessary to have permanently at the organization's headquarters a military committee, with a representative of the joint chiefs of staff and a support team, which I estimate will be at least 40 or 50 people. It will be advisable to be present on all the organization's committees in order to absorb all that is necessary and useful for us.

Once we join NATO the Ministry of Defense will begin to study what form our contribution will take. At present we have preliminary ideas, but they are only rough estimates. Each nation is quite free to assimilate the NATO doctrine in accordance with its position and interests, conforming, of course, with some logical principles of a strategic and tactical nature. When we join, we will formulate our own doctrine. [answer ends]

Portugal's Attitude

The defense minister wished to make quite clear the possible misgivings of Portugal -- which is within the Atlantic command, under the United States -- about Spain's joining NATO. "We agree completely," he said, "that the Portuguese command should remain independent from the Spanish command for strategic reasons, since our area of interest is different. Another reason for this independence is that Portugal has sensitivities of a historical and political nature concerning the Spanish command; we must be very careful, respect Portuguese sensitivity and seek to ensure that the ties of friendship and cooperation with Portugal are intensified."

"Strategically, it is clear that Spain can coordinate with Porgugal through NATO's higher commands, without interfering at all in its area of influence."

[Question] What are the strategic lines of national defense as regards Gibraltar?

[Answer] I am convinced that Gibraltar will be Spanish some day; I do not know whether it will be soon, but I am certain this negotiation will end with agreement. Moreover, from the military viewpoint, Gibraltar is beginning to make sense for Britain, because that used to be its route to the Mediterranean and the North African protectorates.

Gibraltar is an irrenounceable demand of Spanish policy; a demand which will be channeled through peaceful negotiation. The strait is a key point of world geography, through which no fewer than 130 ships pass per day. Control over the strait means that at a given moment in warfare you can control it as far as your means and your weapons allow. We control the northern coast of the strait, and we also have Ceuta and Melilla. It is precisely in the event of military conflict that the strength of an alliance such as the Atlantic alliance takes on its full significance. Imagine what it is like to face a potential, let us assume Soviet.... [answer ends]

The Malvinas conflict, which is currently occupying world attention, and the repercussions which it may have had on the negotiations envisaged between Spain and Britain over Gibraltar, could not be avoided in the conversation. Oliart asserted that the Malvinas problem has no direct relationship with Gibraltar, "and I do not believe that it will influence the negotiations." "A moment will come," the minister said, "when these negotiations will begin again, and with a greater demand for openness both on Britain's part and ours."

The ambiguous stance which Spain is maintaining on the conflict between Britain and Argentina could to some extent influence our negotiations to join NATO. Our european location and, of course, the history linking our country with Latin America, must not be forgotten. However, the minister maintained that "Spain will join NATO for a geographical and spatial reason as a European nation, and this in no way affects our position as regards the South Atlantic." "Nor do I believe that it is a bad thing," he asserted, "that there is a difference of viewpoints within NATO. In this way the alliance is considerably enriched." Oliart left up in the air a final sentence concerning this issue: "Spanish policy in this respect has been coherent...."

NATO Money

Regardless of the major issues which may arise concerning Spain's joining NATO, what citizens are really interested in is how much money this venture will cost. Oliart replied that "joining NATO will cost the Spanish people no more than defense costs them now, except for a sum which is calculated quite well in a study conducted very meticulously by Lieutenant Colonel Lobo." "I believe that the budget for joining NATO is put at 4 billion pesetas, 1981 pesetas, which represents 1 percent of the defense budget. The law on budgetary allocations for the armed forces is planned for 8 years, and no more will be done in that time than is envisaged in that plan. "

But there is another, especially delicate, aspect of the "NATO issue." Some alliance member countries are currently initiating contentious debates and offering serious opposition to the possibility of having to deploy medium-range nuclear missiles on their respective territories. Since Spain's entry is now virtually certain and will take place very soon, it would be interesting to know whether the government has considered this possibility, it was pointed out to the minister.

"Not only has it considered it," Oliart asserted, "but there is already a parliamentary resolution clearly specifying that they will not be deployed unless both legislative chambers agree. I can see no great effectiveness for medium-range missiles deployed in Spain, since neither the cruise nor the Pershing II could reach further than the southern part of the Soviet Union."

The issue of the medium-range missiles arose again at another point in the conversation. The minister seems to believe, it was commented, that there is no possibility of installing nuclear launchpads in our country, but isn't Spain's contribution to the Atlantic alliance then enormously devalued?

Oliart does not agree, citing two basic reasons. "First, the Atlantic alliance's weakness at present is in conventional forces. The combined nuclear power of the three NATO countries which have their own nuclear weapons -- France, Britain and the United States, in ascending order -- balances as a whole the Soviet power. Where there is an imbalance is in conventional forces. Spain can contribute an army, navy and air force which are very good for our size and for Europe, too. We have an efficient army with very good infantry, very high morale and officers who are far better trained than people believe.

The second reason is one of effectiveness: "Nuclear weapons will be decisive in the event of an invasion, if the enemy uses them. But usually you have tactical nuclear weapons as soon as you want and the support of umbrella of the Western alliance's nuclear power. The Spanish contribution cannot be one of nuclear missiles, since, if you launch them from here, you can only reach Russia's southern borderland. They, on the other hand, can reply to you from further back with a kind of missile which we do not have. In short, I currently view the Spanish contribution as a large conventional army with very good light weaponry."

But the interviewers wished for clarification: What if within a few months or a year the alliance proposes the installation of launchpads in our country? For the minister the matter is clear: It would be the responsibility of the government and parliament. "There is already a motion approved which stipulates this. That is, the government would have to submit a proposal to the Cortes and wait for it to be approved or otherwise."

Budgetary Policy, Basis of Defense

Spain's joining NATO, with the numerous implications it entails, is undoubtedly an inexhaustible issue. But defense policy involves other, no less substantial, aspects. The minister was asked to define the bases on which, in his opinion, a suitable defense policy rests.

"In my opinion, the most important of all is the law on budgetary allocations, because the Spanish Army is basically maintained and sustained by budgetary financial potential. That is fundamental. We will join NATO with what we are, what we have and what we can have with great effort. We are not going to join, either as a country which is essential because of its special geostrategic position -- which can be used as a base by other, more advanced, armies -- or as a country which receives from others what it does not have in order to create its armed forces' core of attack and defense. We will join as Spain, and our great contribution will be our army, which has units such as the light infantry which are on a par with the European average."

[Question] How will the various items envisaged in the law on budgetary allocations be used?

[Answer] The law on allocations must be used to bring about a change in a number of technologies and industries which are currently developing in Spain: electronics, optics, communications and so forth. The industry existing in Spain can implement much of the program, with the extension of installations, new investments and new equipment. [answer ends]

The minister referred next to the Future Combat and Attack Aircraft [FACA] program. The law on allocations includes the budget for the FACA program, in which the number of aircraft initially envisaged by this program has been reduced by almost 25 percent. Oliart explained: "We have had to adjust the FACA program to what is possible in a time of crisis. The final tenders of the firms constructing the two aircraft preselected -- the F-16 and the F-18A -- will be submitted this very week. For a contract of this magnitude offsets of every kind must be assessed. There will be 90 aircraft and not the 140 initially contemplated, owing to financial adjustment."

Specter of 23 February

The specter of 23 February [1981 -- date of attempted coup] loomed repeatedly over the conversation.

Pilar Urbano, who had come from the army's geographical institute [site of attempted coup conspirators' court martial] asked a blunt question.

[Question] How soon can the government assure that a victory of an intervention "manu militari" [by hand of the military] can be averted?

[Answer] I do not understand the question. What, according to you, does an intervention "manu militari" mean?

[Question] Well, an intervention by our own army....

[Answer] You are proceeding from an assumption, that there is an intention to intervene "manu militari." I believe, on the contrary, that, barring a catastrophic accident, there is no possibility of such an intervention. I sincerely believe this. There is no atmosphere of a military coup. (The minister vigorously emphasized his assertion.) There may be criticisms, rejection of certain manifestations of the political system, not as a whole, but there is no spirit of a military coup at all.... Now if tomorrow there is a terrible accident and we are all killed, including the head of state, then, of course, I do not know what might happen. The army is not prepared to change the political system by means of a coup. Any responsible military man will tell you this. But, we are living in a situation threatened by the unexpected, by terrorist actions, and for that reason a terrible accident, a frightful terrorist action, must be considered as a possibility. If such an accident occurred, nobody knows what may happen.... But if you say that the army wants to change the system, I do not agree. I do not know how many military personnel believed that night that there were things which must be changed. There were military personnel and civilians -- and not just reactionary civilians but democratic civilians -- who believed that things must be changed and that we would not continue as we were doing in 1980. I believe that those feelings no longer exist. Maybe some people are brandishing the specter of the election and of the "Marxists" winning.... Well, I can see no clear possibility of a coup there. However, it could happen that there are accidents and that other things may result from those accidents, but at any event what happened would be very localized. [answer ends]

The grave threat of the Basque Homeland and Liberty [ETA] terrorists loomed over the conversation like a gloomy portent. The crazy deadline set by the ETA murderers will expire in a few days' time. Is the army aware, the minister was asked, that it could be the main casualty of ETA's military wing's next offensive?

[Answer] We have given information through the military chain of command for over a month. I am convinced that terrorist actions directed against the armed forces could indeed occur.

[Question] And the fact is that they could occur at any time....

[Answer] Yes, of course; there lies the grave problem of the unexpected which terrorism poses for Spain, with a democracy which is recent and young, rather than weak -- an adjective I deem incorrect. It is an unexpected which affects not only Spain, but also the FRG and Italy: We saw the Italian system totter at the time of Aldo Moro's kidnapping and murder.... Only countries like Spain which bear a great deal can bear the number of dead we have suffered.... For that reason, what doubt can there be that the terrorists could come to involve us in a strange process? It would be foolish to deny that.

[Question] Yet it seems obvious that terrorist actions can only be regarded as accidents to a certain extent.

[Answer] Well, I am speaking of an accident as a historical accident, in the sense that I do not believe that it is a strategy so efficiently planned that we must endure it.

I am referring to an action in which a number of circumstances occur, which is a terrible monstrosity and which is difficult for society to bear.

[Question] A number of protection and self-protection measures against the terrorist strategy are possible, on whose toughness and effectiveness the terrorists' being able to have their own way largely depends. Have these measures really been adopted?

[Answer] All possible self-protection measures have been adopted.

[Question] Do we know the origin of the semi heavy arms which ETA says it has?

[Answer] Those about which we know are Soviet grenade launchers [con bocacha], like the one which they used to launch the grenade against the armored car....

[Question] Is the cooperation which the armed forces have been giving in the antiterrorist struggle deemed positive?

[Answer] Positive from several viewpoints. We are now covering targets which nobody used to cover. The attack on the Rios Rosas telephone exchange has demonstrated that there could be others. Dumps and key power installations are being guarded. The army is doing this because national police or Civil Guard cannot without leaving important places unprotected. Moreover, we are covering more targets than before, so that the national police and the Civil Guard are free for other duties. However, the army is not trained for the anti-terrorist struggle; that is a role which rests with the Ministry of the Interior. At any event, we have covered targets which would require about 8,000 members of the security forces, who can thus devote themselves to other duties.

[Question] If this cooperation is really so effective, why, for instance, was the surveillance of the borders relaxed?

[Answer] I do not agree that the surveillance was relaxed. What happened was that winter came. We withdrew from the part covered by the Civil Guard and from the passes of the central Pyrenees, which were full of snow, because there is nobody who could cross them.... The army withdrew because it no longer had any task to perform there.

FULL NATO MEMBERSHIP EXPECTED ON 2 JUNE

LD231216 Madrid in Spanish to Europe 1100 GMT 23 May 82

[Text] According to the Spanish Ministry of Foreign Affairs, our country will join the Atlantic alliance, NATO, as a full member at the beginning of June, probably on 2 June. Western foreign ministries are certain that Spain will be a legal member by 10 June when the summit meeting of heads of government and state of the Atlantic countries begins in Bonn. Prime Minister Calvo-Sotelo and Foreign Minister Perez-Llorca will attend the meeting on an equal basis with the other 15 NATO members.

NAVY UNVEILS MEDIUM-TERM EQUIPMENT PLAN

PM210843 Madrid ABC in Spanish 14 May 82 p 37

[Text] Madrid — The Navy General Staff has now prepared its forecast investment program for 1983-1990, in accordance with the naval strategy derived from national defense policy. The report, to which EUROPA PRESS had access, consists of five sections: 1 — naval strategy; 2 -- analysis of the navy's present strength; 3 -- decommissioning plan; 4 -- navy modernization plan; and 5 -- national industry.

The report's most important conclusion is that the resources provided for by the armed forces allocations law will make it possible to improve the force, though it is estimated that by the end of the decade the navy will have some 18,500 tons less in service than in 1981, despite following a very severe and restrictive decommissioning policy.

This policy will mean that in 1990 50 percent of tonnage will be over 25 years old and some ships will be over 45 years old.

The report also contains other considerations: Spain occupies a dominant position in one of the key areas of world strategy, and its Balearic and Canary archipelagoes constitute a decisive strategic asset for the west. A power vacuum created by military weakness would be tempting to third countries. Spain must exercise definite control in the Gibraltar Strait, the Azores-Cadiz-Canaries Atlantic triangle, and the western Mediterranean. However, in the seventies a separation took place between naval forces and the maritime traffic needing protection.

From the qualitative viewpoint, it stresses the great age of the Spanish Navy. Though the average lifespan of a warship is 20-25 years, over 50 percent of present ships have exceeded this and about 15 of them are about 40 years old.

Good maintenance (of which the navy is proud) could prolong the life of its ships, but it is impossible to modify the operational characteristics of warships, the majority of which were conceived during World II. Many of the navy's ships are unsuited to successfully performing their respective tasks.

If the navy keeps the old ships in service, it is because it has no others to perform its assignments. The decommissioning plan is closely linked to a commissioning plan. When a ship is decommissioned, in order to continue using it profitably, it joins the traffic protection forces and eventually the auxiliary forces, as a maritime patrol ship.

The following are expected to be phased out during the present decade: [number missing] "Dedalo" aircraft carriers, 5 Harrier [as published] aircraft, 25 helicopters, 4 submarines, 6-8 destroyers, 3 frigates, 4 corvettes, 1 oil tanker and various other minor units.

Credits provided for by the allocations law will enable the navy to survive for the next decade by means of a modernization that will not include as many ships as is desirable. There will be a decrease of 18,500 tons and, despite the commissioning of new units, the navy will still have some ships over 25 years old and some over 45 years old.

To achieve a balanced and harmonious naval force it would be necessary to purchase: 12 VTOL aircraft; 7 frigates to protect traffic, each with its own antisubmarine helicopters; 2 destroyers; a combined supply ship and oil tanker to replace the "Teide"; 4 minehunters; 8 minesweepers; 4 "LST"-class landing craft; 6 missile patrol boats; 1 amphibious craft; 1 training ship; and 1 light transport ship.

From the total resources allocated to the navy and in accordance with the evisaged program, it is reckoned that national industry will account for more than 60 percnent of investments, or 75 percent in the case of ships' maintenance.

FINLAND

'TRUNCATED' SKP POLITBURO MEETS, PLANS STRATEGY

PM211015 Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 20 May 82 p 16

[Excerpt] The Finnish Communist Party's new Politburo, which met yesterday in truncated form, gave Party Chairman Jouko Kajanoja and General Secretary Arvo Aalto authority to begin discussions with members of the minority and the so-called third line who have withdrawn from the work of the Central Committee and the Politburo.

The three minority members, Seppo Toiviainen, who is deputy chairman, Taisto Sinisalo and Marjatta Stenuis-Kaukonen, did not take part in the meeting.

The Politburo stated that calling an extraordinary party congress, something requested by the minority, would not be a solution to the conflict.

The party should now devote itself to looking after the interests of the workers in the preparatory work on the budget, including measures promoting employment. The party should also tighten up in preparation for the forthcoming annual round of national wage negotiations and for participation in work for peace.

The Politburo also prepared the ground for the Central Committee's first meeting 4 June. Kajanoja's aim is that the Central Committee will then be able to meet in full.

'SKP Should Leave Government'

PM211047 Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 20 May 82 p 16

[Excerpts] The Finnish People's Democratic League (SKDL) and the Communists should withdraw their ministers from the government because of the split in the Finnish Communist Party [SKP]. When a party unable to function properly participates in government work this affects the whole of society and slows down social development, National Coalition Party Ilkka Suominen told the party's National Executive in Helsinki on Wednesday [19 May].

Suominen described the SKDL/SKP as a millstone round the neck of the government, whose unity is now weaker than ever.

In its foreign policy statement the National Coalition Party promised President Mauno Koivisto its unconditional support in realizing an active and peace-preserving neutralist policy in the Paasikivi-Kekkonen line, a policy based on the Friendship, Cooperation and Mutual Assistance Treaty and close relations with the Soviet Union. Finland's traditional cooperation with the Nordic countries should also be developed and strengthened, the statement said.

Suominen said that the SKP should go into opposition not because it is the communist party, but because a party as divided as the SKP cannot work fully in the government without government cooperation suffering.

Suominen said that the split in the SKP does not mean that other parties were laughing at the SKP. In actual fact, the conflict affects the development of the whole of society, he said.

NORWAY

CONSULTATIONS ON SITING NATO STOCKPILES TO BEGIN

PM191447 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 13 May 82 p 16

[Text] Representatives of the armed forces' top leadership will this week brief local authorities in the two Trondelag districts on the state of the plans for contingency stockpiling of equipment for U.S. forces. At the same time the armed forces will invite the local authorities' cooperation in choosing sites for the stockpiles.

Gen Sven Hauge, Defense High Command Staff chief, announced that together with Trondelag District Command Chief Maj Gen Leif Lundesgaard he will meet the north Trondelag provincial governor and representatives of Verdal, Levanger and Stjordal local authorities next Wednesday.

On Thursday will follow meetings with the south Trondelag provincial governor and representatives of Orland, Bjugn, Malvik and Trondheim local authorities. Press conferences with local newspapers have also been arranged for after the meetings.

"We have as yet not undertaken any investigations on the ground into where the stockpiles themselves are to be established," General Hauge said. "That is why we are inviting the local authorities to cooperate in finding suitable sites. We for our part, are very ready to listen to the local authorities' arguments and take their proposals for locations for the stockpiles into consideration." General Hauge does not envisage any conflicts between civilian and military interests over the siting of the contingency stockpiles.

It is difficult to say when the armed forces can begin construction of the stockpiles, since this is largely dependent on their siting. During June, local military authorities will undertake local investigations and later budgets will have to be drawn up for which it will be necessary to find funds. The expenditure is expected to be made part of the NATO infrastructure program, General Hauge said, referring to the agreement of principle between the United States and Norway where this is made clear. However, the armed forces are keen to begin work as soon as possible, Hauge said, indicating that the work on these plans has now been given priority by the Defense High Command.

But work on the construction of the first depots for the U.S. forces will begin this year. This will happen against the background of a political initiative from Defense Minister Anders C. Sjaastad, and the United States has indicated that the first shipments for depots of ammunition and fuel can begin this year. The long-term intention is that these supplies, which will be kept in temporary stockpiles for the time being, will be built up so that they will be able to keep a U.S. force in action for a considerable time.

TEXT OF NOTT'S 21 MAY STATEMENT ON LANDINGS

LD211946 London BBC Domestic Service in English 1929 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] The defense secretary, Mr John Nott, has just made a statement about the British raids on the Falkland Islands. He said British forces are now firmly established in the islands. Here is his statement:

[Begin Nott recording] Following the raids which we announced earlier today, British forces have now established a firm bridgehead on the Falkland Islands. Royal Marine Commandos and the Parachute Regiment are now ashore in substantial numbers with artillery, air-defense weapons and other heavy equipment already disembarked from our ships. These landings were unopposed. A secure land base is being consolidated.

During the night, several landings and raids were made by our forces in different parts of the Falkland Islands. Some of these forces have remained ashore. Argentine forces have suffered casualties and some prisoners have been taken. These operations continue. As we expected, our ships have come under heavy air attack; five have been damaged, two seriously. There will have been British casualties but we have no details. Our Harriers and missiles have destroyed seven Mirages, five Skyhawks and two Pucaras. Two Argentine helicopters, a Chinook and a Puma, have been destroyed on the ground. We have lost two of our small helicopters.

Seven weeks after the Argentine aggression British forces are tonight firmly established back on the Falkland Islands. [end recording]

THATCHER MEETS WITH INNER CABINET 22 MAY

LD220838 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0820 GMT 22 May 82

[By Tom McMullan, PA political staff]

[Text] Mrs Thatcher called a meeting of her inner cabinet today (about 11 am) to enable ministers to be brought up to date on the fighting in the Falklands. Reports were due to be presented by Defence Secretary Mr John Nott and chief of the Defence Staff Sir Terence Lewin.

After this meeting, Mr Nott will give a public report at a press conference on the overnight fighting and fill in details of his initial statement last night on the extent of losses on both sides.

Mrs Thatcher changed her plans last night to spend the entire weekend at Chequers and instead returned to Downing Street.

Britain is still ready to negotiate on the Falklands, Whitehall officials said today. No avenue of negotiation will be ruled out. It was made clear, however, that there seemed to be no immediate prospects of serious negotiations.

Argentine's Foreign Minister Mr Costa Mendez is now on his way to the United Nations in New York. But there are no plans for Foreign Secretary Mr Francis Pym to fly there.

Whitehall was unable to offer any confirmation today that American Secretary of State Mr Alexander Haig is preparing to resume his mediation role. It was made clear that if Mr Haig resumes his activities, Britain will offer all cooperation. There are, however, no plans to ask directly for Mr Haig's intervention.

Ministers were also assessing the reaction of public opinion to the fighting and the news of British losses. It was expected that opponents of the war will resume their criticism on the fighting.

Mr Michael Foot, opposition leader, has already said the first concern of everyone must be for the safety and success of British troops. This view was echoed by Labour MP Mr Tam Dalyell, who opposed the sending of the task force. He said: "Everyone must now wish for the safe return of those gallant British servicemen."

But Mr Dalyell added that the ferocity of the fighting had simply proved that the task force, without adequate air cover, should not have been sent.

Last night, Mrs Thatcher said at Downing Street: "We have the most marvellous fighting men in the world. They are dedicated, and fighting in a just cause. We wish them God speed."

NOTT DETAILS ARGENTINE, BRITISH LOSSES

LD221254 London BBC Domestic Service in English 1212 GMT 22 May 82

[Statement by British Defense Secretary John Nott at Ministry of Defense in London -- live]

[Text] This morning the Union Jack is once again flying on the Falkland Islands. And I hope that you have all seen these photographs showing the evident pleasure of the Falkland Islands children. I hope you will give them wide publication.

A major bridgehead has been established in the area of San Carlos on East Falkland. The major amphibious landing yesterday was a complete success. Tactical surprise was achieved and our troops landed safely with almost no interference from Argentine forces. We are now ashore on British sovereign territory in considerable force, and have 3 Royal Marine Commandos and two Battalions of the Parachute Regiment firmly in place with their supporting arms, including artillery, Rapier and other defense weapons. From their secure base our forces will advance to place the occupying Argentine troops under increasing harassment whilst the Royal Navy maintains and tightens its blockade around the islands.

To complement the landings there were raids yesterday in other parts of East and West Falklands. In one of these, Royal Marines captured an Argentine position on Fanning Head overlooking Falkland Sound. In another, the airfield at Goose Green and Argentine positions close by were raided by our forces. Carrier-based RAF Harriers launched attacks in the course of the morning against Argentine installations at Port Stanley Airfield, and the helicopters on the ground nearby, as well as military installations at Fox Bay. During these operations we lost two Gazelle helicopters, and one RAF Harrier is missing.

The Argentine Navy has so far made no attempt to intervene. Its surface ships remain bottled up in coastal waters. The Argentine Air Force has, as expected, launched heavy raids on our ships. Air attacks started at about 1030 local time and continued throughout daylight. A succession of attacks were made by Mirages, Skyhawks and Pucaras. Combat air patrols by Sea Harriers from the task force were flown continuously and were successful in shooting down a large number of aircraft. We believe the total Argentine losses so far are nine Mirages, five Skyhawks, two Pucaras and four helicopters. These losses must represent a very significant blow to the Argentine Air Force.

Nevertheless, Argentine aircraft penetrated our defense screen and carried out attacks on our ships. Three warships sustained minor damage, but this is being repaired and the ships remain operational. One warship has been damaged in the engine room by an unexploded bomb but all her weapons remain effective. A type-21 frigate, HMS Ardent, was also hit by bombs and rockets and, after valiant efforts to contain the damage, sank in the course of last night.

We do not yet have further detailed casualty figures to add to those already announced by the ministry, but first reports indicate that about 20 men are missing from HMS Ardent and about 30 are injured.

I should like to pay great tribute to the men of our task force, whose actions yesterday were in the highest traditions of her majesty's forces, and to the men and women of the Merchant Navy. Over the next day or so our forces will undoubtedly see action again and we must expect fresh attacks upon them. But they are fighting now from a secure base and the hazardous hours of the initial amphibious landings are behind them. We are back on the Falkland Islands and back in strength. We intend to ensure that aggression does not pay.

HARRIERS ATTACK ARGENTINES AT GOOSE GREEN

LD231226 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1220 GMT 23 May 82

[By Robert Hutchinson, PA defense correspondent]

[Text] British Harrier aircraft have carried out a further attack on Argentine positions at Goose Green on East Falkland, the Defense Ministry announced today.

The full extent of the damage caused by their attack, using 1,000-lb air blast bombs and 20mm cannon, is not yet known but during the raid several wrecked Pucara torbo prop ground-attackaircraft were seen near the airstrip.

The ministry said that military activity "has been at a low level over the 24 hours. Land forces have continued to consolidate their position in the San Carlos area and have met with no opposition."

Last night, battle fleet fighters attacked an Argentine patrol boat in the Choiseul Sound and set it ablaze. The ministry reported that there had been "very little activity" on the part of Argentine forces.

"Late yesterday evening two Skyhawk aircraft came within sight of British ships but did not press home their attack. We have no reports of any other attacks."

An Argentine supply ship, the 223-ton motor vessel Monsunen was intercepted by a British warship and run aground and abandoned by her crew on the south east coast of East Falkland on Saturday night, the MOD [Ministry of Defense] announced today.

The Argentines had commandeered the 130-ft ship to ferry troops, stores and ammunition around the islands. Before the invasion it was crewed by six islanders, but it is believed that Argentine naval personnel were operating it.

A ministry statement said: "After being illuminated by starshell, the motor vessel Monsunen was run aground and abandoned by her crew. It is not known whether there were any casualties."

Goose Green Taken

PM240931 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 24 May 82 p 1

[A.J. McIlroy dispatch: "Goose Green Seized"]

[Text] Pooled from the task force -- The crucial Goose Green military base has been captured by British forces, consolidating their positions on East Falkland, according to unconfirmed reports last night.

Sea Harrier jets from the task force led the assault on the base which is about 20 miles south-east of San Carlos. The attack left several aircraft in flames on the ground.

Goose Green has been a prime target of the British forces on the Falklands and was the scene of the first Harrier loss a few days after the task force moved into the total exclusion zone. The radar installation at the base has come under constant naval bombardment.

Last night, three days after the initial beachhead assault, the 5,000 British marines and paratroopers on the Falklands were awaiting a major counteroffensive from the Argentine ground forces.

WHITEHALL: OPERATION WILL TAKE ONE MORE WEEK

LD232136 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2118 GMT 23 May 82

[Text] The British operation to win back control of the disputed South Atlantic islands could take one week more, according to Whitehall sources tonight.

Land forces operational commander, Marine Brigadier Julian Thompson, has now landed his headquarters at the 10 square mile beach-head around Port San Carlos, with orders from London insisting "move on fast."

The latest air battle was fought around Royal Navy ships in San Carlos waters ready to provide gun fire support against any Argentine counter-attack.

ARGENTINE PRISONERS HAD NOT EATEN FOR 3 DAYS

PY232301 London BBC World Service in English 2120 GMT 23 May 82

[From "Calling the Falklands"]

[Text] An Argentine air attack came as the British troops consolidated their positions in the bridgehead they established on Friday. Correspondents say supplies have been pouring in at a hectic pace. Royal Marine Commandos and paratroopers dug in on the hillsides along the perimeter of the bridgehead have been sending out forward patrols to contact Argentine forces. Gunfire and explosions were heard throughout the day as Argentine ammunition and fuel dumps came under attack.

The correspondent said: Morale among the British troops is extremely high, but some Argentine soldiers taken prisoners said they're not eaten for 3 days and were suffering from exposure. Our correspondent added: Falkland Islanders are doing everything they can to help the British troops, and even young children were seen digging trenches.

FRIGATE SUFFERED 'SERIOUS' DAMAGE 23 MAY

LD240022 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0013 GMT 24 May 82

[By Bob Hutchinson, PA defense correspondent]

[Text] Damage caused to a British frigate during furious air attacks by Argentine fighter bombers yesterday (Sunday) is now reported to be more serious than first thought. A Defense Ministry statement early today said a number of fires were caused and attempts were being made to bring them under control.

"We still do not have any indication of casualties. We are unlikely to receive further details of this incident for several hours."

Casualties Reported

LD240708 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0704 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] The Ministry of Defence said one person was dead and five wounded in yesterday's air attack which seriously damaged a British frigate.

The Ministry of Defence said one additional Argentine Mirage was shot down yesterday — bringing the total of aircraft downed to six Mirage and one Skyhawk with a further Mirage and two Skyhawks probably destroyed.

THATCHER REPLIES TO POPE'S APPEAL FOR PEACE

LD241145 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1126 GMT 24 May 82

[By Chris Moncrieff, PA chief political correspondent]

[Excerpt] Mrs Thatcher today replied to the pope's appeal for an end to fighting in the Falklands by saying that a cease-fire had to be accompanied by withdrawal of Argentine troops.

She stressed: "To do otherwise would leave the aggressor in occupation and in possession of the rewards of military adventure." She stressed that the conflict could be ended at once if Argentina withdrew her forces in accordance with the United Nations Security Council resolution.

The full text of her reply: "We share the anguish which you express at the loss of life in the tragic conflict over the Falkland Islands. I deeply respect the reasons which led you to send your message and should like to reply in the same spirit of frankness and candour.

"The conflict was not of our making. It was Argentine forces who invaded the islands and broke the peace. We have striven for seven weeks to secure a negotiated settlement but Argentina has shown no disposition to match our endeavours in good faith."

"A cease-fire has to be accompanied by withdrawal of Argentine troops. To do otherwise would leave the aggressor in occupation and in possession of the rewards of military adventure."

Mrs Thatcher continued: "That our cause is just and the principles which we uphold are shared and understood by democratic nations, I have not the slightest doubt. Aggression must not be allowed to succeed. International law must be upheld. Sovereignty cannot be achieved by armed invasion. The liberty which the Falkland Islanders previously enjoyed must be restored.

"The world has seen too often in this century the tragic consequences of failure to defend the principles of justice, civilised values and international law. We seek peace with freedom, not peace at the expense of freedom."

The prime minister added: "The conflict could be ended immediately if Argentina were to withdraw its forces in accordance with the Security Council resolution. The authority of the United Nations would thereby be reasserted. I earnestly hope that such counsels may yet prevail in Buenos Aires before more lives are lost."

PYM WLECOLMES EXTENDED EEC ARGENTINE SANCTIONS

LD241210 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1157 GMT 24 May 82

[By PA staff reporter in Brussels Geoff Meade]

[Text] Foreign Secretary Francis Pym this afternoon welcomed the indefinite extension of Common Market trade sanctions against Argentina.

He said in Brussels: "This degree of solidarity and support for the UK will be very much appreciated at this very crucial stage in the Falklands issue."

Mr Pym, speaking immediately after the decision was taken by Common Market foreign ministers said there had been some discussion about the merits of a one-month extention of the existing arrangements. But his colleagues had decided, and he had agreed, to leave the continuation of the trade blockade without any time limit.

Mr Pym was clearly delighted that agreement came so quickly this morning and that it represented an increase in moral support for Britain.

Although Italy and Ireland remain outside the sanctions agreement, the other seven of Britain's partners were swift to rubber stamp the existing ban on Argentinian imports. And the Italian and Irish foreign ministers pledged that, under EEC rules, they would do nothing to distort trade by reopening their borders to Argentine products that would have gone to other member states.

As a technicality, Denmark is to continue trade sanctions under a different article of EEC law, which makes the national government responsible for implementing the sanctions, rather than operating under the umbrella of the EEC Commission.

Mrs Thatcher will be well satisfied with the indefinite time scale for extending sanctions. Last week, when the original one-month sanctions agreement was extended for only another seven days, there were fears that vital backing for Britain's actions in the Falklands was diminishing.

Today, despite concern over the military counter-invasion and its long term repercussions on Community relations with Latin America, Britain's partners recognized the importance of solidarity for the time being.

SEA KING HELICOPTER CREW STILL MISSING IN CHILE

PY211911 London BBC World Service in English 1815 GMT 21 May 82

[From the "Radio Newsreel" program: Report from Punta Arenas, Chile, by Michael (Vespy)]

[Text] It's now known that the Sea King helicopter hovered for something like 15 minutes over the bay (?12) miles from here before landing normally. It was sighted by a few local people, who thought it was a Chilean aircraft from the nearby naval air base here.

The military authorities here believe that after the helicopter landed on the foreshore of the Magellan Straits, the crew deliberately set fire to the aircraft, believing they were in Argentine territory. A tent used by the men was found nearby, as were the remains of a small fire the crew had made to keep warm and perhaps to cook.

A military source told me that the search was being called off because the terrain was simply wicked, and the airmen could hide there for months without being discovered. If they want to come out and reveal themselves, we'll be happy to see them, the source commented.

The mystery of the missing crew has caused considerable speculation locally, specially about the sort of [words indistinct] at the time of their disappearance.

S. AFRICA ALLEGEDLY SUPPLYING ARMS TO ARGENTINA

LD241348 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1226 GMT 24 May 82

[By David Healy, PA political staff]

[Text] Reports that South Africa is secretly supplying Argentina with weapons and military spare parts "would be regarded in a serious light" if they are true, a Foreign Office spokesman said today.

The spokesman, who said he knew of the reports, would only add that Britain was "in touch with a large number of governments around the world on many aspects of the crisis in the Falklands Islands. This naturally includes the important question of arms supplies to Argentina."

The reports, in the Johannesburg STAR newspaper, have not been denied by the South African authorities. They said the Pretoria government were supplying ship-to-ship Israeli-made Gabriel missiles as well as spare parts for Mirage aircraft.

The newspaper, quoting Cape Town sources, said the arms were being flown in a (?Uruguayan)-registered plane from a remote corner of Cape Town Airport in crates marked "tractor spares."

The subject is expected to be raised by MP's at Westminister.

CABINET MEMBER DENIES EARLY ELECTION RUMORS

LD231334 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1306 GMT 23 May 82

[By Chris Moncrieff, PA chief political correspondent]

[Text] Mr Cecil Parkinson, chairman of the Conservative Party, today firmly ruled out the idea of an immediate or early general election in the wake of the Falkland Islands crisis.

Mr Parkinson, paymaster general and a member of the so-called "war cabinet", said on the BBC radio programme "The World This Weekend": "We would not dream of trying to engineer an election around it. This is not being considered, nor will it be".

Mr Parkinson was questioned about a speech last night by Mr Francis Pym, the foriegn secretary, urging his Cambridgeshire constituency party workers to look above the "hurly burly" of present events and plan their strategy for the next election.

This was widely seen as a broad hint that Mrs Thatcher was planning to go to the country early while the government's popularity rides high over the crisis.

But Mr Parkinson insisted: "There has been a great misreading of Mr Pym's speech." He stressed that the government had still nearly two years to go.

"That speech should not be interpreted as a call for an immediate election. We have no plans at all to call for an immediate election, and our plans are not being affected by the Falklands."

Mr Parkinson added: "We have two more years, almost, of this Parliament. We have many things left to be done, and I believe we will carry on and see our term of office through. We will go to the public on the basis of our full record and that is our plan at the moment."

When he was asked if that meant ruling out an autumn election, Mr Parkinson responded: "I am saying to you just that."

Earlier, Mr Parkison repeated the view of the chief of defence staff, Admiral Sir Terence Lewin. He said: "We are not looking for a long and bloody war. Having established a secure base we are planning to move — and to move fast. It is not our intention to be lured into a long and bloody war."

Questioned about the possible diminution of international support, Mr Parkinson said: "There will be some international pressure on us to go for a cease-fire and to start negotiating again. "But I think we have established our credentials as negotiators. "Argentinians have consistently demonstrated that they were not prepared to negotiate and that they were only interested in hanging on to what they took by force." He added: "If we have to resist international pressure to restore freedom to the Falklanders, we will have to resist it."

DAILY TELEGRAPH DETAILS REDUCTION IN NAVY

PM211335 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 21 May 82 p 3

[Desmond Wettern, naval correspondent report]

[Text] The Navy's Antarctic ice patrol ship Endurance, 3,600 tons, is the only one of the Navy's larger ships, due to be axed under last June's defence review, to have won a permanent reprieve as a result of the Falklands crisis. The endurance's small Royal Marines detachment strongly resisted the Argentine invasion of South Georgia.

Between 1980 and the end of 1984 sixty warships and major auxiliaries will have been scrapped, sold or mothballed, according to the latest figures given to Parliament by Mr Blaker, armed forces minister.

Despite the claim by Mr Nott, defence secretary, at last week's Scottish Conservative Party conference at Perth and earlier in Parliament that the fleet would have more ships in 1985 than today, only 32 new warships and auxiliaries will have been completed in the five years up to the end of 1984. The total includes the carrier Invincible, 19,500 tons, to be sold next year to Australia, and the hydrofoil Speedy, 117 tons, which is up for sale after less than two years' service.

But three frigates — the 2,700 ton Tartar and the 2,800-ton Berwick and Falmouth, paid off in 1980 and 1981 -- and two Royal Fleet auxiliaries, including a tanker returned by Chile, are now to be retained for the time being because of the Falklands crisis.

The Hermes is to be retained until 1985 because of the sale of Invincible. During the same five-year period it is expected that 31 warships and one auxiliary will be completed.

In the Commons debate on the Falklands crisis on April 7, Mr Nott told Mr Healey, shadow foreign secretary, that "there will be more major ships operational in the fleet than there are today. "There will be fewer frigates but there will be considerably more submarines and exactly the same number of carriers."

By 1985 the present total of 27 submarines, excluding the four Polaris missile boats, will be exactly the same as today.

KIPRIANOU SAYS TURKISH POLICY BLOCKS SOLUTION

NC211808 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1530 GMT 21 May 82

[Address by President Spiros Kiprianou opening the Cyprus International Trade Fair in Nicosia 21 May -- live]

[Excerpt] On the occasion of the recent publication of the Democratic Party [DIKO]-AKEL cooperation agreement, certain concern was expressed -- some genuine and some not genuine -- over unacceptable dangermongering. Because of this, I would like to take this opportunity to stress in the most emphatic manner that the encouragement of private initiative will continue to remain the government's policy. At the same time, however, I would like to state that the state has a duty to intervene actively, for the sake of economic development, wherever private initiative does not demonstrate any interest or is unable to undertake responsibilities or whenever the country's general interest dictates this.

Our policy will always remain the firm elevation of the living standard of all sections of our people. Our irrevocable goal will be social justice by maintaining the existing socioeconomic system.

Cyprus has passed through many trials during its long history. It has, however, managed to survive. Today it is going through the most tragic and decisive turn in its history. Today the future of the country is at stake. For this reason, the responsibility of all of us is vast. There may be personal or party differences, but these must not lead to new divisions and must not undermine our struggle for survival and liberty.

Today more than ever before it is imperative for all parties and fronts, irrespective of political and ideological convictions, to place our national cause above all else.

The support of the nonaligned world, of the socialist countries and that of a number of Western countries, and the support of public opinion in these countries is particularly valuable in the international field. Greece, however, remains the main support in our struggle. We attribute vast importance to the absolute harmonious cooperation with Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou and his government and to his dynamic alignment on the basis of the joint line laid down.

As a result of the vast efforts already undertaken, and which continue to be coordinated by both governments, there is the start of a further expansion of international support. The Papandreou proposal that Greece should take over the maintenance expenses for the UN force to replace the occupation forces has already received favorable international repercussions.

We hope the necessary prerequisites will be created in the near future to force Turkey to abandon its expansionist and totally unacceptable policy. We are in the eighth year of the occupation and tragedy of Cyprus without, unfortunately, any progress in the problem of Cyprus as an exclusive result of Turkish intransigence. Even in the purely humanitarian issue of the missing persons, which is foremost in our minds, Turkey continues to remain intransigent. How long will international society accept this policy?

We believe that on the basis of the UN resolutions and the summit agreements it is possible to have a just and viable solution of the Cyprus issue provided Turkey radically alters its policy. Our goal is to create a truly free, independent, sovereign, federal but united, territorially integral, demilitarized and nonaligned state. We aspire to turn Cyprus into a place of peace and happiness for all its inhabitants, irrespective of religion and origin. We want a united people in a united state. This can only be achieved with absolute freedom, without foreign intervention and foreign armies.

If Turkey truly wants a solution to the Cyprus issue it must immediately withdraw its occupation troops and abandon all ideas of division. The question of withdrawal of the occupation troops has always remained our first care and primary goal since 1974, when we sought the first resolution at the UN General Assembly and, most certainly, we could have easily reached an agreement if the occupation did not exist.

Despite the fact, however, that Turkish occupation troops continue to remain here, in violation of the UN resolutions, and with their presence in essence preventing free negotiation and progress, we have never ceased to make sincere attempts, through the intercommunal dialogue, for progress in the domestic aspect of the Cyprus problem.

There has, however, been absolutely no progress because of Turkish intransigence. Despite the difficulties and obstacles, we have a duty to continue to the dialogue and exhaust all limits, particularly after the recommendation of UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar to accelerate the dialogue and examine the most important issues, in order to establish within a reasonable period of time whether progress is or is not possible.

Irrespective of the dialogue and other developments, we will continue, in a more intensive manner, the effort for internationalization by moving in every direction to guarantee the greatest possible international support in order to force Turkey to withdraw its occupation troops and abandon its partitionist policy.

Our goal will always remain a just and viable solution of the Cyprus issue. An imperative prerequisite within the framework of such a solution will be guaranteeing and implementing the right of the refugees to return to their ancestral homes. It is essential that in general the rights and liberties of all the citizens be guaranteed so that our island may become a place of peace and happiness for its entire population, and thus cease being a source of friction and disturbance.

The termination of the Turkish occupation and the correct solution of the Cyprus problem will create the prerequisites and conditions for a balanced and unified development of our country's economy, and in this way our people, as a unified whole, will be able to proceed with their creative tasks.

Only in this way will there be guarantees for equal opportunities for all the inhabitants of our island; only in this way will all feel that they are equal citizens of the same state; and only in this way will all enjoy the benefits of a higher living standard.

The international trade fair offers an excellent manner for expanding our commercial transactions, particularly our export trade. At the same time, however, it contributes to the further development of cultural and friendly ties between our island and the countries participating in it. Let us hope that as of next year the entire industrial and commercial world of Cyprus will participate jointly in the international trade fair so that everyone -- Greeks, Turks, Armenians, Maronites, and Latins -- will contribute to a noble competition and to a joint struggle for the prosperity and progress of our people as a whole.

I am certain that during this year's fair the commercial and financial transactions between the interested parties will mark a considerable increase to the benefit of both the Cypriots and foreign merchants. I consider it my duty to warmly congratulate the chairman, members and board of the state fair authority, as well as all those who contributed to this excellent and efficient organization of the trade fair. With these thoughts, I inaugurate the 7th International Trade Fair and, once again, express my appreciation to all the Cypriot and foreign exhibitors, wishing them every success. [applause]

TURKISH PRIME MINISTER CONCLUDES VISIT TO NORTH

Addresses Legislators

TA211137 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu has said that the Turkish Government sincerely hopes that the intercommunal talks aimed at resolving the Cyprus problem in a peaceful manner result in a just and lasting solution that serves world peace. Ulusu, who is currently in Cyprus as the guest of TFSC President Rauf Denktas, this morning visited the naval martyrs monument in Girne [Kyrenia] and paid his respects. Ulusu, who also visited the Bogaz martyrs monument, later met with Denktas at the Turkish Embassy in Lefkosa [Nicosia]. Ulusu called on legislative assembly speaker Nejat Konuk as well as on Communal Liberation Party leader Alpay Durduran and Republican Turkish Party leader Ozker Ozgur.

Later Ulusu explained the views of the Turkish Government regarding the Cyprus problem at the special session of the TFSC legislative assembly. Ulusu conveyed head of state Gen Kenan Evren's good wishes to the members of the legislative assembly and said: Our national Cyprus cause is directed at a noble goal. Pointing out that this goal consists of the safeguarding and development of the rights and freedoms and security of the Turkish Cypriot community and the creation of a lasting atmosphere of peace whereby the two communities can coexist on the same island in tranquillity and security, the prime minister continued: We have so far covered great distances in our common cause. All the achievements to date are undoubtedly the result of the courage, valor and sacrifices displayed by the Turkish Cypriot community in a spirit of national unity and solidarity.

Ulusu noted that the peace operation of 1974 constituted a historic turning point on the path to lasting peace and stability. Further noting that the Turkish Cypriot side is continuing its good will efforts at the intercommunal talks, Ulusu said: The concrete and comprehensive proposals submitted by the Turkish Cypriot community to the Greek Cypriot community on 5 August 1981 have demonstrated the Turkish Cypriot community's desire to attain peace through negotiations.

Ulusu also stated that the Turkish Government will stand by its Cypriot kinsmen during the stage of establishing and perpetuating peace.

The prime minister said aid will continue to solve the TFSC's economic problems adding: Naturally, we wish sincerely that the federated state will urgently undertake legal and administrative arrangements to increase tax revenues and will rapidly take measures to terminate the current unnecessary size and excessive wastefulness of the civil service in order to allow its economy to survive on its own resources.

Ulusu also noted that the unity and solidarity of the Turkish Cypriot community and the political parties in the federated state is the primary condition in the success of the struggle for economic development.

In his speech, Konuk expressed the Turkish Cypriot community's feelings of loyalty to the motherland. Ulusu and the delegation accompanying him will continue their contacts this afernoon as well. Ulusu will also attend the council of ministers meeting to be held today.

Visits Famagusta

TA221059 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 22 May 82

[Excerpts] Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu, who is in northern Cyprus as the guest of the president of the Turkish Federated State, Rauf Denktas, is continuing to hold contacts.

Accompanied by Denktas, Ulusu visited the mass graves in Murataga [Maratha], Atlilar [Aloa] and Sandallar [Sandalaris], where more than 100 Turkish Cypriots martyred by the Greek Cypriots during the 1974 peace operation are buried. Ulusu laid wreaths and paid his respects.

Later, Ulusu went to Gazi Magosa [Famagusta], where he was received by the mayor and other officials with a ceremony. A large crowd observed the ceremony, during which Mustafa Adaoglu gave Ulusu the town's golden key. Ulusu then toured the town and the port. He was briefed on port operations and then attended another briefing at the army headquarters in Gazi Magosa. He is now attending a luncheon given in his honor by the commander of the Turkish peace forces in Cyprus, Lt Gen Kaya Yazgan.

Cagatay Dinner

TA222042 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 2000 GMT 22 May 82

[Excerpt] Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu, who is currently on an official visit to the TFSC, attended a dinner given in his honor by TFSC Prime Minister Mustafa Cagatay this evening. In a speech at the dinner, Ulusu said that the talks being conducted between the two communities in Cyprus on an equal basis are the only way to reach a peaceful political solution to the Cyprus issue.

Ulusu noted that the Turkish Cypriot community is attempting to achieve a peaceful political solution in Cyprus with the same determination that saved it from annihilation. The prime minister continued: We appreciate the constructive efforts patiently exerted by the Turkish Cypriot community is attempting to achieve a peaceful political solution in Cyprus with the same determination that saved it from annihilation. The prime minister continued: We appreciate the constructive efforts patiently exerted by the Turkish Cypriot community at the negotiating table and we continue to believe that it will be possible to achieve a bicommunal and bizonal federal republic in Cyprus through an intercommunal conciliation. In its peaceful efforts, Turkey will proudly continue to serve as the biggest supporter of the Turkish Cypriot community and the guarantor of its existence and security.

In his statement, Cagatay said that the kinsman relationship between Turkey and the Turkish Cypriots constitutes the most beautiful and meaningful example of a common destiny in sorrow and in joy. Cagatay said: Through the same traditional solidarity, Turkey and the Turkish Cypriots will ensure the establishment of a lasting and peaceful solution in Cyprus based on human rights and freedoms and comprising universal law. We firmly believe in this.

Ulusu will leave for Istanbul tomorrow morning.

Leaves for Turkey

TA231202 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in English to Cyprus 1115 GMT 23 May 82

[Text] The Turkish prime minister, Mr Ulusu, has said that Turkey will continue its joint efforts with the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus with patience and determination for the continuation of the Cyprus intercommunal talks.

Mr Ulusu was speaking at a press conference in Nicosia this morning before his departure for Turkey at the end of a 3-day official visit to the Federated State. He stressed that [words indistinct] will continue for the aspired results from the intercommunal talks. He stressed that the basic principles and how to reach them in a solution of the Cyprus problem was clear. He added that efforts to weaken or hinder the intercommunal talks would not contribute to the widely accepted bicommunal and bizonal federation. He stressed that baseless claims should be set aside and work be done for peace in Cyprus and the region. He pointed out that [words indistinct] and enmity between the two communities and their motherlands were incompatible with their [word indistinct]

On the economic subjects, Mr Ulusu said that they had discussed the further development of commercial and economic relations between Turkey and the Federated State and added that Turkey will continue to (?support) the development of the economy of the Federated State. He said that talks which had begun during his visit would be continued in Nicosia between the members of the delegation which has accompanied him and which will be staying in Nicosia and officials of the Federated State.

Mr Ulusu stressed that the faithful struggle of the Turkish Cypriot community to safeguard its rights had not been completed. He said that the community should realize its economic and social development in the shortest possible time within an atmosphere of unity and solidarity. He reiterated that Turkey would be beside the Turkish Cypriot community always and in every condition.

Mr Ulusu was later seen off from Ercan State Airport by President Denktas and other officials as well as a large crowd.

Economy Talks

TA241153 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in English to Cyprus 1115 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] A high-level meeting was held in Nicosia this morning between Turkey and the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus to discuss the economic problems of the Turkish Cypriot community. From the Federated State's side, the meeting was attended by President Denktas, the foreign minister, Mr Cagatay, and members of the council of ministers, and from the Turkish side by a delegation headed by the under secretary to the Turkish prime minister for Cyprus affairs, Mr Guneri.

PAYMENT BEING SOUGHT FOR SERVICES TO U.S. PLANES

NC240914 Nicosia O AGON in Greek 24 May 82 p 1

[Text] Cyprus has asked the U.S. Government to pay for the services the Larnaca Airport control tower provides its planes which pass through the area the tower controls.

According to our reports, the United States should pay Cyprus several million pounds for services already rendered, and the government has already started the necessary activities.

For its part, the U.S. Government has made it clear that it does not intend to pay for these services and has described the sum the government is seeking as taxation.

The Cyprus Government has warned the United States that in case the amount demanded is not paid it will cease offering service to U.S. military aircraft, with the result that the danger of collisions with other airplanes passing through the same area at the same time may arise.

The Foreign Ministry has already made all the demarches necessary in the government's effort to collect the payment.

According to our reports, the Cyprus Government has set a timetable for the payment. Otherwise it will instruct the control tower not to provide services to U.S. military aircraft.

KKE SCORED FOR PAPANDREOU SPEECH INCIDENT

NC221230 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 22 May 82

[Text] Referring to the incident caused in Kefallinia yesterday by a small group of KKE followers during Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou's speech, D. Maroudhas, deputy minister to the prime minister in charge of press affairs, has said that these manifestations by the KKE followers constituted a clear intention to impede the prime minister's speech -- a fact that is unprecedented.

Mr Maroudhas then stressed that every quarter should know that the people have given the majority to PASOK so that it can implement its own program and no other program. The deputy minister stressed: PASOK is implementing its own program, which is invested with the people's verdict, and it does not need nor accept advice. All those who think they can be the guardians of PASOK are committing a grave mistake. With their 18 October choice, the Greek people themselves determined the positions of the parties. This was determined by the free will of the Greek people.

PAPANDREOU REITERATES SUPPORT TO CYPRUS

NC212027 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1830 GMT 21 May 82

[Speech delivered by Greek Prime Minister Papandreou on 21 May at Kerkira on the anniversary of the annexation of the Ionian Islands by Greece -- recorded]

[Excerpt] We shall progress together. We have already started laying the foundations for a new course four our country, a course toward the vision of change. [prolonged cheers] As I look down upon this sqaure today I see the great slogans of our people for the struggle of our nation: national independence; territorial integrity. [prolonged cheers] Today we celebrate the union of the Eptanisos [Ionian Islands], the union of Kerkira with Mother Greece. [prolonged cheers] This union did not come about by itself. Long national and peoples' struggles were necessary in order to win the independence of the Eptanisos and unify it with Greece. [prolonged cheers] These national and peoples' struggles are the ones which support our progress toward change.

It is difficult at this moment for me not to refer to the great island of Cyprus, this sacred earth [prolonged cheers] which has been trampled upon by desecrators. [boos] The real character of the notorious bicommunal dialogue is being revealed through the illegal and unacceptable presence of the Turkish prime minister in the occupied [boos] section of the Cyprus Republic. Our message from Kerkira on this day to our brothers in Cyprus is that we will continue the unsubdued struggle for the liberation of Cyprus [prolonged cheers], for an independent, nonaligned, demilitarized Cyprus. [prolonged cheers and confused slogans] As we have stressed in the past, we threaten nobody, we claim nothing in the Aegean apart from what is ours on the basis of treaties, agreements and the blood and struggles of the Greek people. [prolonged cheers; "Greece Belongs to the Greeks" predominating] Greece desires to actively contribute to peace and detente both in the Balkans and the eastern Mediterranean as well as in Europe. The great, however, ought to know that this nation, which claims nothing, is not going to give up a single handful of earth, sea or air. [prolonged cheers]

I wish to address a warm brotherly greeting to the country's armed forces, the armed forces which today guarantee our territorial integrity and honor and support the democratic institutions and the peoples' sovereignty, which is the source, the only source, of every authority in our country. [prolonged cheers] As brothers let us strengthen our national independence and let us open the grand avenue which leads to the deepening and broadening of democracy, the active participation of the Greek people in every corner of the Greek earth. [prolonged cheers]

FOREIGN MINISTER WARNS GREECE ON AEGEAN ISSUE

TA231716 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 23 May 82

[Text] Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen has said that if Greece extends its territorial waters in the Aegean to more than 6 miles the status quo and the balance of sovereignty [egemenlik dengesi] and security would be disrupted. Turkmen said: In such a case it would naturally be inevitable for all the aspects of the status quo in the Aegean to be redefined, and Greece would bear the responsibility for this.

Turkmen answered a question by an ANATOLIA reporter on the possible Greek attitude in the Aegean following the ratificatin of the Law of the Sea agreement. He said that in the face of any Greek fait accompli to widen its area of sovereignty in the Aegean, Turkey is determined to take all possible measures.

Recalling that Turkey voted against the agreement adopted at the international Law of the Sea conference, Turkmen said this agreement, which will be open for ratification in December, will not be signed. He said: Greece must not choose an erroneous and dangerous path by distorting or unjustly interpreting the provisions of this agreement, which will never be binding on Turkey. Greece must know that the characteristics of the Aegean and the balance of rights and interests in the sea between Turkey and Greece do not allow its territorial waters to be extended beyond 6 miles.

Papandreou Aggravating Dispute

TA221648 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1600 GMT 22 May 82

[Text] Istanbul, 22 May (AA) -- Foreign Ministry Spokesman Kaya Toperi said disputes between Turkey and Greece were aggravated by the government of Andreas Papandreou.

In a briefing on Turkish foreign policy with foreign correspondents in Istanbul for the Islamic conference central bank governors meeting, Toperi noted Papandreou had cut off the dialogue on Aegean issues such as the continental shelf, airspace, territorial waters and the demilitarization of the Aegean islands, and had an adverse effect on intercommunal talks in Cyprus.

Toperi said his government believes a ban on nuclear weapons should be worldwide. A regional clearing of such weapons as in the Balkans would not be of practical use. Turkey was not under pressure to join a rapid deployment force for the defence of the Gulf, Toperi said. He added Turkish troops would not withdraw from Cyprus until the threat to the Turkish Cypriot community was lifted.

Undersecretary of the Turkish Ministry of Culture and Tourism Mustafa Turkmen briefed the visiting journalists on legislation concerning tourism and related investment in Turkey.

PRIME MINISTER RETURNS FROM CYPRUS VISIT

TA231535 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1500 GMT 23 May 82

[Excerpts] Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu has said that the Turkish Cypriot community views the future with faith and confidence and that it is determined not to return to the pre-1974 conditions. Ulusu, who concluded his official visit to the TFSC and returned to Turkey today, briefed journalists on his visit at Istanbul's Yesilkoy Airport.

Pointing out that the spirit of unity and solidarity is deep-rooted in the TFSC, Ulusu said that he appreciated the efforts to establish a healthy economic structure despite the existence of certain as yet unresolved problems. He expressed the conviction that the Turkish Cypriots will win the economic war through their diligence, determination and willpower. Ulusu added that Turkey will continue to support by all means the solving of the problems of the Turkish Cypriots and will not spare any sacrifice to this end.

EUROPEAN COMMUNITY

ARGENTINE SANCTIONS RENEWED INDEFINITELY

NC241132 Paris AFP in English 1125 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Brussels, 24 May (AFP) -- European Economic Community foreign ministers, except for Italy's and Ireland's, agreed here today to renew indefinitely economic sanctions against Argentina, it was announced. Italy and Ireland decided against continuing sanctions when the EEC council first renewed them for a week last Monday.

The sanctions, involving a total ban on Argentine imports, are to expire tonight. Denmark, which is against applying such sanctions communally, will apply the same ban on a national basis.

AUSTRIA

CSSR FOREIGN TRADE MINISTER ARRIVES IN VIENNA

AU211327 Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 20 May 82 p 2

[Text] Today CSSR Foreign Trade Minister Bohumil Urban arrives for 2-day economic talks in Vienna. On Friday Urban will -- together with Trade Minister Staribacher -- sign a protocol on the meeting of the joint Austrian-CSSR commission which has been going on in Vienna since the beginning of the week.

Within the framework of the commission's meeting the Austrian side has handed over a list of large-scale projects in which Austrian firms are interested. There are offers concerning refining facilities, chemical plants and various equipment for metallurgical plants as well as machines of various kinds. Existing cooperation agreements with CSSR enterprises were also discussed, which partially also refer to joint activities on third markets.

FRANCE

MINISTRY ISSUES STATEMENT ON BEIRUT BOMBING

NC240955 Paris AFP in English 0947 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Paris, 24 May (AFP) — The French External Relations Ministry today confirmed that a French paratrooper and a woman member of the embassy staff were among about a dozen people killed earlier today when a booby-trapped car exploded outside the French mission in Beirut. The dead woman worked for the embassy's commercial department. The paratrooper was on guard duty outside the embassy building, the ministry said.

The bomb had been planted in the women's car without her knowledge and had exploded when she was driving into the embassy precinct, the ministry said. Reports from Beirut said that two Lebanese members of the embassy staff had also died in the blast.

HERNU DENIES REPORT OF UK REQUEST FOR PLANES

NC231558 Paris AFP in English 1542 GMT 23 May 82

[Text] Lyons, France, 23 May (AFP) — French Defense Minister Charles Hernu today said he had "no knowledge of any official request" from British Defense Secretary John Nott or the British Government for a possible loan of French-built Mirage or Etendard fighter planes. Mr Hernu, speaking at Villeurbanne near here, was responding to a report in London's DAILY EXPRESS. The Argentine Air Force is equipped with both fighter models. The paper said Britain had requested the loan to study the planes' strengths and weaknesses.

DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 101 25 May 1982

AUSTRIA

Kreisky Announces He Will Run for Reelection E 1

BENELUX

NETHERLANDS

Parties Maneuver as Fall Elections Loom F 1
[DE VOLKSKRANT 17 May]
Mozambique President Machel To Visit in July F 2
[NRC HANDELSBLAD 21 May]

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Schmidt, Albrecht Discuss Elbe Border Compromise J 1
Genscher Meets With Venezuelan Delegation J 1
Minister 'Satisfied' J 1
Zimbabwe's Mugabe Arrives for 2-Day Visit J 2
Meets With Schmidt J 2
Speeches at Dinner J 2
Schmidt Sends Greetings to MSZMP's Kadar J 3
Genscher Views Falklands, EC, Hamburg Elections J 3
Eppler Loses Reelection Bid to SPD Presidium J 5
Boelling Comments on Extension of EC Sanctions J 5

FRANCE

Government Pushes for WEU as Defense Forum K 1
[LE MONDE 21 May]
Fiterman Views First Year, Communist Role K 1
[LE MONDE 18 May]
PCF, DKP Confer in Paris; Express Solidarity K 3
[L'HUMANITE 18 May]
Tunisian Communist Party Leader Visits 19 May K 4
[L'HUMANITE 20 May]
Cheysson To Visit Saudi Arabia 29-30 May K 4
Mitterrand Visits Africa; Talks With Leaders [cross-reference] K 4

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Spadolini Urges Argentina Toward Peaceful End L 1
Pope's UK Visit On; Will Also Visit Argentina L 1
Libya's Jallud Continues Visit; Meets With PCI L 1
[L'UNITA 21 May]
Deems Visit 'Success' L 1
Pope Wishes To Visit Libya L 2

PORTUGAL

Balsemao Expresses Dissatisfaction With NATO Aid M 1
Foreign Minister Clarifies Use of Lajes Base M 2
[DIARIO DE NOTICIAS 18 May]

SPAIN

Andalusian Parliament Election Results Reported N 1
Trial of Putschists Concludes; Verdict on 3 June N 1

UNITED KINGDOM

Nott Addresses Commons; Rules Out Truce Q 1
'Panorama' Interview Q 3
Poll Shows Majority Backing for Troop Landings Q 4
Canberra Allegedly Hit; Ministry Won't Comment Q 4
Three Labor MP's Lose Posts Over Falklands Vote Q 5
DAILY STAR Claims Helicopter Assembled in Chile Q 5
Harriers Attack Port Stanley; No Ground Contact Q 5
Rhine Antiaircraft Unit To Move to Falklands Q 6
Argentina Reported To Again Be Using Etandards Q 6
[THE DAILY TELEGRAPH 25 May]
New 'Dog-Fight' Missile Developed With FRG Q 7
[THE DAILY TELEGRAPH 25 May]
Pope's Visit 'Has Not Been Suspended' Yet Q 7
476-Million Pound Rebate From EEC Accepted Q 8
Haughey Blames Bad Relations on Ulster Plan Q 8
[THE DAILY TELEGRAPH 24 May]
'Strain' Reviewed Q 9

TURKEY

Evren Addresses Islamic Development Bank Meeting T 1
Ozal on Cooperation, Jerusalem T 2
Ulusu Visit to Cyprus Blatant Provocation [VOTCP] T 2
Labor Group General Congress Meets in Ankara T 3

OTHER COUNTRIES

CYPRUS

Spokesman Views Kiprianou Visit to New York U 1

GREECE

French Prime Minister Arrives on Official Visit U 1
Attends Mediterranean Congress U 1
Chamber Passes Bill on Spain's NATO Admission U 1

KREISKY ANNOUNCES HE WILL RUN FOR REELECTION

AU211920 Vienna Domestic Television Service in German 1730 GMT 21 May 82

[Report on interview with Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky in Vienna on 21 May -- with portions recorded]

[Excerpts] The decision has been made. Chancellor Kreisky will once more be the top candidate of the Austrain Socialist Party for the next parliamentary elections. Kreisky announced this today after several hours of consultations with the leadership of his party. Kreisky had announced last year at the party conference in Graz that he would decide at the beginning of May 1982. Actually, this decision is not a surprise following several recently dropped hints. As to his health, a team of physicians authorized this decision a short while ago. Today they were answered.

First of all, President Benya, chairman of the Austrian Trade Unions Federation, will remain in his post; secondly, Socialist members of parliament are supposed to resign their mandate in the Nationalrat; and thirdly the state should, if necessary, become further indebted in order to secure employment.

[Begin recording] [Reporter] In front of Kreisky's villa on Armbrustergasse 15, in the Vienna district of Doebling, a great number of journalists were waiting this afternoon before 1500 local time for the top Socialist Party leaders to arrive. Special interest was paid to Benya whose running for reelection to the post of Trade Union chairman was one of the preconditions demanded by Kreisky for his remaining on the political scene.

Vice Chancellor Sinowatz was also there. During Kreisky's illness he was discussed as a successor. Finally, Kurt Steyrer, minister of health, was also expected. He is the chairman of the committee examining Kreisky's health. At 1500 local time the decisive talk took place. Three hours later the expected decision was adopted. [end reporter recording]

[Kreisky] We will submit a new great political program on employment in which previous decisions and deliberations are included. This includes 5,000 new homes, additional homes, the improvement of old houses, and also the [UN] conference center. We agreed that members of the Federal Government in the future -- in order to consolidate parlimentary work -- should resign their mandates in Parliament as long as they are members of the government, in order to obtain optimal efficiency in the parliamentary work of the party faction.

Naturally we also spoke about the new budget, and we have come to the conclusion that we should not let ourselves be driven into panic, since -- taking into consideration the billions which unemployment costs other European countries -- we would like to adhere to the policy that the money we have and the money we borrow should in the first place serve the struggle against unemployment.

Question: And you will run for election?

Answer: I will run for election.

Question: Mr Federal Chancellor, you once told us that if you ran for election, you would serve during the major part of the legislature. Can you clarify this? Will you remain until the middle of the eighties?

Answer: It was my friends' wish that this statement be withdrawn, so to speak; they would like me to remain throughout the period of the legislature.

NETHERLANDS

PARTIES MANEUVER AS FALL ELECTIONS LOOM

PM240913 Amsterdam DE VOLKSKRANT in Dutch 17 May 82 p 3

[Bob Green article]

[Text] The Hague -- The elections, which will probably be held in the fall, have already begun. Because of the present government crisis the political parties are busy maneuvering to win as favorable a point of departure for the elections as possible. There are already some lively antics within some parties -- principally Democrats '66 [D'66] and the Labor Party [PVDA].

D'66 is still discussing whether or not to participate in a probably very short-term rump cabinet together with the Christian Democratic Appeal [CDA]. In the PVDA the former director of the Wiardi Beckman Foundation (the party's scientific bureau) and the present editor in chief of HET PAROOL, Wouter Gortzak, has put forward in his paper a proposal for the swift formation of a progressive people's party. Such a progressive people's party was attempted 10 years ago but failed.

All manner of statements show that the election campaign has already begun. PVDA ministers are making no secret of the fact that on crisis Wednesday Prime Minister van Agt made a serious attempt, after hearing that the socialist ministers were planning to offer their resignations, simply to "carry on" with the CDA and D'66. There would be no resignation by CDA and D'66 ministers, but the spring budget bill approved by a cabinet majority would simply be presented to the Second Chamber and this would lend legitimacy to such a rump cabinet.

The delays and postponements on that Wednesday evening make such a plan seem likely. But such a plan would be at complete variance with constitutional rules. With the resignation of the PVDA ministers the parliamentary basis for the cabinet disappeared and the political justification for the second Van Agt cabinet went with it. Such a plan would only have been possible if Van Agt could count on the D'66 ministers playing this game too and the People's Party for Freedom and Democracy [VVD] later cooperating by voting the final spring budget bill through the Second Chamber. But things did not need to go as far as this. D'66 Defense Minister van Mierlo, it is being said in The Hague, immediately made it clear that the non-PVDA ministers should also resign their portfolios. This then happened, but not without a clash with Terlouw.

The story of a "little plan" by Van Agt -- which is not entirely being met with disbelief in the CDA Parliamentary Group -- is further coupled with public descriptions of the behavior of the prime minister experienced during cabinet meetings as "humiliating." This is why outgoing Interior Minister van Thijn made it clear in Saturday [15 May] morning's "In de Rooie Haan" radio program that the prime minister was clearly seeking a break with the PVDA. Such statements are generally not made if any serious thought is being given to the possibility of a "patch-up" of the collapsed coalition, but they are perfectly suited to the prologue to an election campaign, which looks as if it will be unusually hard and unfriendly.

In the psychological warfare suitable to an election campaign there is also a place for rumors of possible cooperation between the PVDA and the VVD, thus putting pressure on the CDA. The VVD does not exclude this possibility, the new VVD Parliamentary Group leader, Ed Nijpels, made clear at a VVD congress in Amersfoort on Friday evening, provided the PVDA makes a choice between its "radical" Chairman Max van den Berg and Ed van Thijn. Over the weekend PVDA Parliamentary Group Chairman Wim Meijer brought speculations about possible PVDA-VVD cooperation back into the debate. The VVD now wants a decision about the deployment of new nuclear arms in the Netherlands and wants to have the link between low income supplements and the net minimum wage broken.

Both are in conflict with PVDA positions, according to Meijer. He added that there would be a possibility of talking with the VVD if the Liberals were to change their program on these two points. The chances of this seem as great as those of a swift return by Hans Wiegel from Leeuwarden to The Hague. [Wiegel recently resigned as VVD leader to become royal commissioner for Friesland in Leeuwarden]

Gortzak's proposal to ressurect the progressive people's party must also be seen in the context of the runup to an election. Gortzak drew a very convincing picture of a process of decay within the PVDA in which the Radical voters would depart if the party moved toward the center and the other wing would defect if the PVDA once again threw itself into endeavors to form a leftwing majority. This latter -- collaboration with the Netherlands Communist Party, Pacifist Socialist Party and the Radical Political Party -- would only win a total of 25 percent of votes cast in an election and would block leftwing participation in government for years.

He argues that the PVDA and D'66 operating separately can expect little from elections, but would together have a good chance with a realistic program outlining "progressive and sober solutions." Gortzak's suggestion is to gather PVDA members, D'66 members, the Godebald group from the Radical Political Party, academics and trade union members to a congress in the not-too distant future, and that this, dreaming of the new Social Democratic Party in Britain, would work out an efficient alternative to the prospect of years of CDA-VVD cabinets. However, the question is whether in the coming months of preparations for an election the PVDA can allow itself such a far-reaching reassessment of itself as inclusion in a progressive people's party without arriving at election day in an extremely dilapidated condition.

At present the PVDA is doing all it can to enter the elections with as much agreement as possible on the subject of employment. It must be made clear to the voters that it was right for the PVDA to break with the second Van Agt cabinet because its coalition partners made it impossible to carry out the two-pronged policy of cuts and an active employment program contained in the government accord. It is on this theme that the way back from the major defeat in the local elections must trodden. Badly divisive discussions of party leadership and discussions about new party formation have no place here. At the top of the party by no means all are convinced that Den Uyl will be a major vote-catcher as party leader, but this is coupled with the view that an open conflict about it would go far toward being political suicide.

Finally, as far as D'66 is concerned, the emphasis -- as parliamentary leader Brinkhorst argued this weekend -- is that D'66 must not run away from their responsibility in the present difficult period. This shows a certain willingness to try to persevere with the CDA in a temporary minority cabinet, if an interim cabinet comprising the PVDA, CDA and D'66 with the task of presenting the 1983 budget and calling an election turns out to be impossible. But such a rump cabinet would also have to present the spring budget to the Second Chamber. By taking such a step D'66 would make it clear that they want above all to remain a potential government partner and are aware that the price of this will be a long-term break with the PVDA. Such a strategy would seem to be aiming at a grateful CDA, which would once again take the Democrats into the government after the elections. The speed with which the CDA dropped the VVD last year makes it clear how shaky this assumption is.

MOZAMBIQUE PRESIDENT MACHEL TO VISIT IN JULY

PM251159 Rotterdam NRC HANDELSBLAD in Dutch 21 May 82 p 3

[Text] Nairobi, 21 May -- Mozambique President Somora Machel will pay an official visit to the Netherlands at the beginning of July, well informed sources in the Mozambique capital, Maputo, said. During the recent visit to Mozambique by the parliamentary delegation led by Christian Democratic Appeal Second Chamber member J.N. Scholten, President Machel made it clear that he sets great store by his country's relations with the Netherlands, not only because the Netherlands was the first to recognize and support his Frelimo Liberation Movement, but also because Mozambique is worried that Dutch aid, which totals around 40 million guilders per year, may come to an end soon.

SCHMIDT, ALBRECHT DISCUSS ELBE BORDER COMPROMISE

LD211216 Hamburg DPA in German 1024 GMT 21 May 82

[Excerpt] Bonn, 21 May (DPA) -- Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and Prime Minister of Lower Saxony Ernst Albrecht (CDU) discussed the possibility of a compromise with the GDR on the disputed question of the Elbe border in a confidential and long exchange of views. Government Spokesman Klaus Boelling confirmed on Friday in Bonn that a comprehensive talk took place between both politicians, but did not elaborate on the contents, referring instead to the agreed confidentiality.

GENSCHER MEETS WITH VENEZUELAN DELEGATION

LD211234 Hamburg DPA in German 1117 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] Bonn, 21 May (DPA) -- Leading Venezuelan politicians requested on Friday that the Federal Government -- at the height of the Falklands crisis -- make further attempts for an immediate cease-fire between Argentina and Great Britain to the best of its ability. In a 1-hour talk with Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher the government members and parliamentarians expressed fear that relations between Latin America and Europe could suffer because of EEC support for Great Britain. At the same time they spoke for an end to EEC economic sanctions.

Among those in the delegation are the secretariat general of the presidency, Gonzalo Garcia Bustillos, director in the Foreign Ministry, (Roy Chaderton), Senators (Pedro Pablo Aguilar) and (Enrique Tejera Paris) as well as Deputies (German Lairet) and (Rafel Tudela). The politicians also will present their point of view in Brussels, Paris, Rome and Madrid.

At his meeting with the Venezuelan politicians, Foreign Minister Genscher emphasized Bonn's unchanged interest in a solution to the conflict on the basis of Resolution 502 of the UN Security Council. At the same time he confirmed the intention of the government to do everything so that traditionally close links between the FRG and Latin America do not suffer.

Minister 'Satisfied'

LD211800 Hamburg DPA in German 1728 GMT 21 May 82

[Excerpt] Bonn, 21 May (DPA) -- Leading Venezuelan politicians today condemned the landing of British troops on the Falkland Islands, and promised Argentina their country's "active solidarity." Venezuelan minister of the secretariat general of the presidency, Gonzalo Garcia Bustillos told journalists in Bonn today that he hopes all the countries in the world will resist this action. The world should not permit such a bloodbath to be caused in the 20th century because of a colonial relic.

Garcia Bustillos expressed his satisfaction with the result of the 1-day political talks in Bonn by a high-ranking delegation, during which the two sides explained their attitudes to the Falklands conflict and discussed prospects for a peaceful solution. "We can draw the conclusion that the Federal Republic of Germany has not given Great Britain a blank check," the politician said.

The delegation had talks in Bonn with, among others, Federal President Karl Carstens, Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, minister of state at the chancellor's office, Hans-Juergen Wischnewski, and CDU Foreign Policy Spokesman Alois Mertes.

ZIMBABWE'S MUGABE ARRIVES FOR 2-DAY VISIT

LD241634 Hamburg DPA in German 0909 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Bonn, 24 May (DPA) -- Zimbabwe Prime Minister Robert Mugabe arrived in the Federal Republic on Monday for a 2-day visit. Following his arrival at Cologne/Bonn Airport he flew to Oberhausen to inspect an industrial concern. In the evening he is to start his official program by meeting with Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt in Bonn for preliminary talks.

Mugabe, who is on a visit to seven West European countries, is in the Federal Republic for the first time. The FRG is one of the most important economic partners of the state of Zimbabwe, which gained independence in 1980. In addition to meetings with Chancellor Schmidt, Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher and Federal President Karl Carstens meetings with representatives of German industry are also planned.

Prior to Mugabe's visit, Economic Cooperation Minister Rainer Offergeld gave an assurance to the effect that Zimbabwe could continue to depend on the Federal Republic's practical solidarity in the future. Mugabe has taken the only feasible path with his policy of "national reconciliation" between blacks and whites. To date Bonn has granted the new African country credits and subsidies worth DM226 million.

Meets With Schmidt

LD241904 Hamburg DPA in German 1644 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Bonn, 24 May (DPA) -- At the start of his 2-day talks in Bonn, Prime Minister of Zimbabwe Robert Mugabe met Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt this evening for a short preliminary meeting. The African politician was earlier recieved at the federal chancellory with military honors. A dinner is scheduled for later at Schmidt's invitation in the Schaumburg Palace.

According to government circles, the Federal Government wants to expand the current good cooperation with the young Republic of Zimbabwe in all spheres.

Speeches at Dinner

LD242322 Hamburg DPA in German 2206 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Bonn, 24 May (DPA) -- Chancellor Helmut Schmidt has promised the young African Republic of Zimbabwe further German aid for the country's development. At a dinner in honor of Prime Minister Robert Mugabe tonight, the chancellor praised the path of reconciliation embarked upon by Mugabe after many years of struggle for Zimbabwe's independence. Prior to this, Schmidt and Mugabe met for a first talk, and the German side expressed satisfaction at the course of the talk.

During the dinner the chancellor said Bonn will continue to support Mugabe's policy within the bounds of its financial possibilities. He also condemned racial segregation in the neighboring state of South Africa. Schmidt also said Mugabe's policy of nonalignment has earned respect. It has given the country political and economic stability. Schmidt also supported greater private investment in Zimbabwe.

Mugabe, who is visiting the Federal Republic for the first time, spoke of Zimbabwe's socialist path, in which, however, there is certainly a place for private investment. He praised Bonn's policy of balance between East and West and urged the great powers to renounce the modernization of their nuclear weapons. His country, he said, will continue along the path of nonalignment.

Mugabe will continue his talks with Schmidt on Tuesday and will also meet with Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher and Federal President Karl Carstens. He is touring seven European countries, from which he hopes to obtain more development and economic aid. Bonn has so far promised Zimbabwe credits and subsidies valued at DM226 million.

SCHMIDT SENDS GREETINGS TO MSZMP'S KADAR

LD242212 Hamburg DPA in German 1533 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Bonn, 24 May (DPA) -- Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt has congratulated Janos Kadar, the first secretary of the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party, on his 70th birthday. In his message Schmidt stresses that he is pleased that his meeting with Kadar a few weeks ago once again endorsed the open and trusting cooperation between the Federal Republic and Hungary. "This shows that relations between our two countries are developing steadily even in a world situation overshadowed by serious problems; and will continue in the future to be a stabilizing element in East-West relations and an important contribution to cooperation in Europe," Schmidt stressed.

GENSCHER VIEWS FALKLANDS, EC, HAMBURG ELECTIONS

DW241249 Munich Bayerischer Rundfunk Network in German 1600 GMT 22 May 82

[Interview with FRG Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, date and place not given -- recorded]

[Text] [Question] Do you understand why there is a war in the South Atlantic in which people are dying?

[Answer] I think that we are all depressed by this development and that everyone must be interested, even at this stage, in seeing efforts made to achieve a political rather than a military solution. Great Britain as well as Argentina said yesterday in the UN Security Council that they are still interested in a political solution. All possibilities must be exploited. This is a significant task for the UN Security Council.

[Question] What can the Federal Government do to bring an end to this absurd bloodshed?

[Answer] Well, I believe that is is clearly in our interests to contribute with all means possible to a peaceful political solution. There are a number of reasons for this. We are of the opinion that world problems must be solved peacefully. Regarding the Falkland-Malvinas issue, we want a solution on the basis of the Security Council Resolution 502. We are certainly also interested in seeing that this conflict does not burden relations between Europe and Latin America. Nor are we interested in seeing relations between the United States and Latin America affected or worsened.

[Question] Hasn't this relationship already been burdened?

[Answer] I believe that the current state of affairs still permits the good quality of these relations to be maintained and developed. However, we have to be aware that problems do exist.

[Question] It is not only a matter of British action in the South Atlantic, but also of Britain's action in the European Community. Wasn't De Gaulle right to object to Great Britain's membership in the European Community?

[Answer] I would separate the events surrounding the Falkland-Malvinas Islands from the problems we have to decide on at the same time in the European Community, namely increasing agricultural prices and dealing with the still unsettled problem of British contributions to the Community's budget. We have never supported De Gaulle's views in this connection, and I still do not share his opinion because I believe that Great Britain belongs to the community of European democracies.

[Question] Aren't you sometimes disappointed by Great Britain's role so far in Brussels?

[Answer] I wouldn't call it disappointment. I believe that those countries which joined the Community later on must still find their way spiritually to the Community. It is quite clear that the founding members took this step earlier because of their awareness of public opinion -- earlier than some countries which came later. This certainly does not hold true for everyone because I believe that many of them want very much to cooperate in a European way. No, I would not call the British action disappointing. However, I would say it is necessary for the view to prevail in all European countries that we are not a community of lions in which everyone tries to get the greatest share of the prey for himself. We will be able to build Europe -- and the efforts in this respect will only be successful -- if we consider the Community's advantage to be our own advantage. We must not set up barriers to each other based on national egotism. This approach is reflected by the German-Italian initiative aimed at a European union. We believe that steps must be taken now in the political, legal and economic fields to demonstrate in a difficult international situation Europe's ability to act and to come to terms.

[Question] Mr Genscher, the United States and the Soviet Union have opened the disarmament dialogue. Bonn and East Berlin did not agree on a common initiative. What was the reason for this failure?

[Answer] I would not say that it failed; I would say that such agreement has not yet been achieved. It would have been desirable to achieve this agreement prior to the UN special assembly. However, the principles we suggested for a common initiative, particularly verification of arms control agreements and more openness, remain on the table as an unchanged necessity for realistic arms control and disarmament negotiations. For this reason we must continue the talks and not give up.

[Question] What concession does the Federal Government expect in return for an extension of the Swing agreement [interest-free overdraft credit] in intra-German trade?

[Answer] We have left no doubt that travel is an important issue for us. The significance, the results and the advantages of East-West relations must be tangible and apparent to the people. We also believe that intra-German trade is an important element of East-West cooperation.

I believe that we have many possibilities and fields of cooperation which would serve stabilization of East-West relations as well as the people themselves. Therefore, I warn against narrowing the scope to just two possibilities. I would much rather suggest developing a political strategy aimed at recognizing as many fields of possible cooperation as possible and at achieving progress in these fields. This does not reduce the significance of personal meetings, and thus of the mandatory exchange amount, nor the significance of internal trade or of the interest-free overdraft credit.

As we always say, you must see all this in the overall context. What we, the FRG and the GDR, implement in connection with the Helsinki Final Act and what we implement in connection with the wishes of the people in divided Germany determines the progress we can achieve.

Seen that way, I would not use the world concessions. I would much rather speak of what can be achieved together for the implementation of the Helsinki Final Act and for the people in divided Germany. Everyone must know that we consider German policy to be a European peace task.

It must be our goal as Germans in the West and the East to not only ensure that no negative influence emanates from German-German relations, but that German-German relations become something like a motor for the development of East-West relations. It also means that exemplary agreements must be made. In other words, we, the FRG and the GDR, should grant each other some sort of a political most-favored-nation clause in implementing the commitments of the Helsinki Final Act. It must be our ambition to achieve the highest level, the utmost, in the interests of the people in Germany and in the interests of Europe.

[Question] Mr Genscher, Finance Minister Lahnstein said that a decrease in income taxes is out. Does that also hold true for the Free Democrats?

[Answer] Actually, he did not say that. He said, as we do, that due to the refusal of CDU/CSU-controlled laender to cooperate in changing direct taxes to indirect taxes, such as shifting taxes from income to increased value added tax, the amount of a 1984 tax decrease has become uncertain. He continues to agree with the aim of decreasing income taxes in 1984.

[Question] Do you expect economic developments to create more leeway in this area?

[Answer] I believe that interest rates are showing a continous decrease. We are on the right path. If we will pursue budget consolidation policy persistently -- the 1983 federal budget is indeed a test -- the positive signals for economic vitalization will improve. Prerequisites in the FRG for gradually overcoming economic problems are more positive than in most other industrial states. It is up to us whether we contribute to further improving conditions for new investments, that is, for new jobs. The ideas and concepts of the Free Democrats are quite obvious in this respect: Priority must be given to everything that will encourage and not discourage making investments.

[Question] Helmut Kohl said that the CDU has a time limit with regard to a government change in Bonn. Does that pertain also to the FDP?

[Answer] I belive that time limits are set by the election law and political limits by the voters.

[Question] Of what significance will the outcome of the Hamburg elections be in this connection?

[Answer] Their significance will go beyond Hamburg because they will show whether the town can be ruled under such a situation as a fourth group's striving for power in these elections. It is obvious that it is necessary in the interests and functioning of our democracy, and not in the interests of the FDP, for a strong FDP to enter the Hamburg parliament to facilitate the forming of a majority in the interests of the city and its citizens.

[Question] Do you see direct effects regarding the Bonn coalition?

[Answer] I don't think you should overrate landtag elections. However, I am also not one to say that nobody should care about landtag elections.

EPPLER LOSES REELECTION BID TO SPD PRESIDIUM

LD241338 Hamburg DPA in German 1208 GMT 24 May 82

[Excerpt] Bonn, 24 May (DPA) -- Erhard Eppler, the 55-year-old spokesman of the leftwing of the Social Democrats, is no longer a member of the SPD Presidium. In the voting on Monday in Bonn in which 40 members of the SPD Executive voted for the 11 members of the party Presidium, Eppler failed by 17 votes to regain membership in the Presidium. We had been a member of the Presidium since 1973, Federal Administrative Secretary Peter Glotz told journalists during the SPD Executive meeting.

BOELLING COMMENTS ON EXTENSION OF EC SANCTIONS

LD241856 Hamburg DPA in German 1813 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Bonn, 24 May (DPA) -- According to Government Spokesman Klaus Boelling, the Federal Government did not find it easy to approve an indefinite extension of the EC import sanctions against Argentina. Boelling said in a statement this evening, however, that the indefinite sanctions could be lifted at any time, as soon as the reasons for its imposition were removed. The Federal Government hopes that further developments will make an early lifting of the sanctions possible.

GOVERNMENT PUSHES FOR WEU AS DEFENSE FORUM

PM241053 Paris LE MONDE in French 21 May 82 p 5

["D.V." dispatch]

[Text] London -- At the annual meeting of the WEU Council of Ministers the French Government, represented by External Relations Ministry Secretary General Gutmann, repeated its proposal to reactivate this organization, which is the only one in which the Europeans can discuss defense. French Secretary of State for Defense Lemoine had already made proposals on that subject in December 1981 and February 1982.

France's partners were reticent at first and suspected a desire either to revive a form of European defense community or to detach Europe from its American ally. But they now admit that the French Government is acting with realism and pragmatism and without preconceived ideas. Paris thinks that the WEU is a forum which is would be a pity to neglect. Its task should not be defined in advance but according to needs. Thus France wants the WEU to be used to alert European opinion to defense problems at a time when pacifism and neutralism are spreading.

The WEU, which is already an organization of cooperation in the arms sphere, could also be involved in the struggle against terrorism and extend, as the draft recommendation adopted by the general affairs commission suggests, "its deliberations to all threats to Western Europe's security, whatever their source." That draft will be put forward in June.

FITERMAN VIEWS FIRST YEAR, COMMUNIST ROLE

PM241243 Paris LE MONDE in French 18 May 82 p 10

[French Transport Minister Charles Fiterman 16 May interview with Radio Luxembourg]

[Text] "As far as I am concerned," Mr Fiterman said, "I am satisfied with my participation in the government and with the activity that I have been able to carry out within this framework for almost a year. More generally, I am satisfied with government policy as a whole, as it is developing." The minister stressed that in his opinion it is inappropriate to talk about the government's record, "because such a policy under conditions with which people are familiar -- in other words, taking into account the previous policy, with all the problems posed by the change, the change of course, the need to introduce major reforms -- such a policy needs time to produce results." He pointed out, however, that with regard to unemployment and inflation, "There has been a reversal of the trend -- no more, no less."

He added, "We must press ahead without a pause because a pause is the opposite of progress. But we must press ahead without excessive haste, because that is not what the French people opted for and because in some respects it could be dangerous."

Asked whether the government is doing its utmost to succeed, Mr Fiterman said: "In this country you cannot presume to change things unless you observe universal suffrage. We believe that within this well-defined framework it is possible and necessary to forge ahead, as we are willing to do and are in fact doing. This is what has been done on the whole for the past year."

With regard to the abstention of the Communist group in the National Assembly in the vote on the reform of radio and television, Mr Fiterman said: "I do not like the groups of the majority to vote differently. I prefer to vote together. I believe that it is a shame if they do not hold exactly the same stance.

As for the arguments put forward by the Communist group, as a member of the government, I cannot fail to take note of them. But in my opinion such a vote does not challenge the existence of the parliamentary majority, the national majority of the unity of the government itself, because it expresses a difference of viewpoint, not opposition, because there was no vote against."

The minister added: "I believe that it is not irregular -- and not even necessarily a bad thing -- for differences to exist between the role of the state, the government's action, the role of the political groups and the parliamentary groups, and the action of the trade unions. There is an old idea that all these things should constitute a kind of bloc, which should move as a unit, almost monolithically....

"As far as the government is concerned, obviously the debate must be kept within precise limits. The government is the government.

"With regard to relations among the state, the political groups, the trade unions and possibly other social forces, all these forces, or a certain number of them, can have convergent opinions about change, about the major objectives that must be attained, without automatically or necessarily being in the same place at the same time to say the same thing.

"The old idea that I mentioned, which was long held by the Communists, is a monolithic conception of the action of political forces -- opposition versus majority -- which supposedly constitute a fused entity, a bloc subordinate to the state itself, the government itself, which should supposedly do everything and decide everything.

"I believe that it must be admitted that differences can exist: The different levels must not be confused -- the state, the political parties and the trade unions. Each has its role to play. The government belongs to France in the last analysis: It is not only the government of the left. It was designed to pursue a particular policy, but it is responsible for the country's general interests. We live in a complex society whose needs and problems are very diversified. The government tries to identify them and to take the best form of action. There are internal discussions within the political groups of the majority, but in a society such as this warning lights and alarm bells are necessary.

"Of course, I am not forgetting in this connection the role of the opposition, which is a kind of warning light. This warning light is sometimes caused to malfunction by the political interplay. Within the majority itself, within the forces that converge on it, each member must be able to assert himself at any given moment. The fact is that this complex movement, this assertion of various viewpoints or interests -- interests in the party sense, not the pejorative sense -- must take into account the general interest. This general interest must not be challenged as long as one really wishes to advance it."

Asked about the PCF's foreign policy, Mr Fiterman said: "What you call the 'international communist movement' is not a movement. There has been no communist international for a long time. As far as the Communist Party is concerned -- I am not talking on its behalf, though I am nevertheless one of its leaders -- it has acted entirely independently. It proposes a foreign policy that is independent and that is designed to make France play a role of its own, different from the role played by both superpowers, the United States and the Soviet Union. France has a different position and different purpose from the two superpowers and moreover there is no reason for it to align with any major power."

He added: "It is necessary to reflect thoroughly on the fact that France is situated not just anywhere. It is part of the Western world, at a specific point on the planet. It has established ties with a number of countries. Obviously all this must be taken into account if one wishes to change things within a peaceful framework, on the basis of universal suffrage, without challenging international relations, which we need. With regard to foreign policy, one must advance on a realistic basis, combining all the elements that I have just mentioned. This is what we are doing."

On the subject of preparations for the muncipal elections, Mr Fiterman said: "My belief is that we are in a political situation that requires that the people's forces wage the municipal elections battle together because of the right's aggressive attitude and the desperate battle that it is waging against the government and the new policy that is being implemented....

"Any move or attitude likely to separate the forces now working together in the muncipalities, within the majority and within the government, for the sake of what might be respectable interests -- every party is concerned with strengthening itself and the political groups understandably experience conflicts and rivalry -- must be eliminated...."

PCF, DKP CONFER IN PARIS; EXPRESS SOLIDARITY

PM241343 Paris L'HUMANITE in French 18 May 82 p 11

[Text] A meeting took place at PCF Central Committee headquarters 14 May between a DKP delegation comprising Karl-Heinz Schroeder, member of the presidium and of the leadership committee's secretariat, and Dirk Krueger, international relations section official, and a PCF delegation comprising Maxime Gremetz, member of the Politburo and Central Committee secretary, and Central Committee member Jacques Denis.

In the atmosphere of friendship and solidarity governing relations between the two parties, the talks provided an opportunity for a broad exchange of information and opinions. They related more especially to the struggle for peace and disarmament-- a question to which the two parties. in their different situations, attach major importance.

The DKP delegation reported on the situation in the FRG and on the DKP's action. It stressed that the German Communists, on the basis of their congress guidelines, are stepping up their efforts to safeguard peace and oppose the implementation of the NATO decision to deploy new U.S. medium-range missiles in the FRG and in other European member countries because these plans run fundamentally counter to the FRG people's national interest and to peace. It reported on the development of the peace movement in the FRG, which has gathered some 3 million signatures for the Krefeld appeal against the deployment of the new missiles, and on many activities for peace and the preparations for a mass demonstration in Bonn on 10 June during the NATO summit and President Reagan's visit. That demonstration is already supported by 900 organizations, movements and "citizens' initiatives" of very different political, philosphical and religious inspirations.

The PCF delegation reported on the actions being initiated in France to which the French Communists are making their contribution, particularly the campaign to gather signatures for the Paris appeal, launched on the peace movement's initiative, the regional demonstrations and the Nimes festival of youth and song (21 to 23 May). Alongside the various forces of public opinion the PCF is preparing for the second extraordinary UN session and has published a message containing 10 proposals for disarmament. Gremetz stressed the French Communists' determination to achieve the necessary level of united action to end the arms race and to secure a French contribution in keeping with this vital objective.

The two delegations welcomed the tradition which has already been created with the presence of delegations from the peace forces and especially of young people from each of their countries in the demonstrations in Bonn on 10 October and in Paris on 25 October, in the Easter marches and at the Nimes festival. They are convinced that that will be increasingly the case in future. They see this as evidence of the international dimension being assumed by the many original and extremely diverse national initatives being taken in all European countries.

The PCF and DKP welcome this vast people's movement growing in the United States and express their solidarity with all its component parts.

The DKP and PCF are convinced that the success they hope will be achieved by the UN extraordinary session on disarmament and the Geneva and Madrid negotiations depends to a considerable extent on the peoples' action. They took this opportunity to reaffirm their intention to act in unity and mutual respect with all, without exception, who agree on this one objective: peace, disarmament.

At the end of the meeting the two delegations agreed to increase cooperation between the two parties for that same objective.

TUNISIAN COMMUNIST PARTY LEADER VISITS 19 MAY

PM241345 Paris L'HUMANITE in French 20 May 82 p 7

[Text] Tunisian Communist Party [PCI] Secretary General Mohamed Harmel had a meeting at PCF headquarters on Wednesday 19 May with Central Committee Secretary Maxime Gremetz. This warm and fraternal meeting provided an opportunity for an exchange of information on developments in the two countries. The PCT secretary general explained the complex situation which his country is now experiencing, being engaged in a process of democratization which is still limited, as was seen during the last elections, for instance. The legalization of the PCT created more favorable conditions for its action to change the balance of forces in favor of democracy and progress and a new economic and political alternative. Gremetz assured the PCT of the PCF's solidarity and the two parties agreed to strengthen their relations and their cooperation.

CHEYSSON TO VISIT SAUDI ARABIA 29-30 MAY

NC251133 Paris AFP in English 1128 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Paris, 25 May (AFP) -- French External Relations Minister Claude Cheysson will visit Saudi Arabia Saturday and Sunday (May 29 and 30), it was announced here today.

A ministry spokesman gave no further details on the visit which will be just a week after Pierre Beregovoy, secretary-general of the Elysee presidential palace, returnsd from Kuwait.

President Francois Mitterrand went to Saudi Arabia in September, his first visit abroad after becoming president last May.

MITTERRAND VISITS AFRICA; TALKS WITH LEADERS

For reportage on President Francois Mitterrand's African visit, including his talks with leaders and an address to the Ivory Coast National Assembly, see the North and West African sections of the 20 May Middle East and Africa DAILY REPORT and subsequent issues.

SPADOLINI URGES ARGENTINA TOWARD PEACEFUL END

LD242334 Rome Domestic Service in Italian 2200 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] The head of government has received the new Argentine ambassador in Rome, Rodolfo Lucchetta, to whom he stressed that there is no alternative to negotiations, defining the Argentine invasion of the Falkland Islands as a violation of international law.

Spadolini then reminded the Argentine ambassador of Italy's position concerning the current conflict. Stressing in conclusion that our country has demonstrated that it is taking into account ethnic links with the people of Argentina, Spadolini asked Ambassador Lucchetta if he would convey to the authorities in Buenos Aires a pressing appeal to cooperate in every way for a peaceful solution within the ambit of the UN initiative, the initiative which is the (?continuation), the president of the Council of Ministers said, of the mediation generously pursued by the United States since the beginning of the conflict.

POPE'S UK VISIT ON; WILL ALSO VISIT ARGENTINA

NC251147 Paris AFP in English 1138 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Vatican City, 25 May (AFP) -- Pope John Paul II may visit Argentina during the first two weeks in June, an Argentine diplomatic source here said today.

The source said Archbishop Archille Silvestrini, secretary of the church's Council for Public Affairs, will leave for Buenos Aires today bearing a personal message from the pope for Argentine President General Leopoldo Galtieri. The message says the pope is planning a visit to Argentina, the source said.

The Vatican earlier today confirmed the pope's visit to Britain beginning Friday.

LIBYA'S JALLUD CONTINUES VISIT; MEETS WITH PCI

PM241309 Rome L'UNITA in Italian 21 May 82 p 12

[Text] Rome -- PCI Secretary General Comrade Enrico Berlinguer met yesterday with Libyan Prime Minister [Revolution Command Council member] Maj 'Abd as-Salam Jallud, who is visiting Italy at the government's invitation.

During the long and cordial conversation there was an exchange of information and opinions on the principal issues that characterize the international situation and on the state of bilateral relations between Italy and Libya. The meeting was attended by PCI Central Committee member and foreign section chief Comrade Antonuo Rubbi.

Deems Visit 'Success'

AU241955 Rome ANSA in English 1945 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Rome, 24 May (ANSA) -- The Libyan Government's number-two, Major Abd as-Salam Jallud, said here today that his visit to Rome had been "a success" because it had shown Italian willingness to "further expand" Italo-Libyan trade relations.

"Now, the problem is to see whether facts will follow the words," he told a press conference. "In fact, the difficulty on the Italian side is to translate political will into reality."

He also denied that the aim of his visit was specifically to discuss Libyan debts with Italian firms. "These debts exist," he said, "and the two countries put them at 500-600 million dollars, but they are not debts in the ordinary sense of the word. They are the consequence of the negative development trade between the two countries."

According to Jallud, Italian exports to the North Africa state rose from 140 million dollars in 1970 to two billion dollars ten years later.

This year, he said, Libyan contracting and subcontracting with Italian firms had raised the figure to seven billion dollars. But Italy, which bought 800,000 barrels of Libyan crude a day in 1970, bought only 120,000 barrels a day in 1981, he said, adding that "in the last quarter, (oil) imports have almost dropped to zero."

Jallud pointed out that he and then Italian Foreign Minister Aldo Moro signed an agreement by which Italy should buy thirty million tons of Libyan oil a year for fifteen years in return for intense Italian participation in Libyan development.

"But, as the figures show, only the second part of the agreement has been realized," Jallud said, arguing that trade between the two countries should be brought back into balance on the basis of "mutual interest." "To continue down a one-way street would be a grave mistake," he warned.

According to Jallud, in his meetings with Italian Premier Giovanni Spadolini, Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo, Foreign Trade Minister Nicolae Capria, and Minister for State-run industries Gianni de Michelis, he made "precise proposals for a global agreement."

These included expanding the Italian presence in areas such as industry, electrical power, and farming provided Italy resumes buying the 120,000 barrels of Libyan crude it was purchasing last year, with a commitment to return to the levels of 1972 within two years.

Pope Wishes to Visit Libya

AU242008 Rome ANSA in English 2001 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Rome, 24 May (ANSA) -- Pope John Paul II "told me he would like to visit the Libyan Jamahiriyah, and I replied that he would be welcome," Libyan deputy leader, Major Abd as-Salam Jallud, told reporters here today.

Addressing a press conference devoted primarily to his talks with the Italian leaders, he was reporting on an audience he had with the pope at the Vatican City on Saturday. According to Jallud, the pope voiced agreement with Libyan leader Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi's idea that religion should not be cut off from other realities.

"Social and political revolutions cannot last if they are not supported by religion," Jallud quoted the leader of the world's Catholics as explaining.

The Libyan statesman said the audience also covered how religions should deal with the problems of democracy, liberty and social justice.

BALSEMAO EXPRESSES DISSATISFACTION WITH NATO AID

LD250406 Lisbon Domestic Service in Portuguese 2230 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] The prime minister said tonight that Portugal's lack of support from its allies constitutes a potentially dangerous situation.

Speaking at a dinner in Sintra, which he hosted for NATO Secretary General Joseph Luns, who arrived today for a visit, Pinto Balsemao once again mentioned the dissatisfaction with which Portugal view NATO's failure to aid our country.

We have undertaken to assume fully our responsibilities through total participation and this represents a financial burden which we cannot bear alone, Balsemao said. The prime minister said aid from Portugal's allies would go a long way to strengthen solidarity within the alliance and allow the consolidation of political stability and free institutions in Portugal. Such aid pertains not only to the domain of defense but also to the economy, he continued. For years NATO ministerial statements have been reiterating our allies' clear political will to back the economic recovery of the alliance's less favored partners, namely Portugal. But, Balsemao declared, I am forced to recognize that too often nonallied countries were the recipients of much higher generosity. It is a potentially dangerous situation, the prime minister pointed out, especially at a time when events within and outside the treaty area have demonstraced, more than ever, the need for the alliance's cohesion and defenseive capacity.

Finally, referring to Spain's entry into NATO, Balsemao said he had no doubts that the problems arising therefrom would be dealt with in a way so as to reinforce the complementarity of the position of common defense. I can assure you, he went on, that we shall cooperate responsibly to this end while also protecting our national interests.

In fact, the prime minister had already taken the opportunity to uphold these views when, earlier in the day, he held a working meeting with Luns at which they broached our country's political and economic situation. He briefed Luns on the state of constitutional revision work, and, obviously, defense matters in the framework of NATO aid were examined in detail.

Speaking on his arrival at Lisbon Airport, the NATO secretary general had this to say:

[Begin Luns recording in French, followed by reporter's translation] There are no major problems as such between Portugal and NATO. But there exist problems concerning Portugal's defense. Portugal's effort in this sphere is notable but your country has reasons not to be very pleased with the form of the aid provided by your allies. [end recording]

Luns, who described Portugal's participation in the alliance as very positive, particuarly since democracy was established in our country, said that he would continue to do everything in his power so that aid from the allies becomes a reality.

During his 4-day visit, the NATO secretary general will also meet the president of the republic.

FOREIGN MINISTER CLARIFIES USE OF LAJES BASE

PM241025 Lisbon DIARIO DE NOTICIAS in Portuguese 18 May 82 p 1

[Text] "We are not prepared to be a kind of aircraft carrier or airport for foreign forces, even friendly forces," the Portuguese foreign minister said in Luxembourg, when confirming the ban on landing at Lajes at the beginning of this month by U.S. F-16 aircraft bound for Egypt.

The issue of the ban was one of the topics at the meeting between Goncalves Pereira and U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig in conjunction with the North Atlantic council session taking place in Luxembourg. The case of F-16's was apparently analyzed within the framework of the renewal of the agreement on the use of Lajes, which expires 4 February next year.

Goncalves Pereira recalled recent statements by the president of the republic and the defense minister in Brussels on the terms of Spain's participation in NATO's military structure and on the alliance's support for reequipping the Portuguese armed forces, and admitted that the ban on landing by the F-16's falls within a course of action consistent with those statements by Ramalho Eanes and Freitas do Amaral.

The foreign minister said that the government's decision was prepared at his ministry, after the authorities connected with defense had been consulted, stressing that the government reserves "the right to assess the use of Lajes on a case-by-case basis, and this time it decided to say 'no,' owing to reasons understood by all sides."

Goncalves Pereira explained that the stance does not represent "a manifestation of hostility" against the United States, and emphasized that there are no foreign bases in Portugal but national bases, "whose use some states are allowed." The minister believed that, following the contact with Haig, Portuguese needs within NATO "will certainly be examined more carefully by the U.S. State Department."

ANDALUSIAN PARLIAMENT ELECTION RESULTS REPORTED

LD240910 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 0700 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] At a press conference held an hour ago the under secretary of state for the interior, Juan Jose Izarra del Corral, reported on yesterday's elections to the Andalusian parliament. The official provisional results were given by Sr Izarra del Corral as follows: Participation in the poll, 66.18 percent; abstentions 33.81 percent.

The votes were cast as follows: Spanish Socialist Workers' Party [PSOE], 52.59 percent; Popular Alliance [AP] 17.0 percent; Union of the Democratic Center [UCD], 13.02 percent; Communist Party of Andalusia, 8.54 percent; Andalusian Socialist Party [PSA] 5.39 percent. These results give the following distribution of seats: PSOE 66; AP 17; UCD 15; Communist Party of Andalusia 8; [PSA] 3.

The under secretary said that the day had passed without any incidents and also, in his view, that general elections and the elections to the autonomous Parliament of Andalusia should be considered separately. It is expected that the autonomous Government of Andalusia will include some independents when it is constituted some time next August. The Andalusian Parliament will sit for a term of 4 years.

TRIAL OF PUTSCHISTS CONCLUDES; VERDICT ON 3 JUNE

NC241638 Paris AFP in English 1615 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Madrid, 24 May (AFP) -- The marathon trial of 33 men accused of last year's putsch against the Spanish Government concluded in uproar today, with chief defendent Lt-Col Antonio Tejero and 20 of his supporters thrown out of court amid a flurry of shouted insults.

Today's proceedings at the military court where the 33 extreme rightists have been on trial since February 19 were devoted to brief final stratements by the accused. Deeming "abusive" the statement made by Lt-Col Tejero -- a ringleader in the February 23, 1981, coup attempt in which the putshcists occupied parliament for 18 hours -- Court President Lt-Gen Federico Gomez de Salazar ordered him expelled from court.

Before leaving the crowded courtroom, Lt-Col Tejero took time to add that he felt "deep scorn" for the military chiefs of Spain. Some 20 onlookers who rose to their feet to applaud his statement, including a woman who shouted "traitors" at the military judges, were also told to leave.

The three-month trial has been punctuated by similar outbursts by the accused, leading to charges from Spanish democrats that the proceedings resembled a "farce" reminiscent of the Franco era.

Court President Gomez announced that the verdict would be announced on June 3.

NOTT ADDRESSES COMMONS; RULES OUT TRUCE

LD241520 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1507 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] The British warship severely damaged in the Falklands yesterday was the frigate, HMS Antelope, Defence Secretary John Nott disclosed today. Preliminary reports said one person as killed, and seven others wounded, he said in a statement in the Commons.

And a Sea Harrier aircraft crashed last night in an accident shortly after take off -- the pilot was killed, Mr Nott announced. But the cause has not yet been established, although it was not the result of Argentine action.

Reporting to MP's on the British landing on the East Falklands, Mr Nott said the forces were established and their spirits were high. They would move forwards as fast as was reasonably possible.

To a questioner, Mr Nott declared: "There is no question of a truce." He also announced there would almost certainly be a campaign medal for the Falklands operation as well as usual gallantry awards.

But Mr Nott told MP's: "I must emphasise that our men still face formidable problems in difficult terrain with a hostile climate. We must expect fresh attacks upon them, and there can be no question of pressing the force commander to move forward prematurely -- the judgment about the next tactical moves must be his -- and his alone."

"But, one thing is certain; the days of the occupying Argentine garrison are numbered and it will not be long before the Falkland Islanders once again have their democratic rights restored." And Mr Nott said to cheers: "The union flag is today flying over the settlement of San Carlos in East Falkland -- where it will remain."

However, Mr Nott said: "The intensive fighting of the last few days has produced tragic loss of life on our side, and MP's will join with me in conveying the deep sympathy of the whole nation to the relatives and friends of those killed and injured."

Shadow Defence Secretary Mr John Silkin said the opposition was glad "that a number of our fellow citizens on the Falkland Islands have now been liberated." But he urged re-affirmation that the door to negotiations "does not now remain shut."

In his statement, Mr Nott outlined to MP's the actions over the last few days which have left British troops with a bridgehead on East Falkland. He said he thought the amphibious landing on Friday "was an exploit which captured the imagination of our people."

Mr Nott said that since the sinking of the frigate Ardent,during the landing operation, "the task force has been reinforced by the arrival of more, highly capable warships more than compensating for those damaged or lost in action so far."

He also confirmed that six Argentine Mirage and one Skyhawk are known to have been shot down yesterday -- one more than first announced. "Yesterday's events involved the loss of two-thirds of the Argentine aircraft taking part," he said. The Argentine commander had lost "all but a very limited capability" to supply his forces and move them around the islands.

In his statement Mr Nott said of the San Carlos landing: "The whole House will have been delighted to see the expressions of delight on the faces of the islanders and their children -- published widely yesterday."

The landing had been the culmination of a long period of planning by the force commander and preparation by the Royal Marine commanders, members of the Parachute Regiment and supporting arms during their six-week voyage into the South Atlantic.

"The government has been encouraged -- as I think has the country as a whole -- that the opposition and the other main political parties in the House have supported us." And he then paid tribute "to the men and women of the merchant marine for their heroism and skill in these dangerous operations; their role is a vital one."

Mr Nott said that during the landing operation the waves of Argentine air attacks had to run the gauntlet of our air defences. "Sea Harriers shot down eight of their aircraft and total Argentine losses that day are estimated at 14 Mirages and Skyhawks, two Pucaras and four helicopters. These losses represent more than a third of their combat aircraft taking part that day."

Describing Sunday's action Mr Nott said: "With the loss of re-supply ships and six helicopters the Argentine commander has lost all but a very limited capability to supply his forces and move them around the islands."

He added however: "I regret to confirm that in yesterday's action, the frigate, HMS Antelope, sustained severe damage. Our latest information -- and this is based on preliminary reports -- is that one of her ship's company was killed and seven others were wounded.

"I must also inform the House, with great regret, of the loss of one of our Sea Harriers last night. This aircraft met with an accident shortly after launching from one of our carriers and the pilot was killed. This accident was not as a result of Argentine action and the cause has yet to be established."

Mr Nott said that names of casualties in the conflict would not be released until the next-of-kin had been informed, "although to counter the false propaganda coming out of Argentina we have had to give some general information on the progress of military action as soon as it is confirmed."

Replying to Mr Silkin, Mr Nott said he would "check up" on the shadow defence secretary's inquiry about news agency reports on the possibility of South Africa supplying arms to Argentina.

"I have no knowledge of it," said Mr Nott. On negotiations, he said: "I think we must at the moment concentrate on the military aim of repossessing the Falkland Islands, and any question of talks about the long term future of the Falkland Islanders must be left on the side for the moment."

The crucial thing was to find out what the wishes of the Falkland Islanders were. "We can do that properly when we have repossessed the islands," he said. But Mr Nott told MP's: "Eventually some long term accommodation will be needed between the Falkland Islands and other countries in that area -- that must be right."

Replying to Dr David Owen (SDP [Social Democratic Party] Devonport) about HMS Ardent, Mr Nott had to tell him that another Devonport based ship, the Antelope, was badly damaged. Mr Nott said: "She's not in a good condition. She's seriously damaged."

On future negotiations, he emphasised that the government had last week referred to a United Nations Charter which had recognised the principle that the interests of the Falkland Islands were "paramount."

"On this basis we are prepared to discuss the future of the Falkland Islands when we have asked the views of the Falkland Islanders themselves," he said. It would be "quite wrong" to talk about negotiation until the islands had been repossessed.

Mr Enoch Powell (OUP [Official Unionist Party] South Down) asked Mr Nott: "Why is the Foreign Secretary Mr Francis Pym still permitted to continue to use language which is incompatible with the continued possession of the islands in the long term?" But Mr Nott replied: "I don't believe Mr Pym has made any statement which would imply that."

To Labour MP for Dudley East, Dr John Gilbert, Mr Nott said that the military objective was to move forward "as fast as reasonably possible" with the minimum number of casualties.

Mr Nott said: "We are now established firmly on the island." He said: "We shall go through with the necessary means to repossess the islands as a whole." The defence secretary was replying to pacifist Labor MP Mr Frank Allaun (Salford East) who urged the "war cabinet" to consider a cease-fire or a truce by both sides for 48 hours, to "stop the growing casualties."

Ignoring cries of "Oh no" and "Sell out" from the Tory benches, he went on: "This would give a chance for the UN negotiation now rather than later when they are bound to come." But Mr Nott replied: "The casualties have arisen as a direct result of illegal aggression by the Argentinians and their failure to comply with mandatory UN Resolution 502." He added: "There is no question of a truce."

Mr Gerry Fitt (Socialist Belfast West) told MP's to cheers: "The bellicose and belligerent statements emanating from the extremely anti-British government in Dublin are not representative of the Irish people." "We do not see Britain as the aggressor," he declared.

Tory Mr Alan Clark (Plymouth Sutton) urged the government to give medals for gallantry following the crisis and that a Falklands campaign medal of its own should be given. Mr Nott said awards for gallantry would be made in the normal way and a campaign medal would be considered. He said: "I think it almost certain we will agree to have a campaign medal for the Falkland Islands."

Dr Gavin Strang (Edinburgh East) who today resigned from Labour's front bench over Falklands policy, said, "It is because of our support for the armed services and the value we put on their lives that many of us are opposed to their use in these circumstances. Is it now government policy to recapture the Falklands regardless of the loss of young British and Argentine lives?"

Mr Nott replied, "Yes, it is the government's intention to repossess the Falkland Islands, and return them to full British administration."

Mr Nott also told MP's that he did not believe the morale of the Argentine forces on the islands was high. They were clearly suffering from a shortage of food and supplies. But he added: "It would be wrong to assume from that that the Argentinian forces will not fight, and fight hard. We may still have a very difficult fight on our hands."

'Panorama' Interview

LD242034 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1946 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Defence Secretary Mr John Nott warned tonight a "very tough fight" might lie ahead for British troops on the Falklands. Interviewed on BBC TV's "Panorama" programme he said: "Nothing is certain in a battle of this sort. It may well be a very tough fight. I think the morale of the Argentine garrisons is low but they may fight very hard so I cannot be sure that we will not have further casualties."

Mr Nott went on: "I think it is important we move fast but that kind of tactical decision is for the forces on the spot. The task force commander has been told to repossess the Falkland Islands at the earliest possible opportunity."

Questioned about the possibility of a cease-fire, he said firmly: "The Argentines have continuously said they wanted a cease-fire but every time that has been put to the test they have shown absolute intransigence." He said only with a withdrawal by the Argentines would a cease-fire be "a sensible or possible option."

Referring to the landing by British troops Mr Nott said: "It went on the whole very well. The military aim has been achieved, and achieved with remarkably little loss of life." Later, Mr Nott said: "We would like to recreate the situation where the islanders can live in peace with their neighbours. If, in the short term, that does not prove possible it will be necessary to garrison the islands. There is a total rupture in relations between the islanders and Argentina at the moment, but that need not necessarily be long lasting. After this is over, we must try and recreate good relations between Argentina, Britain and the islanders -- I think that is possible."

Mr Nott said there had been a lot of exaggerated talk about the cost of defending the islands in the future. But he said the garrison would need to be larger than the previous one, with some submarines and air cover as well.

The Argentine foreign minister, Mr Costa Mendez, said it was "not my information" that British troops were consolidating their hold on the islands.

POLL SHOWS MAJORITY BACKING FOR TROOP LANDINGS

LD242054 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2030 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Four out of five people believe the government was right to land troops in force on the Falklands, according to an opinion poll out tonight.

The Mori poll for BBC-1's "Panorama" programme said 80 percent backed the government, with 14 percent believing the decision was mistaken. With British forces back on the islands, 63 percent think they should go on fighting until the Argentines leave, while 33 percent would prefer a cease-fire and negotiations.

Of those who want to force an Argentine withdrawal, 82 percent think this should be Britain's objective, even if it involves considerable loss of British life. Opinion is much more evenly divided what Britain should do once the islands are retaken. 54 percent would be happy for them to be retained forever, 34 percent think that unacceptable.

Asked whether British football teams should compete in the World Cup, 73 percent thought they should, 17 percent thought they should not. The poll was carried out among 1,091 adults in 54 sampling points on Sunday.

CANBERRA ALLEGEDLY HIT; MINISTRY WON'T COMMENT

LD250024 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0013 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Ministry of Defence Spokesman Mr Ian McDonald said last night (Monday) he had "no comment" to make on an Argentine news agency report that Argentine aircraft may have hit and seriously damaged the troopship Canberra.

REUTER reported that the official Argentine news agency, TELAM, had quoted a highly-placed military source as having said that the requisitioned liner may have been hit by at least four powerful bombs during air raids on the San Carlos area of East Falkland.

THREE LABOUR MP'S LOSE POSTS OVER FALKLANDS VOTE

LD250400 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0330 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Labour's front bench spokesman on agriculture Dr Gavin Strang has resigned over his party's support of the Falklands landings. Two junior shadow ministers, Mr Tam Dalyell (science) and Mr Andrew Faulds (arts), have been told by Labour leader Michael Foot they are being sacked along with Mr John Tilley (home affairs).

The three were among 30 Labour MP's who voted against the government last week at the end of the emergency debate on the Falklands.

Dr Strang, the member for Edinburgh East, did not take part in last week's vote because he was attending a long-standing speaking engagement in Wales.

Mr Foot had made it plain all along that the three who voted against the government had sacked themselves, and that their resignations would not be accepted, even if they chose to offer them.

Dr Strang said: "I believe the decision to invade the Falkland Islands was politically and military wrong. I wish to be free to argue for the earliest possible end to this unjustified sacrifice of young British and Argentine lives."

Mr Dalyell said: "I am very angry indeed. My view, bluntly, is that he was sacked the wrong guy." "If he wants to sack anyone, it should have been John Silkin, Labour's chief defence spokesman." Mr Dalyell accused Mr Silkin of making "fatuous speeches about the Argentines being tinpot" and "giving the impression that the whole thing was going to be a walkover."

Mr Silkin said of Mr Dalyell's comments: "He is entitled to his opinion. That is one of the things I believe the Falkland Islanders are entitled to — free speech."

DAILY STAR CLAIMS HELICOPTER ASSEMBLED IN CHILE

LD250438 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0430 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] The Ministry of Defense said early today they had no knowledge of a report that the British helicopter, which mysteriously crashed in Chile last week, had been assembled secretly by RAF technicians at a Chilean airbase.

The report, in today's DAILY STAR, said the Sea King was on its way to join the task force just hours after being unpacked from a crate. It had been one of 24 helicopters, the report claimed, which had been flown in their boxes by an American C-130 Galaxy heavy transport plane from Ascension Island.

The newspaper quoted a military source as saying that the Chilean protest over the intrusion into their air space was designed to mislead the Argentinians about the extent of the "tremendous help" Chile had extended to Britain.

But a Ministry of Defence spokesman said: "I have absolutely no knowledge of that report whatsoever."

The helicopter's crew of three are thought to be on the run, believing they are in Argentine territory.

HARRIERS ATTACK PORT STANLEY; NO GROUND CONTACT

LD250632 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0628 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Eight Argentinian aircraft are now believed to have been destroyed during yesterday's attacks on the Falklands task force, the Ministry of Defence announced today.

Earlier, the ministry said that seven planes were destroyed and that one was seen trailing smoke as it flew off. In a brief statement the ministry also announced renewed attacks by Royal Navy and Royal Air Force Harriers on Port Stanley Airfield during yesterday's action.

"All our aircraft returned safely," it said. "On the ground there have been no reports of contact with Argentine forces."

The ministry said there had been no further reports of damage to British ships or of casualties during yesterday's air attacks when waves of Mirages and Skyhawk jets tried to bomb vessels in San Carlos water.

A spokesman for the Ministry of Defence said he had no information concerning claims by the Argentinian news agency, TELAM, that the troop ship Canberra was hit by four bombs during the action.

The minister of defence has admitted that some task force ships suffered damage during yesterday's air attacks. It also announced last night that the frigate HMS Antelope had sunk after being badly damaged by Argentinian bombs on Sunday. Britain has now lost three warships to enemy action. The others were the destroyers HMS Sheffield and the frigate HMS Ardent.

But Argentina has lost a total of 70 planes and helicopters and as the country celebrates its independence day today the junta may attempt to score a propaganda victory before its air force is further depleted.

Meanwhile, in New York, the United Nations Security Council will meet again today to debate a solution tabled by Ireland and Panama for an immediate cease-fire.

RHINE ANTIAIRCRAFT UNIT TO MOVE TO FALKLANDS

LD251228 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1211 GMT 25 May 82

[By Robert Hutchinson, PA defence correspondent]

[Text] A Royal Artillery battery of Blowpipe anti-aircraft missiles is being moved from the Rhine Army in Germany to boost air defence of ground forces in the Falklands, it was understood in Whitehall today.

The Defence Ministry confirmed the movement of the unit, armed with the shoulder-fired missiles, but would not discuss "operational details."

But it is understood NATO has been officially informed of the withdrawal plans. No territorial unit is to be called up to fill the gap in the British Army of the Rhine.

The decision comes after four days of intense Argentine attacks on shipping inside San Carlos water, off the British beachhead in the Falklands.

ARGENTINA REPORTED TO AGAIN BE USING ETENDARDS

PM251101 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 25 May 82 p 1

[Kenneth Clarke dispatch: "Argentines 'Using Etendards'"]

[Excerpt] Buenos Aires -- Argentina is reported to have brought into battle its half-dozen French-made Super Etendard strike aircraft, one of which sank the destroyer Sheffield with an Exocet air-to-sea missile.

It is not known whether the missile itself has again been fired, or whether the planes are employing more conventional weapons due to the topography of Falkland Sound, between the two islands, where the action has been taking place.

NEW 'DOG-FIGHT' MISSILE DEVELOPED WITH FRG

PM251207 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 25 May 82 p 4

[Air Cdr G.S. Cooper report: "Dog-Fight Role for Weapon"]

[Excerpt] Britain's missile designers are perfecting a new type of close combat weapon to replace the Sidewinder heat-seeking missiles being used so effectviely by task force Harriers against Argentine Mirage and Skyhawk fighter bombers.

Originally called Taildog, the missile is being designed for use in dog-fights. The weapon concept provides a further illustration of the way in which the designers are greatly increasing the effectiveness of combat aircraft and ships by improving the capability of the weapons they carry.

The new missile known as ASRAAM -- advanced short-range air-to-air missile -- will enable attacks to be made on enemy aircraft from any angle. It will be able to turn corners tighter than any aircraft can fly.

Britain and Germany are working together on the project to produce a standard missile for use by all NATO countries while the United States is working separately to produce a medium-range missile replacement for Sparrow air defence weapons.

All three countries will be able to share in the production of the two missile types.

Work on the highly agile short-range missile is being done jointly by British Aerospace Dynamics and Bodenseewerk Geratetechnik in West Germany. A prototype has already been successfully fired.

The missile is wingless, uses an infra-red seeker to find the target, and is steered by swivel nozzle thrust vector control which is not unlike the Harrier's thrust vector system. Motor and actuation systems have been developed by Imperial Metal Industries, Summerfield, and Sperry Gyroscope.

POPE'S VISIT 'HAS NOT BEEN SUSPENDED YET'

AU241519 Rome ANSA in English 1514 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] Vatican City, 24 May (ANSA) -- Pope John Paul II's historic visit to Great Britain, on the calendar for May 28 to June 2, "has not been suspended up to the present time," informed ecclesiastical sources in the Vatican said today.

Commenting on speculation that the papal trip might be called off because of British-Argentine hostilities in the South Atlantic, these usually well informed sources said that the itinerary for the visit might be reduced, however,

It was also learned that Msgr Paul Marcinkus, the churchman responsible for the organization of the pope's travels, is expected to depart for London tomorrow where he will reportedly discuss a series of changes for the planned visit with British Episcopal leaders.

The pontiff's trip has been spoken of as a pilgrimage but a meeting between the head of the world's Roman Catholics and Queen Elizabeth II has not been ruled out.

476-MILLION POUND REBATE FROM EEC ACCEPTED

LD250201 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0152 GMT 25 May 82

[By Geoff Meade, PA staff reporter in Brussels]

[Text] Britain accepted a rebate of 476 million pounds on its 1982 Common Market budget contributions early today. After nine hours of tough talking here, Foreign Secretary Mr Francis Pym and other EEC foreign ministers agreed to the deal -- far less than Mrs Thatcher had wanted.

It lasts for only this year instead of the five-year arrangement the prime minister had requested originally, and is also not as good in cash terms as hoped for.

The deal involves a 476 million pounds rebate in contrast to the 570 million pounds Britain had been seeking. The estimated UK net contribution to Brussels this year is about 1,000 million pounds.

However, Mr Pym seemed satisfied with the outcome as he left the negotiations. "I am very glad to tell you that we have reached agreement for the budget for 1982," he told waiting journalists.

He said not only would Britain get the cash rebate this year, but the UK's partners had also agreed to adjust the amount if Britain's estimated net contributions to the budget increased during 1982.

Mr Pym also received a commitment that talks on a long-term arrangement to solve Britain's budget problems would begin by November. "These have been long and difficult negotiations, but I am pleased we have achieved this agreement, even though it is limited to 1982," said Mr Pym as he left for London.

The exact rebate is 476 million pounds, 26 million pounds more than Britain was originally offered, but about 25 million pounds less than Mr Pym had held out for. Bartering over the precise amount, plus complications over how the rebate was to be financed by other community countries, dragged the talks long into the night.

Mr Pym had agreed reluctantly to consider another temporary deal similar to the one which drastically cut Britain's contributions in 1980 and 1981. In the last two years rebates totalling nearly 1,600 million pounds have been paid to Britain.

Mr Pym was under strong pressure to take back to Britain some budget concessions to present to the Commons. Asked if he thought the deal would win favour in Parliament, Mr Pym said it was important to look at the total repayments over the three years since Britain's problem was recognised.

Although falling far short of the UK's original requirements, the deal will come as a relief to Mrs Thatcher as well as Britain's partners. It gives the Community a brief breathing space in the long-running wrangle, and looks likely to remove the possibility of a British withdrawal of EEC contributions because of it.

HAUGHEY BLAMES BAD RELATIONS ON ULSTER PLAN

PM241339 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 24 May 82 p 9

[Dublin correspondent dispatch]

[Text] Mr Haughey, the Irish prime minister, yesterday blamed the poor state of Anglo-Irish relations on the British Government's devolution plans for Ulster rather than on Dublin's position on the Falklands.

The plans announced by Mr Prior, Ulster secretary, would come to be regarded as "one of the most disastrous things" that had ever been proposed for the province, Mr Haughey said in a radio interview. They had the unique distinction of being opposed by every section in Ireland.

He suggested that the British insistence on going ahead with the devolution plans had seriously injured the Anglo-Irish process because they "side-stepped and downgraded" the growing relationship between Dublin and London.

Mr Haughey said he accepted that there was a latent anti-Irish feeling in Britain since Dublin voted to end the EEC trade sanctions against Argentina. He described as "grossly irresponsible" a suggestion in one newspaper that Ireland had stabbed Britain in the back. "Hostility in the British press is simply a price we have to pay for our honourable role as a peace-loving nation," he said.

Mr Haughey said a summit meeting with Mrs Thatcher had not been arranged, and it would not be reasonable to ask for one while Britain was engaged in this "appalling situation."

It was confirmed in Dublin yesterday that the former prime minister, Dr Garrett Fitzgerald, warned Mr Prior of a possible breakdown of Anglo-Irish relations last February. He said the devolution plans "would be certain to be unacceptable to the minority in Northern Ireland and hence unworkable."

'Strain' Reviewed

LD241928 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1907 GMT 24 May 82

[By Chris Moncrieff, PA chief political correspondent]

[Text] Britain is now on less than cordial terms with the Republic of Ireland over Prime Minister's Haughey's decision to remain neutral over the Falkland Islands crisis. The word from Whitehall today is that Mrs Thatcher is angry that her government has not got the full-blooded backing from Dublin she had hoped for.

The cabinet is said to be "fed up" with the line the Dublin government has adopted, which could imperil the next Anglo-Irish summit in July. And as one Whitehall official put it bluntly: "Relations are strained."

Meanwhile, the prime minister refused a request by a Tory MP to end talks with the republic "concerning any matter.... while the Irish Government maintains its policy of neutrality during the present conflict with Argentina." Even so, she told Mr Harvey Proctor in a Commons written answer: "I share your disappointment at the attitude adopted by the Irish Government over European Community sanctions against Argentina. Nevertheless, I do not believe that it would be to our advantage to discontinue talks on issues of interest to the UK."

Meanwhile, Mr Gerry Fitt fiercely attacked the "anti-British government" in Dublin. His courageous intervention, during Commons exchanges this evening, will come as a bitter blow to Mr Haughey, since Mr Fitt has always been, and still is, a staunch and highly influential anti-unionist in Northern Ireland politics. He told MP's: "The bellicose and belligerent statements emanating from the extremely anti-British government in Dublin are not representative of the Irish people." Mr John Nott, the defence secretary, told him that he welcomed these remarks.

So the temperature between London and Dublin is now decidedly cool and threatening to become icy.

EVREN ADDRESSES ISLAMIC DEVELOPMENT BANK MEETING

TA241346 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 24 May 82

[Opening speech by head of state Gen Kenan Evren at sixth annual Islamic Development Bank Board of Governors meeting in Istanbul, 24 May -- recorded]

[Excerpts] Dear Guests: It is with great pleasure that I welcome into our country the distinguished delegates of the Islamic Development Bank member countries. The assembling of all Islamic countries which are bound with historic, cultural and moral ties in the Islamic Conference organization in a bid to develop and revive cooperation in the political, economic, cultural and other fields greatly contributes to world peace. Mobilizing their existing social and economic strength within the framework of common humanitarian goals [words indistinct] The cooperation among Islamic countries is in no way influenced by a bloc or country and contributes in a significant way to global and regional stability and security. Turkey is an integral part of the Islamic world. Our country attaches great importance to the furthering of existing historic and moral ties and to the establishment of a fruitful cooperation with the Islamic countries in all fields.

Turkey views the Islamic Conference as a forum in which the common moral values, which result from adhering to the same religion, are further strengthened and views the conference as a beneficial and constructive tool which stimulates cooperation among its member countries.

It is as a result of these principles that our relations with the Islamic Conference and the Arab world constitute an important part of our foreign policies. Presently, both our region and the world at large are witnessing sharp problems and differences. It is with concern that Turkey views these developments, which threaten peace in our region and the world. Undoubtedly the most important issue threatening international peace and stability and causing unrest in our region is the Arab-Israeli conflict. The Palestinian problem is the crux of this issue. For a long time, Turkey has favored the solution of this problem by means of a comprehensive, just and lasting solution. We are relentlessly supporting, both in our bilateral and international relations, the just cause of the Arab world and the Palestinian people.

We consider as a threat to peace the intransigent and aggressive Israeli policies in the region based on faits accomplis. Turkey believes that for a just solution to the Middle East problem, Israel must withdraw from the territories it occupied -- including Jerusalem -- and all the legal rights of the Palestinian people, including self-determination, must be recognized and the PLO must participate, together with the other interested parties, in peace efforts as equal partners. The Turkish people pay special importance to the preservation of the Arabic and Islamic character of sacred Jerusalem. Turks who have for centuries been the careful guardians of Jerusalem and the sacred places are tied to these places with historic and moral links.

We pay great importance to the preservation of the liberty, integrity of its territories and sovereignty of Lebanon -- which has been the scene of domestic struggles -- under its legal government.

We desire that the Afghan problem be resolved through political means as soon as possible. The solution should provide for the territorial integrity and sovereignty of that country.

The war between our neighboring countries, Iran and Iraq, is a source of concern and sorrow for us. In the face of this war between two Islamic countries, Turkey has adopted a stand of complete impartiality and has expressed in all occasions its desire for the peaceful solution of the conflict. I would like to point out here that we appreciate the efforts being exerted by the Islamic Conference in a bid to stop the war between two member countries. Turkey will continue to exert efforts, doing its best to stop the bloodshed in its two neighboring countries and to establish a just and honorable peace.

Dear Guests: The conflicts and differences which appear now and then among the various Islamic countries is of great concern to Turkey as well as the Islamic world. We must exert efforts in a bid to find together and as soon as possible the solutions to remedy these conflicts and differences. The Islamic world must, now more than ever, stand united. This unity must be realized in the form of concrete steps in the political, economic, cultural and social fields. The fact that all Islamic countries believe in this unity makes all of us hopeful of the future.

The resolutions to be made here by the distinguished delegates of the Islamic Development Bank member countries and the efforts to be made for the implementation of these resolutions will contribute to the promotion of Islamic solidarity. I am convinced that the members of this meeting will successfully accomplish this honorable task. It is with these thoughts and my best wishes for your successful work that I greet you with respect.

Ozal on Cooperation, Jerusalem

TA251127 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] The Islamic Development Bank Board of Governors meeting has ended in Istanbul. State and Deputy Prime Minister Turgut Ozal has said that Israel, which was forced into Islamic geography by the civilized world, has reached a stage where it is threatening world peace in the region. Ozal addressed the closing session of the bank Board of Governors meeting today.

In his speech, Ozal said establishment of a serious export financing institution and the undertaking of infrastructure investments among Islamic countries will play a significant role in developing relations and accelerating development. Ozal explained that sentiments and opinions not supported by economic strength are condemned to remain unfulfilled dreams. He noted that countries more extensively pool their economic resources, adding that in recent years Islamic countries made significant progress in this.

Ozal said there are two important subjects that can be implemented the next few years to accelerate development: One an investment in regional infrastructure and the maintenance of efficient connections among Islamic countries, and the other financing exports. Ozal continued: The establishment of a serious export financing institution would greatly benefit the development of trade. Islamic countries could import at reduced prices and export profits could remain in the region. The increased volume of trade would be accompanied by an increased rate of development.

Ozal noted that Israel, which was forced into Islamic geography by the civilized world, has reached a stage where it is threatening world peace in the region. Pointing out that Israel brought blood and gunpowder to the Middle East, Ozal added: The most regrettable point is that this error is still continuing. We Turks, who have for years served and guarded Jerusalem and the sacred places, can in no way accept a change of the status of this holy city through faits accomplis. Ozal said it is Turkey's most sincere wish to see a just and honorable peace end the Iran-Iraq war.

Jordanian Finance Minister Salim Masa'idah was elected president of the next meeting of the Islamic Development Bank Board of Governors.

ULUSU VISIT TO CYPRUS BLATANT PROVOCATION

TA251025 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 25 May 82

[Station commentary]

[Excerpt] Junta Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu's visit to Cyprus constitutes a blatant provocation against the forces defending the independence, territorial integrity and sovereignty of the island. On the pretext of this visit, the junta and the civilian reactionaries greatly incited chauvinism and enmity.

They showed again they are totally opposed to the Turkish and Greek Cypriot communities' efforts to resolve their problems through peaceful negotiations and that they will continue to pursue their policy of invasion and annexation. The slogans raised by the followers of the junta during Ulusu's visit to Cyprus, such as "We cannot live with the Greek Cypriots," "Cyprus is Turkish" and "No to international conferences," constitute coarse proof of their insistence to keep the island a center of tension and an open sore in the region.

Why are the followers of the junta, the civilian reactionaries and their extension in Cyprus, the Denktas clique, opposed to discussing the Cyprus problem at an international conference? Why do they say they cannot live side by side with the Greek Cypriots and embrace the policy of tension, chauvinism and annexation, against peace and friendship? Because through their policy of oppression and terror implemented in our country, as well as their dangerous policy in the wake of U.S. imperialism and NATO, the followers of the junta have been isolated in the international field. With the exception of the likes of Reagan and Haig, all progressive and democratic forces in the world have adopted a stance against the Cyprus policy of the militarist circles in Turkey. No one except the U.S. imperialists and the ruling circles of NATO is supporting the occupation of Cyprus by Turkish troops. If the followers of the junta agree to discussion of the Cyprus problem at an international conference, then their invasionist policy will again be condemned before the world and new resolutions will be adopted for the withdrawal of the Turkish troops occupying the island. This is why the followers of the junta are opposed to taking up the Cypurs problem at an international conference.

This policy directly serves the interests of U.S. imperialism. As is known, the United States is planning to drag Cyprus into NATO and transform the island into an unsinkable NATO base. These aims of the Washington administrators were again revealed during Haig's visit to Ankara.

An anti-imperialist and peaceful settlement that will guarantee the brotherly coexistence of the two communities constitutes the basic solution of the Cyprus problem. This wish was reiterated during the 15th congress of AKEL. The resolutions adopted envisage rapprochement between the Turkish and Greek Cypriot communities, establishment of sound brotherly relations and development of the economic, democratic and social rights of the workers. These resolutions are compatible with the interests of the Turkish and Greek Cypriot communities on the island. The Turkish Communist Party is in favor of a lasting and just peace in Cyprus.

LABOR GROUP GENERAL CONGRESS MEETS IN ANKARA

TA241157 Anakara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] The general congress of the Turkish Confederation of Labor [TURK-IS] has convened in Ankara. TURK-IS leader Ibrahim Denizcier pointed out that the confederation stressed the importance of maintaining labor peace. In an opening speech, Denizcier stated that the workers must have conditions of peace and security, adding that during this period expecting sacrifices only from one group would indirectly affect production.

Denizcier stressed that the cost of living was rising, the workers' purchasing power regressing and that consequently the minimum wage should be raised. Referring to the work of the arbitration board that regulates salaries, Denizcier maintained that with its structure and method of operation, the board was violating its own principles. He said: We believe the arbitration board did not do what was expected of it.

In conclusion, Denizcier said that he was resigning from the chairmanship on his own free will but that he would continue to be an active unionist. The TURK-IS general congress, whose chairman is Denizcier, will last 5 days.

CYPRUS

SPOKESMAN VIEWS KIPRIANOU VISIT TO NEW YORK

NC251050 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1030 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Answering a question, the government spokesman stated that the future of the intercommunal dialogue will depend on the exchange of views which President Kiprianou will have in New York with UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar on 8 June.

GREECE

FRENCH PRIME MINISTER ARRIVES ON OFFICIAL VISIT

NC221523 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1400 GMT 22 May 82

[Text] French Prime Minister Mauroy arrived in Athens this afternon. Mauroy will be received by President Karamanlis and then leave for Idhra [Island] where he will meet and have talks with Prime Minister Papandreou. The talks between the Greek and French prime ministers will continue tomorrow aboard a ship that will take them to Palaia Epidhavros where "The Mediterranean: Always and Today" conference is concluding today.

Attends Mediterranean Congress

NC241030 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 0900 GMT 24 May 82

[Text] French Prime Minister Pierre Mauroy this morning departed for Paris. He had participated in the congress that had been organized in Idhra on "The Mediterranean: Always and Today." French Minister of Culture Jack Lang and the other French officials departed with Mauroy. The French prime minister was seen off at Ellinikon Airport by Deputy Foreign Minister Kapsis, the prime minister's diplomatic counsellor, Makhairitsas, and the French ambassador.

CHAMBER PASSES BILL ON SPAIN'S NATO ADMISSION

NC250733 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 0400 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] At 0100 the Chamber of Deputies approved in principle, article-by-article, by majority vote, the bill ratifying Spain's admission to NATO.

DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 102 26 May 1982

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Zimbabwe's Mugabe Meets With Schmidt, Genscher J 1
Departs for Brussels J 1
Schmidt Criticizes UK Action in Falklands J 1
SI 'Extraordinarily Concerned' J 2

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Foreign Ministry Aide Reviews C. American Visit L 1
[AVANTE! 22 May]
PRC Military Delegation in Rome for Talks L 2

UNITED KINGDOM

Nott Announces Fund; Denies Canberra Hit Q 1
Thatcher: No Negotiation Before Withdrawal Q 1
Labor Asks For Moderation Q 2
Fighting Accelerates on Enemy Independence Day Q 2
TELAM Reports Harriers Downed Q 2
Air Attacks Repelled Q 3
Destroyer 'Badly Damaged' Q 3
Helicopter Crew Found in Chile Q 4
One Ship Sunk; One Abandoned Q 5
Nott Tells Falklanders 'Liberation in Progress' Q 5
Argentine Garrison Commander To Be Moved to UK Q 7

OTHER COUNTRIES

AUSTRIA

President Will Propose U.S.-USSR Summit in Vienna U 1
[DIE PRESSE 25 May]

U.S. Official's Remarks Deemed 'Interference' U 1
[VOLKSSTIMME 25 May]

CYPRUS

Interlocutors Comment Prior to 25 May Meeting U 1

FRANCE

Marchais, Berlinguer Meet; Discuss Euroleft U 2
Mitterrand Returns From African Tour 26 May U 2

SPAIN

Crude Oil Purchases From Iraq To Be Reduced U 2
PLO Office Denies Any Contacts With ETA U 3

GREECE

Parties View Chamber Vote on Spanish NATO Entry U 3
[ELEVTHEROTIPIA 25 May]

TURKEY

Islamic Conference Leader Praises Turkish Role U 3

ZIMBABWE'S MUGABE MEETS WITH SCHMIDT, GENSCHER

LD251324 Hamburg DPA in German 1225 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Bonn, 25 May (DPA) -- The Federal Republic and the young African Republic of Zimbabwe want to strengthen further and expand their good relations. This was jointly stressed today in Bonn by Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and the prime minister of Zimbabwe, Robert Mugabe. Following a lengthy exchange of views with Mugabe, the chancellor once again assured the African state of Bonn's continued support. Mugabe expressed particular gratitude for German aid and described the Federal Republic as one of his country's "greatest friends".

One main topic of the discussion in the chancellor's office was the situation in southern Africa. The two politicians strongly denounced the system of racial segregation in the South African Republic. They further concurred in their demand that the rate of advance along the road to Namibia's independence, which is under South African administration, be accelerated. Schmidt expressed optimism that all disputed issues which are still unsettled, particularly with regard to the future election system in Namibia, can be solved by the end of this year through compromise.

The chancellor stressed, at the same time that the course of political reconciliation embarked upon by Mugabe in Zimbabwe demonstrates how a peaceful and ordered coexistence between blacks and whites is possible. Zimbabwe has become an important factor of stability which has an influence on the entire region of southern Africa. Mugabe praised the Federal Republic which plays an important role in the efforts for peace and security and for detente between East and West and spoke of Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's "splendid achievement."

The African politician, who is on a tour of seven West European cities and is in the Federal Republic for the first time, has had two meetings in Bonn with Schmidt. Meetings with Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, with Federal President Karl Carstens and with representatives of German industry are also on the agenda. Genscher and the foreign minister of Zimbabwe, Witness Mangwende, today signed a capital aid agreement worth DM70 million. Since its independence 2 years ago, Bonn has granted Zimbabwe, formerly Rhodesia, DM226 million in credit and subsidies.

The International Society for Human Rights (Frankfurt) today called on the Federal Government to make further financial aid for Zimbabwe dependent on progress in the sphere of human rights in the country. The society drew attention to the fate of the 62-year-old Parliamentary Deputy Wally Stuttaford who is imprisoned in Salisbury without a regular trial, apparently for political reasons, and who has suffered "brutal physical maltreatment."

Departs for Brussels

LD260840 Hamburg DPA in German 0811 GMT 26 May 82

[Text] Bonn, 26 May (DPA) -- The prime minister of Zimbabwe, Robert Mugabe, flew to Brussels this morning following his 2 days of talks in Bonn. The African politician had meetings in Bonn with Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, Federal President Karl Carstens and Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher. The Federal Government promised during the talks that it would continue to support the development of Zimbabwe which became independent 2 years ago.

SCHMIDT CRITICIZES UK ACTION IN FALKLANDS

LD251816 Hamburg DPA in German 1454 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Bonn, 25 May (DPA) -- For the first time Chancellor Helmut Schmidt has openly displayed a critical attitude toward Great Britain's actions in the war over the Falkland Islands.

On Tuesday Schmidt told the SPD Parliamentary Group that the solidarity with Britain as an alliance partner gave the Federal Government the opportunity, maybe even the moral duty, to exercise influence on Britain together with the other partners as regards observing a sense of proportion about the means used.

Schmidt also stressed that the FRG of course supports UN Resolution 502, which demands the withdrawal of Argentine troops and the start of negotiations. The chancellor also stressed Bonn's support for the efforts to negotiate a settlement of the conflict.

According to Schmidt, the Federal Government decided to take part in the indefinitely prolonged economic sanctions within the EEC against Argentina only after overcoming "very great reservations." Speaking of the conflict and alluding to the Soviet Union, the chancellor said that to date only one power in the world has benefited from the Falkland crisis.

The SPD Parliamentary Group adopted a statement made by the SPD Executive yesterday to the effect that the Falkland/Malvinas conflict is "no longer acceptable politically and on a human basis." The conflict entails dangers of war far beyond the region. Argentina and Great Britain are called upon to return to the negotiating table irrespective of nationalistic moods.

According to Parliamentary Group Spokesman Knut Terjung, on the NATO summit in Bonn on 10 June Schmidt is confident that the two basic elements of NATO policy will be incorporated in the final communique: On the one hand firmness in the preservation of the military balance, on the other the serious will to engage in dialogue and negotiations, particularly in the important sphere of disarmament. Schmidt termed useful and necessary the visit of American President Ronald Reagan the day before in Bonn and the day after in Berlin.

Schmidt says that the high level of American interest rates, arising from the high American budget deficits, will justifiably be the main issue at the economic summit of leading Western industrial countries in Paris at the beginning of June. Schmidt claimed that the FRG is just about the only state in West Europe which has largely dissociated itself from the U.S. interest rates with its stringent monetary policy. As at previous meetings no miracles can be expected from the economic summit, Schmidt said, yet worse things such as trade protectionism might be prevented.

As he did yesterday in the meeting of the SPD Executive, Schmidt supported close cooperation with France and expressly included security policy together with arms cooperation. This was taken as renewed lobbying by the chancellor for the development of a joint German-French tank, which had encountered doubts and some opposition among the SPD and FDP Parliamentary Groups. According to Terjung, Schmidt told the Parliamentary Group that at the recent meeting in Hamburg French President Francois Mitterrand drew his attention to the need from a French viewpoint for close arms policy cooperation.

Schmidt also went into the recent difficult EEC negotiations on farm prices and the British contributions, expressing understanding for London's difficulties. The net payments by Great Britain to the EEC are to be lowered to DM1.7-1.8 billion this year, whereas London would otherwise have paid DM4 billion more into the EEC coffers than it would have received. The new farm prices, according to the chancellor, work out at a rise of 7 percent for German producers and 0.4 percent for the consumer.

SI 'Extraordinarily Concerned'

LD252100 Hamburg DPA in German 2010 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Helsinki, 25 May (DPA) -- Willy Brandt, Chairman of Socialist International and SPD chairman, sees in the conflict between Great Britain and Argentina over the Falkland Islands a threat to world peace. In an interview on Finnish television Brandt said on Tuesday evening in Helsinki that Socialist International, which begins a 2-day meeting in the Finnish capital on Wednesday, is extraordinarily concerned about the conflict. Brandt called upon the countries involved in the war to observe international law and to maintain a sense of proportion in the means of force used.

FOREIGN MINISTRY AIDE REVIEWS C. AMERICA VISIT

PM251021 Rome AVANTI! in Italian 22 May 82 p 16

[Carlo Correr interview with Roberto Palleschi, Italian under secretary of foreign affairs; date and place not given]

[Text] Deputy Roberto Palleschi, under secretary of foreign affairs, has just returned from a long tour which took him to Jamaica, Mexico, El Salvador, Nicaragua, Costa Rica and Venezuela. We asked him some questions.

[Question] Deputy Palleschi, your visit coincided with exacerbation of the British-Argentine crisis over possession of the Falkland Islands. How is this crisis being felt in the countries that you visited?

[Answer] They are shocked. The crisis is being felt very intensely and I must say that the governments hold a much more moderate stance than their respective publics would like to see adopted. They are offended above all by the uncritical rapidity with which the Western countries demonstrated their solidarity with Britain and later by the British response. They saw themselves as a servant in an exclusive club, harshly punished for having clumsily pushed one of the members. Furthermore, the affair will also exert a negative influence on relations between the Latin American and Western countries, adding further suspicions regarding the latter's conduct.

[Question] The British-Argentine crisis and the stance adopted by the United States have opened or reopened new and old problems between Washington and the Latin American countries. In your opinion, what responsibilities does the United States bear?

[Answer] The U.S. administration is inclined to regard every people's uprising, every expression of rejection of an authoritarian government, a dictatorship or simply an unjust society as a Soviet landing. Consequently it reacts with everything that this implies, in other words, radicalizing and exacerbating situations.

[Question] As in Nicaragua, for instance?

[Answer] Precisely. Nicaragua was dominated by the dynasty of the Somozas, a dictatorship that lasted for decades. They ruled with a body of ruthless and bloodthirsty guards, unscrupulously exploiting the people. In this situation unity was eventually forged among all social sectors -- peasants, workers, the middle class and the clergy, all aligned in the Sandinist front, all united in the name of Sandino, who was a kind of Nicaraguan Garibaldi. And that is not all. All civilian and democratic Latin American governments sided with the Sandinists. Costa Rica granted the front the use of its territory, including an airport, where aircraft landed and took off laden with weapons for the guerrillas -- weapons purchased with Venezuelan money. Both these countries were then governed by parties that belong to the Socialist International. And the United States withdrew its decisive aid from Somoza only at the end, when it was no longer possible to defend him.

[Question] What were the consequences of this conduct?

[Answer] Following the Sandinists' victory the tensions did not cease because of the huge scale of the problems to be resolved, created by the earthquake and civil war. There were splits with part of the church, with the industrialists' organization, with a press organization of the importance of LA PRENSA and with the Miskito Indian minority. Even the fighting section of the front suffered a rift over the split with Commander Zero, Eden Pastora. Many people in the United States believe that the Sandinist government is already a pawn in the Castroist military organization. Managua wants to negotiate with the United States but Washington is taking its time, trying to profit from the country's difficulties.

Yet I myself have seen that many people both in Nicaragua and elsewhere think differently from the Americans. Costa Rica, Venezuela and Mexico all think differently, also part of the Nicaraguan clergy and of the industrialists, headed by the actual chairman of their organization, Dreyfus, who after all spent 4 months in prison at a moment of divergence with the Sandinist government. If encirclement came about, it would have the opposite effect to the one desired. Managua would be pushed into Moscow's arms.

[Question] Was that why Sandinist leader Daniel Ortega was in Moscow at exactly the same time as you were visiting the country?

[Answer] No. Nicaragua is still seeking aid from all sides. While Ortega was in Moscow, Ramirez, the number two in the government, was in Europe. The Sandinists constantly reiterate their loyalty to their revolution's three principles: Political pluralism, a mixed economy and nonalignment.

[Question] But what is the majority political line within the Sandinist front now?

[Answer] The Sandinist party is now a communist party, but that does not necessarily mean that it is part of the Soviet economic and military system. The Venezuelan Socialists were extremely clear on that point when they explained to me why they refused to attend the Socialist International meeting in Caracas with the Sandinists a few months ago. "We did not want the meeting," an authoritative spokesman told me, "because the Sandinists are communists and not socialists, but we think it is vital to help them in order not to force them to choose the Soviet camp."

[Question] And were the talks on economic cooperation with our country satisfactory?

[Answer] I signed an economic cooperation agreement with the Managua government which they themselves also regard as fairly important politically. It is a framework agreement which includes the creation of a joint commission. The agreement signed in Managua makes provision for the Nicaraguan commission, which will visit Rome soon, to include representatives of Nicaragua's industrial association with a view to discussing agreements with Italian public, private and cooperative enterprises. Dreyfus himself expressed his appreciation of that result which is considerable not only for his personal prestige.

[Question] But can Europe, and hence Italy, compete with the aid which Moscow is promising Managua?

[Answer] Certainly, because the USSR, which is involved militarily in Afghanistan, Central Europe and, indirectly, in the Horn of Africa and Kampuchea, does not think a confrontation with the United States in Central America is in its interests. It knows that it would be a bitter conflict. A mutual "understanding" would be better for the USSR. Furthermore, Moscow has hitherto shown that it is incapable of giving development aid and can only give arms and soldiers.

PRC MILITARY DELEGATION IN ROME FOR TALKS

AU212054 Rome ANSA in English 1926 GMT 21 May 82

[Text] Rome, 21 May (ANSA) -- A high-ranking Chinese armed forces delegation with Chief of Staff General Wu Xiuquan at its head had a round of talks in Rome today with Italian Defense Minister Lelio Lagorio.

A ministry communique said the talks dealt with Italo-Chinese relations. Lagorio stressed the importance of the recent agreement in Beijing for China to start drawing on the 7.5 billion dollar credit line Italy extended to China in 1979 for purchases of Italian industrial supplies.

The Chinese military delegation has plans to visit an Italian aeronautics academy, a naval squadron and an armored infantry division in northern Italy as well as the Otomelara heavy armaments manufacturers before returning home on May 27.

NOTT ANNOUNCES FUND; DENIES CANBERRA HIT

LD251448 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1406 GMT 25 May 82

[By PA parliamentary staff]

[Text] A South Atlantic fund is to be set up, pooling all public donations for dependants of servicemen killed in the Falklands action, Defence Secretary Mr John Nott announced in the Commons today.

He told MP's at question time that such dependants would also receive a full pension and lump sum from the Ministry of Defence.

Mr Nott, facing his first full session of general defence questions since Britain's re-occupation of the Falklands began last week, also firmly denied Argentine claims that the Canberra -- P & O's flagship liner now being used as a troop carrier and hospital ship -- had been attacked.

Mr Nott told MP's: "I deny the latest wild report from Argentina claiming the Canberra has come under attack." But Mr Nott disclosed that in yesterday's attack on the task force, two British support ships were damaged, but the damage was now "being made good."

On the South Atlantic fund, Mr Nott said the government felt very strongly that there should be one fund to help the dependants, and not many. There should not be too much money going directly to only a few people.

The government proposed to set up a fund which would not in itself be a charity. The money would be held by the fund on behalf of existing charities until the government had a clear idea about how the money could be used. In the meantime the public should send money to the central fund.

THATCHER: NO NEGOTIATION BEFORE WITHDRAWAL

LD251600 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1520 GMT 15 May 82

[Text] A confident Mrs Thatcher today told MP's of her plans to build a new future for the Falkland Islands when they are recaptured by the British forces. And she did not think the islanders would want Argentina to have any part of that future.

Warned by a Tory MP during Commons question time that it would be "unforgiveable" even to discuss with Argentina or anybody else any change in the sovereignty of the Falklands, the prime minister said: "Our objective is to retake the Falklands. They are British sovereign territory and we wish to restore British administration."

"There will be a good deal of reconstruction to be done and then the future will have to be discussed with the islanders," said the prime minister. "I should be amazed if they were not now more hostile to Argentina than they were before."

She told a Labour MP who said the government should agree to Argentina's demand that some Argentinians be allowed to settle in the Falklands, that only the Falklanders should have the right to decide such matters.

She also indicated that plans for the return to the Falklands of its governor, Mr Rex Hunt, have already been discussed. "That is a matter under consideration," Mrs Thatcher told senior Tory MP Sir John Biggs-Davison who called for the "early return" of the governor.

The prime minister was repeatedly urged by the opposition leader, Mr Foot, to say whether the government was prepared to restart talks to prevent further military conflict.

It was essential to keep open the possibility of negotiations along with military action, in the interest of saving British and all other lives, said Mr Foot.

Mrs Thatcher denied there was any disagreement on this matter between herself and Foreign Secretary Mr Francis Pym and said the conflict would end only when Argentina withdrew from the Falklands. "Unless that occurs, I don't think any negotiations would go any further," she said.

Mrs Thatcher also said Britain would use its veto to block any attempt by the UN Security Council to call for a cease-fire without Argentine withdrawal.

She said: "There can be no cease-fire without full withdrawal of Argentine troops -- that's in Resolution 502 -- and if necessary, if there was an attempt to have a cease-fire without that, he would have to use the veto."

Her voice rose when Labour leftwinger Mr Martin Flannery (Sheffield Hillsborough) challenged the government's "confidence" that the days of the Argentine garrison on the Falklands were numbered, called for a cease-fire and branded Tory backbenchers "bloodthirsty hooligans."

"Do you not want those days to be numbered?" the prime minister sharply responded. To call for a cease-fire while Argentine troops remained in occupation would "leave the whole paraphernalia of tyranny in place," she said to Tory cheers.

Labor Asks For Moderation

LD251730 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1713 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Labour leader Mr Michael Foot today warned Mrs Thatcher not to press for an unconditional surrender by Argentina. He insisted that the door to negotiations must be kept open to give the military junta in Buenos Aires an escape route.

Speaking on BBC Radio's "PM" programme, he said Labour would hold Mrs Thatcher to the statement made last week by Foreign Secretary Mr Francis Pym, after the go-ahead had been given for the landing of British troops on the Falklands, that the government remained ready to negotiate.

"I do not think unconditional surrender is the proper term to apply to this situation," he said. "I believe if that were to be insisted on then many more lives may be lost than need be. Our purpose must be to save British lives and the lives of other people."

He urged the government not to slam the door on further intervention by United Nations Secretary General Mr Javier Perez de Cuellar.

"The readiness to negotiate can bring this business to an end more speedily than it would be if anyone insisted on unconditional surrender," said Mr Foot.

"We have to keep open the door of negotiation and discussion, and keep open the possibility that whoever the military authorities are in Buenos Aires they can have a escape route.

"That could mean the saving of quite a lot of lives."

FIGHTING ACCELERATES ON ENEMY INDEPENDENCE DAY

TELAM Reports Harriers Downed

LD251806 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1756 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] The Ministry of Defence said tonight it had "no information" on a report from Buenos Aires that two Harriers had been shot down by Argentine anti-aircraft fire today during an attack on Port Stanley.

The official Argentine news agency, TELAM, quoting military sources, said six Harriers took part in the attack but were beaten back.

Air Attacks Repelled

LD252034 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1944 GMT 25 May 82

[By Robert Hucchinson, PA defence correspondent]

[Text] Three more Argentine Skyhawk fighter bombers were shot down by the Royal Navy battle fleet off the Falklands today as they tried to disrupt the 24-hour supply of the British beachhead.

These attacks seemed much more hesitant than the near-suicidal raids which had followed Friday's landings -- fuelling speculation that the Argentine Air Force has lost many of its best and most experienced pilots.

Raid number one came before noon today when a task force destroyer opened fire on Argentine planes north of West Falkland on their way to the beachhead. One Skyhawk was brought down by a Sea Dart missile and the others "did not press home their attack," according to Defence Ministry Spokesman Ian McDonald.

Raid number two came later when a number of Skyhawks slipped through combat air patrols mounted by Sea Harriers to attack ships in Falkland Sound. Two were "certainly brought down" by ship missiles, again with no damage to the task force. One Skyhawk pilot ejected and was recovered by a Sea King helicopter. He had a broken leg.

Since hostilities started, the Argentine Air Force has definitely lost 12 of its 68 Skyhawks, plus two probably shot down. Nineteen of Argentina's 46 Mirages have been shot down, with one more listed as a probable casualty. The Argentine Air Force losses now stand at 70 definite, plus three probables.

Earlier today Sea Harrier and RAF Harriers again attacked the runway and military installations at Port Stanley Airfield as part of the "softening-up process." Argentina claimed two Harriers were shot down, but the Defence Ministry said they were fired at, but not hit, and all returned safely.

Meanwhile, more details emerged today of Monday's furious air attack on British ships in San Carlos water off the beachhead. Two supply landing ships were slightly damaged and in one, where it is believed ammunition was carried, crews had to fight a bad fire. There were casualties, it is understood, but no details have been released. One ship had unloaded and in the other no supplies were lost.

British patrols are still ranging deep into the interior of East Falkland and there are reports of sporadic shooting incidents with Argentine troops.

At least seven Argentine soldiers, survivors from the pre-landing raids by marines, have now given themselves up. It is said in London that the Argentines are being "circumspect" in their attempts to probe the British strength from the rapidly expanding beachhead.

Destroyer 'Badly Damaged'

LD252142 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2130 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] A British task force ship has been badly damaged, Defence Ministry Spokesman Mr Ian McDonald said tonight.

"During the last hour we have heard of further attacks on our ships. We have now received some bad news. One of our ships has been badly damaged and early reports are that she is in difficulty. Rescue operations are in progress. I have no further details at present," said Mr McDonald.

The spokesman would not reveal which ship it was. But it is understood that it does not involve one of the two carriers, Hermes and Invincible.

On ITN's "News at Ten", Defence Secretary Mr John Nott said this latest incident had involved an Argentine air attack, and reports were still coming in.

It was later understood that the stricken ship was a Type 42 destroyer.

A grave Mr Nott spoke of a new mass air attack on the task force which left the ship "badly damaged and in difficulty." He said: "In the last hour or two there has been quite a significant and major attack on our ships.

"I am afraid the bad news is that one of our ships has been badly damaged and is in difficulty. I cannot give any further details at this moment. Clearly what we know at the moment is bad news and I should say that straight away."

Mr Nott said he had no information yet about casualties. "As soon as we have got further details we will naturally give them." "This was a mass air attack. We did expect Argentina to launch attacks on our ships today. It is their national day and we had anticipated a mass raid.

"I do not want to say anything else at the moment because news is still coming in. We knew this was going to be a hazardous operation and I have been warning about the possibility of casualties since the task force set out six weeks ago.

"It is an incredibly difficult operation at an enormous distance. Every single ship that is hit is a great disaster for us and human casualties are a tragedy. But we are fighting for freedom and democracy against unprovoked aggression and we must stick to it."

"We have completed the most hazardous part of the landing operation. We have large numbers ashore and we are going forward to repossess the islands." He conceded: "I think the Argentine pilots are showing great bravery. It would be foolish of me to say anything else.

"The losses from the Argentine Navy and Air Force are tremendous and they cannot go on sustaining this level of loss for very much longer. But they are clearly brave pilots and we should recognise that."

"I expect that now we are ashore and have all our equipment and heavy stores ashore, the level of activity on the ground will build up fairly quickly and fairly soon."

But he feared Britain would suffer further losses. "It is no use pretending in a battle of this sort that we won't sustain them."

Mr Nott said he was "absolutely confident" that British forces would recapture Port Stanley. Things will not all go our way, but I have no doubt at all that within a period of time we will achieve all our objectives and the Union Jack will be flying again in Port Stanley."

Helicopter Crew Found in Chile

LD260041 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0026 GMT 26 May 82

[By Robert Hutchinson, PA defence correspondent]

[Excerpts] Britain's task force came under a massive air assault at twilight today [25 May] -- and more than two warships were hit with one being badly damaged. Waves of Argentine planes attacked the fleet and it is understood that a Type 42 destroyer, with a crew of 280, is "in difficulty."

Rescue operations with helicopters and ships are in progress and no information is available on casualties.

There was also a report from Chile that the three crewmen from a British Sea King helicopter which made a forced landing in the southern part of the country have now been found. AP quoted the Chilean foreign minister, Rene Rojas, as saying that the men, in good condition, had been hiding for a week because they thought they had come down in Argentina.

They would be turned over to representatives of the British Embassy in Santiago. "Only today did the men realise they were in Chile and not Argentina," Rojas said.

The men were named as Lt Alan Reginald Bennett, Lt Richard Outchings and Sgt Peter Blain Imrie.

One Ship Sunk; One Abandoned

LD261102 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1049 GMT 26 May 82

[Text] HMS Coventry, a destroyer with the British task force, has been lost following yesterday's fierce attacks by the Argentine Air Force, the Defence Ministry announced today.

The Cunard-owned ship Atlantic Conveyor, requisitioned to support the battle fleet, was also hit and had to be abandoned. The Atlantic Conveyor was carrying Harrier jets, but these had already been taken off the ship and it is understood none were damaged.

It is believed that two French-built Super Etendard bombers launched two AM/39 Exocet missiles which hit the container ship off the Falklands.

Defence Ministry Spokesman Ian McDonald said rescue operations to recover the crews of the two ships continued throughout the night. But he had no details on casualties, and said next of kin were being informed.

Coventry is a Type 42 destroyer, and a sister ship of HMS Sheffield which sank after being hit by a Exocet missile with the loss of 20 lives. The destroyer was with a Type 22 destroyer acting as a radar picket north of West Falkland when the attack happened yesterday evening. The 3,500-ton destroyer, with a crew of 280, is understood to have been hit by bombs.

A Type 22 destroyer, with a crew of 280, is understood to have been hit by bombs.

A Type 22 destroyer with the Coventry, armed with short range Sea Wolf missiles, is also understood to have suffered some damage.

The attack on the Atlantic Conveyor was apparently some way away to the north east of the Falklands. A big fire immediately broke out on the 14,946-ton container ship but the Harriers on board escaped.

The Super Etendards apparently staged a "back door" attack on the container ship, coming in from the east and lying only 50 feet above the water to avoid detection by radar.

The Atlantic Conveyor, which carriers spares for the jump jets, was not used as an aircraft carrier in the pure sense of the word. The planes only parked there overnight and flew onto Hermes and Invinciple to be "bombed up" before taking off on combat missions.

NOTT TELLS FALKLANDERS 'LIBERATION IN PROGRESS'

LD251846 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1834 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Be of good cheer — you are about to be liberated. That was the message to the Falkland Islanders tonight from Defence Secretary Mr John Nott. He told them that their privations would soon be ended and their normal way of life resumed.

And he urged Argentina's military leaders to take the "sensible and honourable course" -- a speedy surrender to their Falklands troops to avoid further suffering. Mr Nott's message was broadcast in the BBC World Service's "Calling the Falklands" programme.

He said: "I am delighted to be able to speak to you at this time when the liberation of the Falklands is in progress. After the hard weeks of foreign occupation, negotiations and our own military build-up, the Argentine grip on your islands is being slowly but surely ended. But I realise, of course, that many of you are still suffering the fate of those in an occupied country. I can all too easily imagine the privations that you are enduring; the shortages, the dangers and mental anguish caused by foreign oppression and separation from friends and loved ones. But be of good cheer -- for you can now look forward to the early prospect of liberation and a return to your normal way of life. There is no such prospect for the Argentine occupation forces, some of whom have already been giving themselves up, hungry and bewildered. They have told our troops that they have no idea why they have been sent to occupy a foreign land. Their stocks of food, fuel and ammunition are becoming ever more scarce as ours build up. So we hope that their leaders, in their increasingly untenable position, will make the sensible and honourable course, adopted by their compatriots on South Georgia -- a speedy surrender to avoid further suffering."

"'Calling the Falklands' will of course have gained many new listeners in the last few days, the courageous men and women in our forces and merchant navy. Your exploits in taking, holding and now expanding a bridgehead, with comparatively few losses, despite repeated air attacks, have excited the admiration of all in Britain and indeed all those everywhere who value freedom and democracy. One picture, which has flashed round the world, sums up everything that we are striving for -- a British soldier at Port San Carlos sharing a mug of tea over a garden fence with a group of islanders. The expressions of relief, of joy on their faces show why it has been necessary, regardless of sacrifices, to remove the invader from your islands."

In an interview also broadcast on the programme tonight, Mr Nott was asked how the government would consult the islanders to find out their wishes for the future. He replied: "We will want to consult both the elected councils and also to talk to individual people. We will want to find out from chatting with people, the Falkland Islanders themselves, what they want for their future. I do not think it's a question of us giving the people options, I think it's a question of them telling us how they see the future. I am sure that all of them will feel that they need to live in peace and amity with their neighbours. I am sure that that will be their feeling, but as to the kind of democratic institutions that they retain, that must be a matter for them. I would expect them to want to keep the same system of democratic institutions that they have had all along, through their local council and other elected bodies.

Mr Nott said that if the islanders wanted independence, the government would consider it. He added: "It would be a very small nation on its own -- it would have to depend on the goodwill of its neighbours and also of course on the security provided by the United Kingdom and maybe by other countries." "But there is no reason why the Falkland Islands should not be independent. We would certainly have to lengthen the runway. We would have to make air communications better than they have been up to now. But I think our experience in the last few weeks has shown us that we can supply the Falkland Islands by sea and we can supply them by air. But, of course, as I have said several times, we would want to come to a sensible and wise and peaceful accommodation with the countries of South America, so that everybody lives in peace together."

ARGENTINE GARRISON COMMANDER TO BE MOVED TO UK

LD251934 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1910 GMT 25 May 82

[By PA political staff]

[Excerpt] The commander of the Argentine garrison on South Georgia when it was recaptured by British forces is to be brought to Britain. Captain Alfredo Astiz is wanted for questioning by France and Sweden about the disappearance of their nationals in Argentina.

But Britain is unlikely to agree to the request. Our strict adherence to the Geneva Convention — under which a prisoner of war cannot be forced to give more than his name, rank and number — would forbid any interrogation.

Whitehall observers believe that Astiz is being brought to Britain to be repatriated "the long way round" while the government reaches a final decision on the matter. Legal opinion is being sought.

Astiz has so far refused to answer questions about the disappearance of a Swedish student and two French nuns in Argentina when he was a senior member of the security forces. Britain said today that it was no longer convenient to hold him on Ascension Island, where he and his men were taken from South Georgia. The other Argentinians have been repatriated.

It is understood he will leave for Britain by sea within the next day or so.

AUSTRIA

PRESIDENT WILL PROPOSE U.S.-USSR SUMMIT IN VIENNA

AU251430 Vienna DIE PRESSE in German 25 May 82 p 1

[Text] Vienna -- On his state visit in Moscow, which will start today, President Kirchschlaeger will propose Vienna as the venue for a possible summit meeting between the Soviet state and party head Brezhnev and U.S. President Reagan. From a political point of view, however, Kirchschlaeger said in an interview on Monday, the important thing is that this meeting takes place at all, a meeting from which the smaller countries expect a resumption of the process of detente. Without wanting to prejudge the talks with Brezhnev, he could imagine that he would also be discussing the fear of a nuclear war and mankind's desire for peace, the president stated.

U.S. OFFICIAL'S REMARKS DEEMED 'INTERFERENCE'

AU251416 Vienna VOLKSSTIMME in German 25 May 82 p 1

[Text] Vienna -- "New concepts" of a policy of neutrality have "superimposed the old ones" and "familiar values" have been replaced "by strange new ones." This was declared by Ambassador Howard Eugene Douglas in a lecture on "Austrian neutrality from an American point of view" at the political academy of the Austrian People's Party. Douglas is the U.S. Government coordinator for refugee affairs, a cloe colleague of Clark, the security adviser of U.S. President Reagan, and is considered the third highest political official in the State Department.

The "strange" phenomena in the Austrian foreign policy are, according to Douglas, "the appearance of Al-Qadhdhafi" who "tried to get legitimacy" in Austria and the "official auspices" of the Austrian Government for the PLO. The ambassador thinks that Austria's "image" is also endangered by the support of Austrian socialists for a solution of the conflict in El Salvador and by the East trade.

Then come the warnings and the good advice: With credits to socialist countries one only gets into dependence. Trade to the mutual benefit is "an old Soviet trick." One must not confuse neutrality with "neutralism," for neutral Austria was born "out of the unanimity of the West," and it has true neutrality only if Austria unconditionally participates in the U.S. campaigns against the USSR, as for instance on the occasion of former U.S. President Carter's campaign for "human rights" at the CSCE.

The remarks by Douglas are an unparalleled interference in Austrian affairs which the government must by all means answer.

CYPRUS

INTERLOCUTORS COMMENT PRIOR TO 25 MAY MEETING

NC251908 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1630 GMT 25 May 82

[Excerpts] At this afternoon's session of the intercommunal talks at the Ledra Palace Hotel a discussion was begun on the instruments of the federal republic, with executive authority as the first issue. The Greek side's representative at the intercommunal talks, Mavrommatis, expressed the hope that during the discussion of the instruments of the republic, on which views differ, progress will be made not only in order to bridge gaps but to achieve a viable solution in accordance with democratic principles. Mavrommatis agreed with the UN representative's assessment on the three basic freedoms and added that very significant issues still exist on which an agreement must be reached, such as the implementation of the three basic freedoms and the regulations and conditions which may possibly be necessary to govern the implementation.

In reply to a question, Mavrommatis said that he did not expect a detailed reference to be made to the Famagusta issue during the discussion on the instruments of the republic. He added, however, that the Greek position is that this issue is separate, has priority and that there is nothing to prevent raising it. Furthermore, he mentioned that this issue had been raised when the discussion began on the UN secretary general's evaluation, adding that he will raise it at the appropriate time.

The Turkish Cypriot side's representative, Onan, stated that at today's meeting the two sides would begin to put forward their views orally on the instruments of the republic. Asked to assess the discussion on the three basic freedoms, Onan said that he is very pleased with the work which has been done. We have worked, he added, on certain points, and we have differing approaches and views but this does not mean that it is not possible to find a common point or reach an agreement. Onan said that the discussion had helped the two sides understand each other's views.

Asked if he would object to the raising of the Famagusta issue during the discussion of the Waldheim evaluation, Onan said that the issue of an objection has not arisen, but issues will be discussed in turn. He also said that when the discussion of the territorial aspect begins, the issue of Famagusta will be also discussed.

FRANCE

MARCHAIS, BERLINGUER MEET, DISCUSS EUROLEFT

LD251912 Paris Domestic Service in French 1700 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] When a European communist meets another European communist they talk about Eurocommunism, or to be more precise, about the Euroleft. This is just what happened during the meeting between Georges Marchais and Enrico Berlinguer. After an evening and a morning of talks in Paris, the two communist leaders agreed to develop relations and cooperation between the communist, socialist and socil democratic parties. They also recalled their wish for a negotiated and balanced reduction of all arms, but they could not solve their differences over Poland and Afghanistan. The last Berlinguer-Marchais summit was on 5 February 1980, more than 2 years ago.

MITTERRAND RETURNS FROM AFRICAN TOUR 26 MAY

LD260834 Paris Domestic Service in French 0800 GMT 26 May 82

[Text] Francois Mitterrand returned to Paris by plane this morning after his trip to Africa. The head of state is chairing the Council of Ministers at the moment. Gaston Defferre, the minister of the interior, will deliver a report on the method of polling in next year's municipal elections.

SPAIN

CRUDE OIL PURCHASES FROM IRAQ TO BE REDUCED

LD260818 Madrid in Spanish to Europe 1730 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Under an agreement reached between the Iraqis and Spanish officials from the Ministry of Economy and Trade, Spain is to reduce by 20 percent the volume of crude it buys from Iraq. This agreement follows the reductions Iraq has had to make to its clients who were drawing their supplies from the Turkish terminal at Ceyhan after the Syrian authorities closed the pipeline across their country. Before the armed conflict between Iran and Iraq, the latter was supplying Spain with 100,000 barrels a day. The current contract is for 40,000 barrels a day, which with the latest reduction will become 32,000 barrels a day.

PLO OFFICE DENIES ANY CONTACTS WITH ETA

LD252316 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1800 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] The PLO office in Madrid today denied emphatically having any contacts with ETA or with any other organization or party not recognized by the Spanish Government. The PLO note comes in the wake of the statement made by the Israeli counterterrorism expert Gen Aharon Yariv, reported in this program yesterday.

GREECE

PARTIES VIEW CHAMBER VOTE ON SPANISH NATO ENTRY

NC252022 Athens ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 25 May 82 p 16

[Text] Last night the Chamber approved Spain's accession to NATO. Foreign Minister I. Kharalambopoulos stated that acceptance of Span's accession does not signify a change in PASOK's position toward NATO. It constitutes acceptance of the Spanish people's will as was expressed by the majority of the Spanish parliament.

"PASOK," Kharalambopoulos stressed, "has its visions, its strategic goals -- abolition of NATO, relations with the EEC and so forth -- but as a responsible government its duty is to accept odious reality when critical national issues are outstanding and wisely and boldly do everything that safeguards our national interest."

New Democracy, through Evangelos Averof, K. Mitsotakis and M. Papakonstandinou, accused the government of "a change in the policy of the change" and proceeded into a more general critique of foreign policy. Kharalambopoulos challenged New Democracy into a discussion in the Chamber on foreign policy but although Averof described as "incongruous, the dealings on the Cyprus issue," he declined the discussion arguing that he did not want evidence to be currently revealed that may possibly make the negotiations difficult.

The KKE voted against Spain's accession to NATO and accused the government of abandoning its preelection positions and yielding to the pressures of the Western cold war promoters, NATOists and Americans. The accession was also voted against by K. Nasis (Agricultural Party) and M. Glezos (United Democratic Left).

TURKEY

ISLAMIC CONFERENCE LEADER PRAISES TURKISH ROLE

TA252107 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 2000 GMT 25 May 82

[Text] Islamic Conference Secretary General Habib Chatti has said that Turkey could become the leader of the Islamic world. Chatti, who participated in the Islamic Development Bank Board of Governors meeting in Istanbul, arrived in Ankara today. The Islamic Conference secretary general was received at Esenboga Airport by Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen.

In a statement today to an ANATOLIA News Agency correspondent in Istanbul, Chatti said Turkey participated actively in the Islamic Development Bank, adding that there was no reason why Turkey should not become the leader of the Islamic world. He pointed out that Turkey's contributions to the Islamic world were very satisfactory.

Tomorrow Chatti will begin his contacts in Ankara. After he visits the Ataturk Mausoleum, the secretary general will be received by Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu and Foreign Minister Turkmen. In the afternoon, Chatti will pay a visit to head of state Kenan Evren. He is expected to depart Turkey on 27 May.

FBIS DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 104 28 May 1982

CONTENTS

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Bundestag Holds Major Debate on U.S. Relations J 1
Schmidt Hopeful on Latin American Relations J 1
Cabinet Reviews Ties J 1
GDR Supports DKP With More Than DM50 Million J 2
[FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE 26 May]
No Danger Foreseen During Reagan Visit, Summit J 2

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Zimbabwe's Prime Minister Meets With PCI Leaders L 1
[L'UNITA 24 May]
Spadolini Receives USSR, Tunisian Officials L 1
Peruvian Ship May Load Exocets in Spezia Port L 1

SPAIN

Opposition Party Asks To Delay NATO Entry N 1
Centrist Leaders View Andalusia Election Setback N 1
[EL PAIS 24 May]

NORDIC AFFAIRS

FINLAND

Prime Minister Views Need for Nuclear Free Zone P 1
[HUFVUDSTADSBLADET 21 May]

UNITED KINGDOM

Defense Ministry: Harrier Attacks Port Stanley Q 1
Troop Movements Reported Q 1
Advance on Darwin Q 2
Pym Says Operation Has Gone 'Extremely Well' Q 2
Envoy in Moscow Rejects Soviet Stance on Crisis Q 3
Arms Dealers Looking For Exocets To Sell Q 3
[THE DAILY TELEGRAPH 26 May]

CYPRUS

Government Briefed by Greece on Haig Talks R 1
Main Figures View 27 May Intercommunal Meeting R 1
Kiprianou Visit to Greece, U.S. Announced R 1

GREECE

Protest Note Issued on Airspace Violations S 1
Papandreou Warning S 1
Possible Ramifications S 1

TURKEY

Spokesman Denies Violation of Greek Airspace T 1
Communist Party Commentary Views AWACS Issue [VOTCP] T 1
TCP Attends Progressive Forces' Conference [VOTCP] T 2

OTHER COUNTRIES

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

SI Forms Commission To Mediate in Falklands U 1

FRANCE

Zimbabwe's Mugabe Begins 3-Day Visit to Paris U 1

BUNDESTAG HOLDS MAJOR DEBATE ON U.S. RELATIONS

LD272104 Hamburg DPA in German 1835 GMT 27 May 82

[Text] Bonn, 27 May (DPA) -- In the first major debate on German-U.S. relations in the Bundestag on Thursday the opposition and coalition parties could not agree on a joint path toward the improvement of the relationship. Both a draft by the SDP/FDP and a draft by the CDU/CSU call for an intensification of cultural relations with the United States. This is to happen primarily by means of a more extensive youth exchange financed by the Federal Government.

Minister of State at the Foreign Ministry Hildegard Hamm-Bruecher (FDP) warned against understimating anti-American feelings in the FRG. For the FDP, Helmut Schaefer (Mainz) expressed skepticism about the coalition's proposal to found an office for German-American youth exchange. Instead, already existing organisations should be used.

CDU Deputy Hans Stercken accused the Federal Government of undermining the German-American relationship by planning studies. Mrs Hamm-Bruecher and deputies Norbert Gansel (SPD) and Schaefer said by way of correction that this planning study of a so-called conflict strategy had already been examined and rejected the previous day by the foreign relations committee.

All the speakers of the coalition parties expressed their hope for a joint draft to improve the bases of cultural cooperation. Both drafts were forwarded to the competent committees.

SCHMIDT HOPEFUL ON LATIN AMERICAN RELATIONS

LD271050 Hamburg DPA in German 0928 GMT 27 May 82

[Text] Bonn, 27 May (DPA) -- Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt stressed last night in Bonn that the Germans desired a rapid reestablishment of the traditionally good relations with Latin America. At a dinner given by the Bonn Foreign Press Association, Schmidt condemned, however, the Argentinian invasion of the Falkland Islands as a violation of the UN Charter and said in the German view that the correct basis for peace efforts continued to be resolution 502 of the UN Security Council.

The chancellor stated that the Federal Republic is a "partner" of Great Britain and is not one of the European Community countries which opposed sanctions against Argentina. Bonn had, however, never given England a "blank check."

Cabinet Reviews Ties

LD271258 Hamburg DPA in German 1038 GMT 27 May 82

[Excerpts] Bonn, 27 May (DPA) -- Internally, the Federal Government is more deeply concerned about the international effects of the Falklands war and adopts a more criticial attitude to the British actions, which are seen as exacerbating the conflict, than has been expressed in its public statements. It was learned in Bonn today that in yesterday's federal cabinet meeting, as in previous cabinet meetings, fears were voiced about the long-term consquences of the conflict on world political relations. Reference was made in particular to the position of the United States being made more difficult with regard to the countries of Latin America, which are showing increasing solidarity with Argentina.

The Federal Government is also concerned about possible adverse effects on relations between Latin America and the West European countries because of their support for Britain.

The government also believes that the Falklands crisis contains dangers for North-South relations as a whole as well as for internal relations within the European Community. The Community is divided on the question of support for Britain and trade sanctions against Argentina.

At the cabinet meeting, Schmidt reaffirmed his opinion that only the Soviet Union has profited from the Falklands crisis. Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher apparently assessed the prospects for a resumption of negotiations between the parties to the conflict being reached within the next few days as being unlikely.

SPD Chairman Willy Brandt, in his capacity as president of the Socialist International, confirmed that at the current Socialist International meeting in Helsinki, tension had risen between Latin American and European representatives because of the Falklands crisis. In a West German radio interview, Brandt said that there was no disagreement about condemnation of the use of force by the two sides, but one had the impression that many of the Latin Americans were very disappointed with the United States -- from which they had expected assistance in reducing the conflict -- and also with the European Community, which the Latin Americans saw as linking itself with British policy through the imposition of sanctions.

Reportedly there was unanimity in the federal cabinet that the Federal Government would not openly express criticism in the Falklands conflict, especially of London. As in the Polish crisis, this position is justified with the restraint that recent history places on the Germans.

GDR SUPPORTS DKP WITH MORE THAN DM50 MILLION

DW261303 Frankfurt FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE in German 26 May 82 p 6

[Text] Duesseldorf, 25 May -- The German Communist Party (DKP) is being financed more heavily by the GDR than ever before. The recent report by the North Rhine-Westphalia land government on leftist and rightist extremism says that the DKP, which has its federal headquarters in Duesseldorf, last year received "far more than DM50 million" from East Berlin. With almost 40,000 members, the DKP holds the leading position among the leftist-extremist groups. The report, which is based primarily on findings and evaluations by the Office for the Protection of the Constitution, co firmed that after some of its members began to resign following the 1980 federal elections, the DKP managed to overcome this to a great degree by concentrating its work on the "peace fight," the squatters issue and the public financial difficulties. Still, the DKP has lost some of the influence it had exerted on the so-called peace movement.

NO DANGER FORESEEN DURING REAGAN VISIT, SUMMIT

LD262112 Hamburg DPA in German 1829 GMT 26 May 82

[Text] Bonn, 26 May (DPA) -- There are no grounds for fearing a danger to internal security in connection with President Ronald Reagan's visit and the Bonn NATO summit on 10 June.

This assurance was given today in the Bundestag internal affairs committee where Federal Interior Minister Gerhard Baum stated his position on various questions within his competence. There are no concrete indications of danger, it was said. The Federal Ministry of the Interior had said similar things some time ago when Federal Prosecutor General Kurt Rebmann expressed concern about possible terrorist attacks in connection with the NATO summit.

ZIMBABWE'S PRIME MINISTER MEETS WITH PCI LEADERS

PM270859 Rome L'UNITA in Italian 24 May 82 p 7

[Text] Rome -- PCI Directorate member and international department Comrade Gian Carlo Pajetta has met with Robert Mugabe, prime minister of Zimbabwe. During the cordial conversation, which was attended by PCI Central Committee member and foreign section chief Comrade Antonio Rubbi and Comrade Massimo Micucci of the foreign section, an examination was made of the most topical aspects of the international situation and recent developments in Zimbabwe 2 years after the revolution's victory. Special attention was paid to the situation in Namibia and to the struggle against the apartheid system. Other topics broached at the meeting were the problems of relations between Italy and Zimbabwe and the need to step up economic and political cooperation between the two countries and the two peoples.

Robert Mugabe expressed his gratitude to the Italian Communists for their solidarity, together with all Italian democratic political forces, first in support of the revolutionary struggle and now with the process of consolidating Zimbabwe's independence and with its social and political regeneration. For his part, Comrade Pajetta confirmed the Italian Communists' commitment to stepping up solidarity action in support of Zimbabwe and all the patriotic and progressive forces of the countries to southern Africa.

SPADOLINI RECEIVES USSR, TUNISIAN OFFICIALS

LD262346 Rome Domestic Service in Italian 2030 GMT 26 May 82

[Text] Prime Minister Spadolini devoted part of his day to international problems. He received Foreign Minister Colombo, who returned from Brussels. Colombo informed him about the EEC meeting on 24 May. In an interview to be published tomorrow, Colombo defends the attitude adopted in Brussels by our government with regard to the economic sanctions against Argentina and the British financial contribution to the Community.

Spadolini also received Soviet Ambassador Lunkov to whom he expressed Italy's keen interest in the resumption of negotiations on the reduction of strategic arms. Spadolini also met Tunisian Prime Minister Mohamed Mzali, with whom he discussed the main themes of the present international situation with special regard to the Mediterranean area and the Middle East.

PERUVIAN SHIP MAY LOAD EXOCETS IN SPEZIA PORT

PY271618 Paris AFP in Spanish 1257 GMT 27 May 82

[Text] Rome, 27 May (AFP) -- The Italian Foreign Ministry today indicated that an eventual delivery of Exocet missiles to the Peruvian Navy in Italian territory would not be abnormal. The ministry spokesman referred to the eventual shipment of these missiles from France to Spezia port to be loaded on the Peruvian merchant ship Ilo, since that ship was not able to load them in the French port of Le Havre last Wednesday as a result of the embargo ordered by the EEC against Argentina.

Peru has orders in Italian shipyards for four torpedo boats, one of which has not yet been delivered. Therefore, according to the spokesman, it is possible the Exocet missiles will be loaded into one or another of those torpedo boats.

The spokesman added that if this was not normal, the French Government would have opposed the shipment of these missiles to Italy, as reported by the press.

The Italian Foreign Ministry also said that it had no knowledge of the itinerary of the Ilo or its eventual arrival in Spezia.

OPPOSITION PARTY ASKS TO DELAY NATO ENTRY

NC281009 Paris AFP in English 0959 GMT 28 May 82

[Text] Madrid, 28 May (AFP) -- The opposition Spanish Socialist Workers' Party will ask parliament to delay Spain's scheduled entry next week in the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (NATO) in a bid to steer clear of involvement with Britain in the Falklands conflict, it was reported here today. Socialist sources here said Spain could not join NATO at a time when the Atlantic alliance had adopted a policy of unconditional support for Britain.

While the Spanish Government has denounced Argentina's use of force in the South Atlantic crisis, it has several times lashed out against what it describes as "a persisting colonial situation" in the Falklands. Britain's decision to send in troops was termed a "serious historic error."

The Socialist parliamentary motion to suspend Spain's NATO membership will be backed by the social-democratic leaning Democratic Action Party (PAD), and is also likely to receive support from the "Suarist" wing of the ruling Centre Democratic Union (UCD), sources said here. The "Suarists," named after former Prime Minister Adolfo Suarez, who left his post last year, have clearly sided with Argentina in the conflict.

CENTRIST LEADERS VIEW ANDALUSIA ELECTION SETBACK

PM261141 Madrid EL PAIS in Spanish 24 May 82 p 19

[Excerpts] Prime minister and Union of the Democratic Center [UCD] Chairman Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo stated early this morning that "the results of this [Andalusian Parliament] election are not in keeping with the great effort which my party has made in Andalusia and with the political importance which the center option still has in Spain." Calvo-Sotelo made this statement to Spanish National Radio, to which he also admitted that he had personally telephoned [Spanish Socialist Workers' Party Secretary General] Felipe Gonzalez to congratulate him. "As prime minister, I am gratified by the complete normality of the electoral process -- proof of the deep-rootedness of democracy in Spain," he also said.

At 0045 this morning, UCD Secretary General Inigo Cavero admitted with an expression of concern at a press conference held at the party's headquarters that the results achieved by the UCD in Andalusia were "quite unfavorable" and were not in keeping, in his opinion, "with the considerable effort which we have all made during the campaign." In Cavero's opinion, a period of "profound reflection" will henceforth begin within the UCD, whose political consequences it is for the statutory bodies to analyze and rectify.

The Centrist secretary general admitted that a very considerable portion of the UCD's vote in Andalusia ended by voting for the Popular Alliance or abstaining. In an initial interpretation of the results, Cavero believes that there has been a very considerable polarization of the leftwing vote. Cavero stated that the setback for the Andalusian Socialist Party and the PCE benefits the socialists, and that the danger of a rightwing and leftwing bipolarization is beginning to be seen.

After congratulating the Spanish Socialist Workers' Party, Cavero, who does not believe that the UCD will break up after this election, said that his party will start to work immediately to prevent the Andalusia results being repeated nationally. He declined to express an opinion on possible future coalitions, stated that what concerns him least at present is changes in the party leadership, and was cautious in assessing whether the "broad right" operation is now closer than previously: "I will not venture to express an opinion on this issue," Cavero said. "I still believe that a center is necessary and that bipolarization is not good, and I therefore express my absolute faith in the UCD."

FINLAND

PRIME MINISTER VIEWS NEED FOR NUCLEAR-FREE ZONE

PM251419 Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 21 May 82 p 22

[FINSKA NOTISBYRAN-TIDNINGARNAS TELEGRAMBYRA interview with Finnish Prime Minister Kalevi Sorsa; date and place not given]

[Text] Helsinki -- The Nordic countries should investigate the possibility of setting up a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic area, Prime Minister Kalevi Sorsa proposed in an interview with Swedish news bureau TIDNINGARNAS TELEGRAMBYRA. Sorsa thinks that a suitable forum for consultations would be the regular meetings between the Nordic foreign ministers.

"We in Finland have always taken as our point of departure that the initiative for the establishment of a nuclear-free zone should be taken by the states in the region," Sorsa said. On the basis of free inquiries these states should reach a mutual understanding about the need for establishing such a zone. Only when such an understanding has been reached about the need for a zone and about its size, is there any point in starting to sketch out the practical arrangements.

"There is already a relatively broad basic understanding of the need for a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic area. In this respect views have developed much more quickly in the last few years. The background is the growing concern over the nuclear threat to the whole of Europe's security," he said.

Sorsa admitted that the Nordic countries' governments still have divergent views on the most suitable line of action and in particular on the order in which certain disarmament measures at various levels should be adopted. However, at the same time we must remember that no one anywhere has questioned the necessity of maintaining the Nordic area's present real freedom from nuclear arms, with the goal of security for all peoples in the area.

[Question] Is now the right time to attempt to start talks between the Nordic countries and the nuclear powers, chiefly the United States and the Soviet Union, on such a zone?

[Answer] Finland for its part is always ready to exchange ideas with the nuclear powers concerned. However, it is clear that the Nordic countries must first reach among themselves the understanding I mentioned earlier, before they can take part in concrete and successful talks with other states.

[Question] What areas should be included in a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic area?

[Answer] I think that it is much too early to adopt a definite position on all details of a zone arrangement. As far as determining the zone's actual size is concerned, the Nordic nation's political borders must be taken as the point of departure. Measures with effects which would reach outside this area would require more wide-ranging talks between the parties involved.

[Question] What counterconcessions should be demanded of the nuclear powers, when the Nordic countries renounce nuclear arms?

[Answer] One condition must of course be that the nuclear powers respect the nuclear-free zone's status and give an express understanding not to use nuclear arms against the states inside the zone or to threaten them with such arms.

If anyone wants to make this obvious fundamental demand more precise or add to it, a special agreement must be reached about it during negotiations.

[Question] Could a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic area be a stage in the work toward a nuclear-free Europe?

[Answer] Why not? The work for a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic area must of course be seen in the broader European context. In addition, I also think that the Nordic countries should try to increase their security on their own initiative without waiting for any decisions which embrace the whole of Europe, especially if talks on these become deadlocked.

[Question] Would a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic area help to reduce international tension?

[Answer] In our view that is undoubtedly what would happen.

[Question] Has the need for a Nordic nuclear-free zone become more pressing as a result of developments in arms technology?

[Answer] When President Kekkonen repeated his proposal for a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic area in Stockholm in 1978, he made special reference to the dangers produced by the recent rapid developments in nuclear arms techology. Since then developments have followed a course which has made the proposal even more important and even more urgent.

[Question] Is a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic area possible, bearing in mind that the countries involved have chosen very different solutions to their security problems?

[Answer] We think so. But you must also remember that the Nordic countries have a lot in common in this respect -- they do not have nuclear arms on their territory. And everyone admits that this situation has benefitted all of them.

[Question] Does the present arms race increase the risk of war?

[Answer] Developments in nuclear arms technology in recent years -- together with the stagnation in disarmament talks -- has had an effect which is very worrying and likely to upset the military balance.

Both for political reasons and reasons of arms technology the risk of a nuclear war is must greater today than 10 years ago, let us say, during the best day's of detente. This risk can in fact only be averted through the gradual destruction of all nuclear arms.

DEFENSE MINISTRY: HARRIER ATTACKS PORT STANLEY

LD271236 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1233 GMT 27 May 82

[By Alan Jones, PA defence staff]

[Text] A Harrier jet from the British task force destroyed an Argentine helicopter during a raid on Port Stanley yesterday, the Defence Ministry announced. During the attack, the Harrier was fired on by Argentine troops from the garrison, but the jet was not damaged.

Defence Ministry Spokesman Ian McDonald said today that military installations were bombed at Port Stanley, as well as the airfield. The helicopter destroyed was a Puma.

Mr McDonald said the Argentine Air Force did not attack the task force yesterday following the fierce fighting on Tuesday when two British ships were hit. He said that HMS Coventry, the destroyer which capsized after being hit by a number of Argentine bombs, has now sunk.

But the Atlantic Conveyor, the Cunard-owned merchant ship which was abandoned on Tuesday, is still afloat and upright. "Although two Exocet missiles were fired only one seems to have hit her," Mr McDonald said. "We are looking to see whether we can recover some of the cargo and perhaps salvage the ship."

Troop Movements Reported

LD271504 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1456 GMT 27 May 82

[Text] British troops in the Falklands are now moving forward from the San Carlos bridgehead, the prime minister announced to MP's today. Mrs Thatcher said: "We have now gone into the Falklands to do what I believe the islanders wish -- to repossess them, restore British administration, and reconstruct the life of the islanders."

Updating MP's on the latest information from the South Atlantic, Mrs Thatcher said: "The House would not expect me to go into details about the operations in progress...but our forces on the ground are now moving forward from the bridgehead." And later, using the famous World War II slogan, she reminded MP's "Careless talk costs lives."

She confirmed that the latest information disclosed that one of the crew of HMS Coventry was known to have died. 20 were missing and at least 23 of the survivors were injured.

"Four of those on board the Atlantic Conveyor are known to have died, eight are missing including the master, and five of the survivors are injured. We all mourn these tragic losses."

Mrs Thatcher made it clear that despite yesterday's UN Security Council call for renewed negotiations, "the only acceptable conditions for a cease-fire is that it should be unequivocally linked with a firm and unconditional Argentine commitment immediately to commence withdrawal of its forces from the islands."

Mrs Thatcher warned at question time that too much discussion about timing and details of operation could only help the enemy and hinder the task of our forces. "There used to be a wartime phrase -- 'Careless talk costs lives' -- that still holds good today," she said.

Opposition leader Mr Foot called three times for British proposals which would offer Argentina an alternative to unconditional surrender.

He insisted the government should put forward proposals in response to the UN secretary general "which will offer some alternative to unconditional surrender, because if the fighting continues to the bitter end, many more lives will be lost."

But Mrs Thatcher said: "Talks with the secretary general will be about unequivocal withdrawal of Argentine forces in accordance with Resolution 502 as a condition for a ceasefire."

She firmly set out the government's determination to re-possess the islands, followed by restoration of British administration under existing British law, and existing democratic institutions, and re-construction.

"It will take some time for the islanders to crystalize their views about the long term future. It would be most unwise for us to give away any of this in advance," she said.

Mrs Thatcher told Tory backbencher Mr Peter Temply-Morris (Leominster) that Britain had been in touch with countries in various parts of the world over arms supplies to Argentina. "But we are very much aware that it would seem supplies may be reaching Argentina, not directly from these countries themselves, but through third parties."

Advance on Darwin

LD272056 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2050 GMT 27 May 82

[By Robert Hutchinson, PA defense correspondent]

[Text] Three thousand Royal Marines and paratroops today launched their long-awaited major offensive -- bursting out of their San Carlos beachhead and biting deep into the interior of East Falkland.

Paratroops are believed to have been taken by helicopter overnight into a position to launch a dawn assault on Argentine positions around Darwin. Other forces moved east.

The aim of the Darwin attack was to secure the right flank of any large-scale movement on the Falklands capital. The Defence Ministry in London has no reports of any action or casualties. It is thought units are not radioing back progress of their attacks because of the intensity of fighting or for fear of pinpointing their positions.

The offensives were backed by 105-millimetre howitzers and 81-millimetre mortar barrages at down, it is understood. The troops also used the anti-tank 120-millimetre Wombat gun, capable of taking out any fortified strongpoint.

Carrier-based RAF Harriers also staged raids to keep the defenders' heads down, with 30-millimetre cannon fire and the anti-personnel BK755 cluster bombs.

It is not known yet what degree of opposition the Argentines put up.

PYM SAYS OPERATION HAS GONE 'EXTREMELY WELL'

LD272157 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2130 GMT 27 May 82

[Text] Foreign Secretary Mr Francis Pym said tonight that Britain's Falklands operation had gone "extraordinarily well". Mr Pym, speaking on the ITV programme "TV Eye", said: "This enormous task force has gone 8,000 miles across the sea and has made a landing without any loss of the soldiers landed. It is an amazing achievement, one of the biggest movement of troops ever seen."

Mr Pym questioned about the possibility of Britain bombing the Argentine mainland, added: "We have closed no military option. We have kept them all open because we do not know how circumstances will change."

But he stressed that such action would change the scale of Britain's military operation. Mrs Thatcher has already made it plain that for Britain to bomb the mainland would escalate the conflict, and has hinted that Britain was unlikely to do this. Mr Pym said: "What we are trying to do is get a cease-fire coupled with withdrawal. If they will not go by peaceful means, then we are going to repossess them by force -- it is their choice and it is up to them."

ENVOY IN MOSCOW REJECTS SOVIET STANCE ON CRISIS

LD271320 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1302 GMT 27 May 82

[By Tom McMullan, PA diplomatic correspondent]

[Text] The Soviet Union has been told that its interpretation of the conflict in the Falklands is "incorrect," the Foreign Office said today. A spokesman said that the British ambassador to Moscow, Sir Curtis Keeble, called on the Soviet Foreign Ministry on instructions from Foreign Secretary Mr Francis Pym. This followed representations made to Britain just over ten days ago when Sir Curtis was called to the Soviet Foreign Ministry. On that occasion the Soviet Union claimed that Britain's exclusion zone around the Falklands was illegal.

Today, the Foreign Office declined to give any details of the nature of the ambassador's call. However, he was said to have made points similar to those made at the United Nations by Britain's ambassador there, Sir Anthony Parsons. At the United Nations, Sir Anthony said he was still waiting to hear a firm condemnation from the Soviet Union on the first use of force in the dispute. The Soviet Union was accused of having "a one-eyed stance on the conflict." It did not see the use of force by Argentina, but focused with one eye on the United Kingdom's actions in exercise of its right of self-defence.

ARMS DEALERS LOOKING FOR EXOCETS TO SELL

PM261211 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 26 May 82 p 5

[John Miller, diplomatic staff, report]

[Text] Arms dealers in several countries were reported yesterday to be trying to get their hands on the deadly Exocet air-launched missile and pull off a highly profitable deal with Argentina. One of the French-built Exocets wrecked the destroyer Sheffield after being fired from a distance of 20 miles by a Super Etendard single-seat fighter. It was widely thought that Argentina had five Exocets and that three of them were launched at the Sheffield and another ship in the air strike on May 4.

Reports from several European capitals yesterday said that the "going rate" for an Exocet was now 300,000 pounds compared with an official rate of 108,000 pounds. Britain and France co-operated to produce the sea-launched version, but the AM39 fired from the Super Etendard is made by Aerospitiale, the largest manufacturer of missiles in Europe.

The French refuse to say publicly how many Exocets were sold to Argentina, but it was known that about 100 had been delivered in the last few years to seven foreign countries, including South Africa, Iraq, Peru, and possibly Saudi Arabia. France is believed to have secretly told the Ministry of Defence in London how many Exocets it sold to Argentina, and to have assured it that no more will be delivered while the Falklands conflict continues; and France is also thought to have said the weapon would not be sold to countries that might be disposed to resell it to Buenos Aires.

Reports yesterday suggested that agents acting for Libya were making it known they had Exocets for sale to Argentina. These reports could not be confirmed, and some sources said that although Libya was often a source for arms, there was no real evidence that Exocets had actually been brought by Col al-Qadhdhafi for his armed forces. It was also not seriously thought that Peru, Brazil, or other Latin American countries which have Exocets would want to offload them to Argentina. But it was clear that the junta's air force is desperately anxious to replenish its arsenal with the Exocet for use by its Super Etendards, which curiously have not been operational for some time.

GOVERNMENT BRIEFED BY GREECE ON HAIG TALKS

NC261253 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1030 GMT 26 May 82

[Text] Answering a question, the government spokesman stated the Greek Government briefed the Government of Cyprus on the recent talks held in Athens with U.S. Secretary of State Haig on the Cyprus issue.

The spokesman also reiterated an earlier statement by him that Ambassador Dinos Mikhailidhis did not take a second letter from President Kiprianou to Athens. He also reiterated that the text of the Kiprianou-Papandreou letters will not be revealed because it is of a personal nature.

MAIN FIGURES VIEW 27 MAY INTERCOMMUNAL MEETING

NC271901 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1630 GMT 27 May 82

[Text] The discussion on the instruments of the federal administration continued this afternoon within the framework of the intercommunal talks, with executive authority as the first issue. In reply to questions by journalists, the UN secretary general's special representative in Cyprus, Mr Gobbi, said that the issue of Famagusta will also be discussed during his forthcoming meeting with the UN secretary general in New York. This issue, he added, is one of priority, and, as such, it is included in Mr Waldheim's document of assessment. Famagusta is one of the main issues that occupy the secretary general and it remains to be seen what solution he will suggest. Mr Gobbi also said that during his meeting with Mr Perez de Cuellar they will assess the issues of the executive and legislative authority. However, he does not think that they will deal with the territorial issue, because the interlocutors would not have discussed the issue by then. Mr Gobbi added that the UN secretary general loves Cyprus, and he intends to play a very dynamic role. In answer to another question, Mr Gobbi said that both sides have submitted documents on the executive authority. He also said that the atmosphere during the previous meeting was very good and understanding was shown by both sides.

Greek-Cypriot representative in the talks, Mr Mavrommatis, said that at the previous meeting each side presented its approach on the issue of the executive authority. He said that no specific matters were dealt with. In answer to a pertinent question, Mr Mavrommatis said that there are many differences in the approach by both sides, but they have not yet come to dealing with details.

Asked if his side's proposals on the issue of the central government authorities will be new or will be the same as those of last August, Turkish Cypriot representative to the talks Mr Onan siad that the proposals will not be exactly the same. New ideas will also be submitted.

KIPRIANOU VISIT TO GREECE, U.S. ANNOUNCED

NC261544 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1500 GMT 26 May 82

[Text] It has been announced officially that President Kiprianou will pay a visit to Athens between 4 and 6 June, where he will have talks with Greek Prime Minister Papandreou. On 7 June Kiprianou will leave for New York, where on 8 June he will meet UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar. On 11 June he will address the UN General Assembly special session on disarmament and he will meet the president of the UN General Assembly. During his stay in New York, Kiprianou will meet leaders of states and governments of various countries and representatives of Greek Americans. He will also open a photographic exhibition on the missing persons. On Saturday, 12 June, he will go from New York to San Francisco. He will go to Los Angeles on 13 June where he will deliver a speech on the Cyprus issue during events that will be held in his honor by Californian Greek Americans. More details of President Kiprianou's visit to the United States will be announced in a few days.

PROTEST NOTE ISSUED ON AIRSPACE VIOLATIONS

NC271721 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1700 GMT 27 May 82

[Text] In a note the Greek Government has strongly protested against violation of Greek airspace by Turkish fighter aircraft. The protest was presented today to the Turkish foreign minister by Greek Ambassador to Ankara Papoulias. At the same time the Greek Civil Aviation Authority presented a related protest note to International Civil Aviation authorities.

The Greek representative in Brussels informed members of NATO's Defense Committee both on the provocative Turkish act as well as on the Greek Government's decision to withdraw the destroyer Themistoklis from the allied maneuvers in the Mediterranean. In conclusion, the government also informed the ambassadors of EEC member states in Athens within the framework of the European cooperation policy, stressing the dangers arising from Turkish provocativeness.

Papandreou Warning

NC272151 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 2100 GMT 27 May 82

[Statement by Prime Minister Papandreou to journalists in Belgrade 27 May]

[Text] The United States and NATO must realize that Greece does not play the role of an adjunct [kombarsou] and of the good ally in an alliance where a member violates our sovereign rights and indeed when our country is participating at a joint NATO exercise. It is the first violation of the moratorium between Greece and Turkey. This, I am afraid, cannot but constitute a specific message from Turkey: But, our reply also constitutes a message.

Possible Ramifications

NC280943 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 0400 GMT 28 May 82

[Excerpts] A warning statement was made yesterday by Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou, who stressed that the latest provocative acts by Turkey constitute a special message because, for the first time, there was a violation of the 6-mile limit, while to date the Turks had carried out their violations between 6 to 10 miles.

Authoritative observers, in analyzing the statements of the Greek prime minister and the strict warning addressed to the allies of Greece and Turkey, stressed that by emphasizing that the Greek reply is a message, he obviously hinted at the fact that the Greek Air Force has received orders to intercept every violation of the national territory, with all the consequences which might accrue.

As stated by the deputy minister to the prime minister in charge of press affairs, Maroudhas, the prime minister dealt with the entire incident during his talks yesterday with Milka Planinc, president of the Yugoslav Federal Executive Council, and the Yugoslav foreign and finance ministers, stressing that under the conditions in which it occurred the incident truly raises many questions and naturally creates justified pessimism over the future of Greek-Turkish relations.

The following facts are also characteristic of the latest Turkish violations. Violations occurred simultaneously in the airspace over three Greek islands -- Samothraki, Thasos and Limnos. Turkish aircraft penetrated to within 5 miles, violating the 6-mile limit. To date the Turks had limited their violations to the 6 to 10 mile limit; in the past the Turks had argued that the 10 mile limit does not apply to them, but recognized the 6-mile limit -- the extent of our territorial waters. Violations were carried out by two pairs of Turkish aircraft; one violated the airspace while the second acted as if intercepting the first; this was a regular, aggressive exercise conducted by Turkish aircraft with specific targets within Greek airspace -- the first time this has occurred.

SPOKESMAN DENIES VIOLATION OF GREEK AIRSPACE

TA271634 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 27 May 82

[Text] Greece has claimed that Turkey violated Greek airspace and has withdrawn from the NATO exercises that began in the central Mediterranean yesterday. According to a Turkish Radio and Television correspondent in Athens, Greek Prime Minister and Defense Minister Andreas Papandreou ordered the withdrawal of the Greek destroyer participating in the NATO exercise.

Replying to journalists' questions, Foreign Ministry spokesman Nazmi Akiman said the following on the subject: Announcing that it is withdrawing from NATO Deterrent Force-82 exercise in a 27 May press release by the semiofficial news agency ANA, Greece claimed that its airspace has been violated. This Greek allegation of violation originates from the flights conducted by two Turkish military planes over the Aegean international airspace on 27 May. An investigation has shown that, without doubt, these planes did not violate the 6-mile Greek airspace.

On the other hand, it has been determined that two Greek F-5 aircraft violated Turkish airspace around Gokceada at 1448 on 26 May. The necessary moves are being undertaken in connection with this violation.

The NATO exercise in the Mediterranean, in which Turkey, the United States and Italy are also participating, will continue until 27 June. The exercise is being directed by Turkish Navy Staff Col Bokun Kecici.

COMMUNIST PARTY COMMENTARY VIEWS AWACS ISSUE

TA280926 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 28 May 82

[Station commentary: "AWACS Spy Planes and the Rapid Deployment Attack Forces on Turkish Soil"]

[Text] In a statement to the daily HURRIYET, the junta Defense Minister Haluk Bayulken has said that the U.S. AWACS spy planes will be set up in a base in Konya in 1983. The daily MILLIYET, on 25 May, published a detailed article on U.S.plans and budgeting concerning the Rapid Deployment Forces. In the same daily, Oymen wrote that Washington views Turkey as the most suitable country in relation to the oil-producing Gulf and that it may force Turkey to realize its plans through NATO.

Dear listeners, these developments show that the views expressed in the Turkish Communist Party [TCP] statement issued on 17 May were true and that the TCP is most concerned about our national interests and security. In its statement the TCP disclosed that an agreement was concluded between the United States and Turkey in connection with the Rapid Deployment Forces and new bases in eastern Turkey. The statement further said that new air bases have been under construction for some time in eastern Turkey, namely in Diyarbakir, Van, Kars and Bitlis and that there is a nuclear arms depot in Erzurum.

The junta, up to now, has not officially denied reports concerning U.S. plans in connection with the Rapid Deployment Forces which were also largely covered by MILLIYET. It is impossible to make such a denial because the junta is in no position to deny the truth. Furthermore, Bayulken's statement on the AWACS spy planes means that the junta has subserviently bowed to these plans. The primary purpose of the AWACS is to spy on the Soviet Union as well as the peoples of the Gulf region. Information gathered by these spy planes will be passed to the Rapid Deployment Forces which will in turn launch attacks against every development incompatible with the expansionist and adventurist interests of the United States.

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

SI FORMS COMMISSION TO MEDIATE IN FALKLANDS

LD271700 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1430 GMT 27 May 82

[Excerpts] The Socialist International is setting up a commission to mediate in the Falklands conflict. The commission, established at the meeting of the council of the International which ended in Helsinki today, is headed by the organization's deputy chairman, Reiulf Steen from Norway. The meeting also approved a resolution on disarmament, appealing to the United States and the Soviet Union to continue the dialogue and expressing the hope that some arms limitation measures will be implemented immediately.

The meeting decided to mediate as far as possible. The commission will have four Latin American members -- from Argentina, Venezuela, Barbados and Chile -- and four European -- from Britain, West Germany, Italy and Norway. The former chairman of the Norwegian Labour Party, Steen, will head the commission, which will meet in Lisbon in the next few days. It will consider how to prevent the crisis from permanently worsening relations between Latin America and Europe and between the socialist parties of these areas.

The Socialist International has traditionally pursued the cause of arms limitation and the East-West dialogue. The meeting of the council approved, in accordance with the proposal of the International's disarmament council, headed by Premier Kalevi Sorsa, an appeal for concrete measures expected without delay from the United States and the Soviet Union. All nuclear weapons tests should be stopped and the production of nuclear materials halted while disarmament talks are held. Further [words indistinct] the speedy ratification of the SALT II treaty on the limitation of strategic arms.

In the disarmament declaration the International expresses its support for the growing general demand for halting the nuclear arms race. This includes the idea of support for various peace movements. The words "peace movement" are not, however, specifically mentioned. It is thought that this is due chiefly to the opposition by the French Socialists because the peace movement there is controlled by the communists. The representative of the French Socialists did not admit this at the press conference but noted that he has stressed the fact that mere talk about disarmament will not solve the many urgent problems of the world.

FRANCE

ZIMBABWE'S MUGABE BEGINS 3-DAY VISIT TO PARIS

NC280840 Paris AFP in English 0816 GMT 28 May 82

[Text] Paris, 28 May (AFP) -- Prime Minister of Zimbabwe Robert Mugabe arrived here today for a (?three) day official visit to France, as he continued a seven-nation European tour. He was met at the airport by Research and Technology Minister Jean-Pierre Chevenement and was going directly to the Elysee Palace for talks with President Francois Mitterrand.

This afternoon he will meet Defence Minister Charles Hernu, Economy Minister Jacques Delors, Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson and Cooperation and Development Minister Jean-Pierre Cot.

Mr Mugabe arrived from Brussels, [word indistinct] He has already visited Italy, Britain and West Germany, and is scheduled to visit Greece and the Netherlands. His delegation of five ministers, includes Foreign Minister Witness [words indistinct].

The junta has, by opening our territory to the Rapid Deployment Forces and the spy planes, made our country a factor of tension in the interests of U.S. imperialism. As though this were not sufficient, the junta is now getting ready to deploy the Turkish Armed Forces directly against the Middle East countries when deemed necessary by the United States. Junta Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen exerted intense efforts at the recent NATO ministerial council for the adoption of a decision serving this purpose.

Dear listeners, the function of the Rapid Deployment Forces, to which the junta has opened our soil, can not be limited to attack plans in the Middle East. These forces are open support of the bloody dictatorship in Turkey by the enemies of peace, such as Reagan. These forces will be a tool in the hands of the junta generals and their masters beyond the ocean to constantly suppress the workers and the democratic movement in our country.

Speaking at the Islamic Development Bank meeting held in Istanbul, head of the junta Evren claimed that Turkey is an indivisible part of the Islamic world. The reactionary press launched an extensive propaganda campaign for Turkey to assume the leadership role in the Middle East. What kind of a leadership do they have in mind? Leadership in suppressing national liberation movements in our region with U.S. support. Leadership in NATO expansion in the Middle East is what is meant by leadership in the Middle East according to the militarist circles and civil reactionarism in our country which have opened the doors of our territory to the Rapid Deployment Forces and the AWACS spy planes. Developments have confirmed our view. The Islamic Arab countries in the Gulf region are opposed to the U.S. Rapid Deployment Forces as well as the establishment of new military pacts in the Middle East. No Arab country -- with the exception of Saudi Arabia -- has given bases to the AWACS spy planes. Arab determination front countries have called on the Middle East countries to oppose U.S. imperialism's plans to establish new military pacts in the region. The fourth forum of the Mediterranean peace forces recently held in Algeria called on all anti-imperialist and democratic forces to unify action to purge the Mediterranean region of all nuclear arms. All these appeals and warnings closely concern our country. There are nuclear arms arsenals in our country. There are U.S. death bases in our country. The junta is further opening the door to an adventurist policy. It is being drawn into plans involving attacks against its neighbors. However it should not be forgotten that those establishing bases will be shot and that those initiating an attack will be retaliated. Such a policy has no future.

TCP ATTENDS PROGRESSIVE FORCES' CONFERENCE

TA270925 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 27 May 82

[Excerpt] U.S. imperialism's and NATO's policies of tension and confrontation were protested during the fourth conference of the Mediterranean countries' progressive forces in which the Turkish Communist Party [TCP] also participated. The conference was held in the capital of Algeria and was attended by representatives from about 30 communist or worker parties, national liberation movements and other progressive organizations from Mediterranean countries. It was the first time that delegations from the TCP and the (?Tunisian) Communist Party attended this conference.

At the conference, the delegates assessed the situation in the region.

DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 106 2 June 1982

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Schmidt Views Disarmament, European Unity J 1
'Revolutionary Cells' Claim Attacks on U.S. Bases J 3
Schmidt Comments [BILD 2 Jun] J 3
Genscher Confers With SWAPO's Nujoma in Bonn J 4
Brandt, Franke Review German-East Bloc Relations J 5

FRANCE

Nicaraguan Leader's Planned Visit Detailed K 1
[LE MONDE 30-31 May]
New Contingent Joins UN Force in Lebanon K 1
[LE MONDE 30-31 May]
Controversy Brews Over Mitterrand Interview K 2
[LE MONDE 1 Jun]
Joint PCI, PCF Communique Issued in Paris K 3
[L'HUMANITE 26 May]
Dissident Communists Plan National Convention K 5
[LE MONDE 27 May]

SPAIN

Calvo-Sotelo on UCD Electoral, Government Problems [ABC 27 May] N 1
UCD Statement on Lessons of Andalusia Elections [ABC 27 May] N 2
Saudi Defense Minister's Visit Postponed N 2

UNITED KINGDOM

SUNDAY TELEGRAPH Views Argentine Search for Arms [30 May] Q 1
Foreign Office Sends Message to Perez de Cuellar Q 1
Invincible-Based Harrier Downs Supply Aircraft Q 2
Ship Carrying Wounded Heads for Montevideo Q 2
Argentines Open Fire After Waving White Flag Q 2
20 Spy Commandos Captured Near Teal Inlet Q 3
Napalm Tanks, Bombs Discovered at Goose Green Q 3
Speculation Continues on Number of Exocets Q 4
[THE DAILY TELEGRAPH 28 May]
DAILY TELEGRAPH: Cannot Help Them Save Face [1 Jun] Q 5
Sutherland Expected To Be Next USSR Ambassador Q 5
[THE DAILY TELEGRAPH 1 Jun]

CYPRUS

Interlocutors Comment on Progress of Talks 1 Jun R 1
Turks Continue To Insist on Equal Partnership R 2
[I ELEVTHEROTIPIA 2 Jun]
Spokesman Comments on Cosar's Economic Measures R 2

GREECE

MESIMVRINI Reports New Turkish Violations 30 May [1 Jun] S 1
Nigerian Students 'Invade' Nigerian Embassy S 1
Arson, Bomb Explosions in Athens 2 Jun S 1
Paper Reports Difficulties in Greek-USSR Visits S 1
[MESIMVRINI 1 Jun]
Mugabe Holds Press Conference; Agreements Signed S 2
Briefs: Agreement With BTA S 2

TURKEY

Discharges From Army for Clandestine Affiliations T 1
TCP Alleges Censorship by Military in DISK Trials [VOTCP] T 1
VOTCP Scores Territorial Waters Decision [VOTCP] T 1
Bilen Reads TCP Report at Central Committee Plenum [VOTCP] T 2
Part Two of TCP Report [VOTCP] T 5
'Our Radio': Ulusu To Meet Reagan in Bonn T 7
Turkish Oil Tanker Damaged in Gulf War T 7
Briefs: New Turk-Is Leader T 7

OTHER COUNTRIES

AUSTRIA

Kirchschlaeger Sums Up Visit to Moscow, Kiev U 1
[WIENER ZEITUNG 30 May]

BELGIUM

External Affairs Minister Visits Israel [cross-reference] U 1

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Israeli Politician Meets With PCI Leaders U 1
[L'UNITA 29 May]
General Santini To Visit PRC, View Armed Forces U 2

SWEDEN

Submarine Deployment Reduces USSR's Credibility U 2
[SVENSKA DAGBLADET 25 May]

SCHMIDT VIEWS DISARMAMENT, EUROPEAN UNITY

DW011305 Mainz ZDF Television Network in German to East and West Germany 1955 GMT 31 May 82

[Chancellor Helmut Schmidt interviewed by Reporter Trampe in the series "The Alliance;" place and date not given -- videotaped]

[Text] [Question] Mr Chancellor, detente policy was superseded for the Americans by Poland. What chances do you still give this policy?

[Answer] Mr Trampe, I don't think that the expression you just used properly describes the situation. In recent years, prior to developments in Poland and certainly after the beginning of the Polish tragedy, important persons in the United States said that detente had achieved nothing for us, the West, or for us, the Americans. In fact, however, U.S. President Ronald Reagan offered disarmament negotiations with the Soviet Union in great speeches prior to the beginning of the Polish tragedy and again a few weeks ago -- last November in the field of European medium-range arms and now in the field of intercontinental strategic nuclear arms. The Soviet Union accepted the negotiation offer with regard to medium-range arms. It will also accept the current offer. It is most likely that Brezhnev and Reagan will meet this fall. The fact that they are talking to each other again is detente in itself. If some people don't like to call it that, that is their choice. For me it is important that they are talking to each other.

[Question] The President himself, however, differentiates between a disarmament dialogue and a detente dialogue. He does not consider it the same.

[Answer] We have always seen a connection. By we, I do not just mean us Germans, but all member states of the European alliance who have followed the double thesis for 15 years, namely that the North Atlantic alliance must be strong enough to defend itself in an emergency. This defense has a deterrent effect. Therefore there will be no war. We must never neglect defense. We must never become so weak as to lose deterrence. That was one thesis.

The other was the following: Based on this firmness we are prepared, on the other hand, to talk to the East, listen to it, carry on a dialogue, negotiate, and conclude disarmament and other treaties. That was done by the Nixon, Ford and Carter governments. Now we see that the Reagan government is on its way to conduct negotiations in order to conclude treaties. I never doubted by the way, that President Reagan would continue on this way.

[Question] Discussions are taking place again in America on whether it is possible to wage war, and theories on the limitation of nuclear war are being developed. Even if the President and the secretary of state do not take part in them, doesn't this indicate a changed interpretation of the alliance policy?

[Answer] I can well remember that more than 20 years ago the security policy concept of massive nuclear defense was valid in the North Atlantic alliance. If something happened in Europe, even if it were a minor matter, we, the West, would threaten the Soviet Union with massive nuclear retaliation. This concept was first clearly criticized in the late fifties. There were debates, books and articles in France, America, England and also in Germany. It lasted for almost a decade before a new security policy was developed from this debate -- I am saying it again -- of firm defense and deterrence on the one hand, and a dialogue and cooperation within the framework of the treaties on the other.

Within this sphere of defense ability the principle of massive nuclear retaliation has been abandoned and replaced by the flexible response principle. This took place 15 years ago. Now, it is being debated. It will take several years until a new basic line is agreed on; a new principle of the common security policy of NATO partners, so to speak, which naturally needs an international, intellectual and political debate. It has just begun.

[Question] In the current security policy debate the idea of a nuclear-free zone is playing a large role. Your fellow party member Egon Bahr, for example, is taking part in this debate. Is that a possibility in Europe?

[Answer] It is quite possible in the next 10, 20 or 30 years. I presuppose that a real balance is taking place in the non-nuclear field. [Word indistinct] that there will be mutual controls so that no party will secretly have more power than the other. In such a case it would be perceivable. Such suggestions exist, coming not only from Egon Bahr; some 20 years ago they were basic conceptions of the SPC. Today I see some FDP and CDU deputies following that thought, but I see this articularly in other countries. People ponder it over and over again. This idea cannot be simply brushed away, not at all. But it presupposes the existence of an approximate conventional balance.

[Question] It has been a NATO principle for a long time that peace must be safeguarded through military balance and not through the military superiority of one side. Do you believe that the high arms expenditures in the United States, some 1.5 billion dollars in the coming 5 years, show a tendency to shift this balance to the advantage of the United States?

[Answer] Mr Trampe, if I saw this tendency, the Federal Government would exert its influence to stop it. But I don't see that tendency. The Soviet Union is making enormous military armament efforts. A very high percentage of the Soviet gross national product is used for military armament and for its maintenance.

Some people in America feel that they have been goofing off somewhat in past years and have fallen behind. I don't want to judge that. I favor a balance and, as you said, this is the common philosophy of our alliance today, it was in the past, and it will remain so tomorrow.

[Question] Mr Chancellor, can you imagine that more independence from America regarding European defense issues can be achieved through close defense-policy cooperation in Europe?

[Answer] There were many people in the last 30 years who have imagined it and wished it to happen. You must assume that in this century the West European democracies will need alliance with the North American democracies, the United States and Canada, because of the dimensions of the Soviet Union, its populace, production figures and geographical dimensions. This does not mean, however, that the European states will become the 51st through 64th states of the United States. Canada is not such a state. This is sometimes viewed in an exaggerated way.

We have a common defense alliance. It calls for a certain agreement, such as with regard to the security policy concept. It calls for coordination of defense forces and organization. That will remain so. But it does not at all demand that Denmark adopt the economic political ideology of the United States, or that we here in Germany adopt certain social, political concepts of the United States.

Conversely, it does not mean at all that the Americans must take over the social security system which has been developed in Western Europe, particularly in our country, Holland or Denmark. There is much room for differences.

Once I have stressed the differences, I very much want to make one thing most clear: It is sometimes ignored in Germany that the basic rights catalogue of our Basic Law comes from the American constitutional tradition, from the American Revolution 206 years ago. There are ties going beyond daily necessities or common defense necessities, ties which are much older and deeper. Some 35 years ago we Germans, for example, experienced great generosity on the part of America. I refer to the Marshall Plan.

[Question] Let me ask you once more on principle: Is Europe, as a third power between the United States and the Soviet Union, a realistic aim in the long run?

[Answer] I don't think the expression third power, as in a third superpower, is correct. It presupposes a merger of the European states to form something like a federal state. I don't see that happening. The European nations have developed nationally too separately for almost 1000 years. You must learn the English language thoroughly to understand an Englishman. The Englishman must learn French to understand the Frenchman. It is not at all possible for a West European state to become a third world power, so to speak, not even in future -- that would be an illusion. There could be closer political and economic cooperation of European states within the framework of the European Community -- a European union. This I could very well imagine. Going even further, I would say: This is what we are working for every week and every month.

'REVOLUTIONARY CELLS' CLAIM ATTACKS ON U.S. BASES

LD011624 Hamburg DPA in German 1002 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Wiesbaden, 1 Jun (DPA) -- "Revolutionary cells" have claimed responsibility for four attacks on U.S. military installations in a letter addressed to DPA. The letter, posted in Wiesbaden and sent to the Wiesbaden DPA office, said: "We are not waiting until Reagan comes. As a start to what we hope will be a very noisy, eventful and unforgettable reception, we have attacked several of the U.S. military nests in the FRG.

The letter, marked with a star and the letters RZ [revolutionary zellen] then lists the U.S. Army 5th Divisional Headquarters in Frankfurt, the officers' clubs in Bamberg and Gelhausen and other officers' mess in Hanau as targets for attack. The letter is signed, "Create many revolutionary cells."

Schmidt Comments

DW020903 Hamburg BILD in German 2 Jun 82 pp 1, 5

[Interview with Chancellor Helmut Schmidt in his Hamburg home; date not given]

[Text] BILD: Seven bomb attacks on U.S. barracks -- is that the beginning of a series of acts of violence on the occasion of Reagan's visit?

Schmidt: I hope not. Basically every act of violence is harmful -- whether it is directed against persons or objects. In the last 4 years we have been able, with firmness, to considerably restrict politically motivated violence in the Federal Republic. I see, therefore, no reason to feel alarmed with regard to Reagan's visit. Outstanding political personalities naturally are endangered everywhere in the world, not least in the United States itself.

BILD: It seems that the British are winning the Falkland war militarily. Doesn't this war strenghten the influence of the Soviet Union in Latin America?

Schmidt: Unfortunately, yes. The British and American Governments know that too. In view of the forcible occupation of the Falkland Islands, however, Great Britain had no other choice. If it won the conflict militarily, there would eventually be an opportunity to negotiate on an armistice and a peaceful solution of the conflict.

BILD: On 5 June some 100,000 FRG citizens will demonstrate in Bonn for German-American friendship. Do you as the chancellor of all citizens regret that only the CDU/CSU is participating as a party?

Schmidt: No. The Americans are close and important friends for us and our most important allies. There is no need to demonstrate for good and reliable friends. A great majority of the Germans is for friendship with all three partners, including the French and the British. There is really no need to demonstrate in the streets in order to prove this.

BILD: How long will you remain in office as chancellor?

Schmidt: Basically, I am prepared to run once more in 1984. As I view the popularity of Mr Kohl among the voters and compare it with that of Genscher and Schmidt, I can understand that the opposition leader is not enthusiastic about my announcement. I don't see that the voters want him or Mr Strauss as chancellor. In addition there will be an economic upswing in the spring of 1983. That will change the domestic political situation positively for the SPD and the FDP.

BILD: Criticism has been heard repeatedly from America with regard to German trade with the East...

Schmidt: We are not prepared to give up this trade: First, it is economically helpful for both sides. Second, it helps to avoid roughness between Eastern and Western fronts which we Germans, particularly, have experienced bitterly in the past. We do not want connections to the 17 million Germans in the GDR to dry up. This is one of the reasons we need the trade with the East. The new Berlin-Hamburg autobahn will be ready by the end of this year and the first cars will be able to use it in January 1983. That is much more important for the people in our country, in Berlin and the GDR, than any Sunday speeches saying that Eastern Prussia or the Sudetenland are German.

GENSCHER CONFERS WITH SWAPO'S NUJOMA IN BONN

LD011646 Hamburg DPA in German 1422 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 1 Jun (DPA) -- Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher and SWAPO leader Sam Nujoma agreed on Tuesday in Bonn that an independent Namibia should pursue a policy of "true nonalignment" and should make a life of equality possible for its citizens. Diplomatic circles in Bonn expressed confidence after the meeting between Genscher and Nujoma that the remaining obstacles to the implementation of the process toward independence could be removed this year.

Surprisingly, it has become known that Nujoma used his Bonn visit for his [word indistinct] contact with the assistant secretary for African affairs in the U.S. State Department, Chester Crocker. The meeting was planned for Tuesday afternoon. The SWAPO chairman is in Bonn for a 3-day visit at the invitation of Genscher. It is Nujoma's third visit to the FRG capital.

The question of an electoral system for Namibia was discussed during the detailed exchange of views between Genscher and Nujoma. This exchange was followed by talks between the delegations in the afternoon. Nujoma, supported by the black African "frontline states," will agree to the planned elections only if the principle of [words indistinct] is used. On the other hand, the proposals of the Western Nambia contact group (the United States, the FRG, Canada, France and Great Britain) envisage a mixed electoral system with two votes for each elector in order to ensure an equal chance for the white minority.

Diplomatic circles in Bonn on Tuesday expressed understanding for SWAPO's reservations and thought a compromise solution would be possible. They stressed Nujoma's positive attitude to the most important demands of the five Western states.

-- Equal cooperation of all population groups and the implementation of democratic constitution principles;

-- Pursuance of a policy of nonalignment, which would not permit a threat from neighboring states;

-- Cooperation with the states of the region, including economic cooperation.

It was stressed in Bonn that all five Western states have accepted SWAPO as a negotiating partner, because it speaks for the Namibian people. On the other hand, the Democratic Turnhalle Alliance (DTA), which rules in Windhoek after "internal" elections, has recently "lost considerable influence and support." German [words indistinct] circles do not share the view that SWAPO is being controlled from Moscow.

A spokesman of the Namibia information office in Bonn has sharply criticized the fact that the Federal Government is treating the "terrorist chief" Nujoma as a state guest, while not doing so for Namibian democrats. He said Genscher's [words indistinct] has been unsuccessful. SWAPO continues to hamper the progress of negotiations for independence. He added that truly fair and free elections in Namibia would (?show that) Genscher has "bet on the wrong horse" in supporting Nujoma.

BRANDT, FRANKE REVIEW GERMAN-EAST BLOC RELATIONS

LD021018 Hamburg DPA in German 0936 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 2 Jun (DPA) -- In a thoroughly positive review of the German-Soviet agreement which came into force 10 years ago, SPD Chairman Willy Brandt has called for further development and improvement of practical cooperation between the two states. According to Brandt, during whose chancellorship the system of treaties was signed, long-term economic relations are particularly significant as an important element of reliability and stability. In his interview for the Soviet press agency APN published today, the SPD leader pointed out, however, that the possibilities offered by the treaty in the sphere of culture and youth exchange "are not yet fully utilized."

The Moscow treaty, Brandt said, has contributed during the 10 years it has been in force "to a considerable degree of stability in Europe which is of major importance, particularly in critical international situations such as we are experiencing today." He regretted, however, that the hope entertained by Soviet party leader Leonid Brezhnev and himself at their meeting at the beginning of the seventies concerning military disarmament measures following on from political detente have not yet materialized. "We must now, therefore, do everything possible to finally check the arms spiral and, if possible, even reverse it." Brandt, following the recent statements by U.S. President Ronald Reagan, expressed the hope of serious negotiations with Moscow on all important aspects of military security with concrete results in the foreseeable future.

Federal minister for intra-German relations, Egon Franke, today praised the four-power agreement on Berlin, which likewise came into force 10 years ago, as proof of what the policy of detente can accomplish. The agreement has brought improvements for Berlin and its inhabitants to such an extent that it has become one of the main credit entries on the balance sheet of detente for the Germans as a whole. It has proved possible in an outstanding and reliable manner to improve in practical terms, despite different legal positions, Berlin's real situation, free it of uncertainties and thus relieve tension. The Berlin agreement opened the way for more cooperation with Eastern neighbor states, Franke said. The relationship between the two German states has gained particularly from this.

NICARAGUAN LEADER'S PLANNED VISIT DETAILED

PM011045 Paris LE MONDE in French 30-31 May 82 p 3

[Text] Maj Daniel Ortega, head of the Nicaraguan junta, will visit France in July, External Relations Minister Claude Cheysson said Friday, 28 May, after talks that morning with Father Manuel d'Escoto, his Nicaraguan counterpart, during the French-Nicaraguan joint commission session. According to a reliable source, Major Ortega will visit Paris 12 and 13 July.

Since Mr Mitterrand came to power France has supported the Sandinist regime, to which it sold arms in December 1981, arousing irritation in Washington. France has also given the Sandinist regime financial aid of Fr50 million.

The visit to Paris by Major Ortega, who recently visited Moscow, will, it is said in Paris, show the importance which France attaches to developments in Central America and the importance which Nicaragua attaches to its relations with the West despite its dispute with Washington.

Father d'Escoto was due to leave Paris Saturday for Panama and Cuba where he will attend a meeting to prepare for the nonaligned summit scheduled to take place in Baghdad in September. He is to go to Havana with Argentine Foreign Minister Costa Mendez. (Moreover, all the Latin American foreign ministers are expected in Havana.)

Father d'Escoto attended a dinner given by Development and Cooperation Minister Jean-Pierre Cot in Paris Friday evening. On that occasion he reaffirmed his country's solidarity with Argentina in the Falklands conflict.

According to an informed source the Nicaraguan delegation expressed the wish to have diversified economic relations and to develop ts trade with the EEC and the European countries. In 1981 credits for technical, cultural and scientific cooperation between France and Nicaragua amounted to Fr2.5 million. France has a trade deficit since its imports from Nicaragua increased to Fr113 million in the same year as opposed to Fr34 million for exports.

NEW CONTINGENT JOINS UN FORCE IN LEBANON

PM011021 Paris LE MONDE in French 30-31 May 82 p 3

[Text] Beirut -- The deployment of the French contingent which has gone to join the one already in position within the UN force (UN interim force in Lebanon) [UNIFIL] took place Friday without hindrance and, moreover, in an atmosphere of noticeable goodwill on the part of the Syrian forces in the Arab defense force, the Palestinians and the Lebanese progressives.

After landing in Beirut port the French soldiers -- 643 men, of which 600 form the new contingent and 43 will strengthen the logistical battalion which has already been in position for 4 years -- had to cross zones under Syrian control and then, from Damur (30 km south of the capital), zones under the control of the Palestinian-progressive forces, before reaching their posting in UNIFIL's central sector south of the Litani River where they are replacing the Nigerian battalion which has been moved to the west. The troops, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Zeisser, are all volunteers, most of whom belong to the 8th Marine Parachute Regiment.

The zone in which the French contingent is stationed borders on the western limit of the famous Marj 'Uyun "breach" which cuts the UNIFIL force in two and leaves the Israelis in direct contact with Major Haddad's militia, their allies, on the one hand and with the Palestinians on the other.

It stretches over 15 km from east to west and 7 to 8 km from north to south. To the north the contingent will face the Palestinian Fedayeen and the Amal Shi'ite militia; to the east the French blue helmets will face Major Haddad's militia.

This is the second time that France has sent an operational battalion to Lebanon. A French battalion of 735 men joined UNIFIL from March 1978 to 1979. Today, with the logistical battalion, France is placing around 1,300 soldiers at the disposal of the UN peace-keeping force in Lebanon, whose manpower has just been increased from 6,000 to 7,000 men.

CONTROVERSY BREWS OVER MITTERRAND INTERVIEW

PM011431 Paris LE MONDE in French 1 Jun 82 p 20

[Text] The statements which Mr Francois Mitterrand allegedly made on the morning of Friday 28 May to eight American journalists, in which he did not rule out a devaluation of the franc and the possibility of the French currency being removed from the European Monetary System [EMS], as reported by the INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE Saturday, 29 May, in an article signed by our colleague, Axel Krause, have both prompted a very curt denial from the presidency of the republic and aroused a sharp controversy.

The Elysee issued a communique late Saturday morning, stating: "There is one rule which the president of the republic has never broken: When he gives an interview to the written press he always does so in writing. When speaking to the American journalists whom he received Friday afternoon in connection with preparations for the Versailles summit, Mr Francois Mitterrand never mentioned the hypothesis of a devaluation or even raised that subject -- that is obvious. As regards the EMS, the president stressed his desire to increase the solidarity of international monetary cooperation, especially among European currencies. That is one of the priority objectives which he will propose to his partners at the Versailles summit in his introductory report on 5 June. The remarks attributed to him by THE INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE thus call for an official denial. In that connection the Elysee press service points out that speculation against a currency is fed by whimsical or malicious rumors of which the tenor of that article is an example."

Questioned on that denial or, to cite the president of the republic, that misunderstanding, Mr Krause stated: "I gave my version of what was said at the breakfast with Mr Mitterrand in my article Saturday." Let us recall the exact terms of what it said:

"In reply to a question on the French economic situation, Mr Mitterrand did not rule out the possibility of devaluing the franc or removing that currency from the EMS, if events made it necessary." The French president stressed that "there is no religious attachment" to the EMS or to other forms of monetary cooperation and said he was worried by "the sustained speculative aggression against the franc on the exchange markets." The newspaper continued by stating that "in reply to a question on recent speculations in West Germany that Paris might remove the france from the EMS between now and the end of the year," Mr Mitterrand said that "all hypotheses are open, anything is possible."

Citing the French president's remarks to the American journalists, THE WASHINGTON POST of 30 May suggests that the French president has not ruled out the possibility of either a devaluation of the france or a withdrawal from the EMS.

Confirming, in fact, the article published by THE INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE on Saturday, THE WASHINGTON POST journalist who was present at the meeting states that the French president declared that he had no wish to see the franc "subjected to the wishes of others" but admitted that the increasing pressures on the currency could force France to withdraw from the EMS.

As for the franc itself, according to THE WASHINGTON POST, Mr Mitterrand expressed the view that it has been "in the frontline" since the devaluation of the Belgian franc last winter. Still according to the same journalist, he did not reply to a question concerning the devaluation of the French currency but stated: "I rule out no possibility," and "I do not believe that I will end up in hell if I make such a decision."

As for LE MONDE, it made inquiries at the Elysee on the morning of 29 May. Mr Mitterrand's adviser on duty referred us to the press service, which neither confirmed nor denied anything immediately. We were informed about the denial only at noon.

Out of Context?

NEW YORK TIMES editorialist Mrs Flora Lewis, who was present at the celebrated breakfast, told our fellow newspaper LE QUOTIDIEN DE PARIS, which published this information Monday, 31 May, that "the whole story has been told out of context. The president discussed subjects of all kinds for nearly 2 hours. He did not allude to any devaluation. On the contrary, he explained at length his monetary theories, saying that from a theoretical viewpoint a devaluation was possible. When you explain a philosophy you cannot rule out the possibility of an earthquake, which is an element of reality. But he did not envisage any actual devaluation at all. In any case, had he done so we would have highlighted such a piece of information in a completely different manner. This did not occur even to Axel Krause himself -- otherwise he would have mentioned it at the beginning of his article, not in the middle."

"In fact," Lewis continues, "Mr Mitterrand talked for a very long time in general terms, and it is always possible to pick a sentence out of context and make someone say something completely different. The way in which THE HERALD TRIBUNE presented the matter was undoubtedly unfortunate, but it is the French press which committed the real mistake by jumping at it. Let us hope that things will calm down before the opening of the financial markets."

JOINT PCI, PCF COMMUNIQUE ISSUED IN PARIS

PM281505 Paris L'HUMANITE in French 26 May 82 p 10

[Apparent text of "Joint PCF and PCI Communique" dated 24 May]

[Text] A PCI delegation headed by Secretary General Enrico Berlinguer and comprising National Directorate member Gian Carlo Pajetta and Central Committee member Romano Ledda and a PCF delegation headed by Secretary General Georges Marchais and comprising Central Committee Secretary Maxime Gremetz and Central Committee member Gerard Streiff met in Paris on 24 May.

They had a broad exchange of views in a warm atmosphere on the most recent developments in the two countries and on the main aspects of the international situation. Marchais recalled the new situation in France since the left's victory in spring 1981. The Communist ministers' participation in government is a great advantage for the success of the process of renewal which has been started. Major social measures have already been taken. Major structural reforms are underway, for instance the nationalizations and decentralization. The workers are discovering that the new situation creates more favorable conditions for successfully developing their action.

At the same time, the most serious problems, like unemployment and inflation, persist. The solution to those problems, at a time when resistance from the employers and the right is growing, requires active participation by the workers themselves.

The PCF is a loyal member of the new majority. It is developing its action at all levels, making every effort to defeat big capital's maneuvers, to fulfill the expectation of the workers and the country and to progress toward socialism by democracy. France needs socialism -- a socialism which is in keeping with national, democratic and self-managing realities. The 24th congress stressed the originality of the French brand of socialism which the French Communists are proposing and of the democratic path for attaining it.

Marchais stressed that the PCF, which rejects any idea of a model for France, obviously does not aspire to impose its own approach on others.

Berlinguer described the Communists' unitary initiative for a democratic alternative to the Christian Democratic power system and the latest developments in the PCI's policy and initiatives on the problems of the democratic advance toward socialism by means of what the Italian Communists call the "third way."

The PCI secretary general gave information on developments in the Italian political situation and stressed in particular the broad mass movement against the deployment of missiles in Comiso and the struggles now being waged to defend employment, purchasing power and workers' gains, which are under strong attack from the employers. He also recalled the scale of the people's mobilization in the struggle against political terrorism and the mafia, which pose a serious threat to republican institutions.

The two delegations carried out a broad examination of the international situation and the international workers' movement's problems. They put forward their parties' respective assessments of the socialist countries.

The two parties spent a great deal of time on the very relevant task of the struggle to safeguard peace and for disarmament.

They stressed the importance of the vast, united people's movement for disarmament which is developing in Europe. The delegations welcomed the new political factor represented by growing opposition to the arms race in the United States, where the ideas of freezing nuclear armaments and renouncing the first strike are gaining strength.

They noted the growing demand for the fabulous sums of money swallowed up in excessive armaments to be used for social progress and for the struggle against hunger and underdevelopment.

The two parties reiterated their determination to play their full part in the universal movement for peace, for nuclear deescalation and for the negotiated and balanced reduction of all armaments and equal security for all states.

A great deal will depend on increasing the people's mobilization. The peace movement has already contributed to opening the Geneva negotiations, and they must be made to succeed. Progress must be made in the work of the Madrid and Vienna conferences. The second UN session on disarmament should make it possible for decisions aimed at that to be taken.

The two parties thought it necessary to develop relations and cooperation between the communist, socialist and social democratic parties for objectives favorable to the workers and peoples. They recall the special importance they attach to increasing security and cooperation in the Mediterranean.

They reviewed the present state of cooperation between France and Italy and hoped for a substantial development in bilateral relations in their mutual interest.

They agreed to continue, without concealing differences of opinion and some divergent assessments, their relations and cooperation for their common objectives of peace, social progress, democracy, and socialism. To that end they agreed on a number of bilateral and multilateral initiatives.

[Dated] Paris, 24 May 1982

DISSIDENT COMMUNISTS PLAN NATIONAL CONVENTION

PM281415 Paris LE MONDE in French 27 May 82 p 11

[Excerpt] Communist Party members from several departments who have disagreed with PCF policy since 1977 have decided to hold a "national convention of dissident Communists [communistes critiques]." To that end they have adopted a statement. The following is the text:

"The dissident Communists who have signed this document call for the holding of a national convention on 19 and 20 June 1982. We ask all Communists (whether they are PCF members, or have left or been expelled from the PCF) and all those who would like to join them to meet in their enterprises, cities and regions to that end.

"At a time when reactionary forces are raising their heads, opposing social and political change and bitterly fighting the class struggle, it would be seriously damaging for the present dwindling of the forces we represent to continue -- forces which at present have no real opportunities to express them themselves nor act. The full commitment of each leftist man and woman is absolutely imperative.

"We take account of and thus shoulder more effectively the different analyses and feelings among us and the need which is felt everywhere for a new political practice. We reject any temptation to monolithism and favor a flexible grouping enabling members to fit their actions to their ideas with full responsibility, to be active in social struggles and to contribute to the ideological renewal for which the need is felt so strongly in France and in the world.

"We have for that purpose a common capital acquired at great cost through the long crisis of the international communist movement. What unites us is not only the fact that we follow Marxism and aspire to socialism. We intend to be protagonists in the change being wrought in France and are convinced that the precondition for success lies in the growth of the people's movement which is latent in the country but is being hindered, particularly by the depth of trade union and political divisions. Our central objective will be union at grass roots level and in struggles against the right and the employers in order to remove that obstacle at any cost.

"We see our fight as part of the emergence of a new nonselective internationalism whose outline is becoming clearer each day. We feel solidarity with the struggles of peoples against imperialism. The deep crisis in societies based on the Soviet model, which has just again been brutally expressed in Poland, necessitates an uncompromising analysis of the processes of forming those states and the organizational structures of the communist parties. Thus we are taking part in the search for new paths to socialism.

"Those paths everywhere will only open through a constant struggle to promote a radically new political practice based on the greatest stringency in the sphere of democracy in order to restore the social movements' autonomy and strength and thus release a vast people's energy which is now being contained.

"It is therefore in that spirit that we are preparing for the national convention; it alone will specify further guidelines for us and decide what forms our organizations will take in full sovereignty."

CALVO-SOTELO ON UCD ELECTORAL, GOVERNMENT PROBLEMS

PM020921 Madrid ABC in Spanish 27 May 82 pp 13, 27

[Carlos Davila Report: "Calvo-Sotelo Still Believes in Center's Election Platform"]

[Excerpts] Madrid — With a press conference at which Union of the Democratic Center [UCD] Chairman Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo put forward a number of aims not very precisely and made a brief analysis of the centrist failure in Andalusia, the ruling party concluded the first act of its "period of reflection," which began yesterday morning with a lengthy executive committee meeting.

Calvo-Sotelo stated at the press conference that "politics is above all an art of realities, and I will have to act in the future in the light of those realities." At the same time, the party chairman played down the contentious aspects of the centrist crisis, although he began by acknowledging that the UCD had suffered a "grave electoral setback." The chairman was particularly anxious to assert that the defeat had immediate and distant causes, in a clear allusion to the distant responsibilities incurred at a time when he did not hold the party leadership. When he was asked directly whether he believes that he is the "best leader for the UCD," the chairman replied with a formal statement, which can be summarized as follows: "My appointment was decided on by my party's bodies, and I have a duty toward them; they are therefore above my opinion and my own personal decision." So it does not seem that Calvo-Sotelo has the slightest intention of tendering his resignation as UCD chairman, although at various points during the press conference he said that he and all his colleagues had placed "their posts on the table."

Nevertheless, noteworthy desertions will perhaps occur over the next few days, prompted more by the wishes of those concerned than by the desire of any specific sector of the party "to cut off our heads," as an executive secretary stated. It is highly likely that Secretary for Organization Pedro Lopez Jimenez and some of the technicians hired since the appointment of Calvo-Sotelo and Cavero will lose their posts. However, the chairman would like to avoid the dismantling of the government and the party; for that reason, and although the employers blame the conduct of economic policy most for the bad relations between the government and the Spanish Confederation of Employers' Organizations, the prime minister explicitly denied yesterday that he will agree to Deputy Premier Garcia-Diez' replacement: "I have no intention of doing so. I will meet over the next few days with the employers, who obviously have not played a role very favorable to the UCD, because they must not adopt an antagonistic stance toward us."

According to Calvo-Sotelo, who said that he was expressing the Executive Committee's unanimous opinion, "The UCD must remain united as a hegemonic party." The sentence, which in any event has several interpretations, seems to indicate the desire to maintain the centrist party on the broadest possible bases in order to implement a political blueprint "with a majority vocation." Regardless of the difficulty which this viewpoint could encounter at ths time of crisis. The Executive Committee's decision rejects any initiative to turn the UCD into a coalition and also to form with the Popular Alliance the "natural majority" which Fraga Iribarne is preaching. Concerning Fraga's theory, Calvo-Sotelo stated: "Even though accepting the initial arguments, I do not believe -- rather, I maintain quite the contrary -- that a hypothetical union of the UCD and the Popular Alliance would produce as a result the arithmetical winning of more seats than could be won with two different platforms." "Moreover," he added, "I believe that the UCD should maintain its election platform, because it is still valid."

The centrist chairman emphasized again that the legislative term should be completed, "which does not mean exhausting it; it is simply a matter of not bringing the election forward substantially."

However, this aim, which Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo has maintained since he took over the premiership and party chairmanship, could come up against the desire of some tendencies or ideological families to set themselves up as such, outside the UCD. Meetings of social democrats, christian democrats and liberals, some of whom have already seriously raised the possibility of leaving the UCD, are currently proliferating. Answering a question on this matter, Calvo-Sotelo asserted: "I have no grounds for fearing desertions, either on the right or on the left. In my opinion, one thing was clear at this Executive Commitee meeting -- the desire for unity."

UCD STATEMENT ON LESSONS OF ANDALUSIA ELECTIONS

PM020925 Madrid ABC in Spanish 27 May 82 p 27

[Text] Madrid -- The Union of the Democratic Center [UCD] believes firmly in the validity and permanence of its political platform and undertakes to revitalize it, according to a party communique issued at the conclusion of the meeting of its executive committee yesterday.

The full text of the document is as follows:

1 -- The results achieved by the UCD in the elections to the Andalusian Parliament represent a considerable electoral setback.

2 -- Consequently, a thorough analysis of the causes of these election results has been begun within the party's statutory bodies in order to determine their consequences for Spanish political life and to carry out immediately the opportune corrections in the UCD's political conduct.

3 -- Throughout the last few years the UCD has subordinated its party interests to overall state interests in the exercise of power. It is possible that it has not always succeeded in conveying the significance of its conduct to the Spanish people. Public opinion and the electorate have frequently been able to assess as ambiguity or halfheartedness what has been a constant desire to promote moderation and harmony on the Spanish political scene.

4 -- The UCD believes firmly in the validity and permanence of its political platform. The UCD also believes that it is not sufficient for that conviction to manifest itself within the party itself; it must be imparted to the voters whose interests it represents and defends. In order to achieve this, it will adopt whatever internal and external measures are necessary in order to offer the electorate a majority political alternative which can accommodate all those who are in favor of the reform and modernization of Spanish society.

5 -- At the same time as expressing its gratitude to the hundreds of thousands of Andalusian citizens who have renewed their confidence in it on this occasion and the UCD members who have borne the brunt of the Andalusian campaign, the UCD undertakes to revitalize radically its political platform, so that people can continue to find in it hope and expectation for the effective resolution of the problems worrying the Spanish people most directly.

SAUDI DEFENSE MINISTER'S VISIT POSTPONED

LD311642 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1000 GMT 31 May 82

[Text] The visit by Saudi Arabian Defense Minister Sultan ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz has been officially postponed, according to the EFE agency, the visit was scheduled to take place today. The object of the visit was to look at Spanish military materiel with a view to possible signing of contracts between the two countries.

SUNDAY TELEGRAPH VIEWS ARGENTINE SEARCH FOR ARMS

PM011609 London THE SUNDAY TELEGRAPH in English 30 May 82 p 1

[Norman Kirkham and George Jones report: "Junta Looks to Cuba for Arms"]

[Excerpt] As British troops on the Falklands advanced towards their major objective, Port Stanley, last night concern was growing in Whitehall that Argentina's forces could gain vital new supplies of missiles and aircraft for a military showdown.

The fears in London are that the junta could be re-armed to continue the conflict in the South Atlantic even after the expected capture of Port Stanley and British repossession of the islands.

Whitehall was alerted yesterday to a danger that further reversals may compel General Galtieri, the Argentine leader, to turn to the Eastern bloc as well as the West for support. Diplomatic sources in Havana and Buenos Aires are reporting that Cuba has offered to supply Russian-built MIG fighter bombers with Cuban pilots to aid Argentina, perhaps in exchange for future political and diplomatic cooperation.

A special Cuban envoy was dispatched to Buenos Aires to discuss this offer but Western diplomats believe that the Argentine generals are reluctant to accept unless as a final resort. The right-wing junta is deeply suspicious of Cuban influence and relations have been strained, but a Cuban ambassador has returned to Buenos Aires.

It is thought that there have also been some discussions with Soviet representatives on the possibility of arms aid from Moscow.

There remains mounting concern in London about a "leakage" of arms supplies, particularly aircraft spares and missiles, from other Latin American countries.

FOREIGN OFFICE SENDS MESSAGE TO PEREZ DE CUELLAR

LD012159 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2140 GMT 1 Jun 82

[By Tom McMullan, PA diplomatic correspondent]

[Text] The British today sent a message to United Nations Secretary General Perez de Cuellar who is trying to establish if conditions exist for a ceasefire in the Falklands. Sir Anthony Parsons, Britain's ambassador to the UN, will tell him that Argentina must agree to withdraw its forces before Britain can agree to a ceasefire.

But there was little optimism in Whitehall tonight that Argentina would accept this. The next stage now seems likely to be an all out battle for Port Stanley.

The Foreign Office resisted suggestions that this was a last minute special message from the prime minister. A spokesman said: "Britain has agreed to cooperate fully with the secretary general in his search for a ceasefire.

"Sir Anthony Parsons has already been in touch with the secretary general and will be in touch again today. We will make it clear that Argentina must agree to withdraw its forces before Britain can agree to a ceasefire."

The secretary general is due to report to the Security Council tomorrow on the outcome of his search for a ceasefire. Proposals from Britain and Argentina have been passed through the secretary general to the respective capitals in the past week.

Argentina is also aware that there has been no change in the other British conditions set out by Mrs Thatcher in the House of Commons last week -- that a British administration must be restored, construction will take place to repair the damage, and the islanders will be consulted on their future.

INVINCIBLE-BASED HARRIER DOWNS SUPPLY AIRCRAFT

LD011709 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1703 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] An Argentine C.130 Hercules supply aircraft was shot down by a British Sea Harrier today some 50 miles north of Pebble Island off West Falklands.

Ministry of Defence spokesman, Mr Ian McDonald, said the Harrier aircraft was operating from HMS Invincible -- the carrier which Argentina claimed at the weekend had been damaged in a bombing attack.

SHIP CARRYING WOUNDED HEADS FOR MONTEVIDEO

LD011230 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1212 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] A British ship carrying British and Argentine servicemen wounded in the Falklands fighting is on its way to Montevideo, the Foreign Office said today. The ship is the HMS Heclar.

A spokesman said arrangements would be made in Montevideo for their treatment. Whether Argentine prisoners were returned home would depend on how serious their injuries were.

The Foreign Office said that Britain was in close touch with the International Red Cross over the prisoners. The spokesman said: "Under the Geneva Conventions our only obligation is to return prisoners at the cessation of hostilities. No decision has been made about any group of prisoners apart from the wounded."

The Foreign Office declined to say when it expected Capt Alfredo Astiz, captured with Argentine troops on South Georgia, to reach England. "He is now on the high seas," the spokesman said. Capt Astiz, alleged to have been guilty of torture in Buenos Aires, is said to have been responsible for the disappearnace of Swedish and French citizens. Both the Swedish and French Governments want to interview him.

ARGENTINES OPEN FIRE AFTER WAVING WHITE FLAG

LD011713 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1656 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Argentinian soldiers waved the white flag after the battle of Goose Green -- then opened fire on British troops, it was disclosed today. At least one British officer was killed in the cowardly attack, said Major Chris Keeble.

Major Keeble, who took command of the Second Battalion Parachute Regiment when Lt Col 'H' Jones was killed, was quoted in a dispatch from ITN reporter Jeremy Hands. He told Hands hours after Goose Green was taken that the Argentinians' action "sickened" him.

Major Keeble said that the Argentinians did not give in easily, but the Paras were used to fighting against heavy odds. "They fought until they realised they were beaten. Then they showed the white flag. Then they fought a bit further," he said.

"That's what sickened me, particularly when you look into the loss of one particular officer's life." "Their artillery was quite clever. They had three guns we could never ever find and they harassed us all the way down the operation."

Major Keeble also paid tribute to Lt Col Jones. "This was his battalion, he trained it and he planned the operation." He died when success was almost at hand. All you see around you and all he had achieved was to his credit. We are just reflected in his glory."

Major Keeble agreed that the straight fight between two battalions -- one in set position -- was possible contrary to usual military tactics. He added: "I don't know what the history books will say about these events, but they (the Paras) displayed the same courage as at Arnheim and in other operations.

"When Paras go into battle, they are always faced by three to one, or four to one." He said the fight for the Falklands was "very worthwhile" after first thinking the conflict was only for principle.

"But now I realise we are fighting for people and their homeland, and I'm glad we came."

20 SPY COMMANDOS CAPTURED NEAR TEAL INLET

LD012306 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2252 GMT 1 Jun 82

[By Charles Laurence of THE SUNDAY TELEGRAPH in a pooled despatch from the Falklands]

[Text] "A band of special Argentine commandos, parachuted into the Falklands to spy on British forces' movements, have been rounded up near Teal Inlet, about 20 miles from Stanley.

"The group of 20 Argentines were dropped into the Malo Hills by Hercules from the mainland on Saturday night. They were caught by a commando brigade reconnaissance unit early on Monday. Four were killed and 12 captured, seven of them injured.

"Five of the prisoners were being questioned at a staging post of the British forces advancing on Stanley. They were being kept in a shed, their arms spread against a wall, and taken outside to a tent for questioning by intelligence officers.

"The Argentine commandos were spotted on Sunday night as they entered a deserted house called Top Malo House. They were well armed with FN special rifles with folding stocks, grenades and armour-piercing and tracer bullets. They were well-equipped with quilted foul-weather suits and waterproofs. They carried little food, however, and had killed and butchered two sheep when they were caught at the house.

"They put up considerable resistance before surrendering, three of the squad were slightly injured with gun wounds, none seriously. Our forces fired several bursts of rifle fire at Argentines visible through the windows before firing anti-tank rockets into the house, setting it on fire.

"Those with whom I am based are continuing their advance towards Stanley. On Sunday we marched across 12 miles of moorland swept by blizzards and in below-freezing temperatures.

"This was the second stage of a march which has taken us more than half way between the beachhead, San Carlos, to the capital. So far, we have covered the whole distance on foot, the soldiers carrying all their arms and survival gear.

"We have been sleeping in farm buildings when possible for protection against the driving sleet and heavy rain, but have also camped out with minimum equipment in the open hills. The unit makes an impressive sight as it stretches out over the hills in a long-winding snake, led by patrols in battle formation."

NAPALM TANKS, BOMBS DISCOVERED AT GOOSE GREEN

LD012256 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2245 GMT 1 Jun 82

[By Richard Savill, PA staff reporter with task force in the Falklands]

[Text] Argentina planned to use lethal, self-igniting napalm bombs in a desperate bid to defend the Falklands settlement of Goose Green.

Conclusive evidence emerged today that the Argentinians intended to devastate British ground forces with the liquid.

I was flown by helicopter to the settlement and shown more than 30 clearly-marked, 220 kilogramme napalm tanks and 50 crudely-welded, home-made bombs. The tanks were stacked in the centre of the village only yards from where the civilians were held hostage in the community hall.

The cylinder-shaped, home-made bombs were neatly stored on the airfield. A white liquid which can eat away the sole of a shoe was leaking from at least two of them.

An officer showed me a document picked up from the ground nearby. It was an instruction leaflet of six pages marked secret and headed "la bomba napalm 1978". It described how to assemble a bomb and said it was for use of A4, A2C and Pucara aircraft.

Pucaras regularly use the airstrip and an expert said: "It was their intention to use it -- it is not a thing you leave around. It can go off and be very nasty and it shows they were getting desperate."

Napalm, which ignites on impact and can lead to horrifying injuries, is clearly now a major threat to British troops as they come within striking distance of Port Stanley. It was used to devastating effect by the Americans in the Vietnam War.

Military chiefs said there was no warning or indication that Argentina was dealing in napalm. It is not clear whether it was used in the fighting but paratroopers told me that the "stuff" had been dropped by the Argentinians. The bombs were basic in manufacture and, according to one officer, could have been made in the "village blacksmiths." "A child could have made them," he said.

It has been said that the quantity of napalm found could have wiped out the settlement.

Three Pucara aircraft were still on the airfield today. One was gutted but the two others were almost intact. One which had crash landed had been propped up by oil drums to make it look serviceable.

SPECULATION CONTINUES ON NUMBER OF EXOCETS

PM281207 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 28 May 82 p 4

[John Miller, diplomatic staff report: "Junta's Exocet Stock May Have Grown"]

[Excerpt] Argentina is now widely thought to have more lethal air-launched Exocet missiles for use against prime British Navy targets in the South Atlantic, or to be poised to obtain them.

Following the sinking of the destroyer Sheffield and the crippling of the Atlantic conveyor by Exocets, fears were growing in London yesterday that the Argentines had a few more in their arsenal.

The French-made missiles fired from the French-built Super Etendards have been used with deadly effect against the task force. There are conflicting reports about how many have been used and how many are left.

It was accepted that two were fired at the Sheffield on May 5. One missed the target but the other struck home causing 20 deaths. An unconfirmed report suggests a third Exocet was fired at the carrier Invincible, but was a long way off target. Two Exocets were also aimed at Atlantic Conveyer on Tuesday. Once again one of them scored a direct hit, and the ship had to be abandoned.

Defence experts agreed that Argentine tactics have been not to waste the Exocets by using them on "small fish." Ideally, from the junta's viewpoint, the missiles would be fired at targets such as the two aircraft carriers, Invincible and Hermes, and the two large troop-carriers, the QE2 and the Canberra.

It was not being ruled out in London last night that because of the nature of the weapon the Super Etendard pilots during their two strikes may have though they had "a big one" on their radar screens.

DAILY TELEGRAPH: CANNOT HELP THEM SAVE FACE

PM011313 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 1 Jun 82 p 18

[Editorial: "Harsh Reality"]

[Text] Reports that Mrs Thatcher and her foreign secretary, Mr Francis Pym, are in some disagreement over what comes next in the Falklands should not be ascribed an exaggerated significance. The so-called "war cabinet" has never been entirely of one mind, nor would one have wished it otherwise. It is right that the naturally conciliatory voice of the Foreign Office be heard and it is also no bad thing to have in Mr Pym and Mr Whitelaw two old soldiers who can be relied upon to strike a note of military caution.

That said, there does appear to be mounting political pressure on Mrs Thatcher, emanating from a variety of sources, not to press on for total victory over the Argentine troops on East Falkland. This argument, which we hear articulated by both the Labour and Social Democratic Party leadership, the American secretary of state, Mr Haig, and not a few conservative members of Parliament, makes a number of dubious claims. We are now certain of winning and in our triumph we should show magnanimity in allowing the Argentine forces to leave the islands with some dignity and without further loss of life. According to this rosy picture, honour would have been satisfied on both sides and after a decent interval of time an arrangement -- never specified -- could be reached which would safeguard the long-term future of the Falklanders.

Attractive though this may sound, it is a false prospectus. It gives military, diplomatic and political reality. [as published] In the first place, it is quite wrong to believe that we are within a stone's throw of defeating the Argentine garrison at Port Stanley. Resistance may crumble swiftly, but equally our soldiers may face a long, hard fight. To talk as if victory were secure is premature. Secondly, we are asked to regard the Argentines as reasonable people with a firm hold on reality, whereas all the evidence points in the opposite direction. To suggest that the Argentine junta will order its troops home and sit down in gentlemanly discussions with the Foreign Office is a cruel fantasy. Thirdly, it is a harsh fact that a nation which has suffered numerous casualties because it has been the victim of an unprovoked aggression has little interest in helping the aggressor save face -- even if it were sensible, it would not be possible. The prime minister has no choice other than to allow the action to run its course.

SUTHERLAND EXPECTED TO BE NEXT USSR AMBASSADOR

PM011315 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 1 Jun 82 p 28

[Diplomatic staff report: "Ambassador to Moscow Chosen"]

[Text] Britain's next ambassador to Russia is expected to be Sir Iain Sutherland who for the past four years has been ambassador to Greece. He will succeed Sir Curtis Keeble, who will be leaving Moscow in the summer.

It is expected that Sir Anthony Parsons, Britain's permanent representative at the United Nations, will not now succeed Sir Nicholas Henderson as ambassador to the United States. It is believed that Sir Anthony has decided to leave the diplomatic service on reaching the normal retirement age of 60 in September.

INTERLOCUTORS COMMENT ON PROGRESS OF TALKS 1 JUN

NC011842 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1630 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] UN spokesman in Cyprus Beavan has stated that the suspension of the intercommunal talks in view of the meetings which the UN secretary general will have in New York with President Kiprianou and Mr Denktas does not necessarily mean interruption of the dialogue. He added that nothing prevents its continuation in New York in view of the presence there of the UN secretary general's special envoy, Mr Gobbi, and of the two interlocutors. Mr Beavan made this statement prior to today's meeting within the framework of the intercommunal talks at the Pedra Palace Hotel. During today's meeting the discussion on the instruments of the federal administration was continued.

Referring to reports that UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar will submit new proposals, Mr Beavan noted a statement by Mr Gobbi that Mr Perez de Cuellar has many ideas about the Cyprus problem and that he has a great interest in it. However, he added, that whatever concrete new ideas emerge, they will result from the New York discussions, and this is not about proposals which have already been written for submission in New York. Mr Beavan said that in New York there will be a reassessment of the talks held so far and that decisions in connection with the dialogue will be made. The UN spokesman added that it must be stressed that the dialogue is continuous and dynamic and not static and restrictive. Our interest, he said, is not to achieve dramatic impressions but firm progress, and it appears that this is being achieved, particularly recently. He also said that an orderly and methodical detailed discussion is being carried out on all aspects of the Cyprus problem. From our point of view, he added, there has been movement from what — at times last year — was something like a monologue, toward constructive dialogue. And we hope that this dialogue will prove to be a firm foundation for a final and comprehensive agreement.

Answering a question, Mr Beavan said that the United Nations is not disturbed by reports about possible Turkish actions following the New York talks. He also said that what recently has been important is that a desire by both sides for mutual examination of positions and the seeking of joint ground has become evident.

Answering another question, Mr Beavan said that the two parties have arrived at the conclusion that it is better to seek a general settlement and for this reason they are discussing all the questions in detail. In conclusion, he said that he has no information about a meeting between President Kiprianou and Turkish Cypriot leader Denktas in New York.

The Greek Cypriot representative at the talks, Mr Mavrommatis, in answering a question said that discussion at the last meeting did not progress very much. He also said that the priority of the Famagusta issue is still valid. Answering a question, Mr Mavrommatis said that up to now the two sides have kept their original positions. He also said that at today's meeting he might submit in writing the views of the Greek Cypriot side on the question of executive authority.

Turkish Cypriot Representative Onan said that in his view signficant progress has been made in the talks, compared to the time the talks started in September 1980. He also said that soon it will become necessary for both sides to make political decisions.

Asked whether he could give something concrete in support of his view that significant progress has been made, Mr Onan said that he could not give details, but that he could give the assurance that progress has been made. He added: If we continue within this climate, you will be surprised at the very good results that will be achieved.

TURKS CONTINUE TO INSIST ON EQUAL PARTNERSHIP

NC020833 Nicosia I ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 2 Jun 82 pp 1, 8

[Excerpts] Beyond the somewhat good atmosphere that prevailed during the recent meetings within the framework of the inter-Cypriot talks, there is nothing to justify the impression, which the Turkish side has been trying to promote, that allegedly there has been progress in the dialgoue.

This was stressed to I ELEVTHEROTIPIA last night by authoritative political circles which were asked to comment on the allegations the Turkish Cypriot interlocutor made prior to yesterday's Ledra Palace Hotel meeting, allegedly that great progress has been made in the inter-Cypriot dialgoue.

Specifically, last night the authoritive circles stressed:

Not even one step forward has been made at the talks from the point of view of a change in the Turkish side's negative stand regarding the discussion on the question of the organs of the federal administration.

The authoritative circles cited as a typical example of the immutable Turkish positions the fact that:

The Turkish side, putting forward the "principles" of equality and equal partnership, insists on the unacceptable stance of collective administration with the succession to the office of president of the federal government of a Greek Cypriot and a Turkish Cypriot for a 1-year term in office.

For this reason, it repeats in its recent explanatory document its position for the setting up of a "federal council" that will consist of three Greek Cypriots and three Turkish Cypriots who, during their 6-year term in office, will succeed each other in power by turns.

In support of this stance, the Turkish Cypriot side cites the Swiss federal system with the weak powers of the central government -- A thing which is rejected by our side which supports the implementation of a strong presidential system, as is the case with other federal states.

The "equality" put forward by the Turkish side is also reflected by other organs of the executive authority, of the civil service, as well as by the "federal senate," the "federal house of representatives" and by the "federal constitutional court."

SPOKESMAN COMMENTS ON COSAR'S ECONOMIC MEASURES

NC011837 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1630 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Referring to a statement by the so-called Turkish Cypriot finance minister that the Turkish Cypriot leaders have agreed with the Turkish Government on the establishment of a bank in the occupied territories that will be a branch of the Central Bank of Turkey, as well as on the establishment of a development bank and the introduction of the Turkish lira as the official currency in the occupied territories, in replacement of the Cyprus pound, the government spokesman stated that the Cyprus Government will react to these separatist actions of the Turkish Cypriot leadership and of Ankara, which are within the framework of their general partitionist policy.

MESIMVRINI REPORTS NEW TURKISH VIOLATIONS 30 MAY

NC011454 Athens MESIMVRINI in Greek 1 Jun 82 p 2

[Text] There were fresh violations by Turkish military planes on Sunday.

According to authoritative reports, the violations took place over the northeastern Aegean. It has not been possible to establish how deep the Turkish planes penetrated into our national airspace. However, the Greek Air Force replied in the usual way by intercepting the Turkish airplanes.

Political observers point out that despite the strong language used by the prime minister last Friday in connection with the violations, which led to our withdrawal from a NATO exercise, the government did not announce anything yesterday about Sunday's new violations.

NIGERIAN STUDENTS 'INVADE' NIGERIAN EMBASSY

NC021032 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1000 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] At 1015 [0715 GMT], about 200 Nigerian students invaded the Nigerian Embassy at 1 Eratosthenis Street, Pangrati, Athens, and embarked on acts of vandalism. The students damaged the office of the Nigerian ambassador as well as other embassy offices. The Nigerian Nigerian ambassador called the police and, following negotiations, the Nigerian students agreed to leave the building. The students surrendered to the police and were taken to the general security police because the Nigerian ambassador asked that criminal proceedings be instituted against them.

ARSON, BOMB EXPLOSIONS IN ATHENS 2 JUN

NC021029 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1000 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] Early this morning unknown persons set fire to three cars belonging to foreign diplomatic missions. As a result of the fire, two of the cars were destroyed while the third was slightly damaged. The arson of foreign cars took place on Mikhalakopoulos Street, at the corner of Libya and Krataios streets, and on Gazia Street.

Two plastic devices exploded in the offices of Honeywell Company at 46 Singros Avenue, Athens, on the 5th floor; and at Singros Avenue, on the 3d floor. [sentence as heard] The explosions occurred around 0400 [0100 GMT]. Windowpanes were broken but there was no serious damage.

PAPER REPORTS DIFFICULTIES IN GREEK-USSR VISITS

NC011554 Athens MESIMVRINI in Greek 1 Jun 82 p 1

[Text] It appears that the return visits by Soviet Premier [title as published] Tikhonov and Foreign Minister Gromyko are definitely faltering according to cross-checked and authoritative reports.

Officially, the consultations continue -- under a Greek initiative -- but the Soviets are continually raising "technical" difficulties which make the visits practically impossible.

By contrast it is discreetly hinted that the Kremlin leadership would consider the possibility -- provided the Greek Government expresses such an interest -- of a (new) visit by the Greek prime minster to Moscow.

The view propounded by the Soviet side is that as concerns relations between the two countries, violating the protocol, which specifies that the USSR must return a visit, would not create a serious problem.

MUGABE HOLDS PRESS CONFERENCE; AGREEMENTS SIGNED

NC011608 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1400 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] This morning President Karamanlis received Zimbabwe's Prime Minister Robert Magabe, who is on an official visit to our country.

At 1300 today the prime minister of Zimbabwe held a press conference at the King George Hotel. Among other things, he said that the results of the bilateral talks with the Greek Government on questions of interest to the two countries are much better than had been expected. Mr Mugabe also said that identity of views was noted between the governments of Zimbabwe and Greece on concrete international questions.

Later the prime minister of Zimbabwe attended a luncheon given in his honor by Foreign Minister Kharalambopoulos.

In the meantime, four agreements on specific fields were signed at noon at the Ministry of Coordination between Greece and Zimbabwe.

On the Greek side the agreements were signed by Deputy Coordination Minister in Charge of International Economic Relations Pottakis, and on behalf of Zimbabwe by Economic Planning and Finance Minister Dr Chidzero. The agreements refer to the development of small and medium-sized craft businesses in Zimbabwe -- the Greek organization of small and medium-sized retail businesses and crafts [EOMMEKH] will carry out this program -- A study for the agricultural development of this African country with the cooperation of the Agrarian Bank of Greece, cooperation for development of Zimbabwe tourism and programs for the training of African pilots of commercial aircraft by Olympic Airways. Present at the signing of the agreements were Agrarian Bank Governor Rokofilos, Agrarian Bank Deputy Governor Safiris and EOMMEKH President Mrs Vaso Papandreou.

BRIEFS

AGREEMENT WITH BTA -- A cooperation agreement between the ATHENS NEWS AGENCY [APE] and BTA was signed in Sofia today by the directors general of the two agencies. The text of the agreements provides for the development of relations between the two organizations and the exchange of information on matters concerning the area as well as on political, economic and cultural life in the two countries. [Text] [Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1000 GMT 1 Jun 82 NC]

DISCHARGES FROM ARMY FOR CLANDESTINE AFFILIATIONS

TA011719 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1555 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 1 Jun (AA) -- Six officers and cadets have been discharged from the armed forces for affiliation with clandestine organisations while studying at military academy, a press release from the martial law command in Ankara announced.

They were arrested after being discharged and are now on trial, it added.

TCP ALLEGES CENSORSHIP BY MILITARY IN DISK TRIALS

TA010802 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Reports on the trials of the Confederation of Revolutionary Worker Unions [DISK], the Turkish Labor Party [TLP] and the Turkish Communist Party [TCP] have been censored.

It has been learned that the martial law commands have been censoring these reports for the past week. They telephone the newspapers and news agencies and ban them from publishing the defense and speeches by the defendants, saying that the speeches and defense statements by the unionists, progressive elements and patriots at the trials are propaganda.

VOTCP SCORES TERRITORIAL WATERS DECISION

TA010823 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Unattributed Commentary: "The Junta Is a Blackmail Tool in the Hands of the United States"]

[Excerpts] The junta government has been authorized to extend territorial waters beyond the existing 6 miles. [Words indistinct] The passage of the relevant law creates new opportunities for dangerous developments toward a hot war in the region. With this new law, the junta took into its hands a new weapon to increase tension. It showed that it approaches the Aegean continental shelf problem from a position of force and that it opts for the method of solving the Turkish-Greek conflict by the use of force.

The fact that the junta acquired such a tool for tension is in line with U.S. imperialism's plans regarding the Aegean. The Reagan administration wants to create satellites that will serve as slaves to its policy of aggression pursued against the socialist and the Arab-Islamic countries in the Aegan. From this viewpoint, the junta is the right stuff for the Pentagon.

The Aegean has been drawing the world's attention as a dangerous source of tension. Considering the dangerous regional situation, the Soviet Union delivered a note to the junta in April.

U.S. imperialism's policies of strengthening its military positions, expansion, gross interference in the domestic affairs of other peoples, its policies of oppression and blackmail, lie at the root of the danger. The junta -- which is trying to create the conditions of an authoritarian and oppressive regime by means of its policies of belt-tightening and of bloody terrorism -- has the job of carrying out U.S. imperialism's policies in the region.

Turkey is being turned not only into a firing range but into an aggressive base against our people and the Middle East. However, as we have stressed before, they shoot at those who set up bases, they fire upon those who fire upon others. Such a policy means disaster for Turkey. Are we going to allow the junta to drag our people and our country to that disaster?

BILEN READS TCP REPORT AT CENTRAL COMMITTEE PLENUM

TA311119 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 31 May 82

[First installment of the Turkish Communist Party Political Bureau report read by Secretary General Bilen at the Central Committee plenum; date not given -- read by announcer]

[Text] Dear Comrades: I am opening the Central Committee plenum. This plenum must determine the current situation of the party on the eve of the fifth congress. It must discuss the urgent tasks and problems of the party and deal with the preparations for the fifth congress. It is first necessary to mention the new developments arising from the political situation and to concretize the struggle platform of the party. On the one hand, we are using all our forces in a bid to protect and strengthen the party and its cadres under harsh conditions and continuous attacks by the enemy, destroy all parisanship that is weakening the party and eliminate the grounds for factionalism. This is the primary task. On the other hand, we are working to achieve the front of all national democratic forces and preparing to create, as of now, a broad mass movement against U.S. imperialism and NATO and deal a heavy blow to the junta concerning the referendum for the constitution.

Increasing Threats and the Possibilities -- Peace Or War?

During the past year, dangerous developments in the international situation and tension in international relations continued and were exacerbated following the aggressive policy of the United States and NATO. So much so that it is now inadequate to describe the international situation as complex and tense. The human race has reached a turning point between the path to peaceful relations and cooperation on the one hand and the path leading to new-type nuclear weapons that are very difficult -- maybe even impossible -- to limit and control and to accelerating the arms race and the cold war on the other hand. The future of the human race and the revolutionary process in the world and in our country depends on the choice between these two paths, namely on the issue of peace or war.

The struggle between the forces of war and peace is continuing and gaining strength. We, the communists, view the future with an optimism based on historical, objective and sound foundations. The wheel of history cannot be reversed. Under the current international balance of power it is possible to curb the aggressive policy of U.S. imperialism and NATO and avert a nuclear war. It all depends on the unity and struggle power of the world peace forces led by the world socialist system.

This past year was marked, above all, by the peace initiatives of the Soviet Union and the socialist countries. On behalf of the Soviet Union, Comrade Leonid Brezhnev made a series of peace proposals and initiatives to limit nuclear weapons in Europe, reduce tension in the world, increase security-inspiring measures and restrict strategic weapons. These proposals constituted a powerful weapon in the hands of the peace forces and peace lovers. The class and social base of the peace movement widened. It spread throughout all the continents and reached the United States and the door of the White House. The unity of the peace forces was enhanced. Through international actions, the peace movement acquired an international character. At the United Nations, the aggressive United States was isolated through the contributions of the socialist countries, some 100 developing countries that pursue a peaceful foreign policy and the nonaligned movement. Resolutions were adopted against the arms race so much so that the U.S. administration was forced to accept the conducting of negotiations for the limitation of strategic arms with the Soviet Union in Geneva.

However, all this does not mean that U.S. imperialists and NATO have renounced their aggressive goals. They are accelerating nuclear armament. The lies about Soviet military supremacy aim to conceal this fact as well as subdue the massive peace movement by accusing it of working for the interests of the Soviet Union. In the face of the rising peace movement, the U.S. administration is attempting to adopt false peaceful roles. The so-called zero solution proposal is not a genuine zero solution. It merely seeks to render passive the massive peace movement. When all these fail to conceal the U.S. administration's true face in favor of tension and confrontation, subtler measures are used. Lies are being concocted to the effect that the United States and the Soviet Union and NATO and the Warsaw Pact are equally responsible for the existing dangerous and tense situation. These are attempts to divide the peace front. In certain cases, the attacks directed against the peace movement are transformed into overt measures of pressure and terror. The U.S. imperialists are implementing and supporting every measure to repel the peace movement.

In Turkey, too, those who adopted a stand in favor peace have, from the beginning, been faced with the oppression and terror of the junta. While warmongering and anti-Soviet campaigns were being waged by the reactionary press, the administrators of the Turkish Peace Committee were directly attacked by the junta. However, the increasing association of the junta with the U.S. policy of inciting war is being criticized by very wide circles. These circles, which include members of the RPP and retired generals and admirals, are opposed to providing bases and facilities for the U.S. Rapid Deployment Force [RDF] on Turkish soil. The arrest of the Turkish Peace Committee administrators also met with the reaction of wide circles.

Imperialists are directing their attacks primarily against the socialist countries -- the pillar of the world peace movement and the anti-imperialist struggle. The extraordinary intensification of the efforts to organize a counterrevolution in Poland in 1981 constitutes the clearest example of this. It is not in vain that imperialist circles are furious about the measures taken in Poland after 13 December 1981 against the counterrevolutionaries. These measures served both to avert a [word indistinct] against the gains of socialism in Poland and to deal a heavy blow to imperialist and NATO plans that would drag the world into a nuclear war. The imperialists, who failed to attain their goals by escalating counterrevolution in Poland, are now trying to use the measures taken against counterrevolution in Poland as the grounds for their efforts to mount tension. They resort to cold war methods such as an embargo and boycott against Poland and the Soviet Union.

Comrades: Our party has always considered it its duty to defend and support real socialism and resist anti-Soviet attacks directed against it. We do not consider this only as an internationalist duty. Through its strength, successful example and historical experience, real socialism greatly contributes to our people's struggle for peace, freedom and socialism. This is why, in the same way that we supported the measures taken by Polish communists and patriots against counterrevolution after 13 December 1981, we opposed the recent stand adopted by the Italian Communist Party [PCI] leadership.

The PCI leadership is covering up the real causes of the crisis that emerged in Poland in recent years. Rather than stating that this crisis was caused by insufficient compliance in this country with the general rules of socialist revolution and socialist construction, the PCI leadership is attempting to hold the Soviet Union responsible for this crisis. In the same way, according to the PCI leadership, socialist countries are also responsible for endangering world peace. It is evident that this policy is directly helping the interests of U.S. imperialism and NATO. The PCI leadership is also opposed to the place and role occupied by socialist countries in the world revolutionary process. It is slandering the gains of the socialist countries.

Our party proves just the contrary. The example of the Soviet Union and the other socialist countries has always played an inspiring role for our people. Our relations with the CPSU and the other brotherly parties, which are based on proletarian internationalism, have always accorded us the ability to lead and help the struggles of our people in a more effective and lively manner.

In the face of U.S. imperialists who wish to drag Turkey into adventures, very wide circles in our country today view the Soviet Union -- with its existence and its concrete peaceful proposals -- as a factor protecting peace and security in our region. Our party has tested through its own experience the truth of the Leninist viewpoint concerning the international importance of the October Revolution. It is therefore not necessary to dwell here at length on the opportunistic and revisionist views of the PCI leadership that the period started with the October Revolution has lost its validity.

Nevertheless, let us for one moment consider the kind of party that would emerge if we had attempted to implement the proposals of the PCI leadership in our country; for instance, if we had demanded that the toilers sacrifice in order to overcome the economic crisis, if we had proposed a historic conciliation with the Justice Party, if we had claimed that socialism can be constructed without terminating the private ownership of the means of production belonging to the likes of Koc and Sabanci [prominent Turkish businessmen] and the banks, or if we had advocated remaining in NATO and democratizing it. There is no need for more, comrades; Those are symptoms of the kind of communist party we would have turned into; That is a frightening picture.

The statement contributing to this rightist line of the PCI leadership made by the leftist sectarian group that we ousted from the party is an interesting development. The ideological struggle against the line of the PCI leadership is important from this viewpoint as well. This is necessary in order to successfully conduct the class struggle in our country. Our party will not swerve from the Marxist-Leninist path, which has been tried, tested and is open to the future, and from Lenin's (?good) path. In the same way as no one will ever see the Kizilirmak River flowing back into its source, they will never see the Turkish Communist Party [TCP] adopting a stance against the unity of the world communist movement.

Comrades: U.S. imperialists are taking new steps toward their aggressive plans in the Middle East. They are supporting Israel's terrorist and aggressive policy against the Arab peoples and the Palestinian people. On the other hand, the Pentagon established joint defense groups with a series of countries, including Turkey. It secured bases, facilities and the right to move its RDF through some countries, including Turkey. The U.S. imperialists are intensifying their moves in a bid to cause the collapse of the anti-imperialist regime in Iran. They are resorting to every means in order to protect their weakened positions in the region and to be able to curb the increasingly strong anti-imperialist struggle and crush the developing national liberation movement.

In this connection, the fact that the junta is following more and more the line of the U.S. administration, becoming militarily involved with certain reactionary regimes in the region, exacerbating the points of tension with Greece and undermining the solution of the Cyprus problem further increases the threat of our country being dragged into adventures in our region. Under these circumstances, the independence, territorial integrity, sovereignty and nonalignment of Cyprus and the purging of the island of all foreign troops and bases can only be guaranteed by an international conference to meet under the auspices of the United Nations. The TCP supports with all its might the struggle waged by the Turkish and Greek Cypriot toilers for the continuation of the intercommunal talks within this framework, on the basis of high-level agreements and under the auspices of the United Nations. There is no doubt that the Turkish peace forces must enhance their struggle to ensure the withdrawal of the Turkish Army from Cyprus.

Through their joint statements, the TCP and the KKE show the soundest way under these circumstances to resolve the Turkish-Greek discord through peaceful means and in the interests of both countries and nations.

The TCP greatly values the unity and solidarity of all progressive, anti-imperialist and peace-loving forces in the Middle East against U.S. imperialism and its gangs. It is exerting efforts to further strengthen this unity and solidarity. The TCP consistently supports the peace proposals of the Soviet Union and the other socialist countries directed toward the Middle East, our country and the world in general.

Part Two of TCP Report

TA011113 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Second installment of the Political Bureau report read by Turkish Communist Party Central Committee Sectretary General Bilen at the Central Committee plenum; date not given -- read by announcer]

[Text] No Liberalization But Reactionaryism

Comrades, the Central Committee plenum has convened under the barbaric attacks of the reactionary military regime against the working class, the toiling masses, all patriotic and democratic forces. Over the past 2 years the Turkish people have lived under the greatest brute force in their history. Efforts are being made to suppress and silence all potential opponents of the regime -- not just the communists and the other revolutionary force -- through fascist methods. The basic reason for the oppression of the people is the junta's fear of them. The junta is aware that if the oppression is reduced even a little the masses will raise their heads again. It is afraid that the masses and the progressive forces will forcefully oppose the present national treason policy, the looting of all of labor's gains by a handful of monopolies and the destruction of all the democratic institutions. All the hypocritical remarks about a so-called return to democracy are aimed at keeping the masses silent a while longer before this unbearable oppression and exploitation.

While the junta's attacks continue, so-called democrats who are really the junta's partners in crime are doing all they can to make the workers believe that the regime is liberalizing. But the regime is not liberalizing; it is becoming more reactionary. Indeed, a reactionary, militarist police state is being institutionalized. There are efforts to impose this regime on the people today in the form of a junta and tomorrow in the form of a reactionary and parliamentary system.

It is not a coincidence that the junta is becoming even more reactionary. The objective basis of this process is imperialism's support of the military dictatorship in Turkey with a view to creating tension in the international situation and filling the void left by Iran, the escalation of militarism and monopolization inside the country and the increased exploitation of the working masses. It involves the sharpening of class conflicts. These are also closely connected with the deepening -- beyond all hope -- of the crisis in world capitalism and with their taking on a lasting character. In other words, Reaganism and Friedmanism, the junta and the 24 January economic decisions are the two sides of the same coin both in the international field and in our country. More reactionaryism and more aggression in the interests of monopolist capital.

We especially stressed the dangers created by U.S. imperialism's policy of tension during our last plenum. We also explained how it is impossible to pursue the 24 January economic policy without increasing the brute force against the masses. We noted the possibilities of attracting the masses to a struggle for specific demands and of using the internal schisms within the junta under conditions of sharpening class conflicts. We said at the plenum that unless the progressive forces unite, these possibilities cannot be realized. The internal conflicts within the junta -- that is, within the reaction circle -- would be used by the most reactionary pro-American forces. That is how events in fact developed.

Very important changes have taken place in certain aspects of the junta's basic policy which we had mentioned in the previous plenum. The main change is the fact that the junta ended its [word indistinct] efforts within NATO; To put it more correctly, the bankruptcy of the junta's autonomy policy within NATO under conditions of tension.

Today, the junta is increasingly moving toward becoming U.S. imperialism's striking force in the Middle East. The junta said yes to the plans to have the RDF use Turkish soil.

If Reagan and his partners cannot be stopped this year, U.S. nuclear missiles will be deployed on Turkish soil in the future. Our party press has been disclosing the junta's pro-American steps constantly.

A radical change was also observed in the junta's domestic policy and in its shaky attitude toward the bourgeoisie's civilian political forces. The junta expanded its attacks -- whose sharp edge had been aimed against the working class from the start -- to include the RPP. On the other hand, the conciliatory tendencies between the junta circles and civilian reactionary circles, between the junta and the Justice Party were strengthened.

The junta put an end to the investigations -- even though most of them were for show -- started about torture charges, death sentences are being executed, illegal prosecutions and arrests have spread against all kinds of progressive ideas and against all the opposers of the junta. All these fascist oppression methods are being used more intensively now. Turkey has been turned into one big concentration camp.

On the other hand, the junta has embraced the 24 January economic measures program more tightly. It stopped talking about the uncertainties it felt about it. It stopped its remarks and steps that might have been interpreted as concessions from the 24 January principles. It rendered ineffective the forces within the National Security Council Secretariat General committees, within the bureaucracy and government which opposed the various aspects of the 24 January program. In the administration of the economy, it increased the Ozal group's authority to a maximum.

The fact that the junta was becoming increasingly reactionary further sharpened the conflict between its practical position and the traditional roots of Kemalism. This situation further deepened the crisis of the junta's Kemalism the anti-imperialist contents of which were already extracted. The junta has gradually renounced appealing to the Kemalists and has even begun to attack traditional Kemalist associations. The junta is gradually decreasing its use of Kemalist concepts in justifying its policy. All these show that none of the fundamental problems which brought the country to 12 September have been solved. The junta and the domestic and foreign forces supporting it are well aware of this fact. Therefore, they cannot find any solution other than increasing oppression in a bid to prevent the reaction of the masses. All these facts prove the belief that was expressed at the previous plenum that the crisis is permanent and the ability of the sovereign forces to maneuver is gradually being limited.

Dear comrades, this is what the above-mentioned facts show: Now the situation of the toiling masses is far worse than before. The obstacles in front of the struggle of the toiling masses have increased. The mass struggle requires more sacrifice and a stronger organization. Strength should be gathered for every single step within the process of these arduous struggles, the weakest points of the enemy should be attacked with an energy 100 times greater than before, one should be strengthened in the struggle to repel the enemy's counterattacks, and one should learn how to be victorious risking repeated defeats.

As for the junta, it sharpens class differences with every step it takes. The forces it is facing are increasing compared to those existing at the beginning of the 12 September period. Trying to suppress with bayonets the discontent of millions of unemployed and landless citizens and disenfranchised workers is tantamount to sitting on top of a time bomb. The joint appeal issued by the three parties says: "The Reagan administration is also clearly responsible for the junta's murders and its bloody oppression and terror. Had the junta not been backed up by the U.S. administration it could not escalate the violation of human rights to such proportions." How long can this support keep the junta alive in the event it is faced with strong popular resistance? Currently the Reagan administration -- upon which the junta is leaning -- is faced with the united front of socialist countries, the Soviet Union and the world peace forces. The victory of the peace front has created a situation which will give rise to vital possibilities enabling us to save Turkey from the darkness of the junta. Yes, there are strong reasons for us to be optimistic. If part of the current truth is the temporary superiority of reactionaryism, the other part is the strengthening of the factors which will destroy it.

'OUR RADIO': ULUSU TO MEET REAGAN IN BONN

TA020949 (Clandestine) Our Radio in Turkish to Turkey 0700 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] Ulusu will go to the FRG on 8 June to attend the NATO summit. According to an official announcement made by the prime minister's office, the junta's prime minister, Ulusu, will participate in the NATO summit to be held in Bonn on 10 June. He will be accompanied by Foreign Minister Turkmen.

Ulusu will hold a bilateral meeting with U.S. President Reagan within the framework of the NATO summit. The new developments in Turkish-American relations following Secretary of State Haig's visit to Ankara will be discussed at the meeting.

TURKISH OIL TANKER DAMAGED IN GULF WAR

TA011557 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1545 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Text] Istanbul, 1 Jun (AA) -- The Turkish tanker "Atlas 1" was damaged during an Iraqi air raid on Iran while loading oil in the Gulf, spokesman for the private firm which owns the tanker said in Istanbul.

The tanker, which was able to load only 90,000 of its 150,000 ton capacity, will leave the Gulf after filling up, and is expected in Turkey in mid-June, they added.

BRIEFS

NEW TURK-IS LEADER -- The leader of the Federation of Turkish Textile, Weaving and Wearing Apparel Industry Workers Unions [TEK-SIF], Sevket Yilmaz, has been elected the new leader of the Turkish Confederation of Labor [Turk-Is]. [Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 28 May 82 TA]

AUSTRIA

KIRCHSCHLAEGER SUMS UP VISIT TO MOSCOW, KIEV

AU011120 Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 30 May 82 p 1

[Excerpt] Kiev/Vienna -- "The visit has taken place in an atmosphere which one could only wish would some day exist between the big powers." This was stated by President Rudolf Kirchschlaeger in summing up the results of his 5-day official visit to the USSR, which ended yesterday with a visit to the Ukrainian capital of Kiev. President Kirchschlaeger and his entourage arrived in Vienna early on Saturday afternoon.

In the opinion of President Kirchschlaeger, it would be essential for the big powers to again adopt confidence-building measures and to talk with one another. He added that it was not important that Vienna be the venue of such a summit meeting, although this was of course offered in Moscow. The president does not believe that such a meeting will materialize before the summer. He believes the fall -- there has been talk about October -- is a realistic time.

According to the president, the visit as such was fully within the framework of the diplomacy as practiced to date; it was not of any special nature, but was of topical importance in view of current international tensions. The visit convinced him, he said, that the relationship of trust which has developed between the USSR and Austria since the conclusion of the Austrian state treaty is continuing and that there are also good prospects for the future in this respect.

As far as economic aspects are concerned, the president declared that he expected additional export opportunities for Austria.

BELGIUM

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER VISITS ISRAEL

For Jerusalem Domestic IDF Radio and Jerusalem POST reportage on External Affairs Minister Leo Tindemans' visit to Israel, including talks with President Yitzhaq Navon, Prime Minister Menahem Begin, Foreign Minister Yitzhaq Shamir, Knesset Speaker Menahem Savidor, Gaza Mayor Rashad ash-Shawwa and other Palestinian figures, see the Israel section of the 1June Middle East and Africa DAILY REPORT.

ITALY & THE VATICAN

ISRAELI POLITICIAN MEETS WITH PCI LEADERS

PM020829 Rome L'UNITA in Italian 29 May 82 p 14

[Text] Rome -- Israeli United Workers' Party [MAPAM] Secretary General Victor Shemtov, accompanied by Giuseppe Franchetti, had a meeting at our party's Directorate headquarters yesterday with comrades Gian Carlo Pajetta, Directorate member and international department chief, and Antonio Rubbi, Central Committee member and foreign section chief.

The Middle East region's problems in particular were examined during the wide and cordial talks. Despite different assessments of the current situation and possible solutions, the two parties' representatives expressed the will to continue their relations and to work to promote a process leading to a just and comprehensive peace and to harmony among the peoples in the region on the basis of respect for the independence and security of each state, including Israel, and of full recognition of the Palestinian people's legitimate rights to self-determination and their own homeland.

GENERAL SANTINI TO VISIT PRC, VIEW ARMED FORCES

AU020951 Rome ANSA in English 0851 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 2 Jun (ANSA) -- Italian chief-of-staff General Vittorio Santini will be leaving June 8 for a visit to China where, as guest of the Chinese Defense Ministry, he is scheduled to meet with ranking military and political leaders. Santini and his Defense Ministry delegation also plan on touring several Chinese armed forces divisions during the visit, which was arranged last month while Chinese Deputy Chief-of-Staff Wu Xiuguan was in Italy.

The Italian defense officer is due to arrive in Beijing June 10 for a week-long sojourn. In February, a delegation headed by the Rome Defense Ministry's secretary-general and armaments chief, General Giuseppe Piovano, visited the Asian nation.

SWEDEN

SUBMARINE DEPLOYMENT REDUCES USSR'S CREDIBILITY

PM271039 Stockholm SVENSKA DAGBLADET in Swedish 25 May 82 p 6

[Claes-Goran Kjellander report]

[Text] The large number of nuclear-armed submarines in the Baltic naturally reduces the credibility of the Soviet Union when it declares that this sea should be a sea of peace, Foreign Minister Ola Ullsten said in reply to a question from Moderate Coalition Party Riksdag Deputy Carl Bildt during Riksdag question time on Monday [24 May].

Bildt wanted to know what view the government takes of the effect on Swedish security policy now that the Soviet Union has added submarines of the so-called Juliet class to its Baltic fleet. He drew a parallel with 1976 when the Soviet Union began to redeploy Golf submarines in the Baltic. Many people believed then that it was a temporary measure, or something which the military was doing without the politicians' go-ahead. "We now know that the measure was a permanent one. The deployment of Juliet submarines is a further sign that the Baltic is being used as a base for nuclear arms."

Ullsten was unwilling to state precisely how large a nuclear-free zone must be to function as "a concept in the service of disarmament." But he considered that a proposal for such a zone must involve "a stabilization or consolidation of security" before it could be accepted.

DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 107 3 June 1982

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Genscher Views Israeli Relations Prior to Visit J 1
Namibian Leader Continues Visit; Meets Press J 1
Argentine Ambassador Comments on Sanctions, Trade J 2
Lambsdorff Previews Versailles Economic Summit J 3
East-West Trade Likely Topic J 4
SPD's Bahr Discusses Palme Commission Report J 4
Schmidt Bids Farewell to U.S. Commander J 5
Press Criticizes Recent Terrorist Attacks J 5
SUEDDETSCHE ZEITUNG Views Reagan's Visit [2 Jun] J 6

FRANCE

Mitterrand Addresses ILO, Calls for Solidarity K 1
Antinuclear Militants Claim 5 Bomb Attacks K 2

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Pope John Paul Returns From UK Visit 2 Jun L 1
Berlinguer Views PCI Relations With East L 1
[Belgrade BORBA 30 May]

NORDIC AFFAIRS

DENMARK

Poul Thorsen To Be New Air Force Chief P 1
[BERLINSKE TIDENDE 28 May]

FINLAND

Agreements on Cooperation Signed With India P 1

NORWAY

AFTENPOSTEN Urges 4-Percent Defense Budget Increase [29 May] P 1

SWEDEN

Arms Export Controls Reportedly Tightened P 2
[DAGENS NYHETER 28 May]

UNITED KINGDOM

Thatcher Pessimistic on Avoiding Bloodshed Q 1
Explosion in Goose Green Kills 1, Injures 11 Q 2
Caused by Faulty Ammunition Q 2
Troops Gear Up for Battle To Retake Stanley Q 3
Ministry of Defense Denies Mainland Raid Report Q 4
Damaged Warships 'On Way Home' From Battle Zone Q 5
Sidewinder Missiles Being Fitted on Nimrods Q 5
Pope John Paul Departs Cardiff for Rome Q 5

CYPRUS

Kiprianou Departure for U.S. Changed to 3 Jun R 1
Moscow Interest in Development Projects Claimed R 1
[I SIMERINI 3 Jun]
Turkish Cypriots Protest Arrest of Danish Captain R 1

GREECE

Defense Ministry Spokesman on Airspace Violations S 1
[AKROPOLIS 2 Jun]
Spokesman Denies Reports on Tikhonov Visit S 1
[ELEVTHEROTIPIA 2 Jun]
Further on 'Invasion' of Nigerian Embassy by Students S 1
Mugabe Ends Visit; Leaves for Netherlands S 1
RIZOSPASTIS Describes Rogers Visit as Provocation [2 Jun] S 2
RIZOSPASTIS Criticizes Luns as Provocative [2 Jun] S 3

TURKEY

Ecevit Acquitted in Nevsehir, Faces Further Charges T 1
Aegean Military Exercises Concluded 2 Jun T 1
Former Public Works Minister Kilic Rejects Charges T 1
Spokesman on Aegean, Airspace Disputes T 2
Ulusu, Turkmen To Visit Saudi Arabia 4 Jun T 2
Editorial Notes Rising Tension in Aegean T 2
[GUNES 30 May]
Part Three of Report Read at TCP Plenum [VOTCP] T 4
Late Report: Ankara Military Tribunal Releases Ecevit T 6

OTHER COUNTRIES

AUSTRIA

U.S. Official Reacts to Criticism of Remarks U 1
[ARBEITER-ZEITUNG 2 Jun]
Bulgaria's Zhivkov Arrives for Official Visit U 1

NETHERLANDS

Mugabe Begins 3-Day Visit; Backs Sanctions U 1

PORTUGAL

Socialists 'Suspend' Relations With Communists U 2
Northern Military Region Official Dismissed U 2

SPAIN

Socialists Do Not Intend To Harass Government U 2
[EL PAIS 27 May]

GENSCHER VIEWS ISRAELI RELATIONS PRIOR TO VISIT

DW021125 Stuttgart Sueddeutscher Rundfunk Network in German 1700 GMT 1 Jun 82

[Interview by Reporter Vogel with Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher; place and date not given — recorded]

[Text] [Question] How are German-Israeli relations developing at present?

[Answer] My visit to Israel will serve to further develop German-Israeli relations. Both countries are interested in such development. This desire is also characterized by the historic responsibility of the Germans. On the occasion of this visit we want to discuss more than German-Israeli relations, we will also discuss all international issues.

We as Germans and Europeans, are interested in achieving a comprehensive and just peace in the Middle East. Peace in the Middle East means peace for us and vice versa. The people of the Middle East and Europeans are not actually separated by the Mediterranean, but connected. They are neighboring regions depending on each other, and they can give very, very much to each other.

[Question] As regards the European Community and Israel, the main problem seems to be access of Israeli products to the European market. Will you be able to do something about that?

[Answer] We have always supported the European market's opening and staying open for Mediterranean, Israeli and Maghreb area products within the framework of the European Community's Mediterranean policy. This must also be valid if the European Community is to be extended.

Naturally, there is concern in Israel and other states of the region that the inclusion of Portugal and Spain in the Community could create problems. We must solve these problems because we want to continue the Mediterranean policy as before. That also serves the interests of the Europeans.

[Question] You last visited Jerusalem in 1978. You met Foreign Minister Shamir at the United Nations in New York in 1980 and 1981. Is this an indication that the German-Israeli dialogue will be continued?

[Answer] Most certainly; I have no doubt at all that the talks in Israel will be a contribution to deepening the trustful relations we cultivate in acknowledgement of our mutual responsibility.

NAMIBIAN LEADER CONTINUES VISIT; MEETS PRESS

LD021408 Hamburg DPA in German 1207 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Excerpt] Bonn, 2 Jun (DPA) — SWAPO continues to regard the convening of a new Namibia conference as the best means of furthering negotiations on the independence of this former colony. This was stated by SWAPO leader Sam Nujoma to journalists in Bonn today after talks with Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher and head of the U.S. State Department African Affairs Bureau Chester Crocker.

Nujoma indicated, however, that he would not necessarily insist on such a conference if the "Namibia contact group" (the United States, the Federal Republic, Great Britain, France, Canada) show themselves ready for compromise. The SWAPO chairman described as unacceptable the Western proposals for a mixed election system in Namibia — two votes per voter — because this is too complicated and could lead to whites blocking minorities in the constituent assembly.

Nujoma emphatically repeated that in the event of an election victory SWAPO would respect the rights of the white settlers and would pursue a nonaligned policy. He stressed the readiness of his organization for a cease-fire with South Africa and comprehensive cooperation with the United Nations for the implementation of UN Resolution 435 (independence on the basis of free elections). He pointed out, however, that South Africa has so far prevented the implementation of this resolution.

Bonn diplomatic circles expressed confidence after Genscher's meeting with the SWAPO leader that the existing obstacles to starting Namibia's process of independence could be removed before the end of this year. There is a apparently understanding in Bonn for SWAPO's doubts concerning the voting right proposal. Diplomatic circles regard a compromise as possible.

ARGENTINE AMBASSADOR COMMENTS ON SANCTIONS, TRADE

DW011315 Bremen Radio Bremen Network in Germany 1630 GMT 29 May 82

["Excerpts" from Reporter H. Ruebsaat interview with Dr. Roberto E. Guyer, ambassador of the Republic of Argentina to the FRG; date and place not given -- recorded]

[Text] [Question] The relations between your country and the FRG have been good for a long time. Have they been affected by the fact that the Federal Republic is supporting Great Britain in the scope of NATO and the EC?

[Answer] We are not only very disappointed but also very sad that this very rigorous attitude has been adopted irrespective of the context of this conflict. We have been particularly struck by the unlimited, indefinite renewal of the embargo last Monday. We still can't understand it. We have very many German immigrants. There are a million Argentine of German origin. We would have thought that there would be some understanding for this situation. This lack of understanding has affected and hurt us very much.

[Question] In a situation which is marked by a very strong solidarity of the Latin American states with Argentina, do you think what you are saying about the clouding of the German-Argentine relationship also holds true for other Latin American countries?

[Answer] I, of course, cannot speak for them, but I can say that they all are amazed at the attitude of the FRG and the entire EC.

[Question] How should things go on in the German-Argentine relationship? Are there any expectations or even demands on the part of your country toward German policy?

[Answer] We hope very much that the measures will be lifted and that we will return to the normal, sound, traditional and historic relationship between our two countries.

[Question] Are there any plans to punish the German economy for the Government's stance, by very deliberately pursuing an anti-German import course, for instance?

[Answer] No, it's not meant this way. If this embargo lasts, Argentina will have to hold its position somehow. However, the point here is countermeasures, not measures. The sooner the EC measures are lifted, the sooner relations can return to normal. There are not only purely economic but also psychological consequences. The sooner the economic relations are restored, the sooner the relations which have existed for centuries between the Federal Republic and Argentina can continue. We want a continuation of our relations as they were in the past, sound and positive for both sides.

[Question] But there is also talk in our country about a connection between such intensified cooperation between the FRG and your country and certain domestic-political changes in Argentina toward more democracy.

[Answer] Every country in the whole world holds the view that its internal development is an internal affair. I believe that no truly sovereign country will accept pressure from outside in this respect. Developments in Argentina will have to be decided by the Argentines themselves.

[Question] It is known that part of your arms were supplied by the Federal Republic. After the Malvinas conflict ends, will your country ask for intensified arms supplies from the FRG?

[Answer] That depends on future developments.

[Question] The Western states fear that the Soviet Union and its allies could expand their influence in Latin America, including your country, as a result of the present conflict. Could the FRG's pro-British stance result in the GDR's influence in your country growing stronger to the disadvantage of FRG-Argentine relations?

[Answer] The correct formulation is not what Argentina wants but what the consequences will be if the Federal Republic excludes itself from trade. In this case it is not an Argentine decision but a decision of the Federal Republic.

LAMBSDORFF PREVIEWS VERSAILLES ECONOMIC SUMMIT

LD031000 Hamburg DPA in German 0849 GMT 3 Jun 82

[Text] Hamburg/Cologne, 3 Jun (DPA) -- In an interview on FRG radio this morning, Federal Economics Minister Otto Graf Lambsdorff expressed the opinion that the economic summit of the leading industrial countries which begins in Versailles tomorrow will not find any patent remedies for the recovery of the world economy. Certainly the subject of interest rate reductions will be discussed there, but he does not believe that a reduction in the high American interest rates is to be expected in the very short term. The summit is rather "a platform, a framework which will influence -- I don't want to say determine -- international economic policy in the months ahead, and that is why these economic summits are important," Lambsdorff said.

Asked whether high U.S. interest rates play an almost decisive role for the European economic outlook, too, Lambsdorff replied that they are certainly important, but the Europeans are making things much too easy for themselves if they believe that American interest rates are responsible for all the mistakes and difficulties of European economic policy. In the European [word indistinct] there exist too many homemade problems. In order to coordinate international economic policy everyone must first put his own house in order.

In connection with U.S. criticism of trade with the East European countries, Lambsdorff stated that too much importance is attached to German trade with the East in the media and in all sorts of statements, especially on the other side of the Atlantic. The USSR accounts for only 1.9 percent of all exports from the Federal Republic. Furthermore, U.S. grain exports must be measured with the same yardstick as the export of industrial plant. Lambsdorff said that in his opinion the subject of the gas-for-pipes deal with the USSR will also be a topic at Versailles. He noted that despite U.S. disapproval, this deal cannot now be dropped. "There is the not unimportant question of whether the United States grants permission for the export of some components that are necessary for the construction of the pipeline. These export applications were submitted before the outbreak of the Polish crisis and a basically positive reply was given. We have spent a long time in carrying out responsible checks, and this deal stands," Lambsdorff said.

East-West Trade Likely Topic

NC021702 Paris AFP in English 1649 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 2 Jun (AFP) -- West Germany "is committed to long-term economic exchanges with Eastern bloc countries and rejects any trade war" with the East, a government spokesman said here today.

Spokesman Klaus Boelling was replying to a question on the importance that East-West trade and credits to the Soviet Union would have at this weekend's Western industrial summit at Versailles.

The spokesman had made no mention of the matter in his analysis of subjects likely to be raised during the summit. But he declared that economic co-operation between countries in East and West "contributes to the establishment of stable political relations" between the two blocs, and thus to international security.

However, he added that the Bonn government believes that East-West trade "should not create unilateral dependence nor lead to the transfer of technology of a military nature" from the West to the socialist bloc.

He conceded that East-West trade and credits to the Soviet Union "would certainly be raised" at the summit, either in informal talks or in full session.

The spokesman declared: "A consensus on this matter is perfectly possible if the two sides take sufficient account of their respective interests." The reference to two sides pointed to the United States and the West European participants.

The U.S. has been unable to get the other summit participants to include East-West trade on the official agenda.

Referring to demands by the U.S. for restrictions on credits to the USSR, Mr Boelling stressed that West Germany granted neither privileged state credit nor cheap interest rates to Eastern bloc countries.

He also stressed that there was no reason to change anything in the system of financial safeguards extended by Bonn concerning private export bank credits. The U.S. has asked Bonn to restrict its system of export guarantees for Eastern bloc countries.

SPD'S BAHR DISCUSSES PALME COMMISSION REPORT

DW021237 Mainz ZDF Television Network in German 1900 GMT 1 Jun 82

["Excerpts" from Reporter Philipp interview with SPD Bundestag Deputy Egon Bahr in Bonn; date not given -- videotaped]

[Text] [Question] What value, effect and influence can the Palme Commission report on disarmament and security have with regard to individual governments?

[Answer] We have paid great attention to making realistic suggestions which can be implemented.

[Question] Disarmament negotiations always suffered from, among other things, the fact that the Soviet Union was not prepared to permit inspections or verifications of disarmament measures. Now a concession has been made for the first time. Do you think this could have an effect on other negotiations, such as the Vienna MBFR talks?

[Answer] The fact that the report mentions in two places that on the spot verification of the agreed measures must take place, is a matter which goes beyond the report and which can naturally be of great importance for the Vienna and Geneva negotiations.

[Question] Can something begin that way?

[Answer] I very much hope so.

[Question] Reagan said yesterday that strategic arms will be negotiated in June. The Bonn politicians took pride in that. Is that pride justified?

[Answer] There is nobody in Bonn who has not urged the American President and his government in this respect. We were certainly not the only ones. All of us in Europe had urged a resumption of negotiations to limit strategic arms. The commission, by the way, has gone one step further, saying that agreements must be made with regard to the form in which SALT II is heeded and adhered to. We have found with greatest satisfaction — and this certainly pertains to everybody in the commission -- that the issue which was fiercely discussed in America 2 weeks ago has been accepted now or since yesterday by the American President.

SCHMIDT BIDS FAREWELL TO U.S. COMMANDER

LD022122 Hamburg DPA in German 1956 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 2 Jun (DPA) — Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt today received Gen Charles Gabriel, commander in chief of the U.S. Air Force in Europe and commander of the Allied Air Force in central Europe, for a farewell visit. On 15 July Gabriel becomes commander in chief of the U.S. Air Force.

According to the Federal Press Office, Schmidt condemned the latest explosives attacks on U.S. forces installations as treacherous and terrorist, and expressed his regret to General Gabriel as representatives of all U.S. troops in the FRG. Schmidt stressed that the great majority of Germans have good relations with the U.S. forces and high regard for joint defense.

PRESS CRITICIZES RECENT TERRORIST ATTACKS

DW021031 Cologne Deutschlandfunk Network in German to East and West Germany 0505 GMT 2 Jun 82

[From the press review]

[Text] Commenting on the attacks on U.S. installations in the FRG, the paper DIE WELT writes: With a series of bomb attacks in the night after Whitsuntide, the leftist extremists have set signals in the FRG -- one week prior to the visit of President Ronald Reagan. This scenerio calls for appeals against it in every case -- regardless of the decisions to be made at the Bonn NATO summit. The paper goes on to say: Security organs believe that we are dealing now with a division of labor with regard to anti-American aims between the hardcore RAF [Red Army Faction] and followers of the terrorist Revolutionary Cells who follow the principle: Live legally, bomb after work. The RAF heeds only military considerations in its fight. The revolutionary cells use intelligence practice. Both are dangerous.

The FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE ZEITUNG stresses the following: After the attacks, some possible gaps will be filled with regard to safeguarding the security of the American guest. The Revolutionary Cells might appreciate this somewhat because it would create the impression that the Washington visitor can be safely maneuvered through the FRG only with the greatest efforts of all security organs. With their criminal acts, which cannot be simply discarded as having just damaged objects, the revolutionary cells suggest to the peaceful and law-abiding people planning to demonstrate against American security policy to abstain most carefully from every kind of violence.

The NUERNBERGER NACHRICHTEN writes: With the attacks on U.S. installations in Bavaria and Hesse, the Revolutionary Cells have entered a field which has so far been cultivated by the Red Army Faction, their intellectual comrades. They know that there is a strong wave of mistrust with regard to Reagan and his excessive arms policy, and that the visit will be accompanied by massive protests. This is where they become active, and the explosions in Bavaria and Hesse are probably the beginning of a terrorist offensive which could keep security organs busy for a long time.

The NEUE RUHR-ZEITUNG notes: It seems to be the political intention of the irresponsible bomb planters to create insecurity and alarm and to present a distorted picture of our country to the public of the world. The impression is to be created that the Americans are not the friends and allies of the Federal Republic and that they are being dynamically fought in this country. Every attack on an American institution is supposed to hit Reagan's policy, while actually it just hurts German interests.

The NORD-WEST ZEITUNG of Oldenburg is of the following opinion: Ronald Reagan deserves a more friendly welcome than the one that seems to be planned for 10 June. Unfortunately, it must be feared that Reagan's visits to Bonn and Berlin will be accompanied not by peaceful, but by unfriendly and unpleasant phenomena which could cast a long shadow on American-European relations. The so-called Revolutionary Cells which have caused a stir lately, certainly are not the same as the average demonstrators against Reagan. But with the bomb attacks on American installations in the FRG, triggered from the underground, they give reasons to fear that the concomitant circumstances of Reagan's visit to Bonn could be misunderstood in America.

SUEDDEUTSCHE ZEITUNG VIEWS REAGAN'S VISIT

DW021155 Munich SUEDDEUTSCHE ZEITUNG in German 2 Jun 82 p 4

[Editorial by Klaus Arnsperger: "Reagan Sees His Trip As a Signal"]

[Text] Washington -- European trips by American Presidents are beyond the scope of international visit diplomacy even in foreign-politically quiet times. Because of the concomitant circumstances this holds true more than ever for Ronald Reagan's forthcoming appearances in London, Versailles, Rome, Bonn and Berlin. The President's trip coincides with a new stage in U.S. foreign relations; in a way this visit is even the prelude to it. The 10-day trip sets a signal for an elaborate attempt to strengthen the cohesion of the Atlantic alliance and the important Western industrial states and to make a fresh start regarding relations with the Soviet Union.

However, considering the very optimistic expectations in America, the concrete results of this trip will be comparatively poor. But Reagan obviously does not find this so important. His trip is primarily a symbol.

Everything indicates that the Atlantic alliance is apparently over the low point in its present crisis. The President's willingness to begin the so-called START negotiations on the reduction of American and Russian intercontinental missile arsenals and to resume the dialogue with the Soviet chief of state has decisively reduced the latent European-American misunderstandings and tensions present since Reagan took office. This alone has given U.S.-European relations a new world-political background. At the Bonn NATO summit Reagan will find it easier than he would have six months ago to insist on the unity and strength of the North Atlantic alliance. Spain's accession confirms him in this. The protest demonstrations, particularly in the Federal Republic, therefore will lose much of their effect, especially if Reagan dishes up in Bonn further proposals for the reduction of conventional forces in East and West Europe.

Much more difficult and less encouraging will be Reagan's appearance in Versailles where the heads of government of the seven biggest industrial states will meet. There will be a severe clash of tne extremely different and even contrasting interests of the United States and its economic partners. The different opinions about the causes and consequences of the U.S. high-interest rate policy have not diminished at all since the last economic summit in Ottawa. In all industrial states, largely excluding Japan, the recession has grown since 1981. It is true, America apparently no longer considers a cautious control of the rate of the dollar a deadly sin, but the transatlantic differences about North-South relations and the West European credit policy toward the Soviet Union are intensifying. At any rate, it is quite clear that Washington gives the same priority to the common overcoming of the recession as it gives to common defense.

However, the U.S. claim for military and economic leadership in the Western alliance cannot be carried through unless Reagan's image, which so far has been assessed in Europe as being vague and in many ways negative, is corrected. It is to this goal, which is more important than all other aspects of his European trip, that the unusually large number of his appearances, speeches and statements in public and on television can be attributed. The extremely intensive self-representation of the President is to lastingly improve among millions of Europeans the widely held negative view of the sabre-rattling and arch-conservative Hollywood actor who is hardly familiar with any problems outside the American world. In fact, many of the alliance problems Reagan has burdened himself with in the course of his term of office are a result of his image in the European public which reacts more snesitively to slips of the tongue than the American public.

America's President will by no means appear in Europe as a triumphant victor. He has not been able so far to overcome the growing opposition in his own country to his economic, social and budget policies. The persistent opposition of Congress to Reagan's 1983 budget plans has started to seriously undermine the President's credibility. Seen this way, Reagan's European trip is also a political respite which may give him a fresh impetus in his own country. The existing tense relationship with the European allies also alarms many Americans. However, the fact that Reagan in the course of the past weeks has substantially toned down his earlier strident rhetoric toward Moscow must not lead to wrong conclusions in Europe. The President is by no means willing to try detente again. This term has definitely been deleted from his vocabulary. Today Reagan only believes in America's new strength which is supposed to make the dialogue with Moscow easier for him.

MITTERRAND ADDRESSES ILO; CALLS FOR SOLIDARITY

NC022141 Paris AFP in English 2037 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] Geneva, 2 Jun (AFP) -- French President Francois Mitterrand came out here today against "national egotisms" and called for a concerted "joint effort" to surmount a world-wide crisis.

Two days ahead of a summit meeting of the seven major Western industrialized countries in Versailles, France, the French president (?unveiled) the main themes he intended promoting.

Addressing the International Labor Organization here, Mr Mitterrand (?said) that to extricate the world from the present "chaos," it was mandatory to be guided by [words indistinct] which he described as "the ultimate objective of economic development and itself the precondition for peace."

The ILO groups employer and employee representatives from 147 countries.

Mr Mitterrand more specifically condemned "the short-sighted comportment of certain leaders of the world economy," "major oscillations of exchange rates" and "trade competition whipped into excess."

"Is it by taking other [word indistinct] markets, by closing our frontiers, by letting raw material prices decline, by cutting back on development aid that we will stimulate growth?" the French leader asked rhetorically.

He then called for "solidarity, concentration and cooperation," both on the European level and between North and South, with a view to "creating jobs through a renewal of growth."

Mr Mitterrand once again came out for European efforts at joint improvement of the workers' lot, of the working environment and technology, and termed help to the Third World towards development a task "in the very interest of the Occident."

The French leader also defended labor union freedom and, in an allusion to Poland, condemned [word indistinct] repression," a course of action leading to "a [words indistinct] possibilities for progress" and "a denial of programmed ideals as well as a threat to the international community as a whole."

The meeting was briefly [word indistinct] when the Iranian delegation left demonstratively to protest "French support for Israel," according to its spokesman.

Mr Mitterrand also paid a visit today to the headquarters of the International Committee of the Red Cross, where he pledged that France was studying adoption by France of two amendments to the 1949 Geneva Convention. The amendments, already adopted by 22 countries, concern the protection of civilians in international conflicts and [words indistinct] of rules for international behavior in time of war to domestic, civilian and guerrilla fighting.

The French president was heavily guarded, and a Swiss helicopter hovered overhead when he was driven the 800 meters (yards) separating the ILO from the Red Cross premises.

ANTINUCLEAR MILITANTS CLAIM 5 BOMB ATTACKS

NC031413 Paris AFP in English 1359 GMT 3 Jun 82

[Text] Toulouse, 3 Jun (AFP) -- Anti-nuclear militants today claimed five bomb attacks in southwestern France overnight as well as responsibility for firing a gun at the home of a member of Parliament in Toulouse.

The bomb attacks in Albi, Perpignan, Carcassonne and Toulouse were aimed at buildings connected to the national or local electricity services, while a fire bomb was thrown at a police station in Perpignan, causing light damage.

The explosions caused heavy damage at the National Electricity Company Center in Albi and at the Electricity Service Administrative Center in Perpignan.

The militants, who claimed the attacks in a call to AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE, called themselves the "survivors of Golfech", a reference to the town where the French National Electricity Company is building a giant nuclear power station.

Nuclear opponents tried to organize a demonstration there last Sunday but only 500 people showed up.

It was the second attack this year by militants opposed to the Socialist government's decision to continue building France's nuclear energy supplies.

Last January, rockets were fired against a breeder reactor under construction in the southeast, near Grenoble.

POPE JOHN PAUL RETURNS FROM UK VISIT 2 JUN

NC022226 Paris AFP in English 2219 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 2 Jun (AFP) -- Pope John Paul II returned here tonight after a six-day pastoral and ecumenical visit to Britain which took in England, Scotland and Wales.

In the plane bringing him from Cardiff, South Wales, the pope said that on his upcoming trip to Argentina he would take "an even more profound message of peace." Questioned on the subject of a "just war," the pontiff said the "right of self-defence" existed but added: "We must seek other solutions."

He said he was "very satisfied" with his British visit, which had "exceeded all expectations." The pope announced that next year he would visit Austria and several Latin-American countries.

BERLINGUER VIEWS PCI RELATIONS WITH EAST

AU021348 Belgrade BORBA in Serbo-Croatian 30 May 82 p 2

[Text] Trieste, 29 May (TANJUG) -- "Since President Tito's death which was very painful for us also, our cooperation with the League of Communists of Yugoslavia has intensively and successfully continued not only on the basis of our mutual interest in developing good relations between our countries but also on the basis of the analyses and views which, to the greatest extent, we share in connection with the great problems of international life," Enrico Berlinguer, secretary general of the Italian Communist Party, said in Trieste today.

Speaking about the so-called "third road" of the Italian Communists in building the socialist society, Berlinguer said in his statement for Koper Radio that for Western Europe "the third road" signifies not only an overcoming of the model of the Soviet type and the traditional social democratic policies but also a need which is in accord with the contemporary world, the conditions of the developed capitalist society and the aspirations of a large part of workers, youth masses and women who demand that capitalism be overcome and that freedoms and democratic rights be simultaneously preserved and further developed.

As regards the relations with the East European communist parties, Berlinguer, who is visiting Trieste within the framework of the election campign for the forthcoming 6 June extraordinary elections for the municipal and provincial administrations, pointed out that, in recent months, there have been polemics, especially with the Soviet party. "We have been a target of unjust attacks," he said, "which we answered resolutely but calmly, confirming our views. We have even been a target, I would say, of anathemas and extreme condemnations. However, relations have not been broken off and we believe that the discussion must continue in the spirit of sincerity and by seeking a maximal understanding."

Bearing in mind the opening of the congress of the Yugoslav Communists in the near future and the future cooperation between the parties of the two countries, Berlinguer said: "I am optimistic about the future of our relations because I believe that the two parties fully share an interest in continuing along the road of cooperation which has produced positive results not only for the relations between our peoples and countries but also on the workers' movement in Europe and the world."

DENMARK

POUL THORSEN TO BE NEW AIR FORCE CHIEF

PM021455 Copenhagen BERLINGSKE TIDENDE in Danish 28 May 82 p 2

[RITZAUS BUREAU report: "New Air Force Chief"]

[Text] Major General Poul Thorsen, chief of the air force tactical command at Karup and of the allied air force forces in the southern section of NATO's northern region, will take over the post of air force chief 1 September. Poul Thorsen will succeed Maj Gen Niels Holst Sorensen, who will become Denmark's permanent representative at the NATO Military Committee in Belgium.

Maj Gen Christian S. Borgesen, head of the Defense Staff Operations Staff, has been appointed to succeed Thorsen in Karup.

FINLAND

AGREEMENTS ON COOPERATION SIGNED WITH INDIA

BK290814 Delhi Domestic Service in English 0240 GMT 29 May 82

[Text] India and Finland have identified areas of cooperation in technical and economic fields. They have also agreed to set up joint ventures in West Asia, Africa and Southeast Asia.

These agreements were reached at the conclusion of the Indo-Finland joint commission in Helsinki. Speaking at the preliminary meeting, Commerce Minister Shivraj Patil urged Finland to step up its imports from India to bridge the imbalance in trade.

NORWAY

AFTENPOSTEN URGES 4-PERCENT DEFENSE BUDGET INCREASE

PM021543 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 29 May 82 p 2

[Editorial: "The Defense Budget"]

[Text] There has long been broad agreement that significant economic efforts are needed to be able to maintain a minimum defense force with relatively modern equipment. Fortunately, the willingness to make these efforts has always been present since World War II. The knowledge that our own efforts will also be of decisive importance for the help our allies could give us in a possible crisis situation has also led to the conclusion that annual defense budgets cannot be fixed on the basis of temporary fluctuations in the economic climate. It this were the case it would be impossible to implement rational defense planning.

Norway's exposed position at the point of intersection between the two superpowers determines our security policy situation. In defense policy we have drawn the right conclusions from this and invested in credible national defenses combined with membership in NATO. The former are inextricably linked to the consideration that the correct conditions must be created for allied reinforcements if disaster strikes. However, it is one of the facts of life that no one can live in peace longer than his neighbor will allow. This is why we must have defense forces which are strong enough to deter a potential attacker from contemplating the risks which would be connected with an invasion. If his chances of success are small, he will not risk it.

Our defense authorities are aware that the changes in the strategic situation in the northern areas -- disadvantageous to NATO -- make it necessary for Norway to increase its own investments in the defense sector. Against this background and in the light of the shortcomings of our own defense forces, the Conservative, Center and Christian People's Parties have after mature consideration formulated the principle that defense budgets should have an annual 4-percent growth rate. NATO's own target is a 3-percent increase in defense spending from year to year.

Unfortunately it is only possible to say that, from the defense policy viewpoint, the nonsocialist principle has even greater justification today than it had in the past. This is why we are amazed that the Wiloch Government, which will be presenting its first independent national budget in the fall, is considering deviating from the principle of a 4-percent increase in defense spending in 1980. It is instead considering a 3-percent increase.

It goes without saying that we are also aware of the country's economic problems, and these will inevitably lead to a reduction in budget growth in the majority of areas in the public sector. However, the general economic situation offers no defensible reasons for a 1-percent defense spending reduction in comparison with what was previously the nonsocialist parties' joint target. If defense and security policy arguments are to have any credibility -- and this is in fact of the greatest importance for all of us -- we must expect the government to keep a cool head, at least as far as the defense budget is concerned. It should therefore return to the matter before it reaches a final decision.

SWEDEN

ARMS EXPORT CONTROLS REPORTEDLY TIGHTENED

PM021513 Stockholm DAGENS NYHETER in Swedish 28 May 82 p 6

[Text] On Thursday [27 May] the Riksdag tightened up the rules governing Swedish arms exports. New Telub affairs [a scandal involving the training of Libyan soldiers in the use of advanced electronic equipment] will be prevented, in that the military training of foreigners in Sweden will in the future also have to be approved by the government under the same regulations governing arms exports.

Trade Minister Bjorn Molin (Liberal Party) said in the debate that Sweden will attach greater importance to the overall assessment of the purchasing nation's political circumstances even in the sale of so-called defensive arms. The major principle will be great restraint. Oswald Soderqvist (Left Party-Communists) wanted to end the distinction between offensive and defensive arms. Defensive antiaircraft artillery can very well be used aggressively, he said.

According to the Riksdag's decision, the Advisory Council on Foreign Affairs will be more important as a consultative body when the government comes to make decisions on export licences. The Social Democrats wanted to look into the possibility of a layman council to act as a consultative forum instead.

Swedish war materiel exports increased dramatically during 1979 and 1980, but fell again last year. Throughout the seventies arms exports totalled less than 1 percent of all Swedish exports, but the proportion varies a lot from year to year. Higher prices and individual major purchases, such as Chile's purchase of the cruiser Gota Lejon, had an effect on the statistics. On the whole, a little over 50 percent of Swedish exports of defense materiel go to the Nordic countries and to Switzerland, Austria and Yugoslavia. North and South America have always been responsible for quite a small part of exports. During the latter half of the seventies Asia moved up to become one of the major purchasers of Swedish arms exports. The high point was reached in 1979 when 39 percent of all arms exports went there, but here the sales of Spica boats played an important part. Africa has always imported very few arms from Sweden -- with the exception of 1980, when Tunisia made a major purchase of Swedish defense materiel. In the seventies and early eighties Sweden has not sold any arms at all to Eastern Europe.

THATCHER PESSIMISTIC ON AVOIDING BLOODSHED

LD021640 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1634 GMT 2 Jun 82

[By Chris Moncrieff, PA chief political correspondent]

[Text] Mrs Thatcher indicated tonight that she saw little prospect of any move by the Argentine military junta to avoid the bloodshed of a battle for Port Stanley. In separate TV interviews on BBC and ITN, she said "I don't think there is anything more I can do."

The prime minister spoke of the terms for a settlement which the British Government had published. "They were made quite clear. Everything, but just everything, has been turned down."

Asked if the battle for Port Stanley could be avoided, she said: "There is just a possibility now, but I don't rate it very highly."

On appeals to be magnanimous in victory, she declared: "It is not a word I use in connection with the battle on the Falklands." Mrs Thatcher added that, to give something back in these circumstances to an invader and aggressor and military dictator "would not be magnanimity, it would be treachery and betrayal of our own people."

But she stressed: "I am not trying to humiliate anyone. I am just trying to repossess islands which are British sovereign territory. That is not humiliation. That is liberty, justice and democracy."

The prime minister went on: "I am not seeking to humiliate anyone at all. I am just asking that the invader returns his troops to the mainland. That is not humiliation, it is a restoration of the rule of law."

She could not see anyway out of a battle at Port Stanley unless Argentina withdrew its troops. "That would be marvellous if she did."

But Argentina had not done so in the two months since the United Nations Security Council resolution telling her to withdraw.

"I do not know whether she is considering it. I would be delighted if she did. It would save so many young lives." Mrs Thatcher added: If they say, 'Look, we are going to withdraw within the 10 to 14 days,' then there would be no need for a battle."

The prime minister said Britain was not talking in terms of victory or defeat. "We talk in terms of repossessing the Falklands which were invaded by the Argentine aggressors." After repossession, Britain would have to talk to other nations about the future security of the islands and the possibility of establishing a multi-national force there. "This must not happen again," stated Mrs Thatcher.

On a possible role for Argentina in the future, Mrs Thatcher said: "I cannot myself see a role in anything related to sovereignty for Argentina on the Falkland Islands. You have seen what happened in Goose Green and Darwin and how our people have been treated.

"They were born accustomed to liberty, justice and democracy. We have gone to defend these rights. I believe they will be even more determined now to keep them. They have been loyal to us. We must be loyal to them."

The prime minister firmly denied suggestions that the cabinet was divided on the crisis. She said: "The cabinet has never been more united during the whole of my government. It is totally united."

Sometimes people construed discussions and argument as division. "Of course, we argue and discuss, but once we have reached a conclusion we are totally and utterly united and steadfast and will stick it out."

She also denied any difference of opinion with Foreign Secretary Mr Francis Pym. "We agree totally on our purpose and objective. He was thrown in at the deep end. He not only had the Falklands to deal with, but Europe as well — I think he has done splendidly."

Mrs Thatcher ended: "We are right. They are wrong. We are the victims. They are the aggressors."

EXPLOSION IN GOOSE GREEN KILLS 1, INJURES 11

LD021822 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1800 GMT 2 Jun 82

[By Richard Savill, PRESS ASSOCIATION staff reporter with the task force]

[Excerpt] An explosion rocked the tiny settlement of Goose Green on Tuesday night, killing at least one person and injuring eleven others. First reports do not say whether the wounded were Argentinian or British, but it is almost certain they were Argentinian.

An eye-witness reported seeing a "monster" explosion and flames rising high in the air. The blast occurred close to the sheep shearing sheds which hold the Argentinian prisoners.

One theory is that ammunition was booby-trapped in the last stages of Friday's battle.

No civilians were said to be involved. Engineers were being drafted into the area today to assess the danger as piles of live ammunition lay still scattered about, with children playing nearby. Experts have also flown to the settlement to make arrangements for disposing of the napalm found on Tuesday.

Meanwhile, victory was on the minds of the British troops today as the climax neared in the bloody fight for the Falklands.

The discovery of the napalm and the trail of mindless vandalism left by the Argentinians at Goose Green has incensed the British soldiers. It has served to turn the Argentinians into a despised enemy and now British troops talk of one thing: Finishing the job off.

Caused by Faulty Ammunition

LD022156 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2132 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Excerpt] An explosion at Goose Green which may have killed several Argentinian prisoners is believed to have been caused by faulty ammunition and not a booby-trap. There were suggestions that the munitions were booby-trapped before British troops took control of the settlement after a bitter battle on Friday.

But BBC Reporter Brian Hanrahan said tonight: "An investigation into the explosion which wounded and, it is believed, killed several Argentinian prisoners has concluded that it was probably caused by faulty ammunition and not by a booby-trap."

A British spokesman said the ammunition had been left outside the shed where the prisoners had been living. "They had asked permission to move it, and the explosion happened while this was going on," said Hanrahan on BBC News.

"An Argentine officer confided they had had problems with their ammunition before." The blast highlighted the need to move Argentine ammunition scattered about Goose Green, where children played freely and were picking up "souvenirs," he said. But clearing all of it would be "major task."

TROOPS GEAR UP FOR BATTLE TO RETAKE STANLEY

LD021932 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1926 GMT 2 Jun 82

[By PA defence and political staff]

[Excerpts] A bloody battle for Port Stanley and the Falklands was imminent tonight as British troops relentlessly closed in on 7,000 Argentinians falling back to their last stronghold.

Commandos and paratroops have pushed perimeter defenders back to the garrison, now being bombarded constantly by artillery and the British fleet. With thousands of task force soldiers now concentrated around the Falklands capital, there is little doubt that major combat is about to begin.

Mrs Thatcher's determination to get the Argentinians out of the Falklands, two months after they seized the islands, is matched by the men who sailed to the South Atlantic and have now fought their way across East Falkland to within a few hundred yards of their objective.

For obvious reasons, little news has been coming out of the Ministry of Defence today as the crucial action of the campaign draws nearer. But vivid accounts of the advance towards Port Stanley received today from correspondents with the troops show that victory is now very much on the minds of the fighting men.

Men already steeled to war have been further hardened by what they have seen and heard of their Argentinian enemy. The white flag shooting at Goose Green, the discovery of terrible napalm bombs, and the wretched treatment of the settlers and their property has incensed the British soldiers.

There is a fear that more napalm is ready to be used against them at Port Stanley. The Argentinians have been turned into a despised enemy and now the troops talk of one thing: Finishing the job.

The softening up process to weaken the Argentinians' morale was intensified today. Salvoes from royal artillery batteries hidden on the slopes of the hills to the west of Stanley burst around enemy fortifications in and around the airfield.

Shells screamed in on the Moody Brook camp, formerly used by the marines who first fought the invaders when they landed.

Major General Moore, commander of the British land forces on the Falklands, confirmed: "We have got very close in and are beginning to apply pressure to the main Argentinian positions throughout Stanley. "Clearly, I am going to build up that pressure."

The timing of the main assault on Stanley still depends on how quickly more troops and supplies can be ferried in by helicopter to the British forward positions.

The Ministry of Defence remains tight-lipped about the movements of the 3,000-strong 5th Infantry Brigade, as well as the main force of Royal Marines and Paratroops. The tough men of the marines and paratroops are reported by the war correspondents to have taken the Argentinians by surprise with the speed of their move from the San Carlos beachhead to the very edge of Port Stanley.

They have fought their way over stamina-sapping, boggy terrain, (?prompting) Argentinians to desert their foxholes and seek refuge at Port Stanley. There the garrison strength is now firmly dug into what one marine staff officer was quoted as describing as "a classic defensive position, a horseshoe round Stanley."

"It could be a very bloody battle indeed if they decide to slug it out," he said. A belt of minefields was reported to be surrounding Port Stanley.

The big questions in the minds of the British troops are now how much punch the battered Argentine Air Force has left and how well its soldiers will fight. Argentinian Defence Minister Amadeo Frugoli declared his men were ready to fight.

Britain has lost two more Harrier jets in the last few days during raids on the Port Stanely area, but both pilots were picked up safely by the task force after the planes ditched in the sea. Eight Harriers have now been lost, out of 40 aircraft, but 12 more have been flown to the carrier HMS Hermes via Ascension Island, using mid-air refuelling Victor tankers. The journey of more than 8,000 miles was made in 17 hours from RAF Wittering, Huntingdonshire -- an RAF record.

The Ministry of Defence also disclosed a lucky escape for an oil tanker -- believed to be the BP-owned Wye -- when it was attacked well to the north of the total exclusion zone. A stick of bombs dropped from an Argentinian Hercules transport aircraft bounced off its hull without exploding.

In a tragic accident on Tuesday at Goose Green, one man was killed and 11 injured, believed to be Argentinians, in an explosion. There were suggestions that the accident happened when prisoners from the battle for Goose Green were clearing up the ammunition dump. A board of inquiry has been set up. Under the Geneva Convention, it is forbidden to force prisoners to undertake military or dangerous work.

Mrs Thatcher has told bereaved relatives of the Britons buried on the Falklands that there will be financial aid if they want to visit the graves. But she had not ruled out the possibility of bodies being returned home if the families want.

Meanwhile, 18 British wounded were being flown home from Uruguay tonight after arriving at Montevideo with 24 wounded Argentinians on the hospital ship HMS Hecla.

MINISTRY OF DEFENSE DENIES MAINLAND RAID REPORT

LD022228 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2122 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] British commandos have blown up five Super Etendard jets in a daring attack on the Argentine mainland, ITN Newsman Jon Snow reported tonight. He said they were transported to the attack at Rio Grande by the Sea King helicopter which later force-landed in Chile.

The nine commandos escaped safely and are now back in the UK, according to Chilean sources. But the Ministry of Defence said there had been no attack on the Argentine mainland from Chile or anywhere else.

The Super Etendard jets carry the deadly Exocet missiles which sank HMS Sheffield and the Atlantic Conveyor.

Snow said the Sea King dropped the commandos on Tierra del Fuego. He added: "It was as it awaited their return it got into difficulties and force landed near Punta Arenas.

"The nine commandos made their way safely onto Chilean soil, left through Punta Arenas, and are now back in the UK. It is still stressed that the Chileans knew nothing of the operation in advance, but intelligence sources here say consequences of the attack are still evident.

"About 15 of Argentina's remaining Mirage and Super Etendard aircraft based there have had to be removed to extended farmland strips and widened roadways where they have been hidden. On each operation they take off empty, land at Rio Grande for refuelling and rearming, and are then sent out to sea."

Snow added that ten Peruvian Mirages with Argentine markings have joined the depleted air force based at Estancia Zara, but have so far only been used for defensive patrols.

"But the sources believe that at least one more major attack on the British task force by planes from Tierra del Fuego is planned."

DAMAGED WARSHIPS 'ON WAY HOME' FROM BATTLE ZONE

LD030344 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0330 GMT 3 Jun 82

[Text] Four British warships damaged during the Falklands conflict are understood to be on their way home from the battle zone. One is believed to be HMS Glasgow, a Type 42 destroyer. An Argentine bomb went straight through her without exploding. HMS Argonaut, a frigate, attacked as British troops first landed on the Falklands, is another of the ships coming home. Defense Secretary Mr John Nott announced last week that 10 more warships had arrived in the area to replace vessels put out of action.

Four warships and the container vessel Atlantic Conveyor have been sunk.

SIDEWINDER MISSILES BEING FITTED ON NIMRODS

LD031246 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1230 GMT 3 Jun 82

[By Robert Hutchinson, PA defence correspondent]

[Text] Sidewinder air-to-air missiles are now being fitted to Nimrod maritime patrol planes for self-defence during their flights over the South Atlantic, it was disclosed today. The plan to arm the RAF "eye in the sky" jets has been considered by the Defence Ministry for several years, but has been dropped several times because of shortage of cash. Now the Falklands conflict has enabled the RAF to fit two Sidewinder missiles -- one at each wing-tip -- to the aircraft to counter high-level attack from Argentine Mirage fighters. Most of the missiles are coming from the batch of 100 which the United States Government is supplying to Britain.

Three squadrons of Nimrods from St Mawgan, Cornwall, and Kinloss in Scotland, are now on Ascension Island providing round-the-clock surveillance of the shipping supply routes in a hunt for Argentine submarines.

One boat is known to be inside its homebase at Mar del Plata and another is understood to be in the process of being resupplied before leaving on another patrol. The third Argentine submarine, a modern West German vessel, is still inside the 200-mile total exclusion zone around the Falklands.

POPE JOHN PAUL DEPARTS CARDIFF FOR ROME

NC021910 Paris AFP in English 1843 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] Cardiff, 2 Jun (AFP) -- Pope John Paul II boarded a Rome-bound plane at 1832 GMT here today, ending his six-day "pastoral and ecumenic" tour of England, Scotland and Wales.

KIPRIANOU DEPARTURE FOR U.S. CHANGED TO 3 JUN

NC021752 Nicosia Domestic Television Service in Greek 1730 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] President of the Republic Kiprianou is due to leave for Athens tomorrow for talks with Greek Prime Minister Papandreou. Kiprianou's Athens visit will last until 6 June. On 7 June the president will leave for New York where on the next day he will confer with UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar. On 11 June he will address the special General Assembly session and will meet its chairman. In New York, Kiprianou will meet with heads of state and government leaders of various countries and with Greek-American representatives. The president will also visit San Francisco and Los Angeles to attend Greek-American events.

MOSCOW INTEREST IN DEVELOPMENT PROJECTS CLAIMED

NC030720 Nicosia I SIMERINI in Greek 3 Jun 82 p 12

[Text] According to our information, the Cyprus Government is considering, within the framework of the AKEL-Democratic Party collaboration, a program for the construction of certain "development projects" by the Soviet Union, which is presented by the AKEL leadership as willing to undertake these projects.

The government has already conveyed, according to the same reports, to the relevant departments, as well as to other state and quasi-state organizations, a relevant document which includes a summary of the Soviet "program" and requests that views and suggestions be submitted.

A big group of Russian experts and technicians visited Cyprus some time ago for an on the spot study and the collection of information. A new Soviet mission is expected in Cyprus soon to conclude the study and formulate the final proposals.

According to the same reports, the AKEL leaders maintain that following their own efforts, Moscow has recently been showing "increased interest" in Cyprus and, more specifically, in an increased presence in the technical and economic sectors.

According to the same sources, the Soviet side has discussed the possibility of constructing a big shipbuilding unit in the Limassol area, proposing that part of the expenditure be paid off in the form of repairs for Soviet ships.

TURKISH CYPRIOTS PROTEST ARREST OF DANISH CAPTAIN

TA021920 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1900 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] The Turkish Federated State of Cyprus has protested the arrest of a Danish captain by the Greek Cypriot Police on grounds that the captain had stopped over at the Gazi Magosa [Famagusta] port. The protest note sent by the Foreign and Defense Ministry of the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus says that the decision regarding the arrest is part of the economic embargo imposed by the Greek Cypriot administration on the Turkish Cypriot community. The note adds that this adversely affects the atmosphere necessary for the intercommunal talks.

DEFENSE MINISTRY SPOKESMAN ON AIRSPACE VIOLATIONS

NC021440 Athens AKROPOLIS in Greek 2 Jun 82 p 12

[Text] Turkish "S-2" naval support aircraft participating in the Turkish air-navy maneuvers being held in the international waters of the Aegean, have repeatedly violated Greek airspace. Greek fighter aircraft immediately took off to intercept and reconnoiter the Turkish aircraft.

A National Defense Ministry source has confirmed the report and said there had been two violations committed as far as 8 miles inside Greek airspace.

Answering a question, the government spokesman said that as the aircraft were propeller-driven the government considered these violations as insignificant and so it has not attached any particular importance to them.

SPOKESMAN DENIES REPORTS ON TIKHONOV VISIT

NC021354 Athens ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 2 Jun 82 p 16

Text] The government spokesman yesterday described as "unrelated to reality" the report in an afternoon newspaper that referred to the "faltering" of Soviet Premier Tikhonov's visit to Athens. This press report also spoke about the desire of the Soviets that the Greek prime minister pay a visit to Moscow first.

After having denied the above reports completely, the government spokesman added that "the exact time for the Soviet premier's visit to Athens has not yet been determined."

FURTHER ON 'INVASION' OF NIGERIAN EMBASSY BY STUDENTS

NC021230 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] At 1015 today, seven [as heard] Nigerian students invaded the Nigerian Embassy on 1 Eratosthenis Street, Pangrati, and began to engage in acts of vandalism. The students, who are studying in Athens on Nigerian Government scholarships, caused damage to the ambassador's office as well as other offices in the Nigerian Embassy. The ambassador called the police and, following negotiations, the Nigerian students agreed to leave the building. The students surrendered to the police and were taken to the general security police because their country's ambassador asked that criminal proceedings be instituted against them.

The Nigerian students had been led to this action because of their dispute with the embassy over payment of scholarship grants for their studies in Athens.

MUGABE ENDS VISIT; LEAVES FOR NETHERLANDS

NC021150 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] Zimbabwean Prime Minister Robert Mugabe concluded his official visit to Athens and left this morning for the Netherlands. At the airport, he was seen off by Deputy Foreign Minister Karolos Papoulias and other officials.

Yesterday, four agreements of special interest were signed in Athens between Greece and Zimbabwe. The agreements concern Greece's contribution to developing Zimbabwe's tourism, agriculture and industry as well as the training of Zimbabwean pilots in Greece.

RIZOSPASTIS DESCRIBES ROGERS VISIT AS PROVOCATION

NC021456 Athens RIZOSPASTIS in Greek 2 Jun 82 p 1

[Excerpts] The military commander of NATO forces in Europe, General Rogers, is due to arrive in Athens tomorrow to apply new NATO pressures. The NATO general will have private meetings with the commander of the national defense general staff, the chiefs of the army, navy and air force general staffs, the deputy ministers of national defense and Prime Minister Papandreou.

While the climate and tone of the Rogers visit is clearly evident through recent statements made by U.S. and NATO personalities, who provide full cover for the Turkish provocations, launch threats against Greece and favor a Greek-Turkish rapprochement under NATO discipline, the People's reaction against this provocative visit is also increasing.

Protest picket marches are being organized in Athens and other cities while the Thessaloniki Committee on International Detente and Peace is organizing a large protest march tomorrow night to protest pressures being exerted by NATO.

A gathering is also organized for tomorrow at Kilkis, while preparations are being speeded up at Iraklion, Khania and in many other towns to express the same slogan which shook the country during the Haig visit: "Independence cannot be bargained on."

In Larissa the peace committee visited the nomarch and, on the occasion of the reintroduction of the question of the Larissa headquarters, expressed the emphatic objection of the people of the city to accepting a NATO headquarters in their city. Representatives of the peace committee and other mass organizations of Larissa will visit the Ministry of National Defense to ask for the abandonment of all plans to establish a NATO headquarters.

Government circles yesterday leaked the information that Papandreou will use "hard language" in speaking to General Rogers and will insist on his announced position on restoring the status of Aegean operational control to that in force prior to 1974.

However, the fact alone of the visit by the NATO commander, after NATO's rejection of Greek demarches, the continued provocative violations of airspace by aircraft taking part in Aegean maneuvers, the dramatic statement by the prime minister on 27 May which, however, remained without a sequel; is nothing but confirmation of imperialist positions in the dangerous game of blackmail directed at our country.

Concern over this second visit by a senior imperialist personality, after the recent Haig visit, is strengthened by certain recent government moves which are apparently aimed at creating "a good climate" for the talks with General Rogers.

It is characteristic that efforts are made to play down the newest violations which took place over the Aegean in recent days by light, propeller-driven Turkish aircraft and no protest note is issued.

It is also characteristic that Greece presented a proposal to NATO's parliamentary conference to condemn Argentina over the Falkland crisis, Turkey over Cyprus and the USSR over Afghanistan.

RIZOSPASTIS CRITICIZES LUNS AS PROVOCATIVE

EC021548 Athens RIZOSPASTIS in Greek 2 Jun 82 p 2

[From the "Radical" column: "Luns' Temerity"]

[Text] NATO Secretary General Luns again appeared most brazen and provocative against our country at the spring North Atlantic parliamentary meeting. Indirectly, but clearly, he blamed the Greek side for the Greek-Turkish dispute and, at the same time, threatened our country lest it dare withdraw from the NATO wolf alliance! At the same time Luns once again lauded Ankara's junta-fascist regime. The meeting was attended by a Greek delegation composed of PASOK and New Democracy deputies. KKE deputies had been excluded from the delegation through various prevaricating ploys. In fact, however, the exclusion was imposed in order not to spoil "the allied atmosphere." Luns' new provocative statements can be considered anything but accidental; on the contrary, they fall within the more general U.S.-NATO plan for putting pressure on our country -- with the instigation of Turkish aggressiveness as the principal lever. Tomorrow's arrival in Athens of NATO Supreme Commander Rogers falls within this plan. Authoritative reports mention that Rogers will renew Haig's threats to achieve the Greek Government's complete alignment with the cold war policy and the adventurist plans of NATO and the United States. It is obvious that the tactics of "accommodation" within the "NATO framework" which the government follows afford the opportunity to the U.S.-NATO imperialists to increase their pressures and extortions against our country.

ECEVIT ACQUITTED IN NEVSEHIR, FACES FURTHER CHARGES

NC021431 Paris AFP in English 1417 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 2 Jun (AFP) -- A civilian court in the central Turkish town of Nevsehir today acquitted jailed former social-democrat premier Bulent Ecevit on charges of insulting a police officer.

Mr Ecevit, who has been imprisoned since April 10 for having allegedly violated a military decree banning political activity, was being tried in connection with the 1979 incidents in Nevsehir at the funeral of a local politician.

When police failed to intervene after right-wing militants disrupted the funeral procession, Mr Ecevit had accused local police chief Haydar Tek of incompetence and partiality.

Mr Tek has since been fired from the police force for involvement in furnishing a false passport to Mehmet Ali Agca, the Turkish terrorist who attempted to kill Pope John Paul II in Rome last year.

Mr Ecevit will appear before a military court here tomorrow and Friday on charges of violating the ban on political activity in an article he wrote for the West German weekly DER SPIEGEL and in an interview with Dutch television. If found guilty, he could be jailed for up to five years.

Meanwhile, citing "insufficient evidence," a martial law court here today acquitted two policemen accused of torturing a female prisoner during an interrogation session last year.

AEGEAN MILITARY EXERCISES CONCLUDED 2 JUN

TA021637 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] The Turkish Armed Forces' joint exercises codenamed "Vice Adm Sukru Okan -- 82" which began 7 days ago ended today. The exercises took place in the Aegean Sea's international waters and airspace and in the Doganbey region.

In today's exercises friendly forces which landed in Doganbey succeeded in seizing the enemy positions with the help of the friendly reinforcement forces that were already in the area. The exercises ended with some logistic activities, landing of forces, the transportation of paratroopers, mobile air exercises, early coordination movements as well as all out attack by infantry forces in the company of armored units; and various tactical and strategic activities were implemented in the exercises which took place under the command of the Aegean Army Commander Gen Sureyya Yuksel.

FORMER PUBLIC WORKS MINISTER KILIC REJECTS CHARGES

TA021625 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1550 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 2 Jun (AA) -- Former minister of public works, Selahattin Kilic, rejected charges of abuse of right while in office.

During his 4-hour long interrogation this morning, Kilic rejected charges that he had an interest motive in decreeing a new price tariff for the construction of a railway tunnel between Ankara-Istanbul.

SPOKESMAN ON AEGEAN, AIRSPACE DISPUTES

TA021434 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1400 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Statement by Foreign Ministry Spokesman Ambassador Nazmi Akiman on Turkish-Greek Disputes. issued 2 June -- recorded]

[Text] Above all I would like to point out that with the new law on territorial waters it has been determined that Turkish territorial waters extend 6 miles. The law authorizes the Council of Ministers to extend the territorial waters only under extraordinary circumstances. The Council of Ministers can make use of this authority only under the condition that it take into consideration all the characteristics of the seas surrounding Turkey and that it conforms with the principle of equity. As a matter of fact, the Council of Ministers has determined -- with its decision no 8/4672 -- that this authority can only be used for the Black Sea and the Mediterranean and it has also determined that the territorial waters extend 12 miles in these seas. As for the Aegean, the characteristics of the sea and the principle of equity do not enable the extension of the territorial waters beyond the 6 miles. Therefore, interpretations to the effect that the Council of Ministers will extend the territorial waters in the Aegean in retaliation to a Greek attempt to extend its own territorial waters beyond 6 miles are groundless. On the contrary, Turkey has always stressed that it is ready to eliminate any possible fait accompli on the part of Greece concerning the extension of its territorial waters.

Papandreou, in his recent statements, has again referred to the Aegean airspace issue. There is a Turkish-Greek dispute dating back to 1975 concerning the extent of Greek airspace. Greece, since that time, has known that it is out of the question for Turkey to recognize the 10-mile airspace claimed by Greece contrary to agreements and international law. Turkey does not aim to increase tension. However, Turkey does intend to secure its inalienable rights and interests in the Aegean. Turkey will not (?compromise) its attitude because of Papandreou's statements and threats. We would like to hope that Greece will not be capricious enough to precipitate a dispute through dangerous attitudes regarding its airspace.

ULUSU, TURKMEN TO VISIT SAUDI ARABIA 4 JUN

TA021942 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu is to leave for Saudi Arabia on Friday 4 June to attend the activities of the Islamic Conference Goodwill Committee. Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen will also attend the fourth round of talks to be held by the committee in Jiddah. The committee will discuss the issue of new peace steps concerning the Iran-Iraq war. Ulusu and Turkmen will then leave Jiddah for Bonn where they will attend the NATO summit conference on 9 and 10 June.

EDITORIAL NOTES RISING TENSION IN AEGEAN

NC030839 Istanbul GUNES in Turkish 30 May 82 pp 1, 10

[Editorial by Guneri Civaoglu: "Tension in the Aegean"]

[Text] Tension in the Aegean is mounting. Greek Prime Minister Papandreou's words that "we can obtain a unanimous vote from the Greek Parliament for the extension of our territorial waters to 12 miles" are very important, because earlier the most authoritative voices had stated that "for Turkey, Greece's attempt to extend its territorial waters to 12 miles would be a cause for war." Papandreou is adopting an attitude against our open and decisive warning.

On the other hand, in order that it might counter a Greek fait accompli of extending its territorial waters to 12 miles, Turkey has enacted a law empowering the Council of Ministers to extend its territorial waters beyond 6 miles....

This law is an indication that if Greece attempts to extend its waters to 12 miles, "Turkey will act in kind."

We can thus say that the issues between the two countries are coming up again in a more inflamed manner.

However, it is worth noting that Greece's attitude is provocative. This attitude tends to strain relations and increase tension between the two countries. The assertion by Papandreou of his desire to unconditionally extend Greek territorial waters to 12 miles, his claim that the Greek people had already fixed the Greek waters at 10 miles and his refusal to imply, let alone state openly, that he favors a compromise with Turkey naturally cannot be characterized as an attitude inspired by good will and a love for peace. Papandreou is behaving as if Turkey does not exist in the Aegean. "He irresponsibly and arbitrarily" looks upon the Aegean as a Greek lake.

With the law enacted yesterday, Turkey aims at "deterring Greece from a probable act of irresponsibility." This law conveys this message to Athens: "If you extend your territorial waters to 12 miles, you will be treated in the same way." However, it cannot be argued that "this warning of retaliation" has been made in a provocative manner and in a manner likely to escalate tension in relations. On the contrary, the law adopted yesterday gives the Council of Ministers authority to extend Turkey's territorial waters to 12 miles, provided that this is applied to "specific seas and provided that all the characteristics and situations concerning those seas are taken into consideration." That is, an unconditional, arbitrary action, an action which considers other countries sharing these seas with us as nonexistent, is out of the question. This would be wrong and rude.

Moreover, this power is given primarily for the Mediterranean and the Black Seas as there are no problems there. Countries having shores on the Black Sea and the Mediterranean Sea are extending their territorial waters to 12 miles. "So Turkey too has empowered the Council of Ministers to extend its territorial waters to 12 miles when necessary although it has fixed its waters at 6 miles."

Although the "authorization law" published in the official gazette yesterday is not unconditional and although it grants priority to the Black Sea and the Mediterranean, in essence, it accentuates Turkey's resolute determination and decisive attitude.

That decisive attitude can be summed up as follows:

1. Turkey favors the maintenance of the present status quo in the Aegean.

2. According to the second section of the authorization law, the territorial waters of the countries which "share the same sea can be determined through agreement." That is, Turkey and Greece, whose shorelines face each other, can determine their territorial waters in a just manner, taking into consideration all the characteristics and situations of the region.

3. If Greece adopts an attitude contrary to these principles and unilaterally and arbitrarily extends its teritorial waters to 12 miles, Turkey will immediately act in a similar fashion and extend its territorial waters to 12 miles. The authorization law enables the Council of Ministers to act immediately.

And there is another point: If the specific condition of the Aegean is taken into consideration, it is impossible for either side to extend its territorial waters to 12 miles. One's 12 miles plunges into the territorial waters of the other. Putting such an "impossible thing" on the agenda may undoubtedly give rise to other undesirable developments.

We hope that the new authorization law will, as intended, act as a deterrent, and that disputes in the Aegean will not assume such gravity as to escalate the tensions to explosive dimensions.

PART THREE OF REPORT READ AT TCP PLENUM

TA020837 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Third installment of the Political Bureau report read by Turkish Communist Party Central Committee Secretary General Bilen at the Central Committee plenum; date not given -- read by announcer]

[Text] Comrades: A five-point program was posited at our previous plenum with a view to achieving our party program's revolutionary targets. The program envisages the establishment of a temporary revolutionary government of the national democratic forces, which will first reinstate democratic freedoms, democratize the state, initiate deep-rooted anti-imperialist and monopolist trends and hold elections for a democratic constituent assembly.

A democratic government is one involving a front of all the national democratic forces, civilian or military. All our party's policies have as a goal the establishment of such a front. The determining factors will concern strengthening the working class, raising its levels of consciousness and organization and increasing its struggle capabilities.

In determining our political tactics, we want to enable the working class to gather around itself the most masses, to unite and activate the most forces. This does not prevent us from uniting with this or that cross section of the other progressive forces on this or that issue and from undertaking joint action whenever possible. Neither do we turn our backs on unity with more narrow cross sections in order to establish a front of the widest masses, nor do we replace a wide front by such cross sections, saying that it will suffice.

We grant great initiative to the party organizations to develop unity of action at the base.

The struggle for a front is the issue of the party's activities among the masses. It is the issue of the masses' struggle.

During the recent period, our party did not relax its work among the masses even for a moment. It supported with all its might all the mass resistance movements, however small, in the factories and cities. Our working class continues to wage its struggle despite all the oppression of the junta. The resistance of the Karabuk Iron and Steel workers, of the Defterdar Sumerbank workers and the Gulok Nasas workers are examples of this. Our party will continue to support all the efforts of the workers and toilers for their justified economic, social and other demands.

Our party has raised its voice against the junta's oppression of the workers, toilers, other leftist and progressive forces. It has been in solidarity with all the forces under oppression. It tried to train the working class to react to the junta's oppression, injustices and all kinds of brute force.

We stood against the prosecution of the officials of the Confederation of Revolutionary Worker Unions [DISK] with all our might. Our campaign of "freedom to the 52 [DISK officials on trial]" had profound reverberations both inside and outside the country. This sped up the process of the junta's isolation.

It showed the masses the true face of the junta which assumed power under the pretext of preventing terrorism. It revealed the lies about the liberalization of the military dictatorship. It contributed to the upholding of the demands for union rights and freedoms and to the increase in reactions against the cooperation by the Turkish Confederation of Labor [Turk-Is] officials with the junta.

The campaign also played a certain role in the revelation in international public opinion of the Reagan administration's hypocrisy regarding Poland.

Our party supports the struggle being waged by the DISK officials that have not yet been arrested as well as the honest unionists among the members of Turk-Is. The TCP is waging a struggle in favor of the voluntary unity of trade unions of the working class.

From the very beginning, our party has warned the masses that the military junta would refrain from inflicting on the ringleaders of the Nationalist Action Party [NAP] the punishment they deserve, calling on them to fight this stand. The TCP has waged an intensified struggle against the military junta's efforts to absolve the NAP members being tried and their use of the trials as an occasion to voice their fascist propaganda. In this way our party has succeeded in portraying the military junta's stand toward the NAP trials as proof of the lies that the junta was in favor of completely eradicating terror in the country.

This struggle has activated the wide masses more than in the past and has laid the groundwork for a wider campaign both inside and outside the country in favor of stopping the executions, releasing the communists and all political prisoners, including the members of the Turkish Peace Committee and Ecevit, as well as in favor of union rights and liberties.

Our party's struggle has played a significant role in revealing the truth behind U.S. imperialism's policies toward Turkey and in the formation of a very wide public against the stationing of the U.S. rapid deployment forces [RDF] in our country. The military junta has still not had the courage to openly declare that it has agreed to make the necessary concessions to the United States on this issue. It is afraid that this revelation will cause an acceleration of anti-imperialist movement.

Our party's stand against the elimination of the 1961 Constitution has contributed greatly toward the deep reactions witnessed in large masses on this subject. Today a large movement already exists in favor of the democratic rights and liberties stipulated in the 1961 Constitution. Our party has continuously supported and will continue to support all forces that exert efforts in this direction. Our party's platform on the issue of a national and democratic constitution represents a constructive reply to the large groups that are still pondering the kind of constitution being prepared.
Those opposing the elimination of the 1961 Constitution form the basis of a movement against the military junta. Our party is warning these forces of the fact that it is impossible to reach a democratic constitution at a time when the military junta is still reigning in the country.

In the international field, our party has made great efforts in order to isolate Turkey and to intensify solidarity with the democratic forces in Turkey. These efforts have played a major role in the swift alienation of the military junta in the western European public and in the organization of activities of solidarity with Turkey.

Our party opposes the increasing pressures being exerted against the Kurdish people in Turkey. It is exposing openly the chauvinistic and oppressive policies being waged in Turkish Kurdistan. Our party organizations in these regions are continuing their active struggle.

Our party has waged a constant struggle against the efforts by the junta and the reactionaries to use the incidents of terror by Armenians and the straining of relations with Greece as a means for accelerating its chauvinistic policies and of deceiving the masses. Our party has given much importance to instructing the masses on the subject of proletarian internationalism and the necessity of friendship among the peoples.

Our party has persistently supported the struggle being waged by Turkish guest workers in Western Europe against the imperialist monopolies and discrimination against foreign workers. Our party actively supported the peace activities, the efforts to confront the aggression of the fascist NAP adherents, the expressions of solidarity with the democratic forces in Turkey as well as all the steps made to provide the unity of action among workers, progressives and the mass organizations of the Turkish workers in Europe as well as the unity of these organizations with the progressive forces in countries in which they are employed.

LATE REPORT: ANKARA MILITARY TRIBUNAL RELEASES ECEVIT

NC031124 Paris AFP in English 1119 GMT 3 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 3 Jun (AFP) -- The Ankara Military Tribunal today released former Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit, who was arrested on April 10 and accused of "spreading false news" in a Norwegian newspaper interview.

Mr Ecevit, a social democrat, was accused of giving an interview critical of the Turkish Government to a reporter of the Norwegian newspaper ARBEIDERBLADET, which was published on April 1.

The tribunal decided to release him after receiving a letter from the reporter saying he had never interviewed Mr Ecevit, but wrote his article from statements made by other people during a stay in Turkey.

Mr Ecevit has always denied giving this newspaper any interview.

AUSTRIA

U.S. OFFICIAL REACTS TO CRITICISM OF REMARKS

AU021035 Vienna ARBEITER-ZEITUNG in German 2 Jun 82 p 3

[Excerpts] Vienna (APA) -- U.S.-Austrian relations are continuously stable and good, and he had absolutely not meant to disturb them, Ambassador Douglas, coordinator for refugee and immigration affairs at the U.S. State Department, declared in an interview with the Austrian Radio and Television Service that was broadcast in its noon "Journal" program yesterday. As a "very old friend of Austria," Douglas -- who studied in Austria in the 1960's -- said in an interview with Prof Harry Sichrovsky that he had merely wanted to discuss in Vienna a few open questions. But he had by no means intended to lecture to his second homeland.

The reactions to his critical remarks about some aspects of Austria's policy of neutrality (which he made on Monday last week at the political academy of the Austrian People's Party) had surprised him, he said, adding that he regretted that there had been misunderstandings. Nationalrat Deputy Fritz Marsch, chairman of the Foreign Policy Committee, had resolutely rejected the statements by Ambassador Douglas as interference in Austrian affairs.

Douglas did not want to see U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Stoessel's recent statement in a newspaper interview, in which Stoessel stressed his respect for Austria's policy of neutrality, as a rebuke for his own utterances. His own "remarks and ideas," the U.S. Government official said, were by no means meant as criticism of Austrian neutrality, which he had always admired.

BULGARIA'S ZHIVKOV ARRIVES FOR OFFICIAL VISIT

AU031019 Vienna Domestic Service in German 1000 GMT 3 Jun 82

[Text] The Bulgarian party and state leader Todor Zhivkov has arrived in Vienna for a 2-day working visit. Zhivkov will sign a program on Austrian-Bulgarian cooperation which, among other things, will provide for cooperation in the fields of mining, the electronics industry, construction, the chemical and pharmaceutical industry, as well as tourism. The Bulgarian state leader will meet Federal Chancellor Kreisky and Federal President Kirchschlaeger during his stay in Austria.

NETHERLANDS

MUGABE BEGINS 3-DAY VISIT; BACKS SANCTIONS

NC022156 Paris AFP in English 2116 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] The Hague, 2 Jun (AFP) -- Visiting Zimbabwean Prime Minister Robert Mugabe in talks with his Dutch counterpart Andreas van Agt today backed economic sanctions to oblige South Africa to end its apartheid policy, a Dutch Foreign Ministry spokesman said. But Mr Mugabe said that such sanctions would have to have maximum support to (?be effective), the spokesman added.

The Zimbabwean leader conceded that sanctions would also have repercussions on his own country, because of its dependence on trade through South (?African) ports, but he said this should not be an excuse to refrain from imposing such measures.

Mr Mugabe arrived today for a three-day visit on the last leg of a European tour which has also taken him to Britain, Italy, West Germany, Belgium, France and Greece.

PORTUGAL

SOCIALISTS 'SUSPEND' RELATIONS WITH COMMUNISTS

LD022232 Lisbon Domestic Service in Portuguese 2100 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] The Permanent Committee of the Socialist Party [PS] has called for dismissal of the government and dissolution of the Assembly of the Republic once voting on the draft amendments to the constitution has been completed. The PS says new elections would be an instrument of democratic clarification without which it will not be possible to implement a suitable policy of national recovery.

In a communique in which it expresses gratitude for the presentation at today's plenary sitting of parliament of the report by the Constitutional Revision Committee and the setting of the beginning of the debate for this coming Monday, the Permanent Committee of the PS -- in which Mario Soares' line predominates -- announced that it is immediately suspending all political relations with the Portuguese Communist Party [PCP] in view of what the Socialist leadership describes as "clear interference by the PCP Central Committee and its secretary general in the internal life of the PS." The communique says the PCP Central Committee urged the PS parliamentary group to disobey the party line.

It will be recalled that the PCP Central Committee called on Socialist MP's to vote against the revision of the constitution envisaged by the agreement between Mario Soares and the Democratic Alliance. In the opinion of the PS leadership, such a move represents a grave violation of the most elementary rules of coexistence between political forces in a democratic regime.

In addition to making it clear that the PS has nothing to do with the forthcoming conference of solidarity with the frontline states to be held in Lisbon -- which the PS accuses of being part of the Soviet strategy toward southern Africa -- the communique released by the PS permanent committee also says that a meeting of the party's National Committee has been called for 13 June to examine the internal crisis of the PS in the framework of the national political situation and to discuss the necessary measures to put an end to it.

NORTHERN MILITARY REGION OFFICIAL DISMISSED

LD022010 Lisbon in Portuguese to Europe 1900 GMT 2 Jun 82

[Text] A military source said this afternoon that Brig Carlos Azeredo has been dismissed from his post as second in command of the northern military region. Approached by us, the Army General Staff merely confirmed the report, adding that the dismissal of Brig Azeredo was signed by Gen Garcia dos Santos, army chief of staff, in a directive issued yesterday.

The Army General Staff refused, however, to provide any further details of the reasons that led to the dismissal of the second in command of the northern military region and former military adviser to late Prime Minister Sa Carneiro. We have, however, managed to find out from a northern military region source that the reasons behind the dismissal may be connected with recent stands adopted by Brig Azeredo toward certain promotions in the army.

SPAIN

SOCIALISTS DO NOT INTEND TO HARASS GOVERNMENT

PM021517 Madrid EL PAIS in Spanish 27 May 82 p 15

[Javier Angulo report: "PSOE in Favor of Not Forcing Early Election"]

[Excerpt] The Spanish Socialist Workers Party [PSOE] will maintain its policy of not harassing or helping to weaken the government, and will not force an early election, at least until the internal situation in the centrist party is clarified.

This is what follows from the course of the Socialist Executive Committee meeting held in Madrid yesterday and attended by Felipe Gonzalez, who preferred to cancel his presence at the summit which the Socialist International is going to hold in Helsinki.

At the end of the meeting, [Deputy Secretary General] Alfonso Guerra expressed his party's desire to contribute to the country's stability at a time when the 23 February [1981 — date of abortive coup] court martial is awaiting sentence and the government appers more unstable and weaker than ever. "We cannot," he said, "adopt irresponsible attitudes at this moment. That is why we are going to maintain our strategy of not helping to weaken the government. I only hope that it is capable of running the country peacefully until the spring, without turning that period into a constant electoral process, and devote itself to governing and making decisions." Nevertheless, he expressed skepticism in this respect and warned: "Just as we say that we are prepared for the election to be held in the spring, we also say that we will not avoid an election at any time."

Guerra expressed his hope that the Union of the Democratic Center [UCD] will take Spain's interests into account and that a policy of exploiting misfortune will not occur within it, which, in his opinion, would lead the party to a fragmentation which would create instability. "It would be irresponsible for matters to be viewed flippantly by the government, and if nothing had happened here, and for that policy of not governing and not making decisions to be maintained." At any event, he discounted for the moment the possibility of the PSOE's submitting a motion of censure against the government. "That topic was not raised," he stated.

Concerning the possibility that the PSOE could govern in the not very distant future in coalition with a "pivotal" party emerging from the UCD, Guerra was categorical: "In the next election we are determined to win a majority and govern alone."

DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 109 7 June 1982

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

FRG's Lambsdorff Previews Versailles Summit A 1
Options for Monetary Agreement Considered A 2
Mitterrand Opens Summit; Stresses Technology A 2
Thatcher Not To Leave Early A 3
Falklands Initiative Considered A 3
Spadolini Endorses Technology A 4
Disagreement on Soviet Trade A 5
Monetary System Drafted A 6
Italians Reject Exclusion A 6
Trudeau, Suzuki Confer A 6
Thatcher, Schmidt Discuss EEC A 6
Fighting in Lebanon Condemned A 7
Summit Backs UK in Falklands A 7
Thatcher Views Summit A 8
Leaders Comment on Results A 9
'Text' of Declaration A 9
Monetary Undertakings Accord A 12

AUSTRIA

Bulgaria's Zhivkov Meets With Kirchschlaeger E 1
Kreisky-Zhivkov Talks Held E 1
Talks Termed 'Very Useful' [ARBEITER-ZEITUNG 4 Jun] E 1
Briefs: Outgoing Refugees E 1

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Boelling Previews NATO Session, Reagan Visit J 1
Christian Democrats Win in Hamburg Elections J 1
CDU Official Comments J 1
Mayor Views Outcome J 1
DIE WELT Advises FDP [7 Jun] J 2
Genscher Views Berlin Treaties, Ostpolitik J 2

FRANCE

President Consults PCF Leader on Versailles K 1
[L'HUMANITE 28 May]
Chirac Comments on Meeting With Reagan 4 Jun K 1
European Affairs Minister Views EEC Expansion K 1
[EXPRESSO 29 May]
Marchais Interviewed in Hungarian Newspaper K 4
[Budapest MTI]
PS, PCF Split on Municipal Election System K 6
[LE MATIN 28 May]
Newsman Arrested; Expelled From Argentina K 7
[LE FIGARO 3 Jun]

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Spadolini on Versailles 'Substantial Agreement' L 1
No Serious Incidents Reported in Rome Peace Marches L 1

PORTUGAL

Major Reshuffling of Balsemao Cabinet Announced M 1

NORDIC AFFAIRS

FINLAND

General Cites National Security Policy, Measures P 1
Editorial Lauds Koivisto's Foreign Policy Speech P 2
[HUFVUDSTADSBLADET 28 May]

UNITED KINGDOM

Thatcher Comments on U.S. Falklands Vote at UN Q 1
Whitehall Fears Argentine Arms Acquisitions Q 2
Troops Poised To Attack; Summit Backs Policy Q 2
More Troops on Island Q 3
SAS, SBS Landed on Falklands in Early May Q 4
Argentina Using Transport Planes as Bombers Q 5
Investigation Into Goose Green Explosion Underway Q 5

CYPRUS

Kiprianou Leaves for Athens, U.S. Visits 3 June R 1
UN Representative Gobbi Departs for New York R 1
I DHIMOKRATIKI on Illegal Visits by U.S. Marines [7 Jun] R 1
Kliridhis Interviewed on Dialogue, Other Topics R 1
[O AGON 6 Jun]
Communique Issued on DIKO Group Visit to Syria R 2
Paper on Handling of USSR's Criticism of Brandt R 3
[I SIMERINI 4 Jun]
Denktas Departs for Talks in New York 4 June R 3

GREECE

Papandreou, Rogers Hold 'Very Useful' Conference S 1
Visit Ends S 1
Papandreou-Kiprianou Talks End; Statement Issued S 1
PRC's He Ying Meets With Counterpart in Athens S 2
Athens Reportedly To Call Euromart Meeting on Lebanon S 2
RIZOSPASTIS Hits Government's U.S.-NATO Policy [5 Jun] S 2

TURKEY

Ulusu, Turkmen Depart for Saudi Arabia T 1
Trade Minister Canturk Returns From Bulgaria T 1
Kuwaiti, Yugoslav Trade Missions in Turkey T 1
Ulusu Comments on RDF, Armenian Movement T 2
[AL-QABAS 4 Jun]
Turgut Ozal Views Foreign Relations Issues T 2
[AL-QABAS 5 Jun]
Ecevit in Court Over DER SPIEGEL Statement T 3
ANATOLIA Reports Defense Statement on DISK Trial T 3
Fifth Part of TCP Central Committee Plenum Report [Our Radio] T 3
Final Installment [Our Radio] T 5
TCP Urges Support for FRG, U.S. Demonstrations [Our Radio] T 7
HURRIYET Calls for Tough Stand on Aegean Issue [31 May] T 7
Cultural Agreement With Somalia Ratified T 8
Briefs: Kirkuk-Iskenderun Pipeline Capacity T 8

FRG'S LAMBSDORFF PREVIEWS VERSAILLES SUMMIT

AU041125 Vienna Domestic Television Service in German 1950 GMT 3 Jun 82

[Interview with FRG Economics Minister Otto Graff Lambsdorff in Vienna, presumably on 3 June]

[Text] [Moderator] We have taken advantage of the presence in Vienna of FRG Economics Minister Graf Lambsdorff, who is attending a Freedom Party economic symposium, to ask him how his country will react to the reproaches of Washington in Versailles.

[Lambsdorff] We are not concerned about the charge concerning the granting of subsidized loans [to the USSR]. That is why we are carrying out this discussion very calmly. In principle, however, we are of the opinion -- and I want to stress this very emphatically, and this must be discussed tomorrow and the day after with the Americans in Versailles -- that it is better left to the banks and the businessmen to handle their credit risks -- bank loans, supplier's credits -- in accordance with their partner's specific economic situation. They will, and already have, become more cautious after everything they have heard about the creditworthiness of the countries on the other side of the Iron Curtain. As far as the state is concerned, we should limit our measures to the absolute minimum that is necessary and avoid doing too much.

[Question] If creditworthiness were the criterion, then actually only the Soviet Union of countries which are in a position to supply goods in return could be supplied with goods -- which in this particular case would be natural gas -- and there have been conjectures about a potential dependence on the part of the Western countries.

[Answer] Well, as far as the question of dependence on natural gas is concerned, we have -- I believe -- explained in great detail that this does not apply. And we certainly will have to talk about this with the Americans if it should come up for discussion, and to point out that American exports to the USSR in 1981 went up nearly 50 percent, while for example FRG exports declined 20 percent. But this is not merely a question of the East bloc countries selling raw materials, natural gas. A country such as the GDR, the CSSR, or Hungary is by all means able to export machinery and capital goods. They are indeed doing so, and they also get foreign currency proceeds from such exports. We are of the opinion that normal trade and economic relations are necessary and desirable. He who believes one could talk only about disarmament and forget about everything else is wrong. At the same time, however, we point out that FRG exports to the USSR, for example, are only 60 percent of our exports to Switzerland. The political importance attached to these exports, however, is always far greater that would be justified on the strength of the actual figures.

[Question] Do you believe that in Versailles there will be a coordination of the policies of West European countries regarding their trade policy vis-a-vis the East bloc countries? Isn't it always said that if the FRG does not make the deal, then the French will? How do you see this?

[Answer] Well, one could also say if the FRG does not make the deal, then there will be detours -- for which countries such as Austria, Sweden and Switzerland will offer themselves. We have all had our experiences in this respect. It will be necessary to arrive at some coordination of the credit policy -- in other words, the agreement on export credits within the framework of the OECD. But these are 24 countries, which include Austria. And we believe that we should conclude such agreements on a broad basis. We would not like the seven big countries which meet at the conference table in Versailles tomorrow to more or less also decide the fate of the smaller countries of the Western world. That is why we will certainly propose the adoption of such restrictions on the basis of the OECD, that is, the larger community. We regard this as both expedient and necessary.

OPTIONS FOR MONETARY AGREEMENT CONSIDERED

NC051102 Paris AFP in English 1052 GMT 5 Jun 82

[Text] Paris, 5 Jun (AFP) -- The U.S. is ready in principle to step up consideration with Western partners, intervening if necessary on foreign currency markets as part of a monetary accord, West Germany Finance Minister Manfred Lahnstein said today.

U.S. Treasury Secretary Donald Regan had indicated a "high degree of cooperation" on this matter, which figures in the summit of leading Western industrialised nations at Versailles this weekend, he told a press conference.

Commenting on a monetary agreement being prepared at Versailles, Mr Lahnstein said the seven nations had decided to fight "erratic and disorderly fluctuations" of currencies in line with article four of the statute of the International Monetary Fund.

The seven reaffirmed their belief in a free monetary system and the agreement would concern mainly the world's five leading currencies -- the dollar, mark, yen, sterling and French franc, the German minister said.

But Mr Lahnstein said the main problem was to agree on the terms erratic and disorderly. In his view central banks should intervene when the gap between two given currencies, for example the dollar and the mark, was greater than two pfennings in a single day.

Meanwhile the seven had agreed to strengthen the International Monetary Fund's monitoring role concerning industrialised countries, particularly the five countries with the most important currencies. Mr Lahnstein said it was not a question of "developing the IMF institutionally, but of applying the IMF's Article Three more effectively.

The monetary agreement was broadly agreed late yesterday by economy and finance ministers, and has to be approved by government heads for inclusion in the final communique later this weekend. Mr Lahnstein said it was also possible that it might constitute a technical annex to the main document.

Assistants to economy and finance ministers have been asked to draw up procedures for application of the accord before the annual IMF meeting in Toronto, Canada, early in September. Such procedures would cover definition of the concept of erratic and disorderly fluctuations, and of the strengthening of IMF surveillance.

Mr Lahnstein said that this monetary agreement would not directly affect interest rates, which had not been discussed at Versailles up to late last night.

But he added that it was clear that currency stability through U.S. intervention on currency markets would have a favourable effect on interest rates.

MITTERRAND OPENS SUMMIT; STRESSES TECHNOLOGY

LD051214 Paris Domestic Service in French 1100 GMT 5 Jun 82

[Text] Francois Mitterrand opened the eighth summit of the seven most industrialized countries of the Western world at 1000 this morning in the Versailles Palace. Mitterrand had previously greeted his guests in the sunshine in front of the steps of the palace, where the Republic Guards formed a guard of honor. It was with President Reagan, the last to arrive, that Mitterrand entered the Hall of the Queen's Guards, where the presentation of the delegations took place, and then the Salle du Sacre, where the official discussions are taking place.

This morning was devoted to technological problems -- that is to say, the development of technologies to be placed at the service of economic and social progress. That is the [word indistinct] which Mitterrand, in agreement with the other six, wants to give this work.

The new technologies could aggravate the crisis, but if mastered will contribute to solving it. This sums up the speech which Mitterrand made this morning to his partners at the opening of the Versailles summit. And to back up his argument, the head of state referred to several topical problems, starting with that of employment. It is true that automation will eliminate several million jobs in the industrialized countries alone from now until 1990. But, conversely, by opening new fields of human endeavor, these new technologies can make it possible for new jobs to be created, giving work a new emphasis. One can say the same about the North-South dialogue. Far from strengthening the domination of the industrialized countries, microbiology can help the poor countries reduce their food shortages.

Mitterrand pleaded for mastery of these new technologies, which also enabled him to tackle directly some of the problems at the center of this summit. For it is obvious [words indistinct] in formidable investments for research, if there is also uncertainty over currency.

[words indistinct] of this opening speech, Mitterrand also appealed for a collective boosting of the industrialized countries. Discussion is open on all these points. But by choosing research as his theme, Mitterrand evidently wanted to present a common denominator to the other heads of state and government: And it seems he has succeeded, for according to his spokesman, this speech was received with general approval.

Thatcher Not To Leave Early

NC051254 Paris AFP in English 1247 GMT 5 Jun 82

[Text] Paris, 5 Jun (AFP) -- British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher will stay until the end of the Western summit of industrialised nations at Versailles near here late Sunday, and has no intention of leaving early, her spokesman said today.

The spokesman was denying rumours that Mrs Thatcher might leave the summit before the closing dinner tomorrow.

Falklands Initiative Considered

NC051601 Paris AFP in English 1551 GMT 5 Jun 82

[By Boni de Torhout]

[Text] Versailles, France, Jun 5 (AFP) -- Britain's European partners are preparing a joint initiative on the Falklands crisis which may be announced once Port Stanley is back in British hands, a reliable European source said here today.

The conflict between Britain and Argentina has, from the start, dominated the political side of talks at the Versailles summit of Western industrialialised nations.

The European initiative on the Falklands was reportedly suggested by France, Italy and West Germany, and was seen [word indistinct] to coincide with a probable British military victory, which appeared near. The British delegation has declined to comment, except to say that the final decision for an assault on Port Stanley was up to the military commander in the Falklands operation.

Meanwhile, a British spokesman described the U.S. shift in a United Nations Security Council vote yesterday on a ceasefire resolution as "curious."

British sources said that Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher had received assurances from U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig yesterday that the United States would vote against the resolution, although Foreign Secretary Francis Pym was warned a short time later that Mr Haig had decided to abstain, instead.

The British delegation, while refusing to comment on possible U.S. motives, said the change in tactics in no way affected America's wholehearted support for London. The British thus attributed the U.S. decision to the formulation of the resolution rather than to any change in the U.S. stance on the Falklands question -- a view echoed by the U.S. delegation here.

Analysts said Britain's European partners appeared especially concerned now about the possible consequences of a British military victory.

France, whose Presidential Advisor Jacques Attali said last night that Versailles participants had studied "ways and means" of a possible joint initiative, continued to back Britain fully and to condemn the Argentine invasion of the archipelago on April 2. But Paris holds that once British rule is restored in the Falklands, the conflict must not be allowed to degenerate into permanent antagonism between a European power and a Latin American country, a reliable source said.

France, which wants to maintain European ties with Latin America, might reconsider its support if the conflict should spill over into other areas, analysts said.

Spadolini Endorses Technology

AU051606 Rome ANSA in English 1543 GMT 5 Jun 82

[Text] Paris, 5 Jun (ANSA) -- Italy is ready to contribute to the technological renewal of the industrialized world, Italian Premier Giovanni Spadolini told the Versailles summit today.

He told his fellow participants at the summit of Western heads of state and government here that a joint initiative of industrialized nations on the themes of technology should also include nations of intermediary development and the emerging countries.

A plan must be worked out that would weave a skein of solidarity and not provoke new elements of imbalance and inequiality among nations, he said.

Spadolini called for careful study of all the technical, legislative, cultural and sociological instruments needed to further technological choices, but stressed that the Western nations had a duty to control the processes of transformation which could engender both negative and positive effects on the general welfare of mankind.

Any analysis of technology must be made within the framework of the macro-economy, energy, international trade and the North-South dialogue, he said. The Italian premier also stressed the role private enterprise and free market forces could play as propelling factors in the process of technological innovation. This did not, however, reduce the role that government must play, he warned.

The Italian premier wound up by saying that only by dominating the technological challenge could the creative energies of the coming generations be released and the search for a new scale of values be fruitfully pursued.

This last was a reference to French President Francois Mitterrand's remark about the degradation of materialism and determinism. "The forces of the spirit are today more than ever essential to the safeguarding and enlargement of freedom in the world," Spadolini concluded.

Disagreement on Soviet Trade

NC051629 Paris AFP in English 1614 GMT 5 Jun 82

[Text] Versailles, France, 5 Jun (AFP) -- U.S. President Ronald Reagan differed sharply today with his six Versailles summit partners over a strong U.S. call for curbs on Western credits to the Soviet Union.

Leaders of Canada, Britain, France, West Germany, Italy and Japan all took a critical view of Mr Reagan's ideas on this issue, presented to a joint working luncheon of the seven delegation heads and their foreign ministers, French Presidential Spokesman Michel Vauzelle said.

The sharpest reactions, according to conference sources, came from West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

Senior U.S. officials have repeatedly argued here this week that Western governments are subsidizing the Soviet Union's military buildup by granting credits, notably in the form of government-backed export credits.

Mr Reagan has made it clear that the main purpose of his current European tour -- during which he is to attend a summit in Bonn next week of the 15-nation North Atlantic Treaty Organisation -- is to seek to bolster Western unity.

The Europeans, on the whole, want to keep politics apart from their trading ties with the USSR and its East bloc allies -- which they believe can help foster detente -- though they acknowledge that East bloc indebtedness to the West, now estimated at about 80,000 million dollars, has reached a dangerously high level.

West Germany and France have both made it clear that though firmness is needed towards Moscow, there can be no question of anything that smacks of a "trade war."

Japan's Premier Zenko Suzuki was quoted by a spokesman as saying that he would agree to the U.S. proposals provided the seven summit countries agreed to act in unison.

Canada's position was outlined by its Foreign Minister Mark McGuigan, who said in a pre-dawn chat with correspondents that Ottawa did not want to "single out" the Soviet Union, but was strongly in favour of a general agreement to curb the subsidy element in export credits which the Canadians see as a serious world-wide problem.

Monetary System Drafted

NC051722 Paris AFP in English 1715 GMT 5 Jun 82

[Text] Versailles, France, 5 Jun (AFP) -- The participants in the seven-nation Versailles summit will announce tomorrow their agreement to "rebuild the international monetary system over the medium term," French President Francois Mitterrand said today.

There was "an outline agreement" drawn up by finance ministers of the seven countries that remained to be worked out in detail, he said. The agreement had a bearing on "acceptance of recourse, if necessary, to intervention on the foreign exchange markets in order to fight erratic fluctuations" of currencies, Mr Mitterrand noted.

The president, who hosted the summit, was addressing a news conference at the end of the first full working day of leaders of Canada, Britain, France, West Germany, Italy, Japan and the United States, as well as the European Economic Community, who are to wind up their talks tomorrow night.

Mr Mitterrand said there had been "real progress" in talks on monetary and trade issues. But, he said, it was premature to comment on the summit's achievements in respect to the current high levels of interest rates.

Italians Reject Exclusion

AU051920 Rome ANSA in English 1905 GMT 5 Jun 82

[Excerpts] Versailles, 5 Jun (ANSA) -- The United States wound up in a minority of one this afternoon when the other six industrialized powers opposed the U.S. proposal on export credits for the Soviet Union.

In another development at the summit today, the American treasury secretary, Donald Regan, declared that, "The United States has never contemplated leaving Italy out of the study group on possible monetary intervention."

Regan's statement, in which he expressed the thinking that, "interventions of this type would be ineffective," came in denial of Italian press accounts reporting today that the U.S. intended to exclude Canada and Italy "from the proposed creation of an observatory for keeping tabs on industrialized economies with the duties of giving priority to monetary stability and recovery in the financial sector."

A spokesman for the Italian premier affirmed today that, "there is no proposal for a mechanism to supervise economic policy with a view to establishing absolute priority for this or that sector."

The note released by the Italian spokesman went on to explain that, "there are discussions underway on Articles Three and Four in the International Monetary Fund statutes covering policy surveillance and market interventions. "The related proposals will be developed by the seven summit nations and the European Economic Community in an ad hoc work group to be created."

The note added, "The Italian Government considers any other prospect unacceptable, especially at the present time and in these quarters while discussions are underway among the seven for agreement on big international issues at the political and economic levels.

"The government, today just as yesterday, intends to offer an effective and significant contribution to this agreement from a position of absolute parity with the other six countries."

Trudeau, Suzuki Confer

NC061004 Paris AFP in English 1009 GMT 6 Jun 82

[Text] Paris, 6 Jun (AFP) -- Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliot Trudeau met today with Zenko Suzuki, his Japanese counterpart, to ask Japan to limit the number of cars it exports to Canada, according to Canadian sources at the Versailles summit.

Mr Suzuki gave no commitment at the meeting, which took place at the Versailles chateau that is housing the current seven-nation summit meeting. But a Canadian spokesman said Mr Trudeau came out of the meeting with the impression that he had been "heard with attention."

Canada apparently was seeking a voluntary arrangement such as that obtained by the United States, which this year will import 175,000 Japanese cars.

Mr Suzuki, meanwhile, expressed concern over what he said were excessively painstaking customs inspections of Japanese cars in the Western Canadian port of Vancouver.

Thatcher, Schmidt Discuss EEC

NC061009 Paris AFP in English 1004 GMT 6 Jun 82

[Text] Paris, 6 Jun (AFP) -- British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher outlined her long term perspectives for the Falkland Islands crisis when she met West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt for an hour-long private meeting during the Versailles summit near here today.

The two leaders, who are here for the summit of the "big seven" industrial nations, also discussed latest developments inside the European Economic Community (EEC), and the circumstances surrounding the recent decision to set European farm prices by a majority vote, a West German Government spokesman said.

They had an "exchange of views" over the Luxembourg compromise, under which an EEC member can veto a decision if it considers its national interest is at stake. The West German chancellor said the formula could not be used for important issues.

Fighting in Lebanon Condemned

LD061306 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1234 GMT 6 Jun 82

[Text] A statement was issued by the Versailles summit leaders calling for an immediate and simultaneous ceasefire in the Lebanon and across the Lebanon-Israel border. The statement was issued by President Mitterrand of France as chairman of the summit.

The statement said: "We are shocked by the news reaching us from the Lebanon and the frontier between Lebanon and Israel. We are deeply moved by the loss of human life, the suffering and destruction."

"We think that this new cycle of violence, if it were to continue, could have disastrous consequences for the whole area. We have taken note of the unanimous adoption by the United Nations Security Council of a resolution expressing grave concern at the violation of the territorial integrity, independence and sovereignty of Lebanon and calling on all the parties to the conflict to cease immediately and simultaneously all military activities in Lebanon and across the Lebanon-Israel border.

"We have also taken note of the appeal addressed to the parties by Senor Perez de Cuellar, secretary general of the United Nations, and of the message sent by him to the president of the French Republic as chairman of this meeting."

The statement continued: "We strongly endorse the urgent appeals of the Security Council and the secretary general for an immediate and simultaneous cessation of violence and we call on all the parties to heed these appeals in order that peace and security throughout the area be safeguarded.

"Each of our governments will use all the means at its disposal to achieve this objective." The statement was approved unanimously by all the heads of government at the summit.

The fighting was debated by them in private this morning and these discussions continued over lunch.

Summit Backs UK in Falklands

NC061604 Paris AFP in English 1553 GMT 6 Jun 82

[Text] Versailles, France, 6 Jun (AFP) -- Participants at the Versailles summit today expressed their wholehearted solidarity with Britain in the Falklands conflict.

Speaking in the name of the seven, French President Francois Mitterrand told a news conference that Britain's national interests and pride had come under attack in the conflict. Mr Mitterrand, the summit host, used the English word "Falklands" instead of the French word "Malouines" to refer to the disputed islands.

He said participants condemned Argentina's violent initiative and supported United Nations Resolution 502, calling for a withdrawal of Argentine troops.

Thatcher Views Summit

LD061916 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1827 GMT 6 Jun 82

[By Steve Levinson, PA economics correspondent in Versailles]

[Excerpt] The government's economic policies received an international seal of approval today from the heads of the Western world as the best way to end the recession, according to Mrs Margaret Thatcher.

At the end of the two-day world economic summit at Versailles she told a press conference: "Everything that is in the communique confirms the economic policies that we have been running and shall continue to adopt. Everything. That's the right way to go.

"Once other countries have been pursuing the same policies for some time and get their budget deficit down, I believe international interest rates will begin to fall. That will be signal on which many smaller businesses can start to expand and new businesses start up."

Although international flare-ups in the Middle East and Falklands dominated the summit, Mrs Thatcher concentrated on the economic topics in her end-of-summit statement. She said that of all the summits she had attended, this one had shown the most unanimity on economic issues.

"We can draw encouragement from this summit," she said. There was solidarity on almost everything discussed. The leaders had concluded that inflation must be brought down and budget deficits reduced, she said.

"There can be no recovery from world recession unless we get interest rates down, and to do that we must get inflation and deficits down and pursue very stringent monetary policies."

She said: "I have never known such unanimity before at an economic summit on the economic and financial policies which must be pursued to form a sound basis for a steady recovery. We referred again and again to a steady recovery, not an artificial recovery based on printing money."

Mrs Thatcher said there was also agreement on the need for more open trading patterns and a recognition of the importance of new technology. "It is absolutely indispensible to recovery and the creation of new jobs that we adopt the new technologies."

In the long term this was the best way to create new jobs, although in the shorter term some jobs might be lost. She added: "The people with the lowest rates of inflation also have the lowest unemployment. And the people have the lowest unemployment have been the fastest to adopt new technology."

Mrs Thatcher also pinpointed two other areas of agreement. There would be stricter limits on trade credit to Russia, while trade patterns between the West and the Soviet Union would be monitored.

Progress was also made on relations between the rich North and poor South nations of the world. Mrs Thatcher said the summit nations were now ready for negotiation on the divide between the rich and the poor.

All the points made by Mrs Thatcher were contained in a long declaration issued by the seven heads of government and the EEC representatives at the end of the summit.

Leaders Comment On Results

NC061916 Paris AFP in English 1836 GMT 6 Jun 82

[Text] Versailles, France, 6 June (AFP) -- Leaders at the Versailles summit of industrialized nations today expressed general satisfaction at the results of their debates, while acknowledging that the going was at times difficult.

In a written statement, U.S. President Ronald Reagan said that participants had "resisted the temptation" to seek "easy solutions" while reaffirming "our strong commitment to economic and political cooperation." At the same time, he said, they had reaffirmed their commitment "to ensure that our economic relations with the Soviet Union are fully consistent with our political and security objectives."

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said she was pleased with the "total unity and solidarity" of Britain's partners over the Falklands crisis. She added that Anglo-American relations were "excellent" and untroubled by the controversial U.S. vote shift in the United Nations Friday.

West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt evoked the issue of export credits to the Soviet Union, noting that the question had required two hours of talks at the top level before a compromise agreement could be reached. "For several countries, the adoption of this compromise was perhpas not easy," he observed.

Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau also spoke of a "difficult summit." The issues of energy and North-South relations, which came in for considerable debate at previous summits in Venice and Ottawa, posed few problems at Versailles, while East-West trade and macro-economy questions were thornier, Mr Trudeau said.

Italian Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini expressed satisfaction at the monetary accord, saying it was the "most important" achievement at Versailles for Italy. He remarked that Western nations at the summit had demonstrated a united front on defense problems.

The current chairman of the European Economic Community, Belgian Premier Wilfried Martens, congratulated the seven participants on their "determination to reduce unbearable interest rates by urgent implementation of cautious monetary policies and by better control of budget deficits."

He said the monetary accord at Versailles should "reduce the current monetary [words indistinct] of uncertainty and is unfavorable to international exchanges and resumed growth."

'Text' of Declaration

NC062144 Paris AFP in English 2059 GMT 6 Jun 82

[Text] Versailles, France, 6 Jun (AFP) -- The following is the full text of the declaration adopted by the Versailles summit, which brought together leaders of Canada, Britain, France, West Germany, Italy, Japan, the United States and representatives of the European Economic Community from June 4 through 6:

In the course of the meeting at Versailles, we have deepened our mutual understanding of the gravity of the world economic situation, and we have agreed on a number of objectives for urgent action with a view to improving it.

We affirm that the improvement of the present situation, by a further reduction of inflation and by a return to steady growth and higher levels of employment, will strengthen our joint capacity to safeguard our security, to maintain confidence in the democratic values that we share, and to preserve the cultural heritage of our peoples in all their diversity.

Full employment, price stability and sustained and balanced growth are ambitious objectives. They are attainable in the coming years only if we pursue policies which encourage productive investment and technological progress: If, in addition to our own individual efforts we are willing to joint forces, if each country is sensitive to the effects of its policies on others and if we collaborate in promoting world development.

In this spirit, we have decided to implement the following lines of action:

-- Growth and employment must be increased. This will be attained on a durable basis only if we are successful in our continuing fight against inflation. That will also help to bring down interest rates, which are now unacceptably high, and to bring about more stable exchange rates.

In order to achieve this essential reduction of real interest rates, we will as a matter of urgency pursue prudent monetary policies and achieve greater control of budgetary deficits.

It is essential to intensify our economic and monetary cooperation. In this regard, we will work towards a constructive and orderly evolution of the international monetary system by a closer cooperation among the authorities representing the currencies of North America, of Japan and of the European Community in pursuing medium-term economic and monetary objectives. In this respect, we have committed ourselves to the undertakings in the attached statement.

— The growth of world trade in all its facets is both a necessary element for the growth of each country and a consequence of that growth. We reaffirm our commitment to strengthening the open multilateral trading system as embodied in the GATT and to maintaining its effective operation.

In order to promote stability and employment through trade and growth, we will resist protectionist pressures and trade-distorting practices. We are resolved to complete the work of the Tokyo Round and to improve the capacity of the GATT to solve current and future trade (?problems).

We will also work towards the further opening of our markets. We will cooperate with the developing countries to strengthen and improve the multilateral system, and to extend trading opportunities, in particular with the newly industrialized countries.

We shall participate fully in the forthcoming GATT ministerial conference in order to [take] concrete steps towards these ends. We shall work for early agreement on the renewal of the OECD export credit consensus.

-- We agree to pursue a prudent and diversified economic approach to the USSR and Eastern Europe, consistent with our political and security interests. This includes actions in three key areas. First, following international discussions in January, our representatives will work together to improve the international system for controlling exports of strategic goods to these countries and national arrangements for the enforcement of security controls.

Second, we will exchange information in the OECD on all aspects of our economic, commercial and financial relations with the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

Third, taking into account existing economic and financial considerations, we have agreed to handle cautiously financial relations with the USSR and other Eastern European countries, in such a way as to ensure that they are conducted on a sound economic basis, including also the need for commercial prudence in limiting export credits. The development of economic and financial relations will be subject to periodic ex-post reviews.

-- The progress we have already made does not diminish the need for continuing efforts to economize on energy, particularly through the price mechanism, and to promote alternative sources, including nuclear energy and coal, in a long-term perspective.

These efforts will enable us further to reduce our vulnerability to interruptions in the supply of energy and instability of prices. Cooperation to develop new energy technologies, and to strengthen our capacity to deal with disruptions, can contribute to our common energy security. We shall also work to strengthen our cooperation with both oil-exporting and oil-importing developing countries.

-- The growth of the developing countries and the deepening of a constructive relationship with them are vital for the political and economic well-being of the whole world. It is, therefore, important that a high level of financial flows and official assistance should be maintained and that their amount and their effectiveness should be increased as far as possible, with responsibilities shared broadly among all countries capable of making a contribution.

The launching of global negotiations is a major political objective approved by all participants in the summit. The latest draft resolution circulated by the Group of 77 is helpful, and the discussion at Versailles showed general acceptance of the view that it would serve as a basis for consultations with the countries concerned.

We believe that there is now a good prospect for the early launching and success of the global negotiations, provided that the independence of the specialised agencies is guaranteed.

At the same time, we are prepared to continue and develop practical cooperation with the developing countries through innovations within the World Bank, through our support of the work of the regional development banks, through progress in countering instability of commodity export earnings, through the encouragements of private capital flows, including international arrangements to improve the conditions for private investments and through a further concentration of official assistance on the poorer countries.

This is why we see a need for special temporary arrangements to overcome funding problems for IDA VI and for an early start to consideration of IDA VII. We will give special encouragement to programmes or arrangements designed to increase food and energy production in developing countries which have to import these essentials and to programmes to address the implications of population growth.

In the field of balance-of-payments support, we look forward to progress at the September IMF annual meeting towards settling the increase in the size of the fund appropriate to the coming eighth quota review.

-- Revitalization and growth of the world economy will depend not only on our own effort but also to a large extent upon cooperation among our countries and with other countries in the exploitation of scientific and technological development. We have to exploit the immense opportunities presented by the new technologies, particularly for creating new employment. We need to remove barriers to, and to promote the development of trade in new technologies both in the public sector and in the private sector.

Our countries will need to train men and women in the new technologies and to create the economic, social and cultural conditions which allow these technologies to develop and flourish.

We have considered the report presented to us on these issues by the president of the French Republic. In this context, we have decided to set up promptly a working group of representatives of our governments and of the European Community to develop, in close consultation with the appropriate international institutions, especially the OECD, proposals to give help to attain these objectives.

This group will be asked to submit its report to us by 31 December 1982. The conclusion of the report and the resulting action will be considered at the next economic summit to be held in 1983 in the United States of America.

Monetary Undertakings Accord

NC062152 Paris AFP in English 2104 GMT 6 Jun 82

[Text] Versailles, 6 Jun (AFP) -- Herewith the full text of the "Statement of International Monetary Undertakings" adopted by the Versailles summit:

1: We accept a joint responsibility to work for greater stability of the world monetary system. We recognize that this rests primarily on convergence of policies designed to achieve lower inflation, higher employment and renewed economic growth; and thus to maintain the internal and external values of our currencies. We are determined to discharge this obligation in close collaboration with all interested countries and monetary institutions.

2: We attach major importance to the [word indistinct] the IMF as a monetary authority and we will give it our full support in its effects to foster stability.

3: We are ready to strengthen our cooperation with the IMF in its work of surveillance and to develop this multilateral basis, taking into account particularly the currencies constituting the SDR (Special Drawing Rights).

4: We rule out the use of exchange rates to gain unfair competitive advantage.

5: We are ready, if necessary, to use intervention in exchange markets to counter disorderly conditions, as provided under Article IV of the IMF Articles of Agreements.

6: Those of us who are members of the EMS (European Monetary System) consider that these undertakings are complementary to the obligation of stability which they have already undertaken in that framework.

7: We are all convinced that greater monetary stability will assist freer flows of goods, services and capital. We are determined to see that greater monetary stability and freedom of trades and capital reinforce one another of economic growth and employment.

BULGARIA'S ZHIVKOV MEETS WITH KIRCHSCHLAEGER

AU041130 Vienna Domestic Service in German 1000 GMT 4 Jun 82

[Text] President Kirchschlaeger received Bulgarian Presdient Zhivkov for a 1-hour talk this morning. In an interview with the AUSTRIA PRESS AGENCY after this meeting, Zhivkov declared that the principal topic of the talks was the peace-preserving function of smaller states such as Austria and Bulgaria.

Kreisky-Zhivkov Talks Held

AU041210 Vienna Domestic Service in German 1040 GMT 4 Jun 82

[Erich Macho report on the talks between Chancellor Kreisky and Bulgarian President Todor Zhivkov on 3 June]

[Excerpts] Austria and Bulgaria are convinced that smaller countries can make a contribution to the continuation of the process of detente. The statement was made by the Bulgarian guest and by Chancellor Kreisky last night following a talk of about 2 hours at the chancellor's villa. The two politicians described the bilateral relations between the two countries as free of problems. In discussing the world political situation, the position of smaller countries was in the foreground. Chancellor Kreisky said that despite all differences between our views, we share the conviction that we can contribute toward the continuation of the process of detente.

President Zhivkov called the international situation complicated and worrisome. The practice that has developed between Vienna and Sofia of top-level meetings at regular, relatively short intervals -- Chancellor Kreisky was in Sofia only as recently as in May 1981 -- is to be maintained in the future.

Talks Termed 'Very Useful'

AU041132 Vienna ARBEITER-ZEITUNG in German 4 Jun 82 p 1

[Excerpts] Vienna (AZ) -- There are no dramatic problems between Bulgaria and Austria, said Chancellor Kreisky on Thursday afternoon following a 2-hour talk with Bulgaria's party and government Chief Todor Zhivkov in Vienna.

Kreisky stressed the sides' common conviction that the policy of detente is necessary. He sees the greatest opportunities for further developing the economic relations between the two countries in cooperation in third markets, and characterized his talks with Zhivkov as "very, very useful." Mutual visits and talks will continue to be held at regular intervals.

BRIEFS

OUTGOING REFUGEES -- In the first 5 months of this year, as many as 9,300 refugees have already emigrated from Austria to the traditional immigration countries -- as many as throughout the whole of last year. This was stated by Interior Minister Erwin Lanc in Parliament on Tuesday. He pointed out that this favorable development was made possible by an increase in the immigration quotas of Canada, the United States and Australia, and by the acceptance of minor refugee quotas by Switzerland, the Netherlands, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Luxembourg and Iceland. At present there are still a little over 15,000 Polish refugees in Austria, as well as 3,000 refugees from other East European countries, Lanc said. [Vienna ARBEITER-ZEITUNG in German 2 Jun 82 p 2 AU]

BOELLING PREVIEWS NATO SESSION, REAGAN VISIT

LD051046 Hamburg DPA in German 0652 GMT 5 Jun 82

[Text] Stuttgart, 5 Jun (DPA) -- In the words of its spokesman, Klaus Boelling, the FRG Government expect the forthcoming NATO summit to endorse a joint policy interested in a reduction of tensions with the Soviet Union. In an interview today on South German Radio in Stuttgart, Boelling stressed, above all, the cohesion of the Atlantic alliance in the "next round of discussions with the Soviet Union" in order to bring about a gradual reduction in the stockpile of arms.

The government spokesman described relations between the United States and the FRG as good. There is, therefore, no need for U.S. President Ronald Reagan and Chancellor Helmut Schmidt to talk about the quality of German-American relations when they meet in Bonn. Boelling denied that the demonstration scheduled to take place in Bonn on 10 June is an "anti-American demonstration."

CHRISTIAN DEMOCRATS WIN IN HAMBURG ELECTIONS

LD062210 Hamburg DPA in German 2132 GMT 6 Jun 82

[Excerpt] Hamburg, 6 Jun (DPA) -- With 56 seats, the CDU will, for the first time, be the strongest party in the new Hamburg City Assembly. The regional returning officer announced this evening that the Christian-Democrats, with 43.2 percent, obtained the best result (1978: 37.6). The SPD, which until now ruled with an absolute majority (51.5 percent) dropped to 42.8 percent and won 55 seats. The FDP, as in 1978, received 4.8 percent and for the second time in succession did not get the minimum for the representation in the regional parliament. The Green Alternative List (GAL), with 7.7 percent, gained nine seats.

CDU Official Comments

LD062008 Hamburg DPA in German 1827 GMT 6 Jun 82

[Text] Hamburg, 6 Jun (DPA) -- Walther Leisler Kiep, the leading candidate of the CDU opposition in Hamburg, has described the result of the city Assembly election as a "political landslide" for the CDU. In an interview for ZDF [Second German Television] this evening, Kiep stated that this had been nationwide confirmation in favor of the Union. The losses of the SPD and failure of the FDP to gain the necessary 5 percent were also a vote against the social-liberal coalition in Bonn since the election campaign had been fought very strongly on issues of federal policy.

"If elections still have any meaning at all, then the senate must now resign" Kiep said. This step would open the way for reasonable talks with constructive results for forming a government. However, the politician rejected a large coalition of SPD and CDU. During the next few days, the SPD would have to make the "historic decision" of whether it wants to work in an electoral alliance of Greens [environmentalists] and alternatives and the GAL [Green Alternative List]. Certain sections of the SPD would strive for this type of cooperation, Kiep said.

Mayor Views Outcome

LD062008 Hamburg DPA in German 1901 GMT 6 Jun 82

[Text] Hamburg, 6 Jun (DPA) -- Klaus von Dohnanyi, the mayor of Hamburg and the SPD's top candidate, has come out firmly against a grand coalition with the CDU. In a ZDF [Second German Television Network] [word indistinct] Dohnanyi said this evening that an alliance of this sort (?is not) suited to solving the existing problems.

The question of fresh elections has, on the other hand, to be discussed by the senate. But, above all it is a matter of achieving, in talks with (?all the party groups) in the [words indistinct] the capacity to govern in the interests of the citizens. Some 3 hours after voting closed, the politician hoped that the FDP received sufficient votes to enter parliament.

The CDU, as the "clear winner" in the city parliament elections, has not, with this result, come any closer to the change it strives for. It did not (?achieve) a clear majority, Dohnanyi said. Neither the citizens who voted FDP, nor the Green Alternative List voters (?could have brought) the Union to power. Dohnanyi pointed out that the SPD lost fewer votes in Hamburg than in other (?major cities) at previous elections.

DIE WELT Advises FDP

DW071023 Bonn DIE WELT in German 7 Jun 82 p 1

[Herbert Kremp editorial: "The FDP Must Act"]

[Text] The situation is as follows: The SPD has been decapitated, the CDU has grown by the size of a head and both are facing the environmentalists who have achieved the former size of the FDP. The SPD must ask itself whether it wants to permanently cooperate with the environmentalists or just on a case-by-case basis to remain in power in Hamburg for the time being.

The loser of the [Hamburg City] elections is Helmut Schmidt. He has suffered a home court loss. In the chancellor's secret capital the Social Democrats achieved their worst results in a long time, while the CDU achieved its best. That is a clear sign of the deterioration of the Bonn coalition headed by the Social Democratic government chief. The Hamburg election outcome originated in Bonn -- there is no other explanation for the almost extreme results.

A week ago FDP Chairman Genscher said in a personal talk: "The FDP loses wherever it sides with the SPD." This statement turned out to be an accurate prediction yesterday. The liberals are certainly losing ground, and since this is obvious now, the FDP must act. It is not just the Bonn coalition which is involved -- survival is at stake.

The CDU, which achieved much success with Kiep, must act now strategically. This means that ideas involving a great coalition must be rejected as well as the idea of new elections. There is no reason why the CDU/CSU should "tolerate" the present mayor staying in office, which he can do according to the constitution. On the other hand, the SPD must fear the alternative of either resigning or forming an alliance with the environmentalists. It is the SPD which will have to cope with the environmentalists when they are in the opposition.

The coming weeks will be as hot as the current weather. The 1983 budget round is in the offing. The FDP must act if it wants to survive at all. The CDU/CSU will undertake nothing which could complicate the FDP's changing over.

GENSCHER VIEWS BERLIN TREATIES, OSTPOLITIK

LD031104 Hamburg DPA in German 0901 GMT 3 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 3 Jun (DPA) -- The treaties on Berlin, which came into force 10 years ago, and the German Ostpolitik "are proof of the successes of a realistic policy of detente, especially in difficult times," Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher said today. In a statement released by the Foreign Ministry Genscher pointed to the successes, not the least of which is the spontaneous readiness of the Germans to help Poland, which proves how deeply-rooted this understanding has become. Genscher said, however, that the strains in East-West relations have cast a dark shadow over this process. Nonetheless, the Federal Government will continue its efforts "on the basis of a balance of forces" to achieve a constructive relationship.

PRESIDENT CONSULTS PCF LEADER ON VERSAILLES

PM041531 Paris L'HUMANITE in French 28 May 82 p 4

[Text] Within the context of preparations for the Versailles summit to be held soon in our country, yesterday it was the PCF secretary general's turn to be received by President of the Republic Francois Mitterrand, for over an hour.

As he left the Elysee Palace Georges Marchais answered questions from journalists: "We carried out a wide-ranging review of the topics on the agenda at the Versailles summit," he said. "We also broached the subject of the consequent implications for the development of our economic policy. We discussed the problems of peace and disarmament and relations with developing countries." Marchais stated that "this exchange of viewpoints demonstrated the concordance of our positions."

Next, journalists asked Marchais whether he perveived any modifications with regard to domestic policy: "None of the president of the republic's remarks suggested that there is any change in the implementation of the policy for which French men and women voted in May 1981," the PCF secretary general replied.

Asked about the rigor policy, Marchais said: "Rigor? We are in favor of it: We are in favor of rigor in the recovery of the domestic market and rigor in the implementation of social justice."

CHIRAC COMMENTS ON MEETING WITH REAGAN 4 JUN

LD041842 Paris Domestic Service in French 1800 GMT 4 Jun 82

[Text] Ronald Reagan had a 21-minute private interview with Jacques Chirac at the Hotel de Ville. It was a cordial interview, Chirac affirmed, which dealt with East-West relations.

Chirac told journalists that he (?told) Reagan that in his opinion Europe, and France in particular, will not be able to long remain in a position in which it does not conduct political dialogue with the USSR but at the same time maintains privileged economic and financial relations with the Eastern countries. A choice must be made, affirmed Chirac, and the very nature of their relations with the USSR justifies the strengthening of solidarity between the free countries.

EUROPEAN AFFAIRS MINISTER VIEWS EEC EXPANSION

PM040927 Lisbon EXPRESSO in Portuguese 29 May 82 p 19

[Mario Sampaio interview with French Minister of European Affairs Andre Chandernagor; date and place not given]

[Text] EXPRESSO: How does the present government's attitude differ from that one previously held by the Giscard d'Estaing-Raymond Barre government?

Chandernagor: Mr Pinto Balsemao cannot fail to be acquainted with France's position, since French President Francois Mitterrand recently visited Portugal and I had the opportunity to accompany him on that visit.

I believe that the French Government's position on the expansion of the EEC to include Portugal and Spain is clear: We have to objections in principle. We believe that there are political and cultural reasons for this expansion and in Portugual's case it is a way of turning over its African page to a new life within a European context. It is an evolution in Portuguese and world history.

But we have also already stated very clearly that we would like negotiations to be carried out seriously -- in other words, to avoid bypassing problems that will reappear later. We have already had the experience of two expansions, and see what difficulties we are facing with Britain, which has a tendency to challenge things that seemed resolved. See too the difficulties with regard to Greece, which has just told us in its recent memorandum that the country's special situation will now have to be taken into account. We want it to be quite clear that when one joins the Community, the choice has been taken, for better or for worse. We cannot continue to renegotiate forever. This is why we say: Let us therefore negotiate seriously.

EXPRESS: The Common Market's Commission sometimes has a tendency to deal with Portugal's and Spain's membership processes in parallel. What is your opinion in this regard?

Chandernagor: We have adopted a perfectly clear stance on this too. We want the negotiations to be carried out seriously. Each of them must therefore advance at its own speed. This is because the problems are not the same.

Portugal might have difficult problems. As far as Spain is concerned, this or that aspect might be particularly thorny. But I do not believe it is a good thing to try and coordinate the two. And sometimes I have even had the impression that the commission was tending to delay the discussion of the Portuguese membership process. Perhaps this was because, all in all, this process is simpler. My impression, however, was that the Portuguese process was being delayed to give the Spanish process time to advance. I always protested vehemently against that.

This is why the latest meeting between the Portuguese minister and the commission took place at our request. Therefore, each membership process must advance at its own speed and we consider it unacceptable that Portugal's membership process be delayed because its problems are simpler than Spain's.

EXPRESS: Would it be possible to discuss dates for Portugal's membership?

Chandernagor: No. We have never wanted to discuss dates. It is impossible and is at variance with what we have just said. We specified that negotiations must be carried out seriously. When we reach the end we will decide. But to forecast now what this or that date will be... Well, I cannot read crystal balls. All the more since, as I have always said, the Community itself has problems to resolve.

We recently took a step forward with regard to the problem of agricultural prices, and I believe there will be no more major difficulties in certain aspects of this problem. But it will be not only in our interests but also in yours for the Community to define its policy on Mediterranean agricultural products, which is another aspect of the problems concerning European agricultural products. Because to expand without first resolving this problem would be neither acceptable nor reasonable.

We have already made progress with regard to wine, on which both we and Italy have worked hard. I believe that by the end of the month there will be a "wine agreement" which will really constitute progress. Then there will be the olive oil problem. We must know now what we will do later. This is why we are insisting that these problems be seriously considered by the commission before any final decision on expansion. Later there will also be the impact of the expansion on commercial relations between the Community and certain allied Mediterranean countries. This applies to Egypt and Morocco, for instance.

Therefore, we do not say that it poses an obstacle. Nevertheless, all the problems must be viewed seriously within the context of the expansion.

EXPRESSO: Former Prime Minister Raymond Barre once spoke of a multispeed Europe....

Chandernagor: There is much talk about this, but the fact is that it already exists in reality. Look at what is happening with the European Monetary System. Britain does not participate in it.

Nevertheless, this idea of various speeds should not be abused because it would lead to an "a la carte" Europe and if we made the system general we would eventually cease to have any kind of Europe worthy of the name. This being so, we prefer a renegotiation of the Treaty of Rome if a country presumes to enjoy a special position, but we prefer that there be no special situations within the treaty, which envisages a joint stance for all member countries.

EXPRESSO: Is there no other solution outside the EEC context for a poor and small country such as Portugal?

Chandernagor: It is not for me, but for the Portuguese, to answer this. Other countries have already asked themselves the same question. Greece, for instance. The new Greek Government, which is socialist, has already been wondering about the position of the previous government, which was conservative. The Greek socialists eventually acknowledged, as the conservatives did before them, that it will always be better to remain within Europe.

EXPRESSO: Is the Third World path not better suited to the development of a country with the traditions that we have in Portugal?

Chandernagor: I do not know, but note that France itself, through Europe, has succeeded in pursuing an exemplary combined policy. I am referring to its combined policy with respect to Africa and other developing countries, through the Lome Agreements, the system of stabilizing the prices of raw materials, and so forth. I believe that thanks to the EEC, France, oriented toward the countries with which we have traditional relations, has already performed a task that is in many respects exemplary. The same could happen to Portugal.

EXPRESSO: With regard to the so-called preconditions for membership, what are they, if any exist? Francois Mitterrand said exactly 3 years ago in an interview with the daily LE MONDE that "the PS opposes the new economic preconditions, and these conditions are of three kinds: agricultural, industrial and regional"...!

Chandernagor: There are no such preconditions at present. There is merely a requirement, which is that the problems be discussed seriously. It is true, there are also EEC requirements, such as value-added tax. You cannot join the EEC unless you adopt the system on which the EEC's revenue is based. This is not a precondition, but a requirement of the Treaty of Rome. In the final analysis, the preconditions so frequently cited in all quarters are simply a misnomer.

When President Mitterrand mentioned preconditions in the agricultural field for an expansion to take place, he was referring not to conditions but to a form of reasoning. Indeed, how can you talk about Portugal's and Spain's membership if Europe cannot say first what it will do with Mediterranean agricultural products?

Hitherto the entire EEC agricultural system has been based on subsidies for northern products -- cereals, milk, butter, sugar, and so forth. Initially southern products were not taken into account. A start must be made on a serious consideration of this, otherwise the expansion will be meaningless.

EXPRESSO: The latest arguments about agricultural prices and the Falklands Islands in Brussels and the intense disputes which occurred might suggest that no further members should be brought in, after all, before a little order is created in the "European house...."

Chandernagor: As far as the British budgetary contribution is concerned, the problem is resolved in principle until the end of the year. The problem of the Community's revenue does indeed exist. I believe that there can be no enlargement until that problem has been resolved.

So far revenue has been confined to 10 percent of value-added tax. It is inconceivable to undertake an enlargement if we remain with that value-added tax. Hence the problem of revenue will have to be resolved before the enlargement. I believe that it will be better that way, because the Community cannot continue to live in the current precarious financial situation.

EXPRESSO: As regards unanimity in the Community's decisions, what influence can a small country like Portugal have within the EEC some day, if the so-called Luxembourg Compromise comes to be systematically rejected and decisions are made with a simple majority?

Chandernagor: You know, we attach great importance to the Luxembourg Compromise. But the problem which arose some days ago about the issue of agricultural prices was not a problem concerning the principle of the Luxembourg Compromise but concerning the proper or improper use which can be made of that compromise.

The compromise enables a state to say at a certain point that it refuses to vote on any matter if its vital, fundamental interests are at stake. When the creation of that compromise was envisaged -- it was France which proposed it in 1966 -- we believed that it was a rule of conduct which would safeguard the Community's functioning, because if a Community decision was made against a member country's vital interests, the Community would not endure. But if we started to use that rule improperly, then it would become an instrument of blocking and destabilization.

A few days ago, we were confronted with an attitude which we deemed improper and which involved, with regard to a particualr problem -- that of the agricultural prices, which should be fixed by a certain date -- one of the member countries attempting to block the application on the agricultural prices until its budgetary contribution problem was solved. It was no longer a matter of the agricultural prices problem but of something else. From that time onward, the Community could be paralyzed at will. I do not deem that possible.

MARCHAIS INTERVIEWED IN HUNGARIAN NEWSPAPER

LD051818 Budapest MTI in English 1710 GMT 5 Jun 82

[Text] Budapest, 5 Jun (MTI) -- NEPSZABADSAG today carries an interview with Georges Marchais, general secretary of the French Communist Party.

In connection with the 24th congress of his party, Marchais pointed out that it took place in a basically different situation when Communist ministers can be seen in the French Government after a gap of 30 years.

"That is why our congress dealt with a precise outlining of the socialist perspective as suggested by us," recalled Marchais. "The path proposed by us in the unity of action for modifying social and political conditions, progressing from one achievement to another towards a transformation of society indispensable for getting out of the grave crisis. This, therefore, is a democratic path that always respects the popular majority's will."

Marchais pointed out that with the work done inside the government, advance has been made in a good direction in various spheres, though serious social and economic problems have remained, particularly in the domain of employment and the purchasing power. The Communists are working to solve these as well as for an increased say in every sphere by workers in their own affairs.

"Workers' intervention is indispensable. The class struggle did not come to an end in France a year ago. On the contrary, the big capital and the rightist forces are doing everything to impede the realization of the new policies and they seek to exploit every hitch to create conditions for their return to power." In Marchais' view, the most urgent task to thwart the above designs is to augment the unity and coherence of popular forces.

With reference to nationalizations, the PCF general secretary established: The resolved expansion of the state sector is not as extensive as deemed necessary by the Communists. "We invariably hold that further nationalizations are indispensable for solving the country's grave problems." He went on to emphasize that even under its present boundaries the state sector constitutes an important sphere of the country's economic life.

"Novel economic orientations are required for imparting a new impulse to the economic life. Towards this new rights and possibilities for intervention must be ensured to workers. This applies to state enterprises as much as to the other companies and factories in the country," said Georges Marchais.

In his interview to the central organ of the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party, Georges Marchais recalled that the PCF congress paid special attention to the glaring social inequalities existing in France. "We did not deny the development registered in the past 20 years and which has rendered France a great and modern country. What I wanted to demonstrate in contrast were the things which, under the capitalist rule, developed limitedly, mutilatedly or went into the wrong direction, and to point out that the grave crisis resulted from and was enhanced by this rule."

As Marchais established, the deep crisis of French society "stems from the ever greater hitches of capitalist system, from that it is incapable of solving the most decisive problems of social development." He went on to quote the observations made by the congress that "the time is up for capitalism and socialism is the order of the day." He added, "what the above means today in France is that the living standard and goods that conform to our age and which a modern country is capable of giving, should be made accessible to everyone and not just to a minority."

Going on to international questions, Georges Marchais stated, "The question of peace is of primary importance today." Referring to the growing demand for peace the world over, particularly in Europe, he mentioned, "This huge world public movement has considerably contributed to the start of negotiations on the limitation and reduction of Eurostrategic missiles as well as to that a meeting between Brezhnev and Regan can be forseen. We welcome these initial results. But it must go further. In order to frustrate the manoeuvers of the pro-armement forces, greater pressure should be exerted by the masses on them." Then he went on to speak of the French inititives and actions aimed at the above.

Thereafter Marchais dealt with the PCF stand on existing socialism. "Our stand is clear. First of all, the nature of the socialist countries evokes no doubts in us. The changes that have taken place in the countries progressing on socialist path have had a favourable impact on the peoples concerned and on entire humanity. For example, important results have been registered in living standard, ensuring full employment, public education, public health despite the fact that they started from a low level. In this respect we have a particularly illuminating example from Hungary. 'The country of three million beggars' some decades back, has now become a socialist state whose successes have to be recognized, even by its opponents. Of course, this is not to overlook that at issue is not a straight, trouble-free process, but one in which at times advancements alternate with fiascoes."

Continuing, the PFC general secretary said, "True, at present the socialist countries have to face difficulties, but these hardships and contradictions cannot give cause for a caricatural assessment. On the contrary, their causes must be studied seriously. These, to our mind, are linked, on the one hand, to the international environment, namely to the fallout of capitalism's crisis, and, on the contradictions emanating from socialist societies' own development.

"Concluding from the above, we are of the opinion that on the basis of the achievements already registered and the transformation already attained, for their advancement these divergent level societies must tackle the principal questions of democratization of social, economic and political life.

"This is not to suggest that we want to sermonize, but this question interests us most far-reachingly. That is why the French Communists follow with great attention the innovations under way in the socialist countries for solving the emerging problems.

"Finally, our assessment of the socialist countries takes into account their weight and impact in the world: The socialist countries are decisive factors in defending peace, in ensuring peaceful co-existence, issues whose great significance I have already emphasized," concluded Georges Marchais' interview to NEPSZABADSAQ.

PS, PCF SPLIT MUNICIPAL ELECTION SYSTEM

PM071021 Paris LE MATIN in French 28 May 82 p 2

[Didier Buffin report: "PS Warning to PCF Over Municipal Elections"]

[Text] There has been a tactical change in the PS' attitude toward the PCF. The Socialist leadership yesterday published a document stating that if the Communists refuse two-round proportional municipal elections with the advantage going to the majority, the PS will fight the first-round battle alone. The threat is a clear one. For its part, the Left Radical Movement complains of the absence of consultation in preparing the electoral reform plan.

It is a take-it-or-leave-it situation. This is the basic message which the PS leadership intended to issue yesterday, the final negotiations with the PCF on the municipal elections having ended in an acknowledgment of disagreement. Jean Poperen, the PS' second in command and chief of electoral matters, Paul Quiles, Marcel Debarge, Bertrand Delanoe and Roger Fajardie (not only PS national secretary but also a long-time close aid of Pierre Mauroy and an expert in electoral matters) published a somewhat solemn statement in which the PS attempted to set matters straight.

It explains that the aim of the municipal election reform is to ensure a better representation of the minorities, to "establish a clear majority that will enable our municipalities to be governed," to increase the number of city councillors (by 15-20 percent) and to unify the voting method for all cities (mostly cities of over 5,000 inhabitants.

Under such conditions the PS considers it desirable to introduce "a two-round system involving the representation of the various currents above a threshold of 5 percent of the votes cast and with a major advantage to [a forte prime a] the majority list." This was the system advocated by Gaston Deferre to the Council of Ministers Wednesday, which conflicts with the idea of the PCF, which favors a completely proportional system with one round and joint lists everywhere. It was on these two divergent positions that the Socialists and Communists split Tuesday evening.

It was then that the PS hinted at a threat: "Either we keep to the present, entirely majority system, perhaps slightly modified, or we adopt complete proportionality." According to the PS, the system envisaged by the PCF implies that "each party has its own list." The PS, "France's number one party," therefore considers it necessary to present itself as such to the voters. Jean Poperen asserted that "it cannot be claimed that we want both a proportional system and coalition lists." Bearing in mind its substantial electoral losses since 1977, lack of unity in the first round would be extremely damaging for the PCF.

Nevertheless, the PS points out that its objective for 1983 is a union. It therefore advocates within the framework of a two-round election "combined lists from the first round," but the composition of these lists would take into account "the local situation, the record of joint administrations and the results of previous elections." In all cases joint lists would be prepared for the second round on the basis of first-round results.

This sudden tactical hardening with respect to any negotiations may be suprising, since as late as Wednesday morning the PS leadership was trying to temper the situation. But after that came the Council of Ministers session (at which a roundtable discussion took place) when the Communist ministers were able to express themselves. It is difficult to believe that the PS leadership took this decision without the Elysee Palace's approval. Does the latter believe that the PCF is willing to accept anything, as long as it is lured by the prospect of joint lists in the first round? The two parties will meet 10 June.

What will the PCF do if such a plan becomes official? Will it approve the draft to be submitted to Parliament in July at the latest? "If it abstains," one PS leader said yesterday, "it will be difficult to preach joint lists in the first round in Socialist sectors."

NEWSMAN ARRESTED; EXPELLED FROM ARGENTINA

PM071009 Paris LE FIGARO in French 3 Jun 82 p 1

[Text] Jacques Lesinge, LE FIGARO special correspondent in Buenos Aires, where he had been covering the Falklands conflict since the start, was arrested by Argentine police yesterday morning and imprisoned at National Security Headquarters. He was told that an expulsion order had been issued against him for undermining state security. He was then taken to the airport and put on a plane for Paris.

No explanation was given for a decision which is completely contrary to the most elementary rules of international relations. LE FIGARO protests with the greatest vehemence against such a violation of freedom of information and notes that, by using such methods, the Argentine junta is harming itself much more than it is embarrassing our newspaper.

Moreover, France's ambassador in Buenos Aires, Mr Paolini, has protested strongly to the Argentine Foreign Ministry.

SPADOLINI ON VERSAILLES 'SUBSTANTIAL AGREEMENT'

AU051938 Rome ANSA in English 1935 GMT 5 Jun 82

[Text] Versailles, 5 Jun (ANSA) -- Italian Premier Giovanni Spadolini said here this evening that the seven industrialized nations taking part in the economic summit here have reached "substantial agreement... To share responsibility for increasing the stability of the internatonal monetary system."

Speaking to newsmen on one of the key issues handled here by the industrialized powers, the Italian head of government said that this agreement will "involve the cooperation of all the nations and all monetary authorities."

"The objective will be reached through the convergence of economic policy applied in the various nations," he contined.

Spadolini disclosed that "there is an orientation towards utilizing, alongside this approach, greater recourse to interventions in the monetary markets" and referred to intentions to create an ad hoc committee of the Seven, plus the European Economic Community and the International Monetary Fund, to examine various ways and means for this intervention on the markets.

"We are prepared, through these steps and decisions, to strengthen the spirit and practice of international cooperation, which must be based on significant multilateral mechanisms."

In this context, the premier named the European Monetary System, which represents, for Italy, "the most valid point of reference."

Referring to a statement by the American treasury secretary, Donald Regan, denying intentions to leave Italy and Canada out of the study group, Spadolini said there is now no shadow of doubt of economic and political discrimination against Italy.

NO SERIOUS INCIDENTS REPORTED IN ROME PEACE MARCHES

AU051945 Rome ANSA in English 1925 GMT 5 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 5 Jun (ANSA) -- Hundreds of thousands of peace marchers converged on Rome today for a mass demonstration on a route leading past the Soviet and United States Embassies on the eve of a short visit to Rome of American President Ronald Reagan.

The marchers shouted slogans and carried placards bearing statements opposing nuclear war, nuclear weapons and in favor of self-determination.

The peace rally was sponsored by the Communist Party and other leftwing alignments. The government Socialist Party and the opposition radical party disassociated themselves from the initiative.

Except for scuffles between supporters of Ayatollah Khomeini of Iran and those who oppose his regime, the march came off without incident.

MAJOR RESHUFFLING OF BALSEMAO CABINET ANNOUNCED

LD060630 Lisbon Domestic Service in Portuguese 0000 GMT 6 Jun 82

[Text of note from the Presidency of the Portuguese Council of Ministers on the ministerial reshuffle]

[Text] Prime Minister Dr Pinto Balsemao has decided to carry out a reshuffle of his cabinet. This reshuffle takes place before the revision of the constitution and is aimed at enhancing the government's effectiveness for the second half of 1982. It was sought to carry out the reshuffle without delay in order to prevent the erosive effects of speculation on this subject.

In the area of education -- of great national importance -- it was necessary to deal with the current exam period and at the same time begin an early reorganization with a view to the beginning of the next academic year.

In the area of labor the prime minister set in motion the national employment plan in dialogue with the social partners. Labor is also a sector of the utmost importance in which legislative adjustments are necessary with a view to fighting unemployment.

In the area of foreign policy, we are currently going through a period of intensive diplomatic activity concerning both our entry into the EEC and the development of negotiations with the United States on the Lajes Base. Furthermore, we must strengthen our position in NATO following Spain's entry into the organization. It is also important that we should increase our cooperation with the African states, to which end a new secretariat of state is being created.

In the area of relations with the Assembly, the process of revising the constitution requires adaptation of ordinary legislation in the preparation of which the government has an important role to play.

In the area of housing, we are entering a period of greater financial flexibility which will enable us to put into practice previously prepared legislative and political measures.

The general line of the government's policy remains unchanged. The Social Democratic Party will maintain its position as the principal party in the Democratic Alliance and in the government; the number of its secretaries of state has been increased.

The government's strategy remains unchanged both with regard to its relations with other organs of sovereignty and to those with the opposition forces.

In terms of Paragraph G of Article 136 of the Constitution, the following are relieved of their duties:

Assistant to the prime minister: Dr Fernando Monteiro do Amaral;
Minister of foreign affairs: Dr Andre Goncalves Pereira;
Minister of education and universities: Dr Vitor Pereira Crespo;
Minister of labor: Dr Antonio Jost Barros Queiros Martins.

It has also been deemed opportune to replace Secretary of State of Housing and Urbanization Dr Jorge Lopes Cardoso de Andrade [name as heard]. Secretary of State of the Presidency of the Council of Ministers Dr Marcelo Rebelo de Sousa, and Under Secretary of State of the Presidency of the Council of Ministers Dr Maria Luisa Libano Monteiro Enes are likewise relieved of their duties.

In terms of Paragraph 3 of Article 189 of the Constitution, with the departure of the respective ministers, the secretaries of state for foreign affairs, emigration and Portuguese communists, higher education, education and youth, schools administration, labor, and employment, respectively, Dr Leonardo Duarte Mathias, Dr Jose Adriano Vitorino, Dr Alberto Correia Ralha [name as heard], Dr Antonio Hortensio Pina, Dr Alexandre Ferreira Borrego, Dr Joaquim Fernandes Marques and Dr Luis Alberto Ferreira Morales will likewise cease their functions.

In terms of Paragraph 2 of Article 190 and for the purposes of Paragraph G of Article 136 of the Constitution, the following are appointed for government posts:

Minister of foreign affairs: Dr Vasco Futscher Pereira;
Minister of education and universities: Dr Joao Jose Frausto da Silva;
Minister of labor: Dr Luis Alberto Ferreira Morales;
Minister for parliamentary affairs: Dr Marcelo Nuno Duarte Rebelo de Sousa;
Secretary of state for the Presidency of the Council of Ministers: Dr Maria Leonor Couceiro Bizarro Beleza de Mendonca Tavares;
Secretary of state for foreign affairs: Dr Paulo Marques;
Secretary of state for emigration and Portuguese communities: Dr Jose Andriano Gago Vitorino;
Secretary of state for cooperation and development: Dr Luis Fontoura;
Secretary of state for higher education: Dr Alberto Rolao Dias;
Secretary of state for labor: Dr Joaquim Fernandes Marques;
Secretary of state for schools administration: Dr Joao de Deus Pinheiro;
Secretary of state for employment: Dr Artur Mota;
Secretary of state for housing and urbanization: Dr Carlos Mascarenhas de Almeida;
Under secretary of state for the Presidency of the Council of Ministers;
Dr Albino de Azevedo Soares.
Under secretary of state assistant for the minister of parliamentary affairs:
Dr Maria Luisa Falcao Libano Monteiro Enes.

FINLAND

GENERAL CITES NATIONAL SECURITY POLICY, MEASURES

LD041358 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 0655 GMT 4 May 82

[Speech by Lt Gen Jaako Valtanen, commander of the Southern Finland Military District, on defense forces' flag day in Lahti; live]

[Text] Soldiers: We live in the midst of uncertainty caused by recurring international disturbances and armed clashes. We are concerned about our security and our future. Therefore it is easy to understand the activities with which different circles of the public wish to arouse extensive public opinion against war and for peace. Indeed, there is no acceptable alternative to peace in a world of nuclear weapons.

We in Finland have for several decades been working determinedly in different ways to lessen the danger of war, especially of nuclear war, in the world. The promotion of international understanding and peace-keeping operations in the United Nations as well as initiatives in the field of disarmament have characterized our policy. We have striven to prevent beforehand the development of situations in which the security of our fatherland may be threatened.

Our international position is respected and stable. The world around us shows, however, that despite our efforts, clashes and even distant events will affect our lives. Therefore, the livelihoods of our citizens and the safeguarding of their living conditions in exceptional circumstances require us to pay continued attention to developing national defense. Measures include improving legislation on directives for exceptional conditions, strengthening our self-sufficiency in foodstuffs and our stores of liquid fuels, raw materials and medical drugs, as well as eliminating defects in civil defense. The fulfillment of the needs of the defense forces is also a part of the security activity which takes into account the prevailing reality and the many alternative situations to it.

We want to preserve peace, we want to preserve our national right to self-determination and our freedom. We also want to preserve our credibility as a friendly neighbor, adhering to its obligations. We want to remain outside all conflicts and we want others, too, to know that we shall not allow our country to be used as a path of attack or for other war purposes.

The credibility of our security policy still lies in the practical measures of different degrees which we, as a nation, are striving to manage in predictable international situations. Our measures also give outward signals as to the long-term nature and stability of our security policy. In order to prevent wars, and especially wars which may be fought with nuclear weapons, we must work ceaselessly. We cannot, for fear of them, neglect the measures to prepare to safeguard the all-round living conditions of our own nation.

For the defense forces it is a question of a credible military performance. Credibility does not mean seeking comparison with the military strength of the big powers but only sufficient ability to perform those limited tasks set for the defense forces. A firm foundation exists for our system based on general conscription. Your service motivation, conscripts and reservists, is also high and the citizens' will to defend the country is strong. Despite the short service period our level of training is good and will stand up to severe international comparison.

In the development of our material performance ability we have, in accordance with the recommendations of the parliamentary defense review committees, achieved improvements, especially in air and naval defense. We hope that the obvious defects of the land forces and the outdating of some sections can be put right in accordance with the recommended and planned, though very slow, timetable.

The increasingly active peace movement and national defense are not in conflict with each other. The creation of all-round security for our country and nation is work for peace in the practical sense of the word. Peace will safeguard our independence and release our forces both for the development of our own conditions and for helping other nations. Peace around us and peace among us is a valuable achievement for us. It must be cared for with all means available to us. Soldiers, let us raise three cheers for our good fatherland.

EDITORIAL LAUDS KOIVISTO'S FOREIGN POLICY SPEECH

PM041039 Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 28 May 82 p 4

[Jan-Magnus Jansson editorial: "Ugh: I Have Spoken"]

[Text] Speculations in the Norwegian and U.S. press about changes or at least shifts in emphasis in Finnish foreign policy led immediately to a series of commentaries in a large number of newspapers here in Finland, reacting against the conclusions being drawn abroad from the presidential changeover. You could talk of a gut reaction among us Finns to assertions which, even though they were put forward in a friendly and understanding spirit, called the continuity of our policy into question. In our own editorial (21 May), we expressed the possibility that the foreign commentaries had confused a change in style with a change in political substance. However, we reached the conclusion that the accumulation of claims of foreign policy changes is a political fact in itself and that "only clear statements from our foreign policy leadership can dispel possible misconceptions."

Prof Osmo Apunen, the Social Democrat who generally finds himself holding different views from the rest of the party, also said in his column in the party's main organ that at times in his statements Koivisto had indulged in "unnecessary vagueness." For this reason he called for a short and pithy declaration from "the chief himself" which could be rounded off in the manner of Indian chiefs: "Ugh. I have spoken." The unanimous reaction in the press obviously contributed to the president's and, presumably, the Foreign Ministry's swift action. The chief's speech called for was delivered by the president at the Eduskunta jubilee celebrations and it left nothing more to be desired in the way of clarity, precision and reaffirmation of our traditional political line.

"I would like to stress most clearly that the foundations for our foreign policy remain unchanged and that they will not be changed during my term of office." This is the wording of the central sentence in Koivisto's speech, which has something of the weight of Kekkonen's "oath of neutrality" from 1961. The clarification Koivisto gave of his attitude to the nuclear-free zone was also extremely precise. What was striking was the remark that in practice the Nordic region always has been a nuclear-free zone and that we should work to both prevent "negative changes" and to realize the zone proposal. The former -- preventing negative changes -- is in practical, diplomatic terms at least as important as the more long-term work for a nuclear-free zone established in international law.

Anyone who asserts categorically that nothing in our basic foreign policy line has changed or will change easily lays himself open to the suspicion that he wants to suffocate the incipient foreign policy debate in Finland. Koivisto wants to avoid such suspicions. He says that he has nothing against "an academic discussion" surrounding foreign policy. He adds that a foreign policy discussion today can take place with less emotional involvement than in the past, since all are agreed on the fundamental decisions that have been made. This latter statement is undoubtedly well-phrased. It remains to be seen whether the president's speech will be enough to disperse the speculations about changes in foreign policy. But now there is at least a concise and authoritative formulation to fall back on in the debate.

Finally, one cannot help pointing out the ironic nature of recent developments. In recent years there has been a feeling that an important task has been to dismiss exaggerated claims of "Finlandization." Now, exactly the opposite is true. That is, we are now taking issue with too-sweeping statements about the "liberation" which is said to be setting its stamp on life in Finland, in the field of foreign policy, too. Times change, but the problems remain.

THATCHER COMMENTS ON U.S. FALKLANDS VOTE AT UN

LD061728 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1711 GMT 6 Jun 82

[By Chris Moncrieff, PA chief political correspondent, in Versailles]

[Text] Mrs Thatcher said tonight that if the United States' attempt to switch its vote on the UN Security Council Falklands resolution was all she had to worry about, "Then I would be a very lucky woman."

And she dismissed any suggestion that the about-turn by the United States had any affect on Anglo-American relations. The prime minister was addressing a press conference at the close of the seven-nation economic summit in Versailles.

She said that what mattered to her were the troops fighting in the Falklands rather than "a load of words."

"Anglo-American relations are excellent. We saw what happened. We saw there was an attempt to change the vote from a veto to abstension.

"My attitude is this — if the only thing I have to worry about is this I should be a very lucky woman. As it is, I have far more important things to concern myself about."

Mrs Thatcher said her concern was about events in the Falklands. The events of early Saturday morning when the United States tried to change its vote had not affected in any way the staunchness of American support for Britain, she said.

"She was staunch and she is staunch. Relations are good." She urged reporters: "Don't blow it up. I have seen some of the press today and some of the words did not come out of my mouth.

"I have far more important things to think about." Asked if there was any further news from the Falklands, Mrs Thatcher replied: "It is foggy in all senses of the word."

Speaking of all her colleagues at the summit she said: "Those people who do support us here have said so and will continue to support us. They could not have made their views more clear than they have and we could not have received more help from them in sanctions, and in a logistic and material sense.

"We need all that help. That means more to me and those fighting down there than a load of words."

Earlier, Mrs Thatcher said there had been long discussions about the Falklands during the summit. And she described the statement at the end by President Mitterrand of France as "forthright" in support of Britain's position.

"All nations at this summit were absolutely staunch in recognising that Britain had been the victim of Argentine aggression. We must uphold international law. And we must retain self-determination."

Finally, she described M. Mitterrand's statement as "a splendid summing-up of total unity and solidarity."

WHITEHALL FEARS ARGENTINE ARMS ACQUISITIONS

LD041710 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1655 GMT 4 Jun 82

[By Robert Hutchinson, PA defense correspondent]

[Text] Some countries have been supplying Argentina with sophisticated weaponry, including air-launched missiles, it was disclosed in London tonight.

Argentina is said to be making strenuous and desperate efforts to boost its military arsenal as the seige of Port Stanley is stepped up. The implication clearly is that once the Falklands are repossessed, Argentina will continue to mount hit-and-run air attacks on the islands garrison or on task force ships.

Whitehall sources said tonight that it could not be ruled out that more air-launched missiles -- like the dealy Exocet -- have been supplied to the junta. The officials said they had reason to be concerned that the Argentines may have acquired a number of Israel's air-launched Gabriel anti-ship missiles, which can be fired from the Mirage fighter bomber.

Some spares and equipment have been supplied by Latin American neighbours, apparently including a small number of Mirages. The officials said they were not worried at this stage about any Russian involvement on the Argentine side.

TROOPS POISED TO ATTACK; SUMMIT BACKS POLICY

LD042002 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1933 GMT 4 Jun 82

[Excerpts] In London it was stressed that the damp, wet and foggy weather in the Falklands would not delay any attack on the 7,000-strong Argentine garrison penned in around Port Stanley. Correspondents on the Falklands reported that Royal Marine Commandos have been attacking the outer ring of the Argentine defences.

Reconnaissance squads were sent in and the enemy subjected to heavy artillery fire to probe their positions in readiness for the commando rifle companies to move it. The commandos' commanding officer said he was not going to "blunder into a hornet's nest for lack of preparation." He added: "let us finish what promises to be the last lap with good style without futile and unnecessary casualties."

Whitehall sources said tonight that the Argentines will not surrender without a fight.

The bad weather has restricted air activity, which has allowed supplies to be ferried in to the British troops through the San Carlos bridgehead unimpeded by any Argentine bomber raids. But it has delayed movement of men and equipment to British positions.

The British troops are now using captured 20mm anti-aircraft guns to improve their air defenses. There are still some helicopters and Pucara ground attack aircraft on the islands but most of the Pucaras at Stanley are believed to be damaged or destroyed.

Three or four Argentine prisoners died and 11 were wounded in the Goose Green munitions explosion earlier this week, it was disclosed tonight. The Ministry of Defense in London had announced earlier that there were no British casualties in the incident.

Mr Pym told a press conference in Versailles tonight that President Mitterrand of France had given Mrs Thatcher the same clear assurance as President Reagan -- that his country would not stand in the way of any necessary action to retake the Falklands.

And Mr Pym said he hoped Argentina would undertake to cease fire and withdraw "immediately or within a very few hours so that no further lives are lost."

Mrs Thatcher met President Mitterrand at Versailles after a helicopter ride from Paris. She was said to regard the heartening response from the two presidents as of the greatest possible significance.

Mrs Thatcher achieved a considerable tactical victory within a few hours of arriving in France by getting these assurances from the United States and France. Mr Pym said: "In the talks I had with Mr Haig it is fair to say there was a very close identity of interest and perception."

He stressed that Britain was not trying to humiliate Argentina. "We are out to repossess the islands. The United States and France have given us very robust support and minds are now moving towards how stability can be restored," he said.

"The prime minister, after her talks with both presidents, feels even more reassured than she was before in the expressed determination of support for Britain in both countries."

Asked whether the ultimate decision on further action lay entirely with Britain's military commanders in the field, Mr Pym replied: "The military commanders have quite clear instructions."

Mr Pym was questioned about reports that President Reagan had today asked Mrs Thatcher to stop the assault on Port Stanley so there could be further negotiations. He replied firmly: "The President made no such request to the prime minister, but we all hope that Argentina will obey the resolution and that they will undertake to cease fire and withdraw immediately or within a very few hours so that no further lives are lost. No such request has been made either by President Reagan or President Mitterrand."

More Troops on Island

LD061830 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1817 GMT 6 Jun 82

[By Robert Hutchinson, PA defense correspondent]

[Text] British troops on the Falklands have been reinforced by elements of the 3,000-strong 5 Infantry Brigade, the defence minister confirmed tonight. The first advance units landed a week ago at the Port San Carlos beachhead after transferring from their requisitioned troopship the QE2 to the amphibious assault ships Fearless and Intrepid, it is understood.

The brigade, which comprises a battalion each of Scots and Welsh Guards and Gurkhas, are now moving into position along the British lines facing Port Stanley.

ITN reporter, Michael Nicholson, who is with the troops overlooking Port Stanley, told in a despatch tonight of operations of "extraordinary daring" which cannot be revealed. He also confirmed the arrival of the men of 5 Brigade.

And another despatch, by Independent Radio News reporter Kim Sabedo, reported that a group of Falkland Islanders are being held against their will in a house at Fox Bay, West Falkland. Sabedo said the Fox Bay settlement residents, who total between 40 and 50, have been locked in the settlement manager's house for more than a month.

"The message was that all those living in the settlement of Fox Bay when the Argentines invaded had been detained under lock and key in the manager's house, he said.

"Some 30 women and children and all those males not considered essential to keep things bearable for the Argentine troops were crammed together into one house and have been thus for more than a month."

Nicholson's despatch supported speculation that British troops are now poised to launch an all-out attack on Port Stanley. "The British push is on," he said.

"The men of the Fifth Infantry Brigade have now completed the second Falklands D-day landing successfully and have already begun their move forward. They are advancing towards Port Stanley in a pincer movement with the 3rd Command Brigade.

"Together, these two armies have isolated Stanley and there is nowhere for the Argentines to go. Another batch of pamphlets has been dropped from British planes offering them a surrender with dignity, a chance to avoid further bloodshed. "The British military here are now waiting for an answer from the Argentine garrison commander."

Meanwhile, about 1,000 Argentine prisoners were today being put on a British ship off the Falklands as part of their journey back to Argentina. The men, captured during the re-taking of Goose Green and Darwin, were being embarked on the Norland -- bearing distinctive "prisoner of war" signs -- in Falkland South.

And [figure indistinct] survivors from the lost Royal Navy warships the destroyer HMS Coventry and the Type-21 frigates HMS Antelope and Ardent, will arrive back in Britain on Friday on goard the QE2.

"She is expected to dock at around noon at Southampton's passenger terminal," said a Defence Ministry spokesman tonight. "Families are being informed of the arrival of the ship and will be notified later about detailed arrangements for meeting her."

The QE2 will not be needed for further operations in the Falklands' conflict and will be returned to her owners, Cunard, "as soon as possible."

SAS, SBS LANDED ON FALKLANDS IN EARLY MAY

LD051742 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1718 GMT 5 Jun 82

[Text] British special forces were active on the Falklands for almost three weeks before the major attack on Port San Carlos, it was disclosed today. During that time they destroyed enemy aircraft, blew up ammunition dumps, marked out a landing zone and set up observation points overlooking the Argentines.

EVENING STANDARD reporter Max Hastings in a dispatch gives a vivid account of the vital undercover work carried by both the Special Air Services and Special Boat Squadron. He reports: "SAS and SBS operations on the Falklands mainland began at the beginning of May.

"Their officers are quick to say that it was the Royal Artillery forward gunnery observers and not their own men who can claim the credit for having been the first British troops ashore. But while the observers were extracted within a few hours when their jobs was done, the SAS parties endured weeks on end of living motionless under foul weather conditions within sight of the enemy.

"You must remember that nowadays the Falklands have become everybody's playground, but at that stage they were still regarded as the other side of the moon," as one officer put it.

"The worst thing for our people was not being able to move. That's pretty miserable in these conditions."

According to Max Hastings, the Special forces paved the way for the British attack when on May 11, eight men were landed with canoes on the Falklands mainland opposite Pebble Island, a key Argentine air base.

Hampered by bad weather, they finally managed to cross the channel to the island two nights later and established observation points looking down on the Argentines. They also marked out a landing zone for 45 men of the squadron to land with a naval officer to attack the Pebble Island base.

"Because they landed late, they had just half an hour in which to destroy enemy aircraft leaving time to escape before first light," said Mr Hastings. "A plan for one troop to make contact with civilians in the settlement had to be abandoned.

"Instead they provided cover against interference from enemy reinforcements while the rest planted charges on Argentine aircraft and dumps within a moment's response from the garrison until they began their retreat." Two men were then slightly wounded, but, he said they "achieved a perfect success," destroying 11 aircraft.

On the night of the major British amphibious landing, 40 men of the SAS carried out "harrassing attacks" towards Darwin and Goose Green while men of the SBS attacked Fanning Head, during which they shot down a Pucara ground attack plane.

On the SAS operation Max Hastings said: "Their orders were to make as much noise as possible without engaging the enemy at close quarters. They were therefore carrying an enormous weight of mortar and machine gun ammunition.

"They walked for 20 hours loaded with around 80 lbs a head. One of those who took part described it as 'the toughest hack I've ever done with SAS'."

ARGENTINA USING TRANSPORT PLANES AS BOMBERS

LD071220 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1153 GMT 7 Jun 82

[Text] The Argentine Air Force has been using transport planes to try to bomb British positions on Mount Kent, overlooking Port Stanley, writes Derek Hudson of the YORKSHIRE POST in this pooled despatch. He says:

Now we wait for the final assault to reclaim Port Stanley. Batteries of guns airlifted in the Mount Kent area by Sea King helicopters have enemy positions well in their sights. Forward reconnaisance troops have pinpointed Argentine targets, such as troop concentrations and howitzers, which have received the attention of 56-pound British shells.

The Argentinians are trying to hit back. Last night they used Hercules transport planes on bombing missions near Mt Kent. A senior British officer said: "They must be getting short of bombers. They simply rolled bombs out of the back of the Hercs." Civilians have rallied to help the British with their logistics. An "anorak army" of local Falklanders works almost round the clock. Their Land Rovers and David Brown tractors slither, plough and splash through creeks, swamps and damp, coarse grasslands to deliver mortars, ammo and field rations.

INVESTIGATION INTO GOOSE GREEN EXPLOSION UNDERWAY

LD071044 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1033 GMT 7 Jun 82

[By Robert Hutchinson, PA Defense Correspondent]

[Text] The death toll of Argentine prisoners from last week's accidental explosion of munitions at Goose Green has risen to five, the Defence Ministry in London confirmed today. A spokesman said that three prisoners were killed outright in the explosion and two others subsequently died. Seven others were wounded and were receiving medical treatment. There were no British casualties in the explosion, which followed the capture of Goose Green by the 2nd Battalion, the Parachute Regiment.

A full investigation into the accident is now being carried out in accordance with Article 121 of the Geneva Convention. "No further details can be given until this investigation is completed," said the ministry spokesman. The board of inquiry, convened by commander land forces, Major General Jeremy Moore, is being conducted by an officer of the rank of major or lt colonel. His report will be sent to London for scrutiny by Defence Ministry lawyers. The findings will be passed to Argentina via Brazil.

KIPRIANOU LEAVES FOR ATHENS, U.S. VISITS 3 JUNE

NC031329 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1300 GMT 3 Jun 82

[Text] President Kiprianou left for Athens today for talks with Greek Prime Minister Papandreou. President Kiprianou was seen off at Larnaca Airport by House President Ladhas, who will be acting president of the republic during Mr Kiprianou's absence, members of the Council of Ministers, Greek Charge d'Affairs Sandis, the ambassadors of the United States and of the Soviet Union, the National Guard and the police chiefs and by other officials.

UN REPRESENTATIVE GOBBI DEPARTS FOR NEW YORK

NC061718 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1630 GMT 6 Jun 82

[Text] The UN secretary general's special representative in Cyprus, Gobbi, today departed for New York, where he will have consultations with the secretary general on the Cyprus problem. Gobbi will attend Perez de Cuellar's meeting with President Kiprianou, which will be held the day after tomorrow, Tuesday, at the United Nations, as well as the secretary general's meeting with Turkish Cypriot leader Denktas next Wednesday.

I DHIMOKRATIKI ON ILLEGAL VISITS BY U.S. MARINES

NC070656 Nicosia I DHIMOKRATIKI in Greek 7 Jun 82 p 1

[Text] According to authoritative reports from well-informed diplomatic sources with direct contact with the north [of Cyprus], U.S. Marines and technicians from the large bases in Southern Turkey illegally visit the occupied Cypriot areas as tourists. Some of these Americans were recently noticed in Kyrenia by Turkish Cypriots and they made no effort to conceal their identity.

As is known, the arrival of U.S. technicians was also noticed in the recent past and it appears they came specifically in connection with the surveillance radio station of Karavas. In one instance, U.S. diplomats from Ankara also illegally entered through Kyrenia, and this created a severe reaction and protest from Cyprus. It is unknown whether these U.S. Marines arrived with the knowledge of the authorities of the bases on which they serve or whether they spent their vacations in Kyrenia.

A few days ago the Americans made their appearance in a hotel and in some entertainment establishments in Kyrenia. They arrived on a Turkish "ferry boat" which connects the occupied north with Adana.

KLIRIDHIS INTERVIEWED ON DIALOGUE, OTHER TOPICS

NC060814 Nicosia O AGON in Greek 6 Jun 82 pp 1, 12

[Text] "The intercommunal talks will not bear fruit under the present conditions. However, even if they bear fruit, the results will not be satisfactory for the Greek Cypriot side," Democratic Rally [DISI] Chairman G. Kliridhis stressed in an exclusive interview with O AGON. AGON.

The DISI chairman also stressed that the minimum program overstresses the intercommunal talks procedure, creates a commitment for their continuation under the present unacceptable conditions and undermines the Greek initiatives to change the facts around these talks.

"The intensive diplomatic campaign which the Greek Government has recently undertaken in the international field, and particularly within the EEC, and NATO countries, is a correct and necessary initiative for the exercise of pressure on Turkey," Mr Kliridhis said and added:

"This initiative by the Greek Government aims at changing the facts around the dialogue as it has been conducted up to now, because it is now virtually a dialogue between Nicosia and Ankara."

Referring to our domestic front, Mr Kliridhis said this is broken into pieces for the following three basic reasons:

1. Mr Kiprianou has not realized that he should act as president of the republic and the entire people and not just as president of his party.

2. He has been committed to implement the policy of two, and only two, parties.

3. The Kiprianou policy clashes with the people's will, as this is expressed in various ways with regard to the Cyprus issue, Athens-Nicosia relations, foreign policy, economic and social sectors, state machinery and so forth.

Mr Kliridhis has said: "A relevant unity of the people can only exist in Cyprus if, through elections, a government emerges which can create the correct prerequisites for a truly multiform and multifront struggle for the salvation of Cyprus and solution of its problem -- a government that can jointly chart with the Greek Government a common policy on the national issue, take an interest in and resolutely promote a solution to the problems of all people's classes."

Mr Kliridhis severely criticized the AKEL-Democratic Party pairing and accused President Kiprianou of "having enslaved both the state authority and himself to the AKEL leadership."

The DISI chairman has pointed out that:

"This fact will unfavorably affect the efforts being exerted by the Greek Government to secure support in the Cyprus issue from its partners and allies. As it will also have unfavorable repercussions on the position of many other states toward Cyprus and will raise questions marks in states within the nonaligned sphere."

At other points of his interview, Mr Kliridhis criticized President Kiprianou for being more interested in AKEL's support at the presidential elections than maintaining harmonious relations with Athens.

COMMUNIQUE ISSUED ON DIKO GROUP VISIT TO SYRIA

NC060733 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1630 GMT 3 Jun 82

[Text] A communique issued on the talks held in Damascus between delegations of the Democratic Party [DIKO] and the ruling Syrian Ba'th Party, among other things, says the two sides stress the need for a Cyprus solution in accordance with the UN resolutions and call on the international community to pay more attention to the Cyprus issue and, particularly, to promoting the UN efforts toward finding a just solution.

The communique also condemns Israel's aggressive policy against Lebanon and the Palestinians as well as its terrorist activities in the occupied Arab lands. The communique adds that the Ba'th Party has accepted an invitation from DIKO for the visit of a delegation to Cyprus, the date of which will be fixed later.

PAPER ON HANDLING OF USSR'S CRITICISM OF BRANDT

NC041148 Nicosia I SIMERINI in Greek 4 Jun 82 p 1

[Text] For the third consecutive day the government has carefully covered Moscow for its opposition to any initiative or effort by former West German Chancellor Willy Brandt toward finding a Cyprus solution.

The government spokesman refrained last Tuesday and Wednesday from answering questions relevant to the Soviet stand on the Brandt case. Yesterday the spokesman gave a reply unrelated to the questions put to him, apparently to cover Moscow's opposition to the positions of the Cypriot and Greek Governments. Specifically, the following questions were put to the government spokesman last Tuesday:

1. "In its broadcast to Cyprus at 1730 GMT on 24 May, Moscow Radio came out against Mr Brandt's mediation in the Cyprus issue. Given the fact that Mr Papandreou has described Mr Brandt as a 'catalyst' and President Kiprianou agreed with this statement by reiterating the description of 'catalyst' for Mr Brandt in statements he made later, would you please inform us:

"(A) Does the government agree with Moscow Radio?

"(B) Does it [the government] continue to consider Mr Brandt as a catalyst?"

2. "Has Mr Kiprianou been in contact with Mr Brandt in recent months?"

3. "Has the Cyprus Government asked for a detailed briefing from our embassy in Moscow or explanations from the Soviet Embassy in Nicosia about the whole issue?"

The answer the government spokesman gave to the three questions yesterday is as follows:

"Mr Willy Brandt has never undertaken a mediation role, as he himself has repeatedly stated. What he has undertaken is to assist as a catalyst toward creating interest in and mobility for the Cyprus issue, particularly within Europe, with the aim of exerting pressure on Turkey. It is in this sense that the Cyprus Government has requested Mr Brandt to take interest in the Cyprus issue."

To a remark that his answer is not satisfactory at all because it has no relation whatsoever to the three questions that were put to him, the spokesman replied: "This is my answer. I have nothing else to say."

DENKTAS DEPARTS FOR TALKS IN NEW YORK 4 JUNE

TA041627 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 4 Jun 82

[Text] Turkish Federated State of Cyprus President Rauf Denktas departed Cyprus for New York by air today for talks with UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar. In a statement in Lefkosa [Nicosia] before his departure, Denktas recalled that until the UN secretary general met with the leaders of the two Cypriot communities in April, the Greek Cypriot side was intending to drag the Cyprus issue into an international platform. Noting that since the Geneva talks the Turkish Cypriot views expressed in order to defend their cause received a constructive reaction, Denktas said that even the Greek Cypriot negotiator could not deny the good will of the Turkish Cypriot side. Denktas reiterated that the talks would be held within the framework of agreements he reached with both Makarios and Kiprianou and which were discussed as the former UN Secretary General Waldheim's views. Denktas continued: According to this framework, the two parties are trying to express their own views and are seeking the grounds for a well intentioned solution. This process will continue. I believe this to be the purpose of our New York meetings.

Denktas is scheduled to meet with the UN secretary general on Wednesday, 9 June.

PAPANDREOU, ROGERS HOLD 'VERY USEFUL' CONFERENCE

NC041204 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 4 Jun 82

[Text] U.S. General Rogers, supreme commander of allies forces in Europe, was received this morning by Prime Minister and Defense Minister Andreas Papandreou, who held a conference with him that was described as very useful.

Earlier, General Rogers met with the chiefs of the general staffs of the army, navy and air force at the office of the National Defense General Staff Chief Admiral Deyiannis. He then called on the prime minister at his office where he met the two deputy defense ministers, Andonis Dhrosoyiannis and Yeoryios Petsos; Deputy Foreign Minster Yiannis Kapsis; and the prime minister's adviser, Khristos Makhairitsas.

After the conference, which lasted more than 1 hour, Mr Kapsis made the following statement: There was a very useful exchange of views during which all the questions were examined and all the positions of the two sides were explained with regard to Greece-NATO relations.

The U.S. general attended a working luncheon at the Pentagon.

Visit Ends

NC041550 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1400 GMT 4 Jun 82

[Excerpt] General Rogers ended his 2-day visit to our country and departed Athens at lunchtime.

PAPANDREOU-KIPRIANOU TALKS END; STATEMENT ISSUED

NC061304 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 6 Jun 82

[Text] Prime Minister Papandreou and President Kiprianou have concluded their talks and the following statement has been issued:

Because of President Kiprianou's imminent meeting with the UN secretary general in New York on 8 June and within the framework of the regular exchange of briefings and the close cooperation between the Greek and Cypriot Governments, the two delegations under President Kiprianou and Prime Minister Papandreou met on 4 and 5 June. Both governments reviewed the developments thus far in the course of the Cyprus issue within the framework of their cooperation and exchanged views on the prospects indicated.

The consultations between the two governments to examine the further promotion of the national issue will be continued after President Kiprianou's meeting with Mr Perez de Cuellar.

It must be pointed out that President Kiprianou and Prime Minister Papandreou have entrusted the two delegations, under Cypriot Foreign Minister Rolandhis and Greek Deputy Foreign Minister Kapsis, to continue their talks today. These talks ended with a meeting at the Foreign Ministry. The Cypriot side was represented by Ambassador in Athens Khatzimiltis and President Kiprianou's adviser Mikhailidhis, while the Greek side was represented by Ambassador in Nicosia Zakharakis and Director of the Prime Minister's Political Office Makhairitsas.

PRC'S HE YING MEETS WITH COUNTERPART IN ATHENS

NC042002 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1800 GMT 4 Jun 82

[Text] PRC Deputy Foreign Minister He ying made a stopover in Athens and paid a courtesy visit on Deputy Foreign Minister Karolos Papoulias. They had a very cordial and important talk, during which they exchanged views on international issues concerning the world community and bilateral issues. The Chinese deputy minister was accompanied by the PRC ambassador in Athens.

ATHENS REPORTEDLY TO CALL EUROMART MEETING ON LEBANON

NC070155 Paris AFP in English 0147 GMT 7 Jun 82

[Text] Athens, 7 Jun (AFP) -- Greece's socialist Government has decided to call for an emergency meeting of the Euromart foreign ministers to denounce the "Israeli invasion" of Lebanon, an official source said here last night.

The government issued a statement deploring that the Israeli air raids and invasion had "annihilated every effort for pacification of the region...."

Greece has followed a pro-Arab policy for years. After the socialists came to power last October, the new government gave diplomatic status here to the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO).

RIZOSPASTIS HITS GOVERNMENT'S U.S.-NATO POLICY

NC051612 Athens RIZOSPASTIS in Greek 5 Jun 82 p 2

[From the "Radical" column: "The Real Culprits"]

[Text] According to a government statement, Haig's arrival in Athens was followed by very daring violations of Greek airspace by Turkish aircraft, the most serious of late. Roger's arrival in Athens was followed by the Turkish military junta's decision to extend its Mediterranean and Black Sea territorial waters to 12 miles. The Turkish announcement was followed by threats from the Ankara junta that if Greece extends its Aegean territorial waters, Ankara will consider this a "reason for war." Both of these provocations against our country can neither be considered accidental nor irrelevant. On the contrary, they are directly related to Haig's and Rogers' comings and going to Ankara and Athens within the framework of the U.S. and NATO imperialist plans in exercising pressures of blackmail -- with Evren's fascist junta as the lever -- against Greece.

The very evident goals of pressures and threats are: Greece's full alignment with the U.S.-NATO imperialists' aggressive cold war policy. Therefore, the government's efforts to convince the Greek people that allegedly the provocative Haig-Rogers visits are "beneficial" and that the representatives of U.S. imperialism are showing "understanding" of our national issues are in vain.

It has been proved once again that the policy which the government is following to appease the imperialists by submitting to their demands is not leading to the solution of our national problems, but rather to their foundering and the strengthening of the ties of dependence and servitude.

ULUSU, TURKMEN DEPART FOR SAUDI ARABIA

TA041048 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 4 Jun 82

[Text] Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu left Istanbul by air for Saudi Arabia at 1050 today to attend the Islamic Conference Goodwill Committee meeting in Jidda. Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen will also attend the fourth round meetings of the committee along with Ulusu.

In a statement at Istanbul's Yesilkoy Airport before his departure, Ulusu recalled that the Islamic Peace Committee, which was established following a decision of the third Islamic summit conference held in At-Ta'if on 17-28 January 1981, met a few times in the past in an effort to end the war between Iran and Iraq -- two Islamic countries.

Ulusu said: The first meeting of the Islamic Peace Committee was held in March 1981 and the last one on 5 March 1982. Following the last meeting, Peace Committee President Guinea President Sekou Toure and Islamic Conference Secretary General Habib Chatti visited Tehran and Baghdad between 19 and 21 April. Mr Toure has now found it useful to reconvene the committee. The foreign minister and I are now leaving for Jidda following this invitation. You must appreciate that it is not possible at this stage to say anything further about the committee's work.

Replying to journalists' questions, Ulusu said that the United States is also exerting efforts to bring an end to the war between Iran and Iraq as soon as possible.

TRADE MINISTER CANTURK RETURNS FROM BULGARIA

TA041703 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1625 GMT 4 Jun 82

[Text] Istanbul, 4 Jun (AA) -- Trade Minister Kemal Canturk said in Edirne economic cooperation between Bulgaria and Turkey would be continued in the fields of industrial production, energy and mining, while data would be exchanged on tourism and agriculture.

At a press conference on his way back through this border city from talks with Bulgarian authorities in Sofia under the cooperation agreement of September 1975, Canturk announced Bulgarian Transport Minister Tsanov would be visiting Turkey on 6 July.

KUWAITI, YUGOSLAV TRADE MISSIONS IN TURKEY

TA041701 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1632 GMT 4 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 4 Jun (AA) -- A trade mission from Kuwait met with Deputy Premier Turgut Ozal and members of the National Chamber of Trade and Industry in Ankara, while another trade mission from Yugoslavia conferred with members of the chamber of trade in Istanbul.

Deputy Premier Turgut Ozal told chairman of the Kuwaiti Chamber of Trade and Industry (Abdul Aziz al-Sagar) his government attached special importance to relations with Kuwait within the framework of the relations with Arab and Moslem countries in general.

Head of the Yugoslavian team (Bozin Jovanovic) called for joint investment projects by the two countries.

ULUSU COMMENTS ON RDF, ARMENIAN MOVEMENT

GF061834 Kuwait AL-QABAS in Arabic 4 Jun 82 p 19

[Interview granted by Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu to AL-QABAS correspondent in Istanbul Salih al-Khuraybi -- date not given]

[Excerpts] [Question] After the military came to power, Arab-Turkish relations improved. In addition, there was greater interest on your part in the Middle East issue, in particular, and the issues of the Islamic world in general. Is this the new policy of Turkey in the next era?

[Answer] The Turkish foreign policy toward the Middle East is well-known to our Arab brethren. We view the Arab-Israeli dispute -- which threatens world stability and security and destabilizes the situation in the Middle East -- as the basic issue in the Middle East. The Palestinian issue is the crux of the Middle East issue. Turkey has always realized the need to reach a just, comprehensive and durable solution to the Middle East dispute. Turkey also sincerely supports the fraternal Arab countries and the Palestinian people in their just cause. Turkey's relations with the fraternal Arab and Islamic countries are developing in every field.

[Question] Some reports indicate that there is an understanding -- which the United States calls a "verbal pact" -- for the deployment of U.S. Rapid Deployment Force [RDF] in Turkey. Do you agree with this or deny it? If the United States should request deployment of "cruise" and "Pershing" missiles on Turkish territory, will Turkey agree?

[Answer] Turkey, as any other country, adopts the measures appropriate to its security. These measures have a defensive nature. Their aim is confronting foreign threats and self-defense, not aggression. I would like to stress one important point. This point is that Turkey will never be involved in any measure that threatens the security and interests of its fraternal Arabs. Whenever Turkey adopts any measure, it will take into consideration the interests and the security of the Arab countries so that this security and these interests will not be jeopardized. That is why the measures undertaken in Turkey have only defensive goals. Their goal is the defense of Turkey and this is not aimed against any other side. We believe that the security of the Arab countries is the responsibility of these countries alone not any other side. Turkey will not be a center for the RDF if the goal of these forces is to interfere in Arab Gulf affairs.

[Question] How does Ankara explain the attacks undertaken by the Armenian Liberation Army against its diplomats abroad? What concessions can it make in order to end terrorism?

[Answer] I am sorry to hear this from you. Are you asking about concessions? We will not offer any concessions. We do not offer concessions to terrorists and you know that we do not surrender to terrorism. We fight terrorism and do not offer concessions to terrorists. However, we believe that fighting terrorism with terrorism is a wrong method and that granting concessions to terrorists is a wrong method as well.

TURGUT OZAL VIEWS FOREIGN RELATIONS ISSUES

GF061419 Kuwait AL-QABAS in Arabic 5 Jun 82 p 17

[Interview granted by Turkish Deputy Prime Minister Turgut Ozal to AL-QABAS correspondent in Istanbul Salih al-Kuraybi -- date not given]

[Excerpt] [question] Do you think that President Reagan -- on the international level -- is interested in Turkey?

[Answer] Turkey is a member of NATO. When Turkey is strong, then it can carry out its responsibilities toward NATO. I believe that Reagan and Haig realize this. Our problems came from the Congress, where the Greek and the Israeli lobbies are very strong.

[Question] Do you feel, in Turkey, the burden of the "Soviet danger" following the latest events in Afghanistan and Poland?

[Answer] The possibility of a Soviet threat always exists. This is one of the reasons that prompted Turkey to join NATO.

[Question] A few days ago, Alexander Haig implicitly demanded that Turkey withdraw its troops from Cyprus. What is your comment on that?

[Answer] We do not comment on implicit statements. The Turkish troops entered Cyprus to protect the Turkish Cypriots. These forces will withdraw from the island once we are certain that they are out of danger. Right now, we see that they are still in danger.

ECEVIT IN COURT OVER DER SPIEGEL STATEMENT

NC041034 Paris AFP in English 1025 GMT 4 May 82

[Text] Ankara, 4 Jun (AFP) -- Turkish military authorities today adjourned until June 18, the trial of former social democratic Premier Bulent Ecevit who is accused of flouting a decree banning "controversial political statements" to the foreign press.

Mr Bulent was in court today in connection with a statement in English he sent to the West German newspaper DER SPIEGEL. At a first hearing on April 29, Mr Ecevit said his statement had been mistranslated into Turkish. Today no official translation had yet been received by the court.

Yesterday, Mr Ecevit was released after spending 54 days in prison after being cleared of suspicion that he gave an interview to the Norwegian daily ARBEIDERBLADET.

ANATOLIA REPORTS DEFENSE STATEMENT ON DISK TRIAL

TA041702 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1647 GMT 4 Jun 82

[Text] Istanbul, 4 Jun (AA) -- Chairman Abdullah Basturk of the Confederation of Revolutionary Labor Unions [DISK] told a military court he did not believe opposing the actions of a government should be taken as resisting the state.

In Friday's session of the trial of 52 DISK officers, Basturk explained the confederation did not have the right to call for a strike. He pointed out a 2-hour protest work stoppage conducted at the call of the DISK Executive Committee in March 1978 had been the subject of another concluded trial.

FIFTH PART OF THE TCP CENTRAL COMMITTEE PLENUM REPORT

TA041411 (Clandestine) Our Radio in Turkish to Turkey 0700 GMT 4 Jun 82

[Fifth installment of the Political Bureau report read by Turkish Communist Party Central Committee Secretary General Bilen at the Central Committee plenum; date not given -- read by announcer]

[Text] Comrades, the task of creating a strong anti-imperialist mass movement and a strong people's resistance against U.S. imperialism in Turkey is awaiting us in the coming period. It is clear that, above all, dependence on U.S. imperialism and NATO lie at the root of the deep problems currently facing our country. The U.S. imperialist policy of increasing tension and aggression also lies at the root of the dangers awaiting our country in the future.

As we have stated on numerous occasions, the junta would not have been able to intensify the pressure on our people to such an extent without the support of U.S. imperialists. The deployment of nuclear missiles in Turkey is the next item on the agenda after providing facilities to the U.S. Rapid Deployment Force [RDF] by the junta. The junta is heading towards becoming the tool of U.S. imperialism in the region. It is taking steps toward militarizing industry at the cost of totally ruining the economy. It is establishing political and military relations with reactionary regimes in the Middle East and exacerbating the tension with Greece. It is spreading the process of monopolization and militarism. The junta is stamping its influence on the state. This constitutes the internal [word indistinct] basis that pushes the country toward the adventurist goals of U.S. imperialism. In addition to transforming our country into a dangerous factor against peace, this situation also threatens our national security.

The junta is (?endangering) Turkey in order to consolidate its dictatorship. It is knowingly refusing the opportunity to save Anatolia -- with all its Turkish and Kurdish population and its historical monuments of civilization — from the precipice of a nuclear war that will destroy it. It is rejecting the peace proposals of the Soviet Union for the sake of the interests of the likes of Reagan.

All this shows that a Turkey that cannot rid itself of dictatorship and NATO cannot secure [word indistinct] a peaceful, just, free and [word indistinct] future. We are now calling on the millions of peace-loving (?patriots): If you want peace, struggle on its behalf against NATO, U.S. slavery and dictatorship. A free Turkey without NATO or the junta will become one of the chief elements of peace in the region. [sentence indistinct] If you want employment, bread and land, then oppose membership in NATO, which causes the lion's share of national funds to be allocated to arms expenditures.

Comrades, during the short period ahead, the struggle against the junta focuses on the struggle concerning the constitution. The broadest democratic forces do not doubt anymore that the junta wishes to impose a reactionary constitution on our people. In the struggle for a constitution, the junta and the civilian reactionaries who collaborate with it are objectively faced with the broadest democratic forces. The struggle for a democratic constitution and against tearing up the 1961 Constitution is urgent.

Can the referendum of the junta yield a negative reply? We answer this question in the affirmative. There is such a potential. If the broadest democratic forces unite and launch a concrete struggle, the masses can say no to the constitution of the junta. The rejection of the junta's constitution by the people is tantamount to the masses' rejection of the existence of the junta. This would signify a new phase in our country and a new situation in the balance of power. This would weaken the junta and deal a heavy blow to it. Then it would be the (?turn) of the democratic forces and the people to make a leap forward for a democratic government and constitution. There are attempts to scare the people through statements that the junta will not renounce the power if the constitution is rejected. There is no doubt that after receiving a blow with the referendum, the junta might -- if it finds the opportunity -- discard the schedule for a return to democracy. However, under these circumstances, the regime would be less sturdy and stable and weaker than a regime that appears to have gained the approval of the people through a referendum. The masses will be closer than ever before to toppling -- through their struggles -- this dictatorship, whose existence they oppose. As long as we do not create a legal [word indistinct] among the masses who say no to the junta.

The junta is arresting the forces who would say no to its constitution. It is even trampling upon the rights to freely say no to the constitution. Therefore, it is necessary to secure, prior to the referendum, a general amnesty, freedom to all political parties except the NAP, free political activity, the opening of all unions and mass organizations, the right to meetings and strikes and the freedom of thought. These are the minimum conditions to ensure that the results of the referendum reflect the feelings of our people. Our people will be justified in not considering valid the constitution to be imposed through faits accomplis, pressure, or figures at the end of a referendum to be held without fulfilling these conditions.

By imposing on our people a regime that does not recognize the most basic democratic rights, through the hands of the junta, the reactionaries will have totally blocked the possibilities for the democratic forces and our people to attain power through peaceful means. The struggle against repealing the 1961 Constitution and for a national democratic constitution constitutes a goal for unifying the democratic forces and drawing the masses into the struggle. In our opinion, the democratic constitution must include a minimum program, upon which the widest democratic forces can agree. This constitution must, according to us, possess the following general characteristics: It must be based on national independence, envisage saving the country from the reins of imperialism and NATO and advocate peace not war; it must guarantee all the general democratic freedoms -- the freedoms to organize, to speak up and demonstrate -- and a democratic system of thought; it must ban fascism, which is the archenemy of these freedoms, and grant autonomy to the Kurdish nation; it must guarantee economic independence and advocate an etatism protecting small and medium-sized enterprises in favor of the people's interests and against private capitalist monopolies; it must ban large private land ownership and stipulate a democratic land reform; it must fully recognize the freedom of the working class and all workers to conclude collective agreements, organize strikes and form unions. Only such a constitution can reflect the interests of the people.

However, we are not presenting these as preconditions. We are ready to discuss the concrete proposals of other democratic forces. The Turkish Communist Party [TCP] is showing that it is prepared to unite with the broadest democratic forces against the reactionary junta regime with the minimum goal of drawing a line against the tearing up of the 1961 Constitution. We must give the following reply to the junta's demagogy concerning a constitution that will prevent a return to the pre-12-September conditions: We must not return to the period before 12 September. However, the junta wants to take the people even further back than the period preceding 12 September. Those who do not want to revert to 12 September must say no to the constitution of the junta. The constitution of the junta is an effort to impose a police state that guarantees the 24 January [economic] policy and U.S. slavery and that will make us yearn even for the period prior to 12 September.

The masses are deeply displeased with the regime of the junta -- the 24 January policy, the oppression and tyranny and the stealing of their freedoms. We must energetically demonstrate to the masses that consenting to the constitution of the junta is tantamount to consenting to unemployment, poverty, landlessness, lack of housing and doctors, low wages, destruction and lack of union and political rights. We must show them that saying yes to the constitution is tantamount to saying yes to the threat of advancing on a path to nuclear war and being dragged into adventures because of the U.S. RDF.

Creating the smallest impression now that an easy referendum victory will be won against the junta would constitute a dangerous [words indistinct]. The workers, toilers and intellectuals cannot prevent the junta and the collaborationist and monopolistic bourgeoisie from gaining victory unless they start acting now at every opportunity against every pressure of the junta, every kind of exploitation and every trampled right, however small it is, and prepare for the referendum through struggle.

Comrades, our plenum must present all the party organizations with the task of struggling to organize a wide anti-imperialist movement and of dealing a heavy blow to the junta in the referendum for a constitution.

Final Installment

TA052042 (Clandestine) Our Radio in Turkish to Turkey 0500 GMT 5 Jun 82

[Sixth and final installment of the Political Bureau report read by Turkish Communist Party Central Committee Secretary General Bilen at the Central Committee plenum; date not given -- read by announcer]

[Text] Comrades: During this plenum we did not stress our organizational problems. We will discuss this subject in the broadest manner during the preparation work for the fifth congress.

Our plenum must concentrate on the most urgent and basically solvable problems. However, none of the problems of our party are independent of the organizational problems. Above all, we are now engaged in determining clearly the condition of our party and the reasons for our losses. Under these circumstances, it is no doubt impossible to refrain from mentioning our organizational problems.

We can already make the following general points concerning this matter. Back in 1977, our party's national conference stressed two important problems in the organizational field. One of the problems, which still affects us today, consists of totally removing artisanship [last word in English] from party life. A second problem consists of organizing the party within the working class. The conference adopted the following slogans: End to artisanship! The factories must become our stronghold!

Since that day, significant steps were undoubtedly taken in this direction. However, the results of the May attack show that artisanship was not defeated in many fields. What is particularly dangerous in this matter? Artisanship is the work method of a person who cannot get accustomed to specialization and division of labor and who has petit bourgeois and anarchistic (?views). Artisanship is the system of doing party work as if the members were individual artisans or tradesmen. It is a primitive [word indistinct] and crippled way of work contrary to the rules of our party. Some 80 years ago, Lenin dealt with this problem. He presented the ideological foundations of the struggle and organizational principles of a [word indistinct] party. The structure and work of the party, its discipline and conspiration [last word in English] all depend on these Leninist principles. [sentence indistinct] Only the police benefit from a (?situation) in which everyone does every kind of work and inevitably (?knows) everything. [passage indistinct] through this slogan, a struggle has been launched against every type of rightist or leftist opportunism, sectarianism, the tendency to form groups and antiparty tendencies. Let us not forget this.

In the past, the sectarianism in the concept of unity of action caused the weakening of the struggle against legalism [legalizm] in the organizational field. Deviations from the (?principle) of fully exploiting legal [yasal] means in the party and tendencies to misinterpret the legal means started emerging. Competition in legal organizations, legalism in the organizational field and rightist [word indistinct] appeared wherever there was leftist sectarianism in political and ideological fields. This was also the result of insufficient struggle against criticism to the effect that it is not necessary for the TCP to work secretly and that the circumstances allow (?conscious) socialist parties to work legally.

The 1978 Central Committee plenum took the first measures to halt this development. The following meeting with regional secretaries in 1979 and the Central Committee plenum in 1980 made the necessary warnings against leftist errors in political tactics and the rightist errors in the organizational field. However, the weaknesses caused by the errors committed accorded the police great benefits during the May attack. There is no doubt that comrades are [word indistinct] with the fact that the tendency to form groups in the party and the arrests were so destructive. The condition of the Ankara Provincial Committee serves as a very good example of this. This province is in a state of unbelievable collapse. The destructive moves by the Yorukoglu group, first, and another small sectarian group that emerged later left their mark. Now, it is most important to expose every tendency to form groups and eliminate it without wasting time in order to protect the party from the police.

Comrades: We received information from the plenum a short while ago. We learned that the profascist junta general, Ersin, is now heading new preparations to arrest TCP members. The Central Committee appeals to the entire working class, toilers, and progressive forces and calls on them to unite with the TCP and stop Ersin.

TCP URGES SUPPORT FOR FRG, U.S. DEMONSTRATIONS

TA050822 (Clandestine) Our Radio in Turkish to Turkey 0500 GMT 5 Jun 82

[Text] The Turkish Communist Party [TCP] Central Committee has issued a statement in connection with the NATO summit meeting to be held in Bonn on 10 June. In the statement, the TCP greets the large peace and disarmament demonstrations to be held in Bonn, West Berlin and in some U.S. cities during the NATO summit meeting. It calls on all Turkish workers and intellectuals to participate in and support these demonstrations.

HURRIYET CALLS FOR TOUGH STAND ON AEGEAN ISSUE

NC040846 Istanbul HURRIYET in Turkish 31 May 82 p 3

[Editorial by Oktay Eksi: "What and Whom Are We Afraid Of?"]

[Text] While returning from an official visit to Yugoslavia, Greek Prime Minister Papandreou told Greek journalists on the plane: "The Greek Parliament should not forget that following the signing of the Caracas Agreement in October concerning territorial waters, Greece will be entitled to extend its territorial waters to 12 miles."

Papandreou's intention to extend Greek territorial waters to 12 miles in the Aegean is not new. So much so that if he had the strength and the capacity -- he is such a builder of castles in the air -- he would dream "pan-Hellenic" dreams of expanding into Anatolia. However, his statement to the journalists has a new aspect. In his earlier statements, for example, in a reply to a journalist in Cyprus on 28 February 1982 who wanted to know whether Greek territorial waters would or would not be extended to 12 miles, he said: "This is a trump card in our hands. The decision lies entirely with me," and added that "he could not disclose when he intended to exercise this right." But now he appears to be thinking of resorting to this measure after October. There too he skipped a point. Let us briefly refer to that and then carry on.

It is true that the international agreement regarding territorial waters and the continental shelf will be signed in Caracas in October, but another year must elapse before the states which have signed the agreement can put this agreement into effect. The agreement will be open to signatures for a year and then it will be put into effect. This agreement will not mean anything, particularly to Turkey, the United States, Israel and Venezuela which have rejected it -- not on a short term basis anyway. Therefore, Papandreou's threats that he will extend Greek territorial waters in the Aegean to 12 miles cannot make Turkey abandon its present stand.

Turkey's case is clear. Let us put it in the way it was expressed by Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu at the historic press conference on 13 March 1982: "Turkey will not accept any faits accomplis which would affect its rights and interests in the Aegean. And if these rights and interests are violated, it will not hesitate to reciprocate in kind."

In reality, Honorable Ulusu's words are adequately clear, but what can you do? Papandreou is an unreliable adventurer who has adopted inconsistency as a method. Therefore, words addressed to this gentleman must reflect a more resolute stand. In other words, we must officially and categorically tell Papandreou: "If you extend Greek territorial waters in the Aegean to 12 miles, such an act will be considered a "cause for war" from our point of view.

The sentence "a violation of the rights and interests of Turkey in the Aegean will be answered in kind" could be taken to mean: "If they extend their waters to 12 miles in the Aegean, we shall do the same."

Naturally, this is diametrically opposed to Turkey's case and interests. As seen in this example too, Turkey is implementing a lenient and indecisive policy toward Papandreou. Our failure to prevent the militarization of the Aegean islands, and our inability to have the weapons removed from those islands, is clear proof of this. Our failure to complain to the United Nations on the strength of Article 44 of the Lausanne Treaty about the oppressive measures used against our kinsmen in Western Thrace is another proof.

We repeat: The only way out is to talk to Papandreou in the language he understands.

CULTURAL AGREEMENT WITH SOMALIA RATIFIED

TA061223 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 6 Jun 82

[Text] The cultural agreement signed between Turkey and Somalia was ratified today by the Council of Ministers. The agreement envisages the strengthening of cultural ties through the exchange of printed material, works of art, films as well as radio and TV programs. An exchange of members of the faculties of universities and schools of higher learning, teachers, scientists, researchers, physicians, technical personnel and students is also envisaged in the agreement. According to the agreement, visits by journalists, writers, artists, musicians, sportsmen and dancers are also to be encouraged.

BRIEFS

KIRKUK-ISKENDERUN PIPELINE CAPACITY -- The Turkish and Iraqi Governments have agreed to increase the capacity of the oil pipeline carrying Iraqi oil from Kirkuk to Iskenderun from 35 to 45 million tons per year. Work will be carried out jointly, with each side responsible for laying the pipelines in their respective country. [Istanbul MILLIYET in Turkish 29 May 82 p 9 NC]

DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 110 8 June 1982

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

Mitterrand Speaks to Press Following Summit A 1

AUSTRIA

Todor Zhivkov Meets With KPOe Chairman Muhri E 1
[VOLKSSTIMME 5 Jun]
Visit Ends [WIENER ZEITUNG 5 Jun] E 1
Foreign Minister Previews UN Disarmament Speech E 1
[ARBEITER-ZEITUNG 5-6 Jun]

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Schmidt Views Versailles Economic Summit J 1
Politicians Comment on Hamburg Election Results J 2
Foreign Minister Genscher Visits Israel 3-4 Jun J 2
[cross-reference]

SPAIN

Brussels Ceremony Marks Accession Into NATO N 1
PCE Reacts to Coup Participants' Sentences N 1

UNITED KINGDOM

Defense Ministry Reports Argentine Bombing Raids Q 1
4 Killed in Helicopter Crash Q 1
Commander Appeals to Argentines To Lay Down Arms Q 1
Force Pushes Closer to Stanley; Fighting Detailed Q 2
Ready for Assault Q 3
Enemy Reports Harrier Attack Q 3

TURKEY

Assassination of Diplomat in Lisbon Reported T 1
Foreign Ministry Condemnation T 1
Foreign Ministry Deplores Israeli Attacks on Lebanon T 1
Aldikacti Denies Secret Meetings Held on Constitution T 2
Prosecutor Seeks Death for 259 Dev-Yol Militants T 2

OTHER COUNTRIES

FRANCE

Panamanian President Arrives for Talks U 1
Soviet Submarine Escorted From Exercise Zone U 1

GREECE

Athens Calls for EC Emergency Session on Lebanon U 1
Briefs: Delegation to USSR U 1

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Italian Envoy to Israel Protests Move on Lebanon U 2
Pertini Condemnation U 2

NETHERLANDS

Support for Democrats '66 Declines Further U 2
[DE VOLKSKRANT 1 Jun]
Labor Party Ex-Ministers Hand Over Portfolios U 3
[DE VOLKSKRANT 1 Jun]
Netherlands Communist Party Chairman Visits PRC U 3
[cross-reference]

SWEDEN

Search for Foreign Submarines Continues U 3

MITTERRAND SPEAKS TO PRESS FOLLOWING SUMMIT

AB071532 Paris Diplomatic Information Service in French 0940 GMT 7 Jun 82

[Statement to the press by French President Francois Mitterrand after summit conference of industrialized countries on 6 June 1982 at Versailles]

[Text] Ladies and Gentlemen, the summit conference of the seven countries invited to Versailles has held its working sessions which ended with the adoption of a statement. The statement was, of course, adopted by all and therefore represents the general consensus. The document will be distributed to you -- if this has not already -- in the appropriate languages and you will be able to consult it for your commentaries and refer to the text yourselves to judge its content.

We, the heads of state, heads of government and European Community authorities have come to meet you not for the purpose of engaging in a dialogue -- this will be done individually by each of us with the press -- but so that you may understand that this summit was held in an atmosphere of work, cooperation, understanding and, I can say, a friendliness which is so vital to anyone with such extensive responsibilities as ours.

We examined in succession the problems on the agenda. We stuck to the agenda during the plenary sitting. We discussed the state of world affairs, and certain sensitive areas where war and peace are at stake. We examined North-South relations and matters concerning us, specifically economic, financial and trade problems, especially in the monetary and trade areas.

During these discussions many points were spelled out, such as the manner in which we feel trade should be conducted in East-West relations. In North-South relations, for example, whenever we speak of reviving the global negotiations we make it clear, as we have always done, that the rights and obligations of the specialized agencies must be preserved. In fact, you will find all of this in the text.

On each one of the points examined in plenary, an agreement was reached and the texts in the various languages were made precise to avoid any misinterpretation.

I have said that our main problem at the economic level is to harmonize our actions for the control of inflation, unemployment and for the development of growth. To this end, we set for ourselves a number of rules and lines of conduct. We do not want the stand of one to harm the others and we must cooperate to succeed together.

We did not presume to decide for the others -- those who did not attend the summit. That was not our intention, but we knew the importance of our options and we have ensured that these options are viewed within the framework of development of progress for all, with the ultimate goal of and respect for the principles of peace.

We harbor no aggressive intentions against anyone. We want to protect certain values of civilization which we have in common, particularly concerning political regimes, traditions, customs and democratic institutions that characterize the countries taking part in this meeting.

Outside the plenary sittings, we had a great deal of discussion and an exchange of views during meals which were, of course, friendly but also business meals and we spent our evenings discussing all the problems which require our attention. No subject was forbidden. What is typical of this type of meeting is that the heads of state and government as well as the representatives of the communities use direct dialogue and an exchange of views instead of the ritual and formal preocedures of an agenda of an international forum or administrative meeting.

This is why, on the first evening, we began with the alarming issue — the acts of war in the Falklands, resulting unfortunately from Argentina's violent initiative which triggered off a series of logical consequences. We further reiterated our condemnation of the violent initiatives or instigations which some prefer to discussions within the framework of international rules; hence we support UN Security Council Resolution 502 and hope to see a cease-fire as soon as possible. The terms of a truce that should apply to the entire conflict or rather to the two countries directly involved.

However, we want to positively state our full solidarity with Great Britain, whose national interest and pride were hurt. This solidarity is natural. Great Britain must recover its rights. We will do everything to see that peace prevails over war after these rights are recognized.

We raised the Lebanon affair which broke out during our conference. A text was published. When this text was elaborated and adopted, we hardly knew the first development of this crisis. This text therefore had no intention of covering what is currently going on, except that the Israeli Armed Forces are carrying out military intervention in that country. Lebanon, like any other country, has the right to independence, liberty and unity and to its own sovereignty on its national territory -- a sovereignty which has often been disturbed, and by many, but on this occasion it has been so serious that we have expressed our reprobation for the events.

The body of the text will not be discussed now, this is not a press conference but a statement. We shall discuss details of it at other press conferences. I will answer your questions: I will discuss it with you.

We wanted to proceed in a way — quite differently from Ottawa — so as to avoid eight successive statements which are a bit artificial and which, as usual, made no useful contribution to the debate.

We have therefore decided to leave it to the president of the summit to make the final declaration to the press. I do so now on behalf of the Versailles summit and in my capacity as the outgoing president of the summit. There will therefore be no other declaration besides what I am saying now.

I took over from Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliot Trudeau. The President of the United States will take over from me because the 1983 summit will be held in his country.

Before I conclude, I would like to say that in my capacity as the president — rather at this time in my capacity as a French citizen and as the president of the French Republic — I was satisfied with my being able to hold talks with the heads of state and government of the principal allied and friendly countries, and also with being able to maintain the same kind of ties with the European communities and according them our hospitality. We feel we have advanced.

This is also an appeal for progress, for development, to the capabilities of our societies to bring under control the difficult situation we are presently in...not only us but the whole world. We are assured that we are capable of assuming our responsibilities. That is the impression I have within me as I come to the end of my term of office. And as a French citizen, I repeat that it was, and still is, an honor for us to have received representatives of peoples friendly to us. And it is an honor to receive now the international press, which I hope has enjoyed its work, and has undoubtedly honored us greatly by transmitting with speed and accuracy our deliberations as a whole.

I have nothing to add to this. The image behind this platform will surely pass away. There is little possibility that it will reconstitute itself in a short time -- or if it does, it will be elsewhere; in the United States where we go next year with great pleasure and hope. I thank you.

TODOR ZHIVKOV MEETS WITH KPOE CHAIRMAN MUHRI

AU071238 Vienna VOLKSSTIMME in German 5 Jun 82 p 1

[Text] On Friday a meeting took place in Vienna between Todor Zhivkov, general secretary of the BCP Central Committee, who is in Austria for a working visit in his capacity of state council chairman of the Bulgarian People's Republic, and Austrian Communist Party [KPOe] Chairman Franz Muhri and KPOe Central Committee Secretary Erwin Scharf.

In the course of the talk on questions of mutual interest, Zhivkov and Muhri assessed as positive the development of the state, economic and cultural relations between Bulgaria and Austria, stressing the two parties' intention to continue working for the further development of these relations. The meeting, which took place in a climate of friendship and close solidarity, was also attended by the ambassador of the Bulgarian People's Republic in Austria, Stoyan Georgiev.

Visit Ends

AU071235 Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 5 Jun 82 p 1

[Excerpt] Bulgarian state and party chief Todor Zhivkov, who paid a working visit to Austria yesterday and the day before, met with President Rudolf Kirschschlaeger for a talk on Friday. The meeting took place in the morning at the Vienna Imperial Hotel, where the Bulgarian chief of state was staying.

Following the talk the guest proceeded to the province of Burgenland. Provincial Governor Theodor Kery welcomed him. He was accompanied by his 17-year-old granddaughter, since Zhivkov had also brought his granddaughter. After a boat trip to Neusiedler Lake, a luncheon in Neusiedl and a horsecart tour through the Golser wine region -- in beautiful weather — the Burgenland Provincial Government gave a reception for the guests at Esterhazy Castle in Eisenstadt. At the empire hall of the castle, a concert with music of Joseph Haydn was held. In the evening the high Bulgarian guest returned to Sofia from Vienna-Schwechat airport.

FOREIGN MINISTER PREVIEWS UN DISARMAMENT SPEECH

AU071426 Vienna ARBEITER-ZEITUNG in German 5-6 Jun 82 p 1

[Text] Vienna (AZ) -- In his speech at the United Nations on the disarmament problem, which he will deliver in New York on 9 June, Foreign Minister Pahr will plead for an objective verification process regarding international armament. In a talk with journalists, Pahr declared [in Vienna prior to his departure for New York] A body of experts should be established who should compare the divergent data given by East and West about their respective armaments. This should not be confined to a merely quantitative aspect of the weapons, but it would be necessary to work out foundations for objective comparisons, Pahr said.

Asked about the criticism of Austria's foreign policy expressed by Howard Eugene Douglas, U.S. coordinator for refugee affairs, at a People's Party meeting at the end of May, Pahr declared that the definition of Austria's neutrality was exclusively Austria's own affair.

SCHMIDT VIEWS VERSAILLES ECONOMIC SUMMIT

DW071328 Mainz ZDF Television Network in German 2010 GMT 6 Jun 82

[Interview with FRG Chancellor Helmut Schmidt by reporter Friedhelm Ost in Versailles; date not given -- videotaped]

[Text] [Question] The Versailles economic summit took place at a time of particularly great international economic difficulties. You have said yourself that we are experiencing the gravest international economic crisis since the great depression of the thirties. What were the most important results of the Versailles economic summit for you?

[Answer] We can't say that the world was newly built here, but a large number of agreements are important. First of all, there was agreement regarding the point you have mentioned -- all seven government chiefs are only too well aware of their difficult economic situations. Relatively speaking, the best situation exists in Japan, we are second and then come the others which I do not want to list in order. We agree that we all need reduced interest rates -- not just the nominal, but the real rates -- to spur investments and thus employment. Naturally, this is most necessary in America. This was said by everyone, including President Reagan himself. We all know that we cannot expand our budgets any further -- in fact, the opposite is true. This was said with special regard to America by President Reagan himself. Great agreement existed in this respect.

The next most important point is that it was mutually promised not to introduce trade protectionism. This is particularly important for us Germans -- as you said correctly -- because our jobs depend very much on exports. It is also important that we have agreed to cooperate better in the future in the field of international currency policy. The Americans were accommodating to such a degree that there was even talk of common intervention in currency markets -- not to counter any fundamental trends, but to reduce the wild ups and downs of some currencies.

Finally, I want to mention something that is very important to me, namely that in contrast to the concern which has been expressed occasionally, it was clear at this summit that nobody wants to wage a trade war against the Soviet Union and that nobody wants to start a cold war, either. Disarmament and the necessary negotiations were emphasized in the discussion on East-West relations.

[Question] Aren't credits to Moscow or other East European states to be curtailed in the future at the request of the Americans?

[Answer] In this respect a formula exists that we must act according to commercial wisdom, and our banks are doing this anyway. We in Bonn have never given state credits to the Soviet Union. In contrast to some other states in the world, to some other states participating in the summit, we have never done this. Private banks in our country give the export credits. The state does not subsidize them. So all this hardly concerns us. Regarding commercial wisdom, our banks have become most careful regarding credits to Eastern Europe and to the Soviet Union itself.

[Question] You have said yourself that worse things have been prevented such as becoming involved in a deeper crisis. Do you have the feeling in returning to Germany that positive impulses could emanate from Versailles regarding the German economy -- more jobs and increased economic growth?

[Answer] I would assess most positively what I described as having been prevented from occurring. That was the positive effect of the first seven economic meetings because the danger of becoming involved in a mutual trade war has existed since the 1973 oil crisis. The fact that this was not avoided during the international economic depression of the early thirties caused such a deep depression at that time. In this respect, I would consider it most positive if the agreements made here were followed by real action, and if no evasive action takes place, as has been observed occasionally before.

[Question] A strong reminder has been expressed here to demonstrate more discipline with regard to budget policy. Does that have consequences for you, too, in connection with the 1983 budget operation, which you must begin now?

[Answer] I described our budget situation just as others stressed the situations in their countries. We are quite well off, particularly since we have a very high private savings rate in Germany in contrast to other countries. We were not criticized on that point. However, I personally stressed that all seven participating states must take care not to increase their current budget deficits any further. Otherwise there will be no economic upswing in 1983. The OECD and other international institutes have calculated a 3 percent real economic growth rate for our country. I consider that to be a correct estimate for the time being, so I am not without optimism regarding 1983.

POLITICIANS COMMENT ON HAMBURG ELECTION RESULTS

LD071756 Hamburg DPA in German 1641 GMT 7 Jun 82

[Excerpts] Hamburg, 7 Jun (DPA) -- Following hours of talks in Bonn by the parties, the politicians in question still do not know how Hamburg is to be governed. Following the SPD's severe losses and the failure of the FDP, the position of the social-liberal coalition in Bonn has, in SPD Chairman Willy Brandt's view, become "very much more difficult." As a result of its defeat, the FDP has come to the conclusion that in future elections it must make a clear coalition statement. The top candidate of the Hamburg CDU, Walther Leisler Kiep, at a meeting of the CDU National Executive in Bonn, reaffirmed his demand for the resignation of Mayor Klaus von Dohnanyi (SPD). Kiep, as well as CDU Chairman Helmut Kohl, rejected the idea of fresh elections, which had been suggested yesterday evening by a number of SPD politicians.

Brandt called on the FDP coalition partners to decide unequivocally in favor of continuing the alliance with the Social Democrats and to make this clear to the voters. In an article for the SPD's SOZIALDEMOKRAT MAGAZIN, the SPD leader reproached the FDP for their "wavering," which had not paid off. People expected a clear decision regarding what the FDP really stands for now: "a social-liberal course or gradually tagging along with the CDU." [passage indistinct]

With regard to Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's attitude, Government Spokesman Klaus Boelling stated that he could not accept the SPD's defeat "with a light heart." The chancellor believes, however, that it would be legitimate for the leading CDU candidate Kiep "to now attempt to form a senat." After a 2-hour meeting, the SPD leadership agreed that Von Dohnanyi should remain in office for the time being.

According to Government Spokesman Boelling, even in the event of the Hesse FDP joining the CDU in a coalition, Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt would "not leave the bridge." In an interview for [BILD] ZEITUNG (Tuesday's edition), Boelling states that "whatever happens in the lander, the Federal Republic needs experienced political leadership." Furthermore, the past weeks, in particular, had proved to the chancellor that Hans-Dietrich Genscher is determined to master the major challenges with him in foreign, security and economic policy. The text of the interview was prereleased to DPA.

FOREIGN MINISTER GENSCHER VISITS ISRAEL 3-4 JUN

For Jerusalem Domestic, ITIM, Jerusalem POST and Hamburg DPA reportage on the 3-4 June visit by Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher to Israel, including meetings with President Yitzhaq Navon, Prime Minister Menahem Begin, Foreign Minister Yitzhaq Shamir, Labor Party leaders, an interview and a news conference, see the Israel section of the 3 June Middle East and Africa DAILY REPORT and subsequent issues.

BRUSSELS CEREMONY MARKS ACCESSION INTO NATO

LD051314 Madrid in Spanish to Europe 1130 GMT 5 Jun 82

[Excerpt] This morning Spain officially joined the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Here is a report from Angel Gomez Fuentes in Brussels:

[Begin recording] [Gomez] The solemn ceremony to welcome Spain into NATO, which took place at 1100 at the alliance's headquarters in Brussels, brings to an end the long process for Spain's accession to NATO, which our country formally joined last Sunday. The Soanish flag was hoisted, according to English alphabetical order, between those of Portugal and Turkey, and the Spanish national anthem was played. Shortly thereafter there was an extraordinary session of the North Atlantic Council, which was attended by the Spanish delegation comprising Foreign Minister Perez-Llorca, Defence Minister Alberto Oliart, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Lacalle Leloup and other officials. Perez-Llorca made a reference to the war in the Malvinas and expressed a desire to serve as a bridge between Europe and Latin America.

[Perez-Llorca] Dialogue and reason should prevail on both sides of the Atlantic. It is necessary to find a settlement -- a freely agreed peace settlement that will constitute a solution. We must avoid the prolongation of the problem, which affects us all as a latent point of conflict and as a source of incomprehension and bitterness between two communities to which Spain belongs, the European and Latin American communities. It makes us painfully aware of the gap which could begin to open between them and which we are resolved to help eliminate as soon as possible. [end recording]

PCE REACTS TO COUP PARTICIPANTS' SENTENCES

LD032232 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1800 GMT 3 Jun 82

[Statement issued by Nicolas Sartorius, member of the PCE Central Committee Executive Council, at PCE headquarters in Madrid on 3 June -- recorded]

[Text] 1. We have always defended the need for a just sentence in order to consolidate the democratic system in Spain and defend the constitution, the king and the vast majority of the armed forces who have carried out a mandate to defend the constitutional order and the system of liberties which the Spanish people have chosen.

2. Without prejudicing respect for the courts of justice, the PCE feels obliged to state that, apart from fitting sentences such as those passed on Jaime Milans del Bosch and Antonio Tejero Molina, the sentences undoubtedly contain grave and negative aspects as well as inadequate assessments and clearly insufficient terms. This naturally creates dissatisfaction. Given the application of some of the sentences passed, it follows that a number of defendents who, as we see it, have violated the constitutional mandate and military laws which always exclude obedience to orders which attack the constitutional order, will remain active in the army.

3. As a consequence, the PCE considers that it is necessary that the negative aspects of the sentence be corrected by means of an appeal to the second court of the Supreme Tribunal Court. Therefore, the PCE agrees with the government's announced intention of giving the appropriate instructions to the Ministry of Justice to initiate the relevant proceedings.

DEFENSE MINISTRY REPORTS ARGENTINE BOMBING RAIDS

LD071542 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1531 GMT 7 Jun 82

[By Alan Jones, PA defense staff]

[Test] Argentine war planes have launched bombing attacks on British troops now pushing forward towards Port Stanley, the Defence Ministry [MOD] announced today. But MOD spokesman, Mr Ian McDonald, said there had been no British casualties from the bombing raids, carried out by Canberras over the last day or so.

He told a news conference that a number of Argentine military positions close to Port Stanley had been bombarded and continued to be attacked.

"British troops are patrolling forward territory and consolidating their positions. Equipment is being moved up," he said. "In addition some troops, and in particular the Gurkhas, are on patrol looking for Argentine pockets of resistance to the rear of British positions."

Mr McDonald said there had been little direct operational contact with Argentine forces over the past few days. He disclosed that a number of trip-wires, mines and booby traps have been found in the Darwin and Goose Green areas -- captured by British paratroops after a fierce battle.

Most of the mines were not marked, and Mr McDonald said: "This indiscriminate mining, of course, puts the civil population at considerable risk."

Today's news conference was the first time Mr McDonald had given any operational details for some days.

4 Killed in Helicopter Crash

LD071756 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1745 GMT 7 Jun 82

[Text] Four British troops were killed when a Gazelle helicopter crashed on East Falklands on Saturday, the Defence Ministry announced today. Two of the troops were from the Royal Corps of Signals, and the other two were from the Army Air Corps. Next-of-kin have been informed.

It is understood that the helicopter was not shot down but the crash was the result of an accident.

COMMANDER APPEALS TO ARGENTINES TO LAY DOWN ARMS

LD071910 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1842 GMT 7 Jun 82

[By Robert Hutchinson and Alan Jones, PA defense staff]

[Text] The commander of Britain's land forces on the Falklands today made a dramatic radio appeal to the leader of the beleaguered Argentine garrison at Port Stanley: "Let's end the killing." Using a VHF transmitter and a Spanish-speaking marine captain as an interpreter, Major General Jeremy Moore asked Brigadier Mario Menendez to tell his men to lay down their arms.

General Moore, a deeply religious man who reads a page of the Bible every night, made the 11th hour appeal to avoid bloodshed as British troops prepared to launch a full-scale attack on the Argentine garrison.

No information was available in London as to the reply given by Brig Menendez, who is regarded as a hardliner and who has already proclaimed that his garrison will fight "to the last man and the last bullet."

An assault on the 7,000-strong Argentine garrison is now imminent as the final British positions are secured. British forces now overlook the Argentines on two sides and have effectively cut off with their artillery any hope of significant supplies of food and ammunition reaching the beleaguered troops.

This, it is understood, was forcibly pointed out to the Argentine leader by General Moore. Leaflets containing an open letter from task force commander Admiral Sandy Woodward to Brig Menendez have already been dropped on Port Stanley.

FORCE PUSHES CLOSER TO STANLEY; FIGHTING DETAILED

LD071936 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1903 GMT 7 Jun 82

[By PA defense and political staff]

[Excerpts] Advance patrols of British troops are now "eyeball to eyeball" with Argentine defences around Port Stanley as the main invasion force pushes ever closer to the Falklands capital. This was the dramatic picture which emerged tonight from a mixture of correspondents' despatches, brief Ministry of Defence statements, and authoritative Whitehall sources:

-- Marine commandos have outflanked the enemy north of Stanley, and strong British positions have been established on the mountains overlooking the capital on two sides.

-- British sea and land forces control the north of East Falklands, and large quantities of stores, guns, ammunition and men have been moved up there.

-- British artillery can now reach Stanley's airfield, which effectively seals off the 7,000-man Argentine garrison from any hope of re-supply of food or ammunition from the mainland.

-- Marine and Gurkha patrols have killed some 60 Argentine troops during clashes within sight of Port Stanley over the last five days.

-- Britain's relentless bombardment of military positions close to Port Stanley continues.

-- But attacks by Argentine war planes on the British troops pushing towards Stanley have come to nothing.

Whitehall sources said some 60 Argentine troops had been killed during a series of fierce fire fights in the marshy "no man's land" between enemy bunkers around Port Stanley, and British positions on the heights seven miles away. British patrols were also now pushing so close that they were "eyeball to eyeball" with the main Argentine defences around the occupied capital. Reports reaching London indicate that the constant shelling from batteries of 105mm light guns, flown into position slung beneath Sea King helicopters, is beginning to have some effect on the Argentine defenders. The counter battery from 155mm and 105mm Argentine howitzers has been dismissed as "desultory," probably because the soldiers want to conserve ammunition for the imminent final assault by British troops.

The Defence Ministry in London is refusing to disclose any information about the extent of British casualties in the fighting, although there are believed to be some wounded from mine explosions.

ITN reporter Michael Nicholson in his latest despatch from the Falklands did not mention casualties, but spoke of the dreadful weather being endured by the troops. He said: "The weater has been atrocious. We've had seven consecutive days of high winds and constant freezing rain. The men on the mountains are enduring the most appalling weather conditions, sometimes snow, sometimes ice, always mud. They are living in trenches dug into sodden peat bogs and are enveloped in low clouds, 24 hours a day."

Nicholson also said an Argentine Canberra had been shot down during attempts to bomb the task force in the San Carlos area.

As the troops waited for the final order to launch an all-out attack on Port Stanley, Mrs Thatcher today chaired another meeting of her so-called "war cabinet" for nearly one and a half hours. And tonight former Treasury Chief Secretary Mr John Biffen warned that taxes may have to be increased to pay for the Falklands campaign. He said: "There is a price in blood, and a price in treasure."

Ready for Assault

LD072216 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2150 GMT 7 Jun 82

[By Leslie Dowd of REUTERS]

[Text] British gunners today (Sunday) shelled and smashed an Argentine supply column close to the Falkland Islands capital of Port Stanley. A British sniper also shot an Argentine soldier in a night of aggressive patrolling by paratroops probing the defensive ring of infantry and artillery the Argentines have installed round Port Stanley.

Moving silently by night over the soggy, treeless Falklands terrain crack reconnaissance troops spotted two large trucks and five smaller vehicles on the gravelled road leading into Port Stanley. They called in artillery on the Argentine vehicles. One four-tonner exploded in a plume of flame and at least one other was smashed. Paratroops said they believe the others were all damaged. "It was a bloody good fire mission," an officer said. One of the large trucks bristled with radio aerials and may have been a mobile command post.

A patrol came across a crashed Chinook giant helicopter and was able to load up a tracked vehicle stealthily with Argentine ammunition and other supplies they found inside.

British preparations for the battle for Port Stanley are virtually complete. A powerful assault force is being formed into a line of battle like a jigsaw puzzle. Helicopter pilots have flown unceasingly in the wet and windy winter weather to ferry supplies forward, field medical dressings taped to their flying helmets.

The 7,000-strong Argentine garrison is still getting a few supplies flown from the mainland by Hercules C-130 transports. We heard two fly in to Stanley during last night. Argentine infantry positions on the hills outside Stanley were subjected to three hours of naval gunfire early today.

Enemy Reports Harrier Attack

LD080736 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0705 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] A Ministry of Defence spokesman had no comment this morning on Argentine claims that three British Harriers attacked Argentine positions at Port Stanley on Monday. The announcement was made in Buenos Aires overnight by the Argentine high command and reported by ASSOCIATED PRESS.

The claim said that the Harriers were repelled by anti-aircraft fire and that one left the Port Stanley area trailing heavy smoke. The joint chiefs also said an Argentine patrol routed British troops from positions near Port Stanley, and that their forces had captured equipment abandoned by the British.

The high command did not say where the fight took place. It was the second time in a little less than 24 hours that the joint chiefs announced their patrols had routed British units.

ASSASSINATION OF DIPLOMAT IN LISBON REPORTED

TA071623 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 7 Jun 82

[Text] Erkut Akbay, an administrative official at the Turkish Embassy in Lisbon, was martyred as a result of an armed attack around noon today. His wife, Nadid Akbay, a secretary at the embassy, was seriously injured during the attack.

According to information given by the Foreign Ministry Information Directorate, Akbay and his wife were attacked around noon, when they arrived at home for lunch, by a man waiting for them at the door. Akbay died at the scene of the incident. His wife, who was seriously injured, was taken to the St Jose Hospital in Lisbon. It is reported that Nadid Akbay, who is in a coma, has been operated on and is in critical condition. Eyewitnesses said that the assailant fled from the scene of the incident. The 9mm revolver used during the attack was found at the scene. The Portuguese Police were alerted following the attack. Border crossings and airports are being checked. A clandestine Armenian terror organization has assumed responsibility for the attack.

The Foreign Ministry has announced that the necessary deliberations have been made for the speedy arrest of the culprits, their prosecution and for securing more effective protection of embassy personnel.

Foreign Ministry Condemnation

TA071940 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1900 GMT 7 Jun 82

[Text] Minister of State and Acting Foreign Minister Ilhan Oztrak has issued a statement in connection with the martyrdom of Erkut Akbay, an administrative official at the Turkish Embassy in Lisbon. In his statement Oztrak said: We condemn this infamous murder with the strongest hatred a human is capable of. Noting that Turkey expects the Portuguese Government to capture these murderers who always stab in the back and to give them the punishment they deserve. Oztrak added: We once again stress that this act, which strikes at the Turkish Republic through two innocent persons, is incompatible with either humanity or historic facts and will not prevent the loyal members of our ministry from performing their duty with devotion, courage and a cool head. This loathsome incident has shown that international terrorism has become a problem for humanity. We again wish to warn all the world countries about the necessity for close cooperation on the issue.

FOREIGN MINISTRY DEPLORES ISRAELI ATTACKS ON LEBANON

TA071649 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1605 GMT 7 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 7 Jun (AA) -- Foreign Ministry Spokesman Nazmi Akiman said his government deplores the heavy Israeli attacks against Lebanon by air, land and sea. It is cause for concern, he added, that these latest attacks have "reached the dimensions of an occupation" and hence may have "grave consequences for regional security and peace."

"It is additionally deplorable," Akiman went on, "that this new fait accompli, which caused great loss of life and heavy damage among civilians, has taken place at a time when intensive efforts are being made to control tension and reestablish peace in Lebanon."

The Foreign Ministry spokesman called on Israel to comply with the Security Council resolution by ending its military operations immediately and stopping its aggressive behavior against the territorial integrity, independence and sovereignty of Lebanon.

ALDIKACTI DENIES SECRET MEETINGS HELD ON CONSTITUTION

TA071757 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1555 GMT 7 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 7 Jun (AA) -- Chairman of the Consultative Assembly Committee charged with drafting the new constitution Prof Orhan Aldikacti denied that recent meetings he held with members of the assembly in addition to some of his own committees had been "secret."

In an interview with the AA correspondent, Aldikacti admitted, however, a group of 75, "which might rise to 90," members had met at the committee room "to speed up the draft constitution." The meetings were not secret, "but we did not talk at random" about the discussion held, he added.

Members attending the meeting, who had been "working together for some time," had "similar views" on a number of topics, Aldikacti said.

Asked to comment on rumors that this group, labeled "Kemalist liberals" by the press, was planning to set up a new political party, Prof Aldikacti said personally he had no intention of going into politics, but admitted members of this sizeable group might eventually go on to form a new political grouping.

Aldikacti said his personal aim was to complete the drafting of the constitution in committee for presentation to the plenary session of the Consultative Assembly "as soon as possible," and claimed he never made a secret of his views or behavior.

PROSECUTER SEEKS DEATH FOR 259 DEV-YOL MILITANTS

NC071659 Paris AFP in English 1245 GMT 7 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 7 Jun (AFP) -- The military prosecutor of the Eastern Turkish martial law region of Erzincan is seeking the death penalty for 259 militants of Dev-Yol, Turkey's largest underground leftist organization, according to an indictment released here today.

Dev-Yol is accused of creating a "liberated zone" in the Black Sea town of Fatsa and of forcing residents to obey it.

They are also charged with committing 90 murders, 36 injuries, and 22 robberies for ideological reasons.

Unexpected defendants in the indictment include Mumtaz Soysal, columnist for the liberal Daily MILLIYET and constitutional law professor at Ankara's Faculty of Political Sciences, and Mahmut Tali Ongoren, president of the Contemporary Journalists Association.

The prosecutor also demanded jail terms ranging from one to 15 years for the remaining 426 defendants.

FRANCE

PANAMANIAN PRESIDENT ARRIVES FOR TALKS

PA071850 Paris AFP in Spanish 1714 GMT 7 Jun 82

[Excerpt] Paris, 7 Jun (AFP) -- The Central American situation, particularly in El Salvador, and the Malvinas war will dominate the official meetings that Panamanian President Aristides Royo will hold tomorrow in Paris. Royo arrived in France today.

SOVIET SUBMARINE ESCORTED FROM EXERCISE ZONE

LD072042 Paris Domestic Service in French 2000 GMT 7 Jun 82

[Text] A minor French-Soviet incident occurred this afternoon. A Russian submarine came a little too close to the French, British and Netherlands naval fleets engaged in exercises off Brest and was politely accompanied out of the exercise zone by a fleet escort ship, a destroyer. The incident occurred outside territorial waters.

GREECE

ATHENS CALLS FOR EC EMERGENCY SESSION ON LEBANON

NC061639 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 0730 GMT 7 Jun 82

[Text] Following the dramatic events in Lebanon the government has issued the following statement:

After its recent statement of condemnation the Greek Government considers it its duty to once again express its indignation over the continued air raids against the noncombatant population of Lebanon and the undisguised invasion by Israeli forces of Southern Lebanon.

The Greek Government condemns, in the strongest possible manner, these acts of aggression, which starkly violate every rule of international law, destroy every effort toward the peaceful settlement of the Middle East problem and, at the same time, create the danger of a more general clash.

The Greek Government has resolved to call for an emergency meeting of the EC Council of Foreign Ministers to condemn the Israeli invasion, to adopt measures for its immediate cessation, to prevent every form of repetition of such an act and to protect peace in the area.

BRIEFS

DELEGATION TO USSR -- A Greek delegation composed of many members and headed by Deputy Coordination Minister Yiannis Pottakis departed for Moscow to participate in the work of the first interministerial meeting of the two countries to be held this year. Deputy Minister of Agriculture Yiorgos Moraitis, chairmen of organizations, representatives of banks and ministry officials are included in the delegation. [Text] [Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1800 GMT 7 Jun 82 NC]

ITALY & THE VATICAN

ITALIAN ENVOY TO ISRAEL PROTESTS MOVE ON LEBANON

AU072048 Rome ANSA in English 1930 GMT 7 Jun 82

[Text] Tel Aviv, 7 Jun (ANSA) -- The Italian Government "firmly deplored" Israel's invasion of Lebanon today, and also voiced "indignation" at the attack on the Israeli ambassador in London, in an official move with the Israeli Foreign Ministry here.

Voicing the Italian position, Ambassador Girolamo Nisio described the Israeli invasion as "indiscriminate" adding that the high number of casualties "seems completely unacceptable."

According to the diplomat, the tit-for-tat betwween Israelis and Palestinians "does not facilitate" the search for peace in the Middle East.

He added that, in the same spirit with which it participates in the U.N. peace force in Lebanon and in the Multinational force in the Sinai, Italy renews its appeal to the parties involved to show "responsibility by making every effort to control the situation."

Pertini Condemnation

AU071636 Rome ANSA in English 1545 GMT 7 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 7 Jun (ANSA) -- Italian Head-of-State Sandro Pertini issued a "cry of alarm" over the threat to peace represented by Israel's invasion of Southern Lebanon at the end of a luncheon offered for President Ronald Reagan at the Quirinale presidential residence here today.

In his brief address, Pertini described his "concern and indignation" over the attack. "A new hotbed of war has now been lighted in the Middle East," he asserted.

"We protest against this brutal invasion of Lebanon, just as we protested against the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan," he added.

"We condemn the attack on the Israeli ambassador in London, but barbaric tribal law cannot be applied against a whole people.

"Israel had its land and its homeland. Today, it should respect the homelands of others."

NETHERLANDS

SUPPORT FOR DEMOCRATS '66 DECLINES FURTHER

PM040949 Amsterdam DE VOLKSKRANT in Dutch 1 Jun 82 p 2

[Text] The Hague -- According to an opinion poll carried out by NIPO/Rooie Haan using the Maurice de Hond method, Democrats '66 [D'66] sank to a new low in the latter half of May. Since the losses in the provincial elections in March, support for D'66 has slumped even further and if elections were held now the party would win only seven seats. At present D'66 have 17 seats in the Second Chamber.

The People's Party for Freedom and Democracy [VVD] would win 38 sests as opposed to 34 in March and 26 in the election last year. Compared with the provincial elections in March the Labor Party [PVDA] would lose no more ground and its standing in the opinion poll is 34 seats (as against 44 in the Second Chamber at present).

Compared with March, the Christian Democratic Appeal [CDA] would have some losses and fall back from 52 to 50 seats. At present the CDA has 48 seats in the Second Chamber.

The small left wing parties would continue to gain ground. According to the poll, the radical party would advance to four seats (at present three) and the Pacifist Socialist Party and the Communist Party of the Netherlands would each advance from three to five seats. The small Christian parties would remain stable with the exception of the Reformed Political Union, which would advance from two to three seats.

The Langendijk Opinion Research Bureau has carried out a poll on the municipal elections which will take place next Wednesday [9 June]. The poll indicates gains for the VVD and the CDA and losses for the PVDA and D'66. The General Broadcasting Association, which published the Langendijk figures, added that only 61 percent of people interviewed were sure about their choice and that 30 percent had still not reached any decision.

LABOR PARTY EX-MINISTERS HAND OVER PORTFOLIOS

PM040957 Amsterdam DE VOLKSKRANT in Dutch 1 Jun 82 p 2

[Unnamed "Own Correspondent" report: "New Cabinet Will Hasten Government Declaration"]

[Excerpt] The Hague -- it is expected that the third van Agt cabinet will present a government declaration to the Second Chamber as early as next Thursday [3 June]. The minority cabinet comprising the Christian Democratic Appeal and Democrats '66 was sworn in on Saturday [29 May] by Queen Beatrix.

Today, the six Labor Party ministers in the previous van Agt cabinet will hand over their portfolios to their successors -- van Agt (who is now foreign minister as well as prime minister), de Graaf (social affairs and employment), Deetman (education and science), de Boer (culture, recreation and social welfare), Rood (interior ministry) and Nijpels (housing and land management). The latter two new ministers are from Democrats '66.

NETHERLANDS COMMUNIST PARTY CHAIRMAN VISITS PRC

For Beijing reports on the visit of Chairman of the Communist Party of the Netherlands Henk Hoekstra to the PRC, including his meeting with Chairman of the Chinese Communist Party Central Committee Hu Yaobang, see the Western Europe section of the 8 June China DAILY REPORT.

SWEDEN

SEARCH FOR FOREIGN SUBMARINES CONTINUES

LD051020 Stockholm International Service in Swedish 1000 GMT 5 Jun 82

[Text] New reports about foreign submarines in Swedish waters in the Gulf of Bothnia continue to arrive at the Defense Staff. Military searches have also begun in the waters outside Sundsvall, and the search outside Umeaa is continuing. However, no contact has been made with any submarine so far.

The Defense Staff says it has no logical explanation for the appearance just now of several submarines around Sweden.

DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 111 9 June 1982

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

SPD Deputies' Reagan Letter Protests Nuclear Arms J 1
Party Endorses Friendship J 1
Resolution Welcomes Reagan J 1
Incendiary Devices Mailed to 9 U.S. Firms J 2
Schmidt Comments on Hamburg Election Results J 2
FDP May Defect [FRANKFURTER RUNDSCHAU 8 Jun] J 3
Apel Affirms Importance of Nuclear Deterrence J 3
Genscher Discusses Lebanon With Arab Envoys J 4
Spokesman Responds to Argentine Criticism J 4

FRANCE

President Mitterrand Holds Press Conference K 1
Government Willing To Aid New Leaders in Chad K 4

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Political Leaders Meet Reagan; Election Results L 1
Defense Chief of Staff Leaves for China L 2
Red Brigades Shoot Two Policeman to Death L 2

PORTUGAL

Deputy Premier on Need for Defense Legislation M 1
[DIARIO DE NOTICIAS 3 Jun]
Military Personnel Serving in Angola Denied M 1

SPAIN

Joint Staff Issues Order on Trial Sentences N 1
Calvo-Sotelo Holds Talks With Canada's Trudeau N 1
Sandinist Official Pastora Arrives 5 June N 1

NORDIC AFFAIRS

FINLAND

Leftwing Socialists To Form New Central Body P 1
[HUFVUDSTADSBLADET 31 May]
Briefs: New Party Formed P 1

SWEDEN

Ullsten Questioned on Foreign Submarine Search P 2

UNITED KINGDOM

Pym Clarifies Goals in LE MATIN Interview [4 Jun] Q 1
Thatcher Responds to Criticism of Strategy Q 3
Foreign Secretary Views U.S. Vote in UN Q 4
Argentine Soldiers' Lack of Motivation Reported Q 4
[THE DAILY TELEGRAPH 8 Jun]
SBS Member Killed on Reconnaissance Mission Q 5
Fleet Commander Details Troops, Supplies Q 5
3 Vessels Damaged in Argentine Air Attack Q 6
Capture of Settlements Q 7
4 Mirages Shot Down Q 8
Official Tells Islanders of Future Plans Q 8
Foreign Office Denounces Israeli Invasion Q 9
[THE DAILY TELEGRAPH 8 Jun]
Thatcher Condemnation Q 9

CYPRUS

PLO Says 'Arafat Not Invited by Denktas R 1
[Athens NEWS 4 Jun]
Kiprianou, Rolandhis Arrive in New York 7 June R 1
Meeting With Perez de Cuellar R 1
Statements Exchanged R 2
Government Allegedly To Seek Gobbi Recall R 2
[O AGON 7 Jun]
Government Comment R 3
Turkish Cypriots Denounce Israeli Attacks on Lebanon R 3
[Bayrak Radio]

TURKEY

Portugal Urged To Bring Assassins to Justice T 1
Airlifting of Afghan Refugees To Begin in June T 1
Draft Constitution To Be Ready by 10 July T 1
Security Forces Capture 10 Terrorists in Istanbul T 2
Libya Denies Treating Turkish Workers Unfairly T 2
[GUNAYDIN 4 Jun]
HURRIYET Describes Treatment of Turks on Rhodes [4 Jun] T 2
TCP Expresses Solidarity With Palestinian People [VOTCP] T 3
Syrian Trade Mission Holds Meeting With Businessmen T 3

OTHER COUNTRIES

AUSTRIA

'Vienna Peace Festival' Planned for 6-8 Aug U 1
[VOLKSSTIMME 4 Jun]
Pahr To Visit Vietnam; Vienna Visitors Announced U 1
[DIE PRESSE 5-6 Jun]

GREECE

Agamemnon-82 Combined Maneuvers Start 9 Jun U 1

SPD DEPUTIES' REAGAN LETTER PROTESTS NUCLEAR ARMS

LD071418 Hamburg DPA in German 1223 GMT 7 Jun 82

[Excerpt] Bonn, 7 Jun (DPA) -- A total of 59 SPD Bundestag members -- particularly from the leftwing but also from the center -- have sent a letter to President Ronald Reagan criticizing nuclear arming. In their letter, published today, the parliamentarians call on Reagan to consider the letter and "all peaceful demonstrators" in Thursday's peace demonstration in the federal capital as "an expression of the concern and fear" of a nuclear war. They also support the movement that began in the United States for a freeze on nuclear armaments.

The letter, released by leftwing member Freimut Duve, states: "Millions of citizens in the Federal Republic of Germany are united with millions of American citizens: Whoever has the authority of President of the United States of America over developments in this world must now use it to freeze and completely eliminate nuclear arms and not to create the biggest arms buildup in our history."

The parliamentarians also emphatically support the continuation of East-West detente and express their "utmost concern" over the "massive arms drive in weapons of mass destruction" pursued by U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger. The parliamentarians also oppose the present policy of [word indistinct] deterrence, because leading representatives of the Reagan administration have mentioned the possibility of nuclear war.

The letter from SPD parliamentarians, which was also signed by Former Minister of the Family Antje Huber, has aroused the displeasure of the parliamentary group leadership. It was said here that the parliamentarians acted by themselves, on their own authority, since the parliamentary group had prepared a resolution that would be approved on Tuesday and the letter had not been discussed with the group.

Party Endorses Friendship

LD080902 Hamburg DPA in German 0834 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 8 Jun (DPA) -- One day before the visit of U.S. President Ronald Reagan, the SPD leadership has emphasized that cooperation and friendship with the Government and people of the United States are a principle of Social Democratic foreign policy. The SPD Presidium, which met on Monday evening under the chairmanship of party leader Willy Brandt, said in a declaration published on Tuesday that this cooperation and friendship rest not only on joint membership in NATO, but also on common views on the rights of peoples to democracy and independence. These common views remain, despite current differences of interests and opinions.

Resolution Welcomes Reagan

LD081952 Hamburg DPA in German 1733 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 8 Jun (DPA) -- The SPD Parliamentary Group adopted a resolution this evening welcoming President Reagan to Bonn and expressing its commitment to the Western alliance. Parliamentary Group Spokesman Knut Terjung said the resolution was adopted by a very large majority and with only four or five opposing votes, and the great majority of the 59 SPD deputies who yesterday published a letter to Reagan clearly criticizing U.S. policy, especially with regard to the nuclear arms buildup, voted for the resolution. The 59 deputies had incurred the displeasure of the parliamentary group leadership, but with the unanimous [as received] adoption of the resolution, the controversy is now considered to be settled.

In the resolution the SPD welcomes Reagan as "the representative of a great people, to whose democratic tradition we owe a great deal." The text does, however, mention that the SPD by no means agrees with all of Washington's proposals or statements. However, the basis of common values and vital interests is not affected by this, it says. Reagan is asked to see the demonstrations of the peace movement in Bonn on Thursday as an "expression of the vitality of our democracy."

The 59 deputies had urged President Reagan to support a freeze on nuclear arming and its complete abolition rather than the greatest arms buildup in human history. They had also urged the President to regard their letters and all peaceful demonstrators at the rally as an expression of concern and fear of a nuclear war.

INCENDIARY DEVICES MAILED TO 9 U.S. FIRMS

LD082014 Hamburg DPA in German 1919 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] Wiesbaden, 8 Jun (DPA) -- Nine firms in Essen, Hochum, Duesseldorf and Muenster which are part U.S.-owned, received letters today containing incendiary devices. This was announced in Wiesbaden by a spokesman of the Federal Criminal Investigation Department [CID] who said all the letters had been opened safely.

He said the letter had been mailed by unknown persons in Hagen/Westfalen. In the padded envelopes there was a cardboard lining containing an alarm clock, a flat battery and a cigarillo packet filled with a plasticine-like substance, which initial examination showed to be inflammable but not explosive. The following message was typed on a sticker: "In the next war no one will be innocent. Stop the madness. We wish mister president and his friends a hot reception."

The police assume that more letters have been addressed to U.S. firms in the Federal Republic and could possibly be delivered tomorrow morning. The CID recommends that the nearest police station be informed immediately if suspicious mail is received.

SCHMIDT COMMENTS ON HAMBURG ELECTION RESULTS

DW081029 Hamburg ARD Television Network in German 2040 GMT 7 Jun 82

[Interview with FRG Chancellor Helmut Schmidt by reporter Ernst-Dieter Lueg in Bonn; date not given -- videotaped]

[Text] [Question] After the grave SPD losses in the Hamburg elections and after the FDP failure to achieve its aims, can you pretend that nothing has happened here and just carry on?

[Answer] What do you mean by here? If you mean Bonn, the government here runs on the basis of the Bundestag majority and not with the help of a landtag or local majority of citizens. It is absolutely correct to say that the SPD and the FDP lost the Hamburg elections. The CDU won -- at least it gained a lot. However, you cannot simply say it has won the election because it must now try to elect the senate of Hamburg citizens. I think Mr Kiep has to be asked to do this, and he can legitimately try.

[Question] Don't you consider the loss of confidence suffered by the social-liberals in the Hamburg test to be very unpleasant especially in view of the difficult budget talks between the SPD and the FDP? Couldn't attempts could be made to gain advantage because of a kind of uncertainty in both camps?

[Answer] Attempts to gain advantage are always being made in both camps, that is true; this happens in every political party. That is inevitable in a democracy. If the FDP had achieved somewhat more than 5 percent in Hamburg instead of somewhat less, and if the SPD had achieved 1 percent more, the mood would be completely different there. One thing must not be ignored, however. The Free Democrats and the Social Democrats together received more votes in Hamburg for the social-liberal coalition...

[Question -- interrupting] Isn't that just figures?

[Answer] No, I want to say it clearly -- more votes than the CDU. The CDU can't count any more on the votes of the environmentalist groups than we can. That is not an absolute majority. But it is a majority. Nobody has an absolute majority. I don't want to gloss over what I said earlier because it is a victory, a relative victory, for the CDU.

[Question] You were very active in the election campaign in Hamburg, your home town. Do you feel that the Hamburg voters have abandoned you?

[Answer] No, I don't feel that at all. I was not running in those elections. Maybe it would have had some influence if I had been running, but I do not want to philosophize about that. Klaus von Dohnanyi has been most active and achieved a very clear personal success. Without him the outcome would certainly not have been as good.

[Question]] Do you have the impression after today's coalition talk that the FDP shares your optimism regarding the forthcoming budget talks?

[Answer] I do not think that the elections in Hamburg will have any influence on the realistic results of budget discussions. We will conclude the 1982 supplementary budget issue next Wednesday in cabinet. Regarding the 1983 budget, this will take place 3 weeks after that. We have some time left in this respect. I do not think that land policy will have any great influence on that. However, reaching decisions will continue to be difficult.

FDP May Defect

DW080907 Frankfurt FRANKFURTER RUNDSCHAU in German 8 Jun 82 p 1

[Eghard Moerbitz report]

[Text] Bonn, 7 June -- The future of the social-liberal coalition in Bonn is seriously endangered after the Hamburg election defeat of the SPD and the FDP. Although Chancellor Helmut Schmidt rejected the resignation demanded by the opposition, and although leading coalition politicians have told their parties that they will not give up in Bonn, the Bonn government parties have been severely shocked.

Statements by both sides indicate that the initial coalition talks on the 1982 supplementary budget and the 1983 budget draft are taking place under complicated conditions. It is expected in the federal capital that the positions will harden after the Hamburg elections. It is being taken for granted that during the Hesse landtag elections on 26 September the FDP will support the CDU. The Bonn FDP leadership, however, will not do anything before the Hesse party congress on 17 June so as not to create the impression that they have panicked and decided to support Alfred Dregger's CDU solely for selfish party reasons.

All three Bonn parliamentary parties believe that "the entry into parliament by some of the alternative groupings is inevitable" (Brandt). CDU Secretary General Heinrich Geissler stated that the environmentalists have "stabilized as a constant factor in the political party scenery."

APEL AFFIRMS IMPORTANCE OF NUCLEAR DETERRENCE

LD081216 Hamburg DPA in German 1111 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 8 Jun (DPA) -- According to Defense Minister Hans Apel (SPD), the FRG should press NATO for an examination of the number and type of nuclear warheads in Europe with the aim of a substantial reduction. In an article in the journal EUROPE ARCHIV, Apel writes that the Western alliance is currently considering such things. Similar proposals have been made recently by representatives of the coalition and the opposition in Bonn.

Nevertheless, Apel spoke out again against the view of prominent American politicians that the West should refrain from the first use of nuclear weapons. Whoever is considering that must be aware that he is contributing to the regionalization of military conflict in Europe and to the separation of the United States from Europe. The NATO strategy is a strategy of preventing war in the first place.

The minister stressed that it is the existence of nuclear weapons above all that has prevented military conflict in Europe since 1945, but only the conventional defense capability of the West and its continuous development makes the policy of deterrence credible.

GENSCHER DISCUSSES LEBANON WITH ARAB ENVOYS

LD081332 Hamburg DPA in German 1232 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 8 Jun (DPA) -- On Tuesday Federal Foreign Affairs Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher expressed the Federal Republic's "distress and deep sympathy" for the suffering of the population and for the victims of the act of force in Lebanon. In a talk with Arab ambassadors in Bonn, Genscher said that the German Government supports the UN Security Council's demand for a cease-fire, the withdrawal of Israeli troops and respect for the territorial integrity of Lebanon.

During the talks, which were sought by the Arab ambassadors, they also expressed their concern over the Israeli invasion. Their spokesman, Lebanese Ambassador Khalil al-Khalil, and his Kuwaiti colleague Talib Jalal an-Naqib, condemned Israel's action. Genscher cited the statement on Lebanon just issued by the seven Western state and government chiefs in Versailles.

SPOKESMAN RESPONDS TO ARGENTINE CRITICISM

LD081628 Hamburg DPA in German 1535 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 8 Jun (DPA) -- The Federal Government wants a purely peaceful settlement of the Falklands conflict, a government spokesman said in Bonn today in reply to increasing criticism of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt in the Argentine press. "What on earth was Herr Schmidt thinking of?" Argentine radio asked on Monday in a strong criticism of the chancellor's statement in an interview with BILD-ZEITUNG of 2 June, in which Schmidt expressed regret that increased Soviet influence is a result of the conflict and that a British victory would "finally open up possibilities" for negotiations.

In this connection the government spokesman stated today that Bonn acted on the basis of UN Resolution 502 and that the Federal Government urged the ending of hostilities, the withdrawal of the Argentine troops and negotiations in accordance with it. It is in this spirit that Bonn has repeatedly tried to influence the parties in the conflict. At any rate, the Federal Government has never supported nor urged military measures.

PRESIDENT MITTERRAND HOLDS PRESS CONFERENCE

AB081934 Paris Diplomatic Information Service in French 1140 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Press conference held by French President Mitterrand on 6 June in Versailles following Western summit]

[Excerpts] [Question] Mr President, you said some time ago at the Congress Hall that the joint declaration was written in such a way that it could not have different interpretations. So, you could undoubtedly help us remove two ambiguities prevailing over the summit for 2 days.

The first one is on monetary issues. The French delegation has said -- through the various ministers who spoke and perhaps through you, too -- that the principle of intervention on the market was commonly agreed on. The Americans say: yes to intervention in case of erratic movements, disorderly conditions," and they add: This conforms with our constant policy; it also conforms with IMF Article 4; therefore nothing is fundamentally new in our agreement. They even add that the survey panel which is expected to meet will decide whether to enforce greater or lesser intervention. As a result, the question remains open.

The second misunderstanding was on trade with the Eastern countries. The French delegation stressed in particular that the declaration does not contain any reference to particular restrictions to the granting of credits while the Americans stress the limitations "do limit" -- I think that the verb has the same meaning both in French and in English -- the granting of credits. Could you enlighten us on these two points?

[Answer] First of all, I generally know what I say and I bear the responsibility for what I say. I do not understand hearsay and I don't see in your first remark any difference between what the Americans are reported to have said and what I have said -- I refer to you first remark on the monetary issue, and not the second one on trade. As a matter of fact, in the text which was added -- I will read it to you and you will judge for yourselves -- it is said: Intervention if necessary. The expression "if necessary" naturally implies unbearable fluctuation, which is not the case for the time being. The last time there was such a situation was when the EEC intervened to support the dollar some years ago. The reverse has not happened yet.

As any discussion on this would be useless, I will try to find the text for you, first the text of the general declaration and then that of the attached document. I will eventually add a point which is in neither text.

We have agreed to maintain toward the USSR and Eastern Europe a cautious and diversified approach. Mr Fabra's reference is to the passage which says: Thirdly and in view of the prevailing economic and financial considerations, we have agreed to conduct our relations with the USSR and other Eastern countries with caution in order to ensure that they are economically sound, and to use prudence as required by trade relations through limitation of export credit.

The development of these relations will be examined periodically; that is another issue. Your question is not on that issue. So you want to know whether there are restrictions. Restrictions to what? The restrictions, or the caution which could lead to restrictions, apply to the entire economic and financial relationship with the Soviet Union and Eastern European countries. That is the first point.

Secondly, since you want precision, the discussion was to be held precisely on that point. There was a difficulty on the issue of export credit.

If you closely followed the discussion — I am sure you did -- you must be aware that originally the matter was to call for restrictions on public aid to exportation considered as subsidies granted to the Soviet Union. State subsidies granted by which countries? Two countries: Italy and France.

I confess that I rejected that somewhat narrow-minded approach to the matter. Moving a herd of elephants to crush the flea called stated subsidies to exportation granted by France and Italy to the Soviet Union and Eastern countries seemed out of proportion to me.

We accept our joint responsibility which is to strive for greater stability in the International Monetary System. We admit that the advance towards stability depends first on the convergence of policies aimed at reducing inflation, developing employment, restimulation of growth and the maintenance of the internal and external values of our currencies. We are determined to fulfill this obligation in close cooperation with all countries and monetary institutions concerned.

Secondly, we attach major importance to the role of the IMF as a monetary institution and we give it our full support in its efforts to promote stability. Thirdly, we are ready to strengthen our cooperation with the IMF in its task of supervision and to develop this supervision on a multilateral basis by taking into special account currencies with Special Drawing Rights. Fourthly, we exclude the use of our rates of exchange to obtain undue advantages of competitiveness. Fifthly, we are prepared, if necessary, to intervene in the exchange markets in order to counteract disorderly situations, in accordance with Article 4 of the statutes of the International Monetary Fund.

This is linked to what is found in the first page of the general declaration where it says: In order to obtain this reduction -- that will help in lowering the current unbearable interest rates and create more stable exchange rates -- we will apply cautious monetary policies on a priority basis and will better control budget deficits. In this regard, we will work towards the constructive and ordered development of the international monetary system through very close cooperation between the authorities representing the currencies of North America, Japan and the European Communities, with the aim of pursuing medium term economic and monetary objectives. Toward this end, we made the commitment contained in the text I have just read to you.

One must conclude from this that the idea of coordination by means of constructive development of what is referred to here as the international monetary system -- although it does not exist — that is, cooperation between the currencies of North America, Japan and the European communities with the aim of pursuing medium term economic and monetary objectives, is what I told you about yesterday evening, Mr Fabra. I did not say it would happen at once or that it would happen tomorrow morning; I said it would be on a medium term basis.

[Question] Mr President, I think it is in the monetary field that the greatest amount of precise detail has been given. For the first time since the IMF was created, it has obtained the right to supervise the national economies of the West. I think this is very serious because, as Michel Jobert said yesterday, the IMF is 85 percent dependent on the United States and the Anglo-Americans. Therefore, this decision constitutes an attack on national security. On the other hand, I am also surprised that we speak of development of the Third World when at the same time we open the doors of our economies to the IMF, which is precisely the institution which imposes atrocious austerity conditions on developing countries. I would like you to explain this issue to us.

[Answer] This is a romantic point of view. Not that romantic forms are distasteful; but in this case it is a figment of the imagination because I do not see which phrase, word or letter of the alphabet makes it possible to deduce that we have given the IMF new attributes. I do not see this at all, absolutely not. I add that, with regard to the IMF, it would be better to be in my shoes to know what steps I have been taking on behalf of the African or Madagascan people to get the IMF to adopt measures that will contribute to the development of their economies.

Certainly, these countries often complain about the IMF's notions which they find either a little too archaic or too much in conformity with the attitude toward a balanced budget in an advanced capitalist country. The most balanced budget in the world is ours... And if I understand you well, this is not unimportant.

So, first of all, the IMF has not obtained any further power of oversight which could lead one to deduce that there has been a loss of national independence or that national independence is at stake. There is nothing new. On the preservation of national independence, there is nothing new. The preservation of national independence is my business as well as yours and you can count on me as well as on yourself. I see nothing which confirms what you have just said: and, as for your inference that since the IMF has infringed upon our national independence it will encroach even more on the freedom of developing countries, the last part of this romantic version of a statement does not justify any of those interpretations.

If one considers that the IMF weights too heavily on national economies, then one must take to task the governments that accepted the creation of the IMF, which as far as I recall, was based on the BrettonWoods Agreement in 1945... That's right, isn't it? And all the governments since that date have continued to accept it, that is, almost the whole of the French political spectrum, apart from those who do not have the responsibility of governing even if they have the natural responsibility to participate in the political debate.

[Question] Let me come back to your statement on credits to the USSR. How do you explain the fact that Americans were happy to say: It is the first time industrialized nations have agreed to limit their package deal, that is their relations with the USSR? Is it as a result of misunderstandings?

[Answer] It is possible. For the moment, it is admitted that it is all or no one. I am always ready, should there be a threat to peace, to believe that restrictions are necessary.

As American trade is much greater than French trade, I would certainly have acted, in this case, as they would have done in a case of danger... In short, it is all or no one... For the moment, it is no one.

Maybe, it will be everyone, but each country will, in the end, be judged in terms of the wisdom required in trade relations -- something which was emphasized in this text and which, perhaps, you did not note.

[Question] Mr President, I would like to ask you if the declaration of the heads of state and government lays further emphasis on solidarity with Great Britain, beyond the position taken so far. I would also like to ask if the heads of state and government agreed not only on the need for a local cease-fire but also on a cease-fire that would include all the nations connected with the current conflict, in order to prevent further harrassment of British positions by Argentina, when order should prevail.

[Answer] Listen, let us be simple. There was no statement on the Falklands-Malvinas issue... I say Falklands-Malvinas because if I say Malvinas some people might translate it as Falklands. But they mean the same thing. So, I am not going to make an unnecessary speech on this issue. What is true is that Argentina chose to settle by force an old issue between it and Great Britain. What is also true is that many countries have never recognized nor defined Great Britain's right to sovereignty, and yet we stand by Great Britain. Why? Because it was attacked and because it is our friend and our ally. When the attack took place, a chain of events followed for which we are not responsible.

From the onset we supported UN Resolution 502. We could not go further than that. Also, within the European Community, we have placed an embargo on trade with Argentina. This was a normal consequence of the fact that we condemn violence.

The chain of events since then, and particularly the British advance on Falklands-Malvinas soil, is something France has no hand in. It only contributed indirectly to this development by taking part in the embargo. This is true. We simply believe that what could be called a new development in this fatal game would come when Great Britain has recovered the contested area.

Then, a new phase would begin. I am not suggesting a principle; it is political fact, one which I hope will end as soon as possible, through cease-fire or an armistice. Call it by whatever name, France will of course support those who argue for this.

GOVERNMENT WILLING TO AID NEW LEADERS IN CHAD

AB081515 Paris AFP in French 1426 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Excerpts] Paris, 8 Jun (AFP) -- France is ready to examine any request for assistance from the new Chadian authorities at the "usual conditions" and in conjunction with the OAU, the French Ministry of External Relations announced on Tuesday. It indicated, in reply to some questions, that the assistance would be the continuation of the aid already being granted to that country.

The ministry also confirmed the report that Goukouni Oueddei, president of the Transitional National Union Government, left Ndjamena, now under the control of Mr Hissein Habre's FAN, for the Cameroonian capital of Yaounde where he remained on Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Afal Ahmad, the FAN representative to Europe, stated in an interview published on Tuesday by the daily LA CROIX that the FAN "is not hostile in principle to France and its people." "We hope that France, like many other friendly countries, will contribute to the reconstruction of Chad. France, whether under a socialist or a conservative government, remains France: It has interests to defend. It has relations of friendship and cooperation with countries and not individuals. Even though we regret that it supported a fictive government without popular basis, we believe that this is in the past. It must henceforth be hoped that it will not disappoint us."

Afal Ahmad also pointed out that "Hissein Habre fought against a policy but not against Goukouni Oueddei as an indivuduai." The latter does not deserve "a condemnation," he added. "Time has now come for reconciliation among Chadians," he stated, but recalled that Hissein Habre does not forgive Goukouni Oueddei for calling in the Libyans.

POLITICAL LEADERS MEET REAGAN; ELECTION RESULTS

AU080936 Rome ANSA in English 0825 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 8 Jun (ANSA) -- The official visit here of U.S. President Ronald Reagan, the developments following the Israeli invasion of Southern Lebanon, and partial administrative elections were the chief events riveting the attention of Italian political leaders Monday.

The secretaries of the five parties making up Giovanni Spadolini's coalition government were all introduced to Reagan yesterday and afterward voiced Italy's firm attachment to its Western allies in a press conference here.

The five party secretaries all expressed concern for the conflicts that have broken out in the world from the Falkland Islands in the South Atlantic, to Lebanon. They called on the West to use its influence and strength on behalf of peace.

Calls came from various political quarters here for a strong Italian initiative to promote peace in the Middle East and all sides unanimously backed calls for an immediate halt to military operations.

The president of the House Foreign Affairs Commission and former Premier Giulio Andreotti said that those who believe in the absolute necessity for a constructive Arab-Israeli accord learned with shock and bitterness of the attack on Lebanon, the consequences of which could be "dramatic." He urged Europe to take action to avoid the worst and restore the situation to what it was.

The Communists called Israel's policies "aggressive, adventuristic and annexationist" and called on the Italian Government to take steps in every international forum possible beginning with the European Economic Community and the United Nations, to obtain an immed immediate halt to war operations in Lebanon and a withdrawal of the Israeli invasion forces. The PCI document also condemned all of those who, by giving political and military support to Tel Aviv, have encouraged the Jewish state to push its aggressive policies ever further.

As to the Italian election results, most political leaders noted the fact that only 900,000 voters were involved (one thirtieth of the entire electorate).

Two parties, the Social Democrats and the Communists, said that they would analyze the results in depth at leadership meetings set for Thursday.

Christian Democrat President Flaminio Piccoli voiced satisfaction over his party's holding power in the elections.

Socialist Party Secretary Bettino Craxi said that the balloting confirmed the Socialist expansion underway throughout the country.

The Social Democratic leadership noted the constant progress their party was making and spoke of the "comforting" fact that all of the Democratic lay parties were gaining voters.

Communist leader Armando Cossuta said that the PCI has substantially held its position but that local factors had weighed heavily on the results. In general, a tendency for the DC to lose votes and an improvement in the positions of the Socialist and intermediate parties was noted, he said.

Republican Party official Oscar Mammi said that Premier Spadolini's popularity drew votes even at the local levels which was translated into "electoral consensus almost everywhere."

Spadolini's coalition government is made up of his own Republicans, the Christian Democrats, the Socialists, the Social Democrats and the Liberals.

DEFENSE CHIEF OF STAFF LEAVES FOR CHINA

AU081552 Rome ANSA in English 1548 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 8 Jun (ANSA) -- Italian Defense Chief-of-Staff General Vittorio Santini left Rome today for a ten-day visit to China where, as guest of the Chinese Army's chief-of-staff, he will meet with the commanding officers of the three branches of the armed forces and the Beijing Government's defense minister.

RED BRIGADES SHOOT TWO POLICEMEN TO DEATH

AU081548 Rome ANSA in English 1540 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 8 Jun (ANSA) -- The Red Brigades claimed responsibility today for the overnight gunfire slaying in Rome of two policemen, linking the fatal assault to the trial underway in the capital against the suspected assassins of Christian Democrat leader Aldo Moro.

The two officers were shot to death a few minutes after midnight while patrolling the area around the city's soccer stadium.

According to the preliminary police account, the two were probably tricked into getting out of their patrol car and then shot several times from a short distance.

One of the officers died on the spot, the other died a few hours later in the hospital.

Before fleeing, the assailants lifted two hand guns and two machine guns from the victims and unsuccessfully tried to unhook a two-way radio from the police van.

An anonymous caller to the ANSA News Agency charged today that the Italian state was "trying to destroy ten years of the proletariat's struggle in the Moro trial."

"The guerrilla party replies with the logic of annihilation," the caller warned, adding a Red Brigades tribute to "fallen comrades and to comrade Remo Pancelli," the Red Brigades leader arrested in Rome yesterday after years of hiding.

DEPUTY PREMIER ON NEED FOR DEFENSE LEGISLATION

PM071427 Lisbon DIARIO DE NOTICIAS in Portuguese 3 Jun 82 p 3

[Excerpt] New basic national defense legislation "was already imperative before the process of the revision of the constitution began," and once the latter is approved, the problem becomes even more acute, Deputy Premier and Defense Minister Professor Freitas do Amaral stated after receiving delegations of the three Democratic Alliance parties at the Assembly of the Republic yesterday to inform them about what the government has done concerning that matter and to bring up some issues for thought at the political party level. One of them is connected with the hiatus following the revision of the constitution. The opposition parties will be received today.

A prime matter broached by Freitas do Amaral during the audiences is connected with the national defense law, which could be confined to a single document or be composed of three: national defense, armed forces and state of siege and emergency.

Other issues raised by the deputy premier include possible parliamentary participation in the Higher Defense Council, in decisionmaking power authority pertaining to military mobilization (whether it rests exclusively with the president of the republic or with him and the government), in promotions and appointments "above the rank of colonel," and in restrictions on the exercise of rights by military personnel.

In addition, the defense minister particularly stressed the problems of the gap between the entry into force of the law on the revision of the constitution and the basic legislation on national defense, emphasizing in this connection during a brief meeting with journalists that it is becoming imperative to ensure that the armed forces do not become subject to a possible period of instability. In this respect, he made a point of stressing that currently "the armed forces are perfectly disciplined."

MILITARY PERSONNEL SERVING IN ANGOLA DENIED

LD082056 Lisbon in Portuguese to Europe 1900 GMT 8 June 82

[Text] The presidency of the republic made it clear in Lisbon today that no Portuguese military personnel on active service are currently in Angola. Questioned about reports carried in some morning papers to the effect that UNITA [National Union for the Total Independence of Angola] killed two Portuguese captains in the Province of Huila an aide to President Eanes said that former Portuguese military personnel no longer in the forces might still be in Angola, but that there are no Porgutuese military still in the armed forces in that country.

JOINT STAFF ISSUES ORDER ON TRIAL SENTENCES

LD081338 Madrid in Spanish to Europe 1130 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] The sentences in the 23 February attempted coup trial and their repercussions have given rise to an internal communications from the Joint Chiefs of Staff which met yesterday. The following special general order signed by Chairman of the Joint Staff Lt Gen Lacalle Leloup has been circulated to all barracks:

As a result of sentences handed down at the trial arising out of the events of 23 February 1981, there have been some criticism and comments which could affect the morale of our men. This joint staff thus considers it necessary to put on record:

1. The armed forces, in fulfillment of their mission, loyally defend the crown, the constitutional order and the legal order in force and as a result respect the independence of judicial power proper to our state of law.

2. Accordingly, it recognizes that the Supreme Council of Military Justice, meeting in a hall of justice, has acted within the framework of the judicial functions within its power without prejudice to any final sentences which the Supreme Tribunal may decide upon following the appeals for annulment which may be lodged, which we are all obliged to respect.

3. It thus considers improper all comment of any kind which disparages the activity of the Supreme Council of Military Justice since this not only affects the military but also offends the respect which the independence of the judicial function merits everywhere.

CALVO-SOTELO HOLDS TALKS WITH CANADA'S TRUDEAU

LD072330 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 2000 GMT 7 Jun 82

[Text] Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau was guest this evening at a dinner given in his honor at the Viana Palace. In an after-dinner speech, Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo made some observations on the conflict in the South Atlantic. He said that the use of force is not the way to solve differences between nations. Some problems which caused wounded feelings between nations required solutions that were diligent and generous so that kernels of international tension are not created. Concerning Spain's role in the Atlantic alliance, Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo said that it is his government's hope that Spain would bring a special dimension to the organization, thanks to its profound knowledge of and close links with the countries of Latin America and the Arab world. The prime minister concluded by voicing the hope of closer relations between Spain and Canada, saying that one of the sectors in which such cooperation is beginning to materialize is that of fisheries.

Peirre Trudeau and Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo held talks this afternoon at the Moncloa Palace. Apart from topics of bilateral interest, the two prime ministers discussed Spain's entry into NATO, the situation in Latin America, and the results of the Versailles summit.

Pierre Trudeau will end his official visit to Spain tomorrow after meeting with the secretary general of the Spanish Workers' Socialist Party, Felipe Gonzales, and then giving a press conference.

SANDINIST OFFICIAL PASTORA ARRIVES 5 JUNE

LD051352 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1228 GMT 5 Jun 82

[Summary] Nicaraguan Eden Pastora, who played a prominent role in the overthrow of the Somoza regime and led the Sandinist attack on the national palace in Managua, has arrived in Madrid amid strict security measures. Known as "Commander Cero," he has come to Spain to denounce what he describes as the "corrupt and (?Stalinist) regime" in Nicaragua.

FINLAND

LEFTWING SOCIALISTS TO FORM NEW CENTRAL BODY

PM071403 Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 31 May 82 p 5

[Text] The socialists in the Finnish People's Democratic League [SKDL] — those SKDL members who are not members of the Finnish Communist Party [SKP] -- agreed on Saturday [29 May] to found their own central organization. It is intended that the new organization will later become a member of the SKDL in the same way as the Communist Party. The objective behind the new action is in part to put an end to the picture of the SKDL as a communist cover organization.

The socialists' existing delegation will complete the practical preparations for the creation of the new central organization. In Kuopio Dr Ele Alenius, former SKDL chairman, was reelected chairman of the delegation.

A committee was also elected which will function as the executive body for the delegation, which in future will be appointed by a meeting of representatives of the socialist associations within the SKDL's district organizations. To begin with, such associations will probably be set up in the party districts in Helskini, Uusimaa, Mikkeli and Pori.

Kalevi Suomela from Helsinki was elected chairman of the "SKDL socialist' committee." Other members include Eduskunta deputy Ilkka-Christian Bjorklund, who is otherwise in the process of leaving his political work in connection with his withdrawal from the Eduskunta.

At the Kuopio meeting, the delegation was given authority to establish the new central organization's statutes and program in the fall. The intention is that the new organization will be open to all People's Democrats not belonging to the Communist Party. Over 80 percent of SKDL's members are noncommunists.

Behind the SKDL socialists' reactivation there lies -- in addition to endeavors to reduce the SKDL's reputation as a communist cover organization -- the view that new space for an organization of this type is opening up in the political arena. The socialists are expecting the Social Democratic Party to move toward the right in pursuit of the votes of the nonsocialists who supported Mauno Koivisto in the presidential election. At the same time the conflicts within the Communist Party are leading to frustration on the left and to movement away from the SKP.

In their policies, the SKDL's socialists -- unlike the majority of Marxist-Leninist communists -- want to stress that socialism in Finland should be constructed precisely on the basis of specific national conditions.

The SKDL's reelected chairman Kalevi Kivisto, himself a noncommunist, took the view that after its congress which has just ended the SKDL has already begun to appear more of a cooperation organization than in the past and less of a communist cover organization thanks to the socialists' reinvigoration of their activities.

BRIEFS

NEW PARTY FORMED -- The Liberals opposing the merger with the Center Party have founded a new party. The Progressive League [Edistysliitto], which consists of Liberals and nature conservationists, held its organization meeting in Helsinki today. The Progressive League will operate as a party, but for the time being it will not try to collect the 5,000 names which would enable it, according to the law, to be registered as a party. It intends to set up 100-member election associations in accordance with the elections act and to nominate candidates for the next Diet elections. [Text] [Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1900 GMT 5 Jun 82 LD]

SWEDEN

ULLSTEN QUESTIONED ON FOREIGN SUBMARINE SEARCH

LD081816 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1600 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] Is there a new submarine affair in Sweden? There have been reports in the past few days that a foreign submarine is trapped in the northern part of Kvarken in the Gulf of Bothnia. The military is searching for it. Today the leaders of the search confirmed that they have had contacts with a foreign submarine for 5 days. It was first discovered off (Holmegadd) in the Umea Archipelago by three construction workers. But until now the results of the search have been kept secret in order not to tip off the crew of the submarine. Now it is all official, and we have talked to the foreign minister about this new submarine affair.

[Begin recording] [Question] Foreign Minister Ola Ullsten, what to you know about this submarine?

[Answer] We know that there probably is a foreign submarine in the northern part of the Gulf of Bothnia. We are now making efforts to find, identify and possibly to expel it.

[Question] Has it violated Swedish waters?

[Answer] Well, there is a bit of international water north of northern Kvarken, but in order to get there, it must pass through Swedish territory. Therefore, it should have reported itself, but no such report has been received. For the submarine to leave it would need to enter Swedish waters again -- another violation -- which we [words indistinct] must react against.

[Question] As Swedish foreign minister, what do you think about the fact that there is again need to talk about submarines in Swedish waters?

[Answer] I think it is serious, especially as they are appearing in this area. No one could maintain that he got there because of navigational errors. It must be a deliberate maneuver that has brought them there so far up in the Gulf of Bothnia.

[Question] Have you anything to indicate which country is involved?

[Answer] No, we know nothing about that.

[Question] Could one say that the state to which this submarine belongs does not care one iota about what we say and what happened with the submarine incident last year?

[Answer] Unfortunately states do not always care about international law and do not always pay much attention to relations with their neighbors. We have experienced that over the years.

[Question] Is the most likely outcome that the submarine will only be expelled and we shall not find out any more?

[Answer] Apart from the Soviet submarine that went aground in Gasefjarden, we have never succeeded in capturing a submarine, and I do not think that any other country has either. It is very difficult. But, in this case, if there is a submarine still up there, it will face certain difficulties in getting through the Swedish blockade. [end recording]

PYM CLARIFIES GOALS IN LE MATIN INTERVIEW

PM081105 Paris LE MATIN in French 4 Jun 82 p 8

[Jean-Louis Arnaud interview with British Foreign Secretary Francis Pym in London; date not given]

[Text] LE MATIN: Does your commitment mean there must be an unconditional surrender by the Argentines?

Pym: We have never said that. We have pledged to secure the complete withdrawal of the Argentine forces. In our view, a cease-fire absolutely must be linked to that withdrawal to be effective within a period of around 2 weeks, fixed in advance. That is what we are still trying to secure, but we do not have many illusions. The Argentines are not leaning, or have not yet leaned, toward that solution.

LE MATIN: Would you agree to a pause in the military operations in order to give your adversaries a last chance to negotiate?

Pym: We will not agree to a cease-fire without a withdrawal.

LE MATIN: What guarantees would you demand?

Pym: We are on the spot to check that they withdraw. They are on British territory and it is British people whom we have gone to protect. Previously, in April and May, when we tried to negotiate their withdrawal by peaceful means, other arrangements were proposed which we might have accepted, with other people acting as witnesses to their departure. But now that we are there, on British territory, we will take responsibility for that ourselves.

LE MATIN: What about when the fighting is over, which may be very soon....

Pym: Nobody knows. If the Argentines so wish, that could be tomorrow. It is up to them to decide how long it is going to last.

LE MATIN: You are talking about restoring British administration....

Pym: Once we regain possession of the islands, a period of rehabilitation and recovery will start for the inhabitants. There must be a British administration, even if it is not necessarily the same as before. We must see what kind of economic development we can promote, in a direction which may be different from the past and with a long-term outlook which presupposes the restoration of good relations with the Latin American countries. But the immediate priority will be rehabilitation and the restoration of the inhabitants' lifestyle.

LE MATIN: Will that rehabilitation period last for weeks, months or years?

Pym: It all depends on the circumstances in which we regain possession. If the Argentines were to withdraw tomorrow, I do not think it would be very long. Things will be different if the fighting continues, and that cannot now be ruled out. That is why I prefer not to say how long that period will last.

LE MATIN: You have spoken of consulting the inhabitants....

Pym: That goes without saying; the principle of self-determination is embodied in the UN Charter, and the inhabitants' wishes are extremely important for the islands' future.

But in my view, owing to what has happened and taking account of the rehabilitation process, the inhabitants will need time to discuss their options among themselves, to discuss whether they want to return to the former situation or whether they want other arrangements, especially as regards their security. It seems to me that it will take several months for them to draw their own conclusion.

LE MATIN: Does that mean that negotiations between Britain and Argentina must wait until those consultations are completed?

Pym: Well, after all that has happened I think it is difficult to envisage negotiations in the immediate future. Do not forget what the Argentine forces have done to the inhabitants' property. We must expect a difficult relationship between them and the Argentines because of their feelings. I think we must wait and see how we regain possession before pronouncing on the course which relations with Argentina may take.

LE MATIN: Will you maintain a strong military presence with a garrison, submarines and air defense during that period?

Pym: That is very likely in the period immediately following our regaining possession. There will be the question of extending the basis of the inhabitants' security. But that depends on a great many things, on the circumstances in which we regain possession and on what happens to the Argentine Government. Nobody knows what will happen in Argentina....

LE MATIN: What role could the United Nations play?

Pym: The secretary general is still maintaining contacts with the two sides. But there does not seem to be much change on the Argentine side. Nonetheless, we must not despair. Whether through his good offices or through another channel the miracle might happen and the Argentines change their minds and withdraw....

LE MATIN: Would you envisage a UN mandate over the islands?

Pym: That possibility has been discussed, but I do not want to say any more about it now, although that eventuality strikes me as rather unlikely after the events of the past few weeks. At present our main concern is to regain possession, to secure the Argentines' withdrawal and to restore the community and the economic future of the islands' inhabitants.

LE MATIN: What about your diplomatic freedom of action? Is it intact? For instance, at Versailles will Britain be able to uphold views different from the U.S. views, be it in the financial and monetary sphere, on trade or banking relations with the USSR or on North-South relations?

Pym: I can say yes, quite categorically. We think that the EEC countries, the United States and other countries have supported us in the Falklands affair because of the importance which they, like us, attach to the principles involved. In the same way we will judge the problems which are going to be discussed at Versailles on their own merits. That is only doing justice to problems which have long-term implications for each of the summit's participants and indeed for the whole world. Our main concern will be to uphold balanced monetary and fiscal policies, to try to improve the coordination of economic policies, to reaffirm our hostility to protectionism and to show the developing countries our concern for their difficulties and our readiness to help them. I know that the French Government attaches a great deal of importance to these problems, and we hope that the meeting will be fruitful.

LE MATIN: Will you be forced to ask your NATO allies for a redistribution of roles in North Atlantic defense in Bonn next week? Can Britain keep to its financial and military pledges if it continues its military operations in the South Atlantic?

Pym: It is true that our attention is focused on the South Atlantic, but our stance in the defense sphere is still determined by the need to deter any Soviet aggression in Europe. At the same time we need carefully balanced forces to protect all our vital interests. The fact that we were capable of sending a large and powerful intervention force to the South Atlantic so quickly proves that we have succeeded in achieving that. Once the Falklands crisis is over, the government will ascertain whether adjustments are necessary. But if there had to be changes they could only be made in the general framework of our defense policy as defined in the June 1981 white paper which explained the nature of our commitment to NATO and which remains unchanged.

LE MATIN: What about relations with the EEC? The impression on the continent is that the Falklands crisis was a factor in the Brussels solution on the British contribution. Have you abandoned your ideas on the budget and the agricultural policy at the same time as any idea of confrontation?

Pym: Allow me to tell you that we never wanted a confrontation. I also want to refute the idea that there is a link between the Falklands and the solution of the budget problem. Although the recent discussions in Brussels often related to the two subjects, nobody ever suggested that they might be linked. We have greatly appreciated the support given to us during the Falklands crisis by France and the other Community governments. That is an important political signal to Argentina. As regards the budget, I welcome the solution which has been found for 1982 and our agreement on deciding on the arrangements for 1983 and later before the end of November. But that does not mean that we have abandoned our fundamental position on the budget.

LE MATIN: And what do you think of the suggestions which have been made for adapting the Treaty of Rome, of a Europe "with variable geometry" or with several speeds?

Pym: What the British Government wants is to settle the budget problem for a reasonable period so that we can all harness ourselves to the task of developing community policies. And we intend to continue to be full Community members. I do not see how variable geometry could help. What is needed is a real spirit of cooperation to unite us all, and for the Community to function in a more practical way for all its members.

THATCHER RESPONDS TO CRITICISM OF STRATEGY

LD081738 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1632 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Excerpt] The prime minister repeatedly stressed in the Commons today that there can be a swift peace in the Falklands...but only if the Argentines withdraw.

"If the will and consent were there now they have only to contact the commander in the field and the withdrawal would be arranged before battle. So far...there has been no response whatsoever," Mrs Thatcher said. She returned to this theme in a statement on the Versailles summit at the weekend and in questions after MP's returned from their Whitsun recess, and against a background of little news from the islands. In a written answer Mrs Thatcher said: "If the Argentines tell us they are prepared to withdraw we shall enable them to do so with safety, dignity and dispatch." And again she said: "So far we have had no positive response."

Mrs Thatcher also vigorously defended Britain's veto of last week's United Nations Security Council proposal for a cease-fire in the Falklands. Opposition leader Mr Foot said Britain had sought to abuse the veto. This was a "regrettable development." Britain should not have done it. But Mrs Thatcher replied: "In the circumstances we were right to use the British veto. It is only the 20th British veto, compared with the Soviet Union who have vetoed 112 times." Mrs Thatcher explained: "The trouble with the latest resolution was that there was not an unequivocal link between a cease-fire and a withdrawal, which is absolutely vital. There is no obstacle in the way of Argentine withdrawal except the Argentines." Mr Foot said that British diplomacy had not been conducted with the same "skill and courage" as the task force had carried out its military operations.

He urged Mrs Thatcher "to bring before the United Nations Security Council another resolution in which we can get the same kind of support we had two months ago." The best way of preventing further bloodshed and achieving a possible withdrawal of Argentine troops, was through the United Nations.

Replying to Mr Foot after her statement on the Versailles economic summit Mrs Thatcher reaffirmed: "We shall now have to take by force what the Argentines would not give up by adhering to the (earlier) Security Council Resolution." The government had struggled for a negotiated settlement for eight weeks. But Argentina refused to withdraw unless it could retain some of the gains it made following the invasion. "That is totally and utterly insupportable," she said. "The moment the Argentines say they will withdraw we can have peace very quickly. It is the Argentine junta which will not withdraw and if they won't through negotiation they will have to be made to by force."

FOREIGN SECRETARY VIEWS U.S. VOTE IN UN

PY090623 London BBC World Service in English 2115 GMT 8 Jun 82

[From "Calling the Falklands"]

[Text] At no time in his speech [to the combined houses of the British Parliament on 8 June] did Mr Reagan refer to the United States' decision to veto then abstain on Resolution 505 at the UN Security Council last week. However, earlier today the British foreign secretary, Mr Francis Pym, was asked if he was worried by the decision and if it illustrated that the left hand of the American administration didn't know what the right hand was doing.

[Begin Pym recording] I wouldn't accept that, really, because [words indistinct] explain their position, and they have not done that. It has been greatly exaggerated here. It was a strange resolution, complicated resolution at first sight really (?but bearable) or attractive to some countries. But when you looked at it more carefully, you realized what it meant, and it was really rather obscure, and certainly not in accordance with our own policy here in this country.

Now I think [words indistinct] quite right. I mean if that is all we have to worry about, my goodness me how lucky we would be. So one mustn't really make anything more of that.

The point is that the United States came down on Britain's side and offered and has given material and logistic support. We respect the fact that she doesn't want to be militarily involved. We've never asked for it and she's not militarily involved. That's the British responsibility. But she has supported us with material and logistically, and we are very grateful for that, and if anybody has any doubt about the significance of it, well he (?may have) to read the papers and realize what difficulties it has been for the United States vis-a-vis Latin America. But she has supported us, and we are together over it, and we are very grateful for that. [end recording]

ARGENTINE SOLDIERS' LACK OF MOTIVATION REPORTED

PM081213 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 8 Jun 82 p 4

[Brian Hanrahan dispatch: "Argentine Weapons Uncleaned"]

[Text] With the invasion force -- Among 1,400 Argentines taken prisoner in the Falklands no cleaning kit for their weapons was found, and the lack was borne out by the state of many of their weapons. Professional soldiers of the British Army were amazed by this discovery. Many of the Argentines' weapons were so rusty that they were unusable.

One soldier, who spent the hours cleaning a captured rifle, said that when he began he could not move a single part, not even the safety catch.

The feeling among British officers is that lack of motivation among the Argentine soldiers explains their failure to do anything to check the rapid British advance. It is felt the evidence suggests that if defending forces were pushed forward to face British troops, they would surrender once they were away from their commander's influence.

Whether or not this is an accurate assessment is likely to be tested soon enough.

The Gurkhas have meanwhile been given the task of protecting the British rear, and from their base they fly out daily in army Scout helicopters on search-and-destroy missions, looking for groups of Argentine soldiers outflanked in the main advance. They do not worry about two or three, only about formations big enough to be a threat.

I watched one group preparing for their airborne patrol being briefed by one of their officers, who talked softly to them. One produced his kukri, and slit open a tube of camouflage cream, which they passed round, smearing it on their faces and exchanging banter. Then they mounted their helicopters and left, setting down from time to time to check a cottage or an abandoned tent.

But this patrol, like the others for the past few days, failed to discover anything except abandoned arms and ammunition. Privately, the British officers doubt that the men in the hills are likely to do anything except surrender.

They say that the Argentine soldiers who gave up at Goose Green seem happier in captivity then they were in their own army. According to them the ordinary Argentine conscript was left very much to fend for himself while the officers and the NCO's "did all right."

SBS MEMBER KILLED ON RECONNAISSANCE MISSION

LD081546 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1520 GMT 8 Jun 82

[By Bob Hutchinson and Alan Jones, PA defense staff]

[Text] A member of the crack Special Boat Service has been killed during a secret mission on the outskirts of Port Stanley, it was disclosed tonight. Authoritative Whitehall sources said a four-man section from the SBS -- the Royal Marine equivalent of the SAS -- was on a reconnaissance operation ahead of the main body of British troops on East Falklands.

The men were spotted by a patrol of Argentine soldiers, and a fierce gunfight took place. The SPS men were heavily outnumbered, and one of the squad was shot and killed. It is not known if any Argentines were injured.

The incident happened last Wednesday, but was only disclosed today when the Ministry of Defence released the name of the dead man. He was Acting Sergeant Ian Hunt, 28, from Poole, Dorset.

An official spokesman for the ministry would only say he died as a result of "an operation in East Falkland."

FLEET COMMANDER DETAILS TROOPS, SUPPLIES

LD081730 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1559 GMT 8 Jun 82

[By Alan Jones and Charlies Miller, PA staff reporters]

[Text] The number of British troops on the Falklands has now reached 9,000 it was officially disclosed today.

There are more than 5,000 marines and paratroops, and 3,000 guards and Gurkhas supported by hundreds of back-up troops. The Ministry of Defence has been reluctant to give the exact number of British servicemen now poised for the final assault on the 7,000-strong Argentine garrison at Port Stanley.

But Commander Mike Bracelin, from the Operations Staff at the Fleet Headquarters in Northwood, told a London press conference: "Nine thousand men, 20,000 tons of supplies, plus services and supporting arms have been put ashore 8,000 miles from the UK without the loss of a single Royal Marine or soldier."

Cmdr Bracelin also disclosed the liner QE2 had been kept more than 800 miles from the Falklands battle zone in a bid to protect her from Argentine air attacks. More than 3,000 troops from 5 Infantry Brigade were transferred from the Cunard-owned liner to assault ships in appalling weather just off South Georgia.

"Aware that she would be a prime target, every precaution was taken to ensure her safety, and she was directed to South Georgia," said Cmdr Bracelin. "In the shelter of this island she was unloaded in a major operation involving countless movements of helicopters and small craft."

The 3,000 guards and Gurkhas then sailed to the Falklands and were put ashore at the British beachhead at Port San Carlos.

The QE2 is now on her way home and is due to arrive in Southampton on Friday.

3 VESSELS DAMAGED IN ARGENTINE AIR ATTACK

LD082340 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2333 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Excerpt] A British frigate and two landing ships were hit during Argentine air attacks over the Falklands tonight -- and at least two of the raiders were shot down.

The Ministry of Defence [MOD] said that HMS Plymouth, a Type 12 frigate with a crew of 235, "suffered some damage" and there were five casualties. The landing ships Sir Tristram and Sir Galahad were also attacked and suffered damage as they unloaded stores.

At least two Argentine planes were shot down, said MOD Spokesman Mr Ian McDonald, one other was a "possible" and at least four others were damaged. Reports from Buenos Aires claim that a British frigate was sunk in the attack, that a large landing craft was destroyed and two others were damaged.

The MOD also said that British troops have captured the settlements of Fitzroy and Bluff Cove, 15-miles southwest of Port Stanley.

Mr McDonald could give no details about where the attacks on the task force ships took place. But the reports from Buenos Aires suggested that Argentine planes swooped on the vessels as they supported the British action at Fitzroy.

The MOD statement said: "Element of 5 Brigade are now firmly established at Fitzroy Settlement and Bluff Cove. Over the last few days initial deployments to that area have been reinforced and the troops and their support are now ready to move forward.

"In the course of this evening, Argentine aircraft attacked ships from the task force. During these attacks, at least two Argentine aircraft were shot down, a further one was possibly shot down and at least four others were damaged. Two of these were seen trailing smoke.

"The frigate HMS Plymouth suffered some damage. Initial reports are that five casualties from HMS Plymouth have been removed to another ship and are receiving treatment.

"The logistic landing ships Sir Tristram and Sir Galahad, while unloading stores, were also attacked and suffered some damage. We have no reports on casualties. No additional information is yet available in Whitehall or in the service information centres. Please do not ring them. As soon as we have any information a further announcement will be made."

Capture of Settlements

LD090010 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2354 GMT 8 Jun 82

[By Robert Hutchinson, PA defense correspondent]

[Text] British troops -- in a secret three-day operation -- have captured the strategically vital settlements of Fitzroy and Bluff Cove, 15 miles south west of Port Stanley. They were helicoptered in after a 50-pence phone call made by their commander told them Argentine forces had quit.

A British patrol discovered that telephone lines from Swan Inlet to Fitzroy were still working, so Brigadier Tony Wilson, commanding officer of 5 Infantry Brigade, stepped into the nearest phone box, inserted a 50-pence piece and called villager Reg Binney.

"Are the Argies still at Fitzroy?" he was asked. "No" came the reply. "Why don't you come over and join us?"

So Brig Wilson sent troops on a 50-mile helicopter dash from the beachhead at Port San Carlos to Fitzroy. Low cloud hampered Argentine observation posts on the mountains above. The move was a departure from the plan to stage a two-pronged pincer attack on Stanley, with sappers preparing the track from Darwin for vehicles.

The Falkland Company ship, the M.V. Monsunen, which was damaged in 2 Paras attack on Goose Green, was hurriedly repaired and moved round to Bluff Cove, a few miles from Fitzroy, carrying supplies for the forward troops.

Over the next two to three days, troops were flown down from Goose Green to Lively Island, south of Choiseul Sound, and then moved onwards to Fitzroy and Bluff Cove by landing ship. The operation was done in the greatest secrecy, as the Argentines apparently were still unaware of the British move east.

The enemy observation posts on the ridge above the new beachhead were knocked out by patrols of the 7th Gurkha Rifles, moving stealthily through the night with their kukri knives, overwhelming each position silently. The problem facing British commanders was that there was little air cover for the forward position at Bluff Cove against bombing raids by Argentine aircraft.

The wooden bridge at Fitzroy, identified on invasion maps as "difficult to by-pass," had been partially destroyed by Argentine forces, and British engineers worked around the clock to rebuild it. That bridge and the small beachhead at Bluff Cove is now protected by deadly Rapier missiles as the British troops continue to move forward to Stanley along the southern arm of the pincer movement.

The MV Monsunen was attacked on May 22 by a British frigate while she was under Argentine command. She was beached and abandoned by her crew but was later found at Goose Green with a rope around her propeller.

Courageous 19-year-old Jane Hardcastle, daughter of the Falkland Island's Company manager at Goose Green, dived into the icy waters to unravel the rope. She is a keen skin diver.

A group of Falkland Islanders then used the ship to ferry ammunition to Five Brigade in Bluff Cove, risking air attacks by Argentine aircraft.

4 Mirages Shot Down

LD090636 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0621 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Text] Four Argentinian Mirage jets have been shot down by two British Sea Harriers, the Ministry of Defence said in a statement today. The news follows last night's ministry announcement that a British frigate and two landing ships had been hit and damaged during earlier air attacks over the Falklands yesterday.

In today's statement, the ministry said: "We have reports on a further Argentine air attack at last light yesterday. Four Argentine Mirage aircraft attacking the task force were intercepted by two Sea Harriers. All the Mirages were brought down, while our aircraft returned safely.

"We have no further details of British casualties or of the damage sustained by our ships in yesterday's air attacks."

The British ships hit yesterday were the frigate HMS Plymouth, which "suffered some damge" and five casualties. The landing ships were Sir Tristram and Sir Galahad, which were attacked as they unloaded stores.

OFFICIAL TELLS ISLANDERS OF FUTURE PLANS

PY090628 London BBC World Service in English 2115 GMT 8 Jun 82

[From "Calling the Falklands" Message by British Foreign Office official (Cranley Hounslow) for residents of the Falkland Islands — recorded]

[Text] There are a few particular points I want to make today, especially to those of you who are still living in parts of the Falkland Islands which are under Argentine occupation. First, I must say that even at this late stage we have not given up all hope of achieving a peaceful solution. Our friends and allies are continuing to give us staunch help in our efforts to get the Argentines to see sense. For instance, last weekend at the conference at Versailles in France, the leaders of the principal countries of the free world gave Britain strong support. Speaking afterwards on behalf of them all, the president of France said: We wanted to affirm our solidarity with Great Britain, who had been the victim of aggression. Great Britain's rights must be preserved. We shall do everything, once its rights have been regained, so that peace triumphs over war.

The Argentines themselves now seem to realize that the removal of their forces from the islands is inevitable. Pronouncements in their press by members of the junta indicate that they are preparing their people for this. The British Government has no wish, however, to humiliate Argentina. Even now the troops remaining on the islands could be removed peaceably and honorably and without further tragic loss of life if only their leaders would show statesmanship and humanity.

So far, unfortunately, the present Argentine Government has shown little sign of such qualities. So if they force us to take further military action to end their invasion, we shall plainly have to do so, and what then?

That brings me to the second point I want to make, which is that we are giving serious thought to what will need to be done to rebuild the economy on your islands and to restore your way of life. I realize, as you must, that firm stands cannot be made until we have been able to take stock of the position once the fighting ends. But we fully understand how important it will then be to get things back to normal as soon as possible: to get the school system working again; to enable the people who have had to leave the islands to return there; to repair the damaged [word indistinct] from buildings; to restock and reopen the stores; and provide the markets for your produce. These things have high priority, and I hope, as I am sure you do, that it will not be long now before we are free to concentrated fully on the problems of peace instead of force, or war.

FOREIGN OFFICE DENOUNCES ISRAELI INVASION

PM081151 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 8 Jun 82 p 6

[John Miller, diplomatic staff report: "Israel 'Going Wrong Way About It'"]

[Text] Britain made it clear yesterday that it had little or no sympathy with the Israeli invasion of southern Lebanon. Mr Douglas Hurd, Foreign Office minister of state, said the Israeli's had embarked on a "punitive expedition" and they were "going about it the wrong way."

He was reflecting the government's view which had already been expressed in Britain's vote in the United Nations during the weekend on a resolution calling for an Israeli withdrawal. Mrs Thatcher has also said that the Israeli reaction to the shooting of Mr Argov, the Israeli ambassador, in London, was "disproportionate."

The Lebanese ambassador to London, Dr Khalil Makkawi, earlier called at the Foreign Office and saw Mr Hurd in order to draw Britain's attention to the "outrage" of the invasion. Mr Hurd said no direct British aid for the Lebanon had been envisaged although the government would be prepared to listen to appeals for humanitarian aid.

He said Tel Aviv was mistaken if it thought it could create a sort of zone of occupied Arab lands "to sit on in the hope it will protect the heartland of Israel." "I don't think that will work," he said in an interview.

Mr Hurd said the Israelis had launched their invasion "before they had any idea who shot Mr Argov."

Thatcher Condemnation

LD081604 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1644 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] The Israeli invasion of the Lebanon was condemned in the Commons today by the prime minister. She told MP's at question time that the government supported the UN Security Council's resolution requiring the territorial integrity of the Lebanon to be respected.

"We equally condemn the aggressive activity and hostility which has taken place across the Israel-Lebanon border," she said. "It is important to condemn this kind of aggression and hostility wherever it occurs. "It is equally important to uphold the right to self-determination, which, if one demands it for oneself, one must expect that one applies it to others."

Mrs Thatcher then added: "I am on the side of certain principles which I will continually and have continually upheld."

There was an important link between the Falklands and the Palestinian people, she told MP's, and we wanted to see the territorial integrity of the Lebanon restored. "We believe in self-determination as a principle. It is important for the Falklands and for the Palestinian people. We have never hesitated to accept that."

Mrs Thatcher also condemned the "utterly brutal attack" on the Israeli ambassador in London last week, and praised the police for their handling of the crime. "We will do everything to stamp out tyranny and terrorism wherever it occurs," she said.

Earlier, Tory backbencher Mr Tony Marlow (Northampton N) had described Israeli Prime Minister Mr Menachen Begin as an "Israeli fuhrer" and should get his "extermination squads" and "infanticides" out of the Lebanon.

PLO SAYS 'ARAFAT NOT INVITED BY DENKTAS

NC041338 Athens NEWS in English 4 Jun 82 p 12

[Text] Leading figures of the Palestine Liberation Organisation in Beirut yesterday firmly denied a Lebanese newspaper report that Turkish Cypriot leader Rauf Denktas had invited PLO leader Yasir 'Arafat to visit the Turkish-occupied northern part of Cyprus, the ATHENS NEWS AGENCY (ANA) reported from the Lebanese capital.

Responding to a question by the agency's Beirut correspondent, the unnamed sources remarked that "the Cypriot people have shown unwavering support for the long struggle of the Palestinians, and one cannot forget this, or fail to view it in its proper perspective. "In his coming visit to Cyprus, the leader of the Palestinian movement will honor precisely this support, thus returning the love of the Cypriot people, magnanimously extended even during difficult and tragic moments of Cyprus history", the Palestinian sources said.

KIPRIANOU, ROLANDHIS ARRIVE IN NEW YORK 7 JUNE

NC080520 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 0330 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] President Kiprianou, accompanied by Foreign Minister Rolandhis, arrived late last night in New York from Athens. This afternoon, he will meet with UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar. President Kiprianou was met at New York Airport by Cypriot Permanent Delegate at the UN Mousioutas, Greek Permanent Delegate Dhoundas, a representative of the UN secretary general, by representatives of Greek-Americans and by others.

Meeting With Perez de Cuellar

NC081906 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1630 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] President of the Republic Kiprianou met with UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar this afternoon in New York. The meeting was also attended, on the Cypriot side, by Foreign Minister Rolandhis, Cypriot UN Representative Mousioutas, the Greek Cypriot side's representative at the intercommunal talks Mavrommatis and Ambassadors Mikhailidhis and Pieridhis. The following persons participated for the United Nations: UN Secretary General Special Representative in Cyprus Gobbi, director of political affairs of the international organization's secretariat, George Sherry and Special Assistant to the Secretary General (Biko).

Then Kiprianou had a private meeting with Perez de Cuellar. The talks will continue this evening during a dinner which Perez de Cuellar will give in honor of the President of the Republic and will be concluded during a new meeting next Friday.

Neither Kiprianou nor the secretary general made any statements after today's meeting. However, according to authoriative sources, the entire spectrum of the Cyprus problem was studied, that is, both the international and the internal aspects. According to the same sources, a very broad review was made of the situation concerning the dialogue and the issue of the Cyprus problem's discussion before the UN General Assembly was examined. The first issue Kiprianou raised was that of the missing perons and the exchange of views on this issue was a lengthy one. In addition, broad reference was made to the need for a visit to Cyprus by the working group of the committee on human rights for missing persons following an invitation by the Cypriot Government.

The secretary general demonstrated understanding on the issue of the missing persons and manifested a very positive stance. Kiprianou also touched upon the Famagusta issue which, as envisaged in the agreement of 19 May, constitutes a priority issue.

A communique issued by the United Nations on the meeting, mentions that an extended exchange of views took place on the most significant aspects of the situation in Cyprus. The communique mentions that developments connected with the intercommunal talks were discussed, especially within the framework of the secretary general's good offices mission and also the issue of the missing persons. The communique adds that Kiprianou and the secretary general agreed to keep in close contact.

Statements Exchanged

NC090758 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 0430 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Text] During a dinner last night, President Kiprianou and UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar continued the talks they started in the afternoon. The dinner, which was given by Mr Perez de Cuellar in honor of President Kiprianou, ended a short while ago.

Addressing President Kiprianou, the UN secretary general reaffirmed that he is committed to helping to find a just and lasting solution to the Cyprus issue. Mr Perez de Cuellar added that the Cyprus problem preoccupies him continously. He stressed that he will exert every effort to promote the problem in the proper direction. Among other things, Mr Perez de Cuellar said: We know each other very well and with our close cooperation will bring our mission to an end.

In reply, President Kiprianou thanked Mr Perez de Cuellar for his hospitality, genuine interest and his honesty in the Cyprus issue. Mr Kiprianou added: I hope that you, as secretary general, will be the one who will implement the UN resolutions on Cyprus. Mr Kiprianou then said that a just and lasting solution of the Cyprus issue would not only be beneficial to Cyprus and its people in the very dangerous and sensitive area of the eastern Mediterranean, but also for international peace. Cyprus and its people, President Kiprianou stressed, do not ask anything more than the rights of all other peoples -- freedom, the end of the occupation and the restoration of their rights.

Present at the dinner were, among others: Foreign Minister Rolandhis; Interlocutor Mavrommatis; Cyprus UN Representative Mousioutas; Greek UN Representative Dhountas; the UN secretary general's representative in Cyprus, Gobbi; and UN Under Secretary Erik Suy.

President Kiprianou's talks with the UN secretary general will conclude with a meeting on Friday.

GOVERNMENT ALLEGEDLY TO SEEK GOBBI RECALL

NC071705 Nicosia O AGON in Greek 7 Jun 82 p 1

[Text] According to authoriative reports available to us, the Cypriot Government will ask the UN secretary general to replace his special envoy to Cyprus, Gobbi, because the statements he makes create the impression that progress is being achieved in the intercommunal talks and this is contrary to the truth.

In the past, the government had also expressed its opposition to the UN secretary general in reference to certain statements by Gobbi and asked that his attention should be drawn to this fact.

In the meantime: The Turks informed UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar that they would accept no new initiative on the town of Famagusta, because this issue is under discussion within the framework of the intercommunal talks.

According to our reports, the Turkish Cypriot leadership, acting through Onan [Turkish Cypriot spokesman] asked Gobbi for explanations in reference to his statement on Famagusta and made it clear that it would accept no new UN proposals on Famagusta.

After the position expressed by the Turks, the Cypriot Government is convinced that the contacts the UN secretary general will be having with President Kiprianou and Turkish Cypriot leader Denktas, will only be of a formal character.

Government Comment

NC081828 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1630 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] Referring to a press report that the Cypriot Government will ask for Gobbi's replacement, the government spokesman stated that no decision has been made by the government to ask for Gobbi's replacement.

TURKISH CYPRIOTS DENOUNCE ISRAELI ATTACKS ON LEBANON

TA081143 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in English to Cyprus 1115 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] The Israeli aggression in Lebanon has been strongly condemned by the acting president of the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus, Mr Konuk, and the prime minister, Mr Cagatay.

Mr Konuk called for an immediate and unconditional withdrawal of Israel from Lebanon and all occupied Arab territories. He said that the Israeli aggression endangered peace and stability in the region and that there could be no more silence in the face of such Israeli actions.

The prime minister, Mr Cagatay, said Israel's attack on Lebanon and the killing of innocent people as retribution for the shooting of its ambassador in London was something which should cause indignation and not only condemnation. Mr Cagatay said countries with great responsibilities should stop the Israeli aggression by taking more effective measures.

PORTUGAL URGED TO BRING ASSASSINS TO JUSTICE

TA081804 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1600 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 8 Jun (AA) -- Turkey has asked the Portuguese Government to apprehend and bring to justice the assassins of Turkish Embassy Administrative Officer Erkut Akbay immediately.

The Portuguese ambassador to Ankara was invited to the Foreign Ministry where Deputy Undersecretary Oktay Cankardes transmitted his government's request. The Turkish Government also asked Portugal to take the necessary measures for better protection of the Turkish Embassy staff.

Akbay was shot dead with four bullets in the head Monday by an Armenian assassin as he and his wife were getting out of their car in front of their home.

Mrs Akbay was also seriously wounded in the head.

Akbay will be buried in Turkey with a state funeral, Foreign Ministry officials said.

AIRLIFTING OF AFGHAN REFUGEES TO BEGIN IN JUNE

TA081838 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1510 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 8 Jun (AA) — Airlifting of 4,350 Afghan refugees from Pakistan to Turkey will start 28 June, according to tentative plans.

Foreign Ministry sources said the plans will become final with the approval of the National Security Council, the Government of Pakistan, and the UN High Commissioner for Refugees.

The transport by Turkish Airlines charter flights of the Afghan refugees and their families, together with the property, will be completed by mid June, they added.

DRAFT CONSTITUTION TO BE READY BY 10 JULY

TA081820 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1550 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 8 Jun (AA) — The Consultative Assembly committee charged with drafting the new constitution hopes to complete the draft and submit it to the Assembly speaker by 10 July.

Sixty-three articles have already been drafted, committee members told ANATOLIA Agency and several constitutional principles have already emerged, such as:

The high courts will not be merged, and the Constitutional Court will remain as a basic institution of the state.

The economic model will be described as a "mixed economy" and the principle of the "welfare state" will be preserved.

Voting age will remain unchanged at 21.

The preamble will be drafted after the rest of the document is completed, the sources said, and expected to wrap up the whole task of drafting by 10 July.

SECURITY FORCES CAPTURE 10 TERRORISTS IN ISTANBUL

TA081840 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Summary] The Press and Public Relations Office of the 1st Army and Istanbul, Canakkale, Edirne, Tekirdag and Kirklareli Martial Law Command has issued a statement saying that 10 militants of an illegal organization have been captured in operations conducted by the security forces in Istanbul. Together with the militants, the security forces also seized documents belonging to the organization and illegal publications.

LIBYA DENIES TREATING TURKISH WORKERS UNFAIRLY

NC081515 Istanbul GUNAYDIN in Turkish 4 Jun 82 pp 1, 4

[Text] Ankara (UBA) -- Osman Feytouri Isa, secretary general of the Libyan Socialist People's Bureau in Turkey, has stated that it is the Turkish employers in Libya and not the Libyans who treat Turkish workers in Libya unfairly.

Adding that Libya does not owe even 5 kurus to any Turkish contractor, Osman Feytouri Isa continued: "There have recently been reports that Turkish workers in Libya are unable to obtain their wages. These dealings are going on entirely between the Turkish employers and the workers, and there is nothing we Libyans can do about it. If the Turkish workers in Libya resort to the local People's Committees, these committees, which operate like just courts, will preserve their rights."

Recalling that the volume of business his country has transacted with turkey has risen to $11 billion, Feytouri added that Turkish firms are given priority in all contracts and concluded: "Countries hostile to Islam are unhappy about this situation, so they are engaged in intensive propaganda to damage these friendly relations."

HURRIYET DESCRIBES TREATMENT OF TURKS ON RHODES

NC080808 Istanbul HURRIYET in Turkish 4 Jun 82 p 8

[Faruk Zabci report]

[Excerpts] Rhodes (HURRIYET) -- The plight of the Turks in Rhodes is continually deteriorating. The Turks in the Aegean are being subjected to oppression which is different from the oppression the Turks in Western Thrace are being subjected to. Particularly after the 1974 peace operation, the Greeks have been looking upon our kinsmen as spies, and they have increased their oppressive measures to an unbearable extent. Those who resist oppression are ill-treated at the government departments. They are refused passports for travel abroad.

The Turkish television is jammed. While the Papandreou Government is trying to get rid of the Turks on the island it is trying to destroy the historic works left by the Ottomans.

While 3 years ago the Turks on the island numbered 3,000, today only 800 of them remain. It looks as if there won't be any left after the next few years. Most of our kinsmen there are preparing to leave for Turkey because of the ill-treatment meted out to them.

A Turk with whom we discussed the situation told us: "Our children are being Hellenized; our mosques are closed. We are unable to worship in them because we have no hodjas."

TCP EXPRESSES SOLIDARITY WITH PALESTINIAN PEOPLE

TA090834 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Turkish Communist Party Central Committee statement 7 June -- read by announcer]

[Text] The Zionist Israeli administration has begun its fifth war in the Middle East. It has invaded a section of Lebanon. Using U.S. weapons, it is conducting a wholesale massacre against Lebanon and the Palestinian people with air, land and sea attacks. It wants to annihilate the progressive Lebanese national movement and the PLO.

It is evident that the Israeli administration, which disregards UN resolutions and the protests raised by all countries, is above all relying on the support of the U.S. administration. This barbaric attack by the Israeli Zionists is taking place at a time when the Soviet Union, other socialist countries, and peaceful forces have intensified their moves to find a peaceful solution to the Middle East problem and when the second UN disarmament conference has convened. It is once more demonstrated that the Israeli Zionists and their supporters, the U.S. administration, constitute the main factor threatening peace and security in the Middle East and are the archenemies of the people in the Middle East and of world and regional peace.

How sincere is the opposition to the Israeli aggrersion expressed by the junta, which is begging the U.S. administration for support in a bid to uphold the tyrannical regime in our country? Why has the junta not yet severed diplomatic relations with Israel? How can the junta's protest against Israel be compatible with its welcoming of the aggressive units of U.S. imperialism in our country? Are not the U.S. Rapid Deployment Forces directed against the Arab people who are currently being attacked by Israel?

The Turkish Communist Party [TCP] is in full solidarity with the Lebanese and Palestinian people in these difficult days. The TCP expresses its total support for the struggle of the progressive Lebanese national forces and the PLO. The TCP calls on our people to be in solidarity with the Lebanese and Palestinian people.

SYRIAN TRADE MISSION HOLDS MEETING WITH BUSINESSMEN

TA081811 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1555 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 8 Jun (AA) -- A Syrian trade mission headed by Deputy Chairman of its National Chamber of Trade (Muhammad Mahroush) of Aleppo, met with Turkish businessmen at the Ankara Chamber of Trade Tuesday.

Chairman of the Ankara Chamber of Trade Turgut Ilhan said Turkish entrepreneurs were ready to consider any requests for service or exports from Turkey.

He listed major export goods, such as foodstuffs, textiles, furniture, electrical appliances, and construction materials in which Syria might be interested.

(Muhammad Mahroush) called for easing of export-import procedures between the two countries and an expansion of the customs and transit trade and carrying agreement of 23 March 1982.

Tourism was another field of potential cooperation, he said, calling for easing of passport procedures, and waiving of the passport requirement for relatives on either side of the border.

AUSTRIA

'VIENNA PEACE FESTIVAL' PLANNED FOR 6-8 AUG

AU041425 Vienna VOLKSSTIMME in German 4 Jun 82 p 4

[Summary] A "Vienna peace festival" with "workshops," seminars and discussions on the topic of peace and disarmament, theater performances and a musical program will be held in Vienna 6-8 August 1982. The event is organized jointly by the Austrian Students Association [the umbrella organization of Austrian student organizations] and the British ENC (European Nuclear Disarmament) group. Participants from all parts of Europe are expected to attend. There will be three peace marches to Vienna: One from West Berlin via Cologne, the second from Italy, and the third "from the Black Forest [in the FRG] to the Black Sea" with a stopover in Vienna. There will be bicycle tours from London and Oslo and peace trains from Minsk and Helsinki, as well as a "peace plane" from Iceland.

At a Vienna press conference on 3 June, Ferdl Stockinger, chairman of the Austrian Students Association, described the planned festival as a "highly political event" but stressed that the organizers refrained from providing any formal political platform so as to allow everyone to attend and bring his own ideas. According to Stockinger, there is only an appeal that is not binding for anyone. This appeal calls inter alia for the removal of all nuclear weapons and bases from Europe, the disbanding of military blocs, compliance with the UN resolutions on nuclear disarmament and human rights, as well as for the absolute reduction of global military expenditures.

PAHR TO VISIT VIETNAM; VIENNA VISITORS ANNOUNCED

AU071353 Vienna DIE PRESSE in German 5-6 Jun 82 p 2

[Special DIE PRESSE report by "A.U."]

[Excerpts] Vienna -- Foreign Minister Pahr will visit Vietnam in mid-July. This visit has now been finally arranged. After a brief stopover in Thailand, the Austrian foreign minister will presumably also visit Laos. In both countries Pahr will not primarily concern himself with bilateral problems -- trade relations show little promise of expanding in view of the economic problems in Indochina -- but will discuss the situation in this contested region in his capacity of chairman of the Conference on Kampuchea.

In a few weeks Pahr will receive in Vienna European Community Commission Chairman Thorn, as well as the foreign ministers of Thailand and Malaysia. In the summer, Spanish Government chief Calvo-Sotelo will pay a private visit to Pahr. Spain would like to bring the Madrid CSCE conference, which is to meet again in November, to a productive conclusion and is counting on Austria's role in this respect.

GREECE

AGAMEMNON-82 COMBINED MANEUVERS START 9 JUN

NC081614 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1500 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] Large-scale maneuvers by the three branches of the Greek Armed Forces, designated Agamemnon-82, will start tomorrow [9 June] in the east Macedonian area. The maneuvers will continue through Saturday and fall within the annual program for the maintenance of the operational preparedness of the armed forces. Army, naval and air force units will participate in a broad spectrum of operations, including offensive operations for the capture of specific targets, parachute drops and landing operations with air support. The last phase of the maneuvers will be observed by representatives of the country's military command and political leadership, who have been invited to attend.

DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 112 10 June 1982

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

Lebanon Said To Overshadow Versailles Summit [LE MONDE 8 Jun] A 1

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Demonstrators Trigger Sirens During Reagan Speech J 1
Saudi Foreign Minister Arrives Unexpectedly J 1
Argentina Cancels Air Traffic Agreement J 1
Bundestag Criticizes Israeli Invasion of Lebanon J 2
Official Complains to GDR on Visiting Rights J 2

FRANCE

President Mitterrand Holds Press Conference K 1
Panamanian President Meets Mitterrand in Paris K 7
L'HUMANITE Opposes Changing Soviet Contract [31 May] K 8
Foreign Minister Cheysson Reviews Versailles [LE MONDE 6-7 Jun] K 9

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Spadolini, Colombo Depart for Bonn NATO Summit L 1
PLO Delegation Meets Socialist Party's Craxi L 1

PORTUGAL

Daily Reports Balsemao's Paris Press Conference [DIARIO DE NOTICIAS 3 Jun] M 1
Socialist Party Criticizes Cabinet Reshuffle M 1

SPAIN

Calvo-Sotelo Comments on Sentences for Coup Plotters [YA 5 Jun] N 1
Prime Minister Receives Opposition Leaders [LA VANGUARDIA 28 May] N 2
Royo Arrives in Madrid; Makes No Statement N 3
PCE Executive Committee Rejects Carillo's Resignation N 4
Further Resignation Reported N 4

NORDIC AFFAIRS

DENMARK

AKTUELT Sees No Alternative to Jorgensen [5 Jun] P 1

FINLAND

Surveillance Intensified After Sub Reports P 1
Communist Party Faction Softens Hard Line P 1
[HUFVUDSTADSBLADET 4 Jun]
Briefs: Soviet-Finnish Cooperation P 3

NORWAY

Parliament Votes Money for Nordstat Studies P 3
[BERLINGSKE TIDENDE 4 Jun]

SWEDEN

Poles Arrive in Airplane, Request Asylum P 3
Navy Continues Search for Foreign Subs P 3

UNITED KINGDOM

Thatcher Envisages Multinational Force on Falklands Q 1
Pym Says Falklands' Future 'Open Question' Q 2
Four UK Vessels Damaged, One Feared Sunk Q 2
Statement on Casualties Q 3
BBC Report on Fighting Q 4

GREECE

Papandreou Departs for Bonn NATO Meeting S 1
Discusses NATO, Reagan Meetings S 1
Peace March to U.S. Embassy Scheduled for 10 Jun S 1

TURKEY

PLO Representative, Arab Envoys Hold News Conference T 1
Government To Extend Medical Aid to PLO T 1
Armenian Diocese Condemns Attack on Diplomats T 1
'Our Radio' Reports Prison Hunger Strike in Istanbul T 1

OTHER COUNTRIES

EUROPEAN COMMUNITY

EC Foreign Ministers Condemn Israeli Move in Lebanon U 1

CANADA

Trudeau Appeals for Israeli Withdrawal From Lebanon U 1

LEBANON SAID TO OVERSHADOW VERSAILLES SUMMIT

PM090945 Paris LE MONDE in French 8 Jun 82 p 5

[Maurice Delarue Report: "A Meeting Troubled by Near East Events"]

[Text] The Versailles summit did not end as well as Mr Mitterrand might have hoped. On Friday evening the idea that the conference would be a date to remember in international financial history was beginning to be strengthened and the main fear was that a fierce battle in the Falklands might tarnish the image of a "new Bretton Woods." Aside form the fact that the economic results did not completely live up to that expectation, another region of the world suddenly distracted attention.

During his press conference on Saturday, Mr Mitterrand nonetheless turned a deaf ear: When he was reminded that Mr Cheysson had, by his own admission, had a "disastrous" dinner the previous day, he replied that the Falklands were probably the cause, whereas the external relations minister and his colleagues had been "astounded" by the events in Lebanon.

On Sunday morning, when they learned of the number of people killed in Lebanon, the seven decided that the summit could not remain silent although it was essentially devoted to economic matters. A statement was drafted and the heads of state and of government said they were "overwhelmed" by the news from Lebanon. But shortly before noon, the news of the Israeli ground intervention reached Versailles.

The seven thought they could no longer maintain a silence which had become onerous. The statement was therefore distributed to the press immediately, the spokesman being told to explain that although that stance might seem "out of date" the heads of state and of government were waiting until the evening to say more.

Mr Mitterrand's Hesitations

However, addressing the press in his capacity as chairman of the seven heads of state and government and in their presence late in the afternoon, Mr Mitterrand merely expressed "their very strong disapproval" and recalled that Lebanon was entitled "like any other country, to independence, freedom, unity and sovereignty over its national territory."

Speaking at a press conference on his own behalf, later, the president was unable to stop there. All the political questions aside from two, concerned Lebanon. In reply to the last one expressed indistinctly by a Lebanese journalist who was visibly very upset, Mr Mitterrand said: "France has no hesitation in convincing [as published] the other military interventions on Lebanese territory when they were carried out against the Lebanese Government's will." In his previous answers Mr Mitterrand had "deplored" the Israeli attack in much less categorical terms.

The seven's joint statement on Lebanon concluded by saying the "each of the governments will use all the means at its disposal" to ensure that peace and security are restored throughout the region. Mr Mitterrand was questioned on the nature of those means. His answers show that they are of two types: 1 -- diplomatic and political, in particular, through the United Nations; 2 -- "in the field" since France is taking part in the UN interim force in Lebanon. But any intervention necessarily depends on the Lebanese Government, the president of the republic stressed. "It is up to it to make the request," he said.

Even the convening of an international conference, "an idea which is as good as any other," Mr Mitterrand said, presupposes that Beirut take the initiative. As for taking measures "similar to the ones which you have already taken against Argentina," in other words economic sanctions, Mr Mitterrand evaded the question: "We may or we may not."

While Mr Mitterrand was speaking to the press, each head of state and of government was doing likewise under the arches of the Orangerie, aside from Mr Reagan, who made Mr Haig his spokesman. The latter immediately said that he was "extremely worried" by the escalation in the violence in Lebanon. He announced that Mr Habib, the State Department's Near East expert, had been summoned to Versailles, had met with Mr Reagan and would be in Jerusalem this Monday. When it was pointed out to him that Mr Mitterrand had "condemned the Israeli action," Mr Haig gave an evasive answer and recalled that the United States had always tried to ensure that the cease-fire prevailed and to prevent any bloodshed.

The other political questions which dominated the summit ws the Falklands battle. "Mr Mitterrand has been absolutely splendid," Mrs Thatcher told the journalists. "You should have heard," she added, "the way in which he unreservedly backed Britain's position, which he described as one of solidarity and unity. All the nations at the summit have been absolutely firm."

It would be going too far to say that the summit gave Mrs Thatcher the "go-ahead" for launching the assault on Port Stanley, if only because she did not ask for it. All her summit partners were grateful to her for that just as they were grateful for the fact that the battle was not launched while they were together.

Nonetheless, Mr Mitterrand was justified in saying on behalf of the seven: "We were anxious to affirm our full solidarity with Britain, whose national interests and national pride have been attacked in this situation -- a solidarity which is natural: Britain's right must be restored, but of course we will make every effort to ensure that once that right is recognized, peace prevails over war."

That last clause of the sentence contains a limit which Mrs Thatcher may not have noticed. The important thing for the French Government is to ensure that the law does not give way to force and that the Argentine military action is repelled. Nonetheless, the president of the republic thinks, that from the historical and geographical viewpoints, Britain's legitimate right to the archipelago is not proven. "Once Britain has recovered the Falklands," Mr Mitterrand said in his press conference, "a new phase will start."

What should happen once the battle for Port Stanley has been won by the British? The implicit French reply is that Britain will then have to negotiate with Argentina on a new status which is fair to both. That does not seem to be Mrs Thatcher's intention since, judging from her replies to the journalists, she does not see any other solution than "self-determination" for the 1,800 inhabitants.

The United States, like Mr Mitterrand, is apparently in favor of a "moderate" political solution. Thus, although the views of Paris and Washington do not always coincide as regards international economic affairs, the two capitals are very close to each other in political affairs.

DEMONSTRATORS TRIGGER SIRENS DURING REAGAN SPEECH

LD091624 Hamburg DPA in German 1530 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 9 Jun (DPA) -- During the speech by U.S. President Ronald Reagan to the Bundestag in Bonn on Wednesday afternoon several sirens began to wail. DPA has learned that demonstrators had given the radio signal for the continuous "all-clear" tone. First the police thought there was a technical fault. The fire brigade, however, gradually began to suspect that demonstrators were the "culprits." An hour after the start of the action, firebrigade technicians were still vainly trying to silence the sirens.

On Wednesday some 70 or 80 Greens demonstrated opposite the chancellor's office with a "death campaign" against the arms policy and the visit of Reagan to Bonn. Among the participants were the former army general, Gerd Bastian; the dissident exiled from the GDR, Rudolf Bahro; the artist Josef Beuys; the futurologist Robert Jungk, and one of the three chairmen of the Greens, Petra Kelly. On the march from the offices of the Greens to the chancellor's office they bore posters of Martin Luther King and Mahatma Ghandi as well as banners condemning arms and war. Previously the Greens demonstrated in front of the Turkish Embassy against the military regime in the NATO country Turkey.

In spite of a police ban a Bonn peace initiative wants to hold an ecumenical peace service on Thursday morning directly in front of the Bundestag building -- thus within the banned zone -- with the motto of the GDR peace movement "Swords to ploughshares."

SAUDI FOREIGN MINISTER ARRIVES UNEXPECTEDLY

LD101152 Hamburg DPA in German 1106 GMT 10 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 10 Jun (DPA) -- Saudi Foreign Minister Prince Sa'ud al-Faysal has arrived unexpectedly in Bonn in order, as the Saudi side has announced, to speak [words indistinct] with President Reagan and other participants in the NATO summit. The initiative has obviously come from the government in Riyadh in connection with the Israeli invasion of Lebanon.

Prince Sa'ud will probably also meet Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. He already met with Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher at midday.

ARGENTINA CANCELS AIR TRAFFIC AGREEMENT

LD091548 Hamburg DPA in German 1513 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Excerpt] Bonn, 8 Jun (DPA) -- Argentina has given notice of the cancellation of the air traffic agreement with the FRG. The Federal Ministry of Transport said on Wednesday in response to an enquiry that the cancellation was contained in a note handed over to the German Embassy in Buenos Aires the previous day. The reason given is the FRG's stance on the EEC boycott of Argentina in connection with the Falklands conflict.

The German Lufthansa airline in Cologne added that it has lost landing rights in Argentina "for the time being" from July. An airline representative is at present in Buenos Aires for negotiations.

BUNDESTAG CRITICIZES ISRAELI INVASION OF LEBANON

LD091246 Hamburg DPA in German 1130 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Excerpts] Bonn, 9 Jun (DPA) -- the Bundestag and Federal Government unanimously expressed great concern today at the development of the situation in Lebanon and supported the demand by the UN Security Council for an immediate cease-fire and withdrawal of Israeli troops. On behalf of the Federal Government Hildegard Hamm-Brucher (FDP), minister of state for foreign affairs, clearly criticized Israel's intervention, saying that there could be no justification for the violent deaths of hundreds of innocent civilians.

The basis of the brief discussion in the Bundestag was an interparty motion submitted some time ago on the situation in Lebanon, which is now to be reviewed in view of the dramatic events.

Minister of State Hamm-Brucher gave her assurance that the Federal Government is ready to help in overcoming the desperate situation in Lebanon and restoring the country to its national sovereignty. Violence and counter-violence have in the past always prevented a solution. What is necessary is a dialogue between all those involved in the conflict. This afternoon the EC foreign ministers will discuss the developments in Lebanon at a special meeting in Bonn.

OFFICIAL COMPLAINS TO GDR ON VISITING RIGHTS

LD071700 Hamburg DPA in German 1449 GMT 7 Jun 82

[Text] Berlin, 7 Jun (DPA) -- During talks in East Berlin on Monday the Berlin Senat official in charge of visitor traffic, Gerhard Kunze, once again demanded a reduction in the compulsory minimum exchange amount, which was increased by the GDR, and protested against the turning back of West Berliners on visiting trips. Senat Spokesman Meinhard Ade announced after the 2 and 1/2 hour discussion that since the last meeting of officials in charge of visits last February, 160 complaints were received from West Berliners who were turned back. Kunze handed over documents on this subject for (?GDR) official Werner Mueller to examine. According to Ade, the GDR authorities refused 2,765 West Berliners permission to enter East Berlin or the GDR (?since) the agreement was concluded 10 years ago on tourist and visitor traffic.

Mueller in turn called for West Berlin measures against violations of GDR regulations on visits. Since February, there were 2,150 such violations, including traffic offences, by West Berliners. Particularly worrying were serious traffic accidents which, during the past few months, resulted in 2 dead and 15 injured. Furthermore, there were repeated attempts to smuggle drugs and weapons into the GDR.

Ade said that the officials concurred in the view that on the whole the agreement on tourist and visitor traffic had proved its worth. However, this suffered a setback through an increase and extension of the compulsory minimum exchange requirement.

PRESIDENT MITTERRAND HOLDS PRESS CONFERENCE

LD091930 Paris Domestic Service in French 1330 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Press conference by French President Francois Mitterrand from Elysee Palace in Paris -- live]

[Excerpts] [Mitterrand] We have an objective of growth, an objective of solidarity and social justice, and a third objective -- France's more active presence in the world, first by looking after our national security, France's security. To this end it is easy to define the target: We have strengthened our alliance, the alliance upon which is founded a large part of our security and at every turn the equilibrium of the world.

We have strengthened our armaments. Following a strategy of deterrence, of defense by atomic weapons. I say defense because they are a defensive weapons, only defensive. We should adopt certain procedures which will allow us to be compared with anybody when it comes to defending national territory and independence: A seventh nuclear submarine, and we are now in the position to build -- should a decision be taken -- the neutron bomb. We will not tolerate on the European continent a situation in which we could one day be exposed to a tragic imbalance of arms -- conventional weapons and also the might of strategic weapons.

By doing this, strengthening the alliance and our armaments -- the two pillars of our security -- we have remained available. Without ever forgetting history and geography -- that of France and that of Europe -- without taking account of the sometimes artificial divisions that separate this Europe, or without basing our analysis solely on the change divisions that have followed the world wars, we have refused all attempts at embargos or blockades against the Soviet Union, whatever opinion we may have and whatever reproach we could express regarding that country's policy. We have signed an important contract on energy supplies, on gas. We have maintained the space flight of our aeronauts. In brief, we have associated ourselves with everything that appeared necessary to the balance of forces. We did not want to add anything that might appear as a sort of offensive or aggressive situation, uselessly aggressive. The balance of forces applies in both directions.

Our security is above all, but our influence abroad is also important. I imagine you will ask questions concerning foreign policy. At any rate, we have been caring for France's image, especially in Africa, in the whole of the Third World: The appeal which I have launched in Mexico and have repeated in Cancun; the measures taken for Central America in concert with Mexico; a policy in our immediate environment; a policy within Europe, or a part of it, where we have opened up a so-called European social space, for farming policy, for pure policy. And why not? There are a certain number of ideas which hint that Europe wants all together, Western Europe, wants to assure the conditions of its independence. Opening, yes, from one side but from the other much holding back for the ambitions and readiness by one or another member of the community who obey strictly national egotism and forget that the contract necessarily involves obligations which emanate from the Rome Treaty to which France has and continues to subscribe. It would need a great lack of compliance by one or the other for France to relinquish it. This is not our wish; we want to succeed with Europe.

What I have mentioned before as France's more active presence in the world, France's foreign policy, I would sum up in simple terms, both negative. The positive will come later: Neither alignment with anybody, nor isolation. This means in positive terms: independence and solidarity. National independence. One could talk about a lot of difficult problems that we have to deal with, I leave it to you, but do not imagine that I do not have in mind the Falklands problem, Lebanon, Iraq-Iran, the construction of the European Community, the Third World and in particular Africa, so dear to France, Chad, or the next summit that will come after the recent one, Versailles and Bonn. Where is France's place?

[Question] Mr President, the day after the first summit at Rambouillet, on 18 November 1975 to be exact, you wrote: One is alarmed that so many great priests have joined in celebrating the verbal marriage between the peremptory and the derisory. Do you not have the same reasons to be alarmed by the Versailles summit?

Next, I would like you to clarify your remarks a while ago about France's attitude toward the Soviet Union. Is it coherent to have suspended political dialogue with the Soviet Union, as has been the case for a year now, and yet to continue economic and financial cooperation in the style of the Algerian gas contract?

Finally, in the light of what you have said about the economies necessary in the social security budget, can one say that you are in agreement with Michel Rocard when he says that France is living with a rate of social guarantees beyond her means?

[Answer] How can you have economic cooperation in the absence of any kind of political dialogue? It is not quite that simple. The political dialogue with the Soviet Union has not stopped. After all, I think that tomorrow Mr Gromyko and Mr Cheysson are going to meet in New York. We have always had relations with the Soviet authorities. It's the hot and the cold.

Certainly the cold comes more easily from that side, almost by nature. But, in the end, from time to time there is warmth, too, and one must take care that it is not excessively hot. We have not broken off political relations with the Soviet Union. I would even like to improve them, but not at the cost of a certain number of principles. I do not accept, and I am not letting bygones be bygones regarding the issue of Afghanistan, no more than the issue of Poland. I am not going to ignore the overarmament of the Soviet Union on the European continent. So, there you are, one begins discussions.

The situation has to be improved. But I am not disposed to exaggerate political relations while these points remain (?at issue). Perhaps you would like to forget Afghanistan, Poland, the SS-20 -- that's your business. But not me, at any rate, not me.

I consider that the verbal demagogy that is employed here and there should not lead the president of the republic, on the one hand, to cease being disposed -- regarding the Soviet Union and the Eastern (block) countries -- toward a major policy concerning peace and progress. On the other hand, as for complacency: True, I have not yet -- that is the sole concession I would make to you -- gone to any negotiations, in any European capital or elsewhere; that will come perhaps one day, there is no commitment to that. I will tell you about it when the time comes.

Well, you have also talked about the gas contracts: That is in French francs, it has been in progress for several years, for 12 billion cu m. Joint negotiators have asked for more. This represents 5 percent of our energy supples -- 30 percent of projected gas use in 1990. This is reasonable. We are diversifying our supplies. And I am in the end satisfied that we have been capable of dealing with various people and depending on no one.

[Question] Mr President, my question concerns the very important international problems which you have not mentioned. What do you, what does France, expect from the special UN session on disarmament and in general what is France's contribution to the disarmament problem?

[Answer] While I am not expecting anything I do not cease to hope, I do not cease to undertake, but I do avoid interfering directly in this. France can play a useful part, her proposals and advice will be expressed by the minister for external relations at the UN rostrum. Disarmament is talked about and so far it is only a question of trying to reduce overarmaments. Let us understand what we are talking about. France is ready to participate in all the possibilities for control.

Overarmament is the relationship between the weak and the strong in the sphere of strategic discussions. If general disarmament was begun, was started notably by the United States and the Soviet Union to a level sufficient that I could reexamine the position of France, then we would talk about it again. In the present stage of things it is not conceivable that France should renounce the force she now has at her command, so therefore she will not take part in negotiations of that kind. She will not agree to being included in them as the two superpowers want, for reasons that are easy to understand -- the Soviet Union because there would be no nuclear force on the continent other than her own, and the United States because they would not be displeased to see us rejoin the integrated NATO command. There can be no question of this.

So, I repeat, our contribution to disarmament could only begin to count from the moment when superpowers have renounced their positions. Two countries can destroy each other seven or eight times over -- that is at least six or seven times too many, if not completely too much. France has the means to exert some pressure on the balance of power in a defensive manner so as to ensure the defense of our territory. I want to preserve this. It is the very condition of our national independence.

[Question] Mr President, a few days ago, Mr Pierre Mauroy paid a visit to Lebanon, as he has put it, to carry out an act of love and reason there and to guarantee the integrity of that country. I would like to ask you, in the light of the dramatic events occurring there in the past 72 hours, if it is still possible to speak about integrity and, if so, how France intends to guarantee this integrity.

[Answer] It has been impossible for some time to talk of integrity as a reality. One can and should speak of it as an intention. Lebanon was already occupied by two armies, before being occupied by a third one. Syria and the Palestinians have emerged from all sides, the latter having found asylum there. And now the Israeli army is there.

The prime minister has shown -- and was quite right to show in these dramatic circumstances, not only for the French in Lebanon but also for Lebanon as a whole -- what France's role should be. (?First of all) it must be assessed exactly. France does not say to Lebanon: We are flying to your rescue with our weapons. The Lebanese Government does not ask us to do that, and it is not French policy to become a gendarme in most parts of the world, even if such a gendarme would have good reasons to interfere on behalf of civil and military peace. But we can be in the front rank of the concert of nations which are interested in the subject because of the importance of our links in history and our affection for, as well as common interests with, Lebanon. This is why we are one of the countries taking part -- with perhaps the most important role -- in UNIFIL [UN Interim Force in Lebanon]. If the Lebanese Government needs the presence of a friend in the international force -- the lack of which could have been noted recently -- then yes, here we are. Every appeal from the legal Government of Lebanon will find a response in France.

On this occasion I must -- since such is my conviction and my duty -- recall the unreserved condemnation of the Israeli aggression against Lebanon. If there is a problem -- and there certainly is -- between Israel and its neighbors; if the Arab countries refuse to recognize the existence of Israel, they were wrong in my opinion; if Israel does not want to recognize the Palestinian reality and the right of those people to their own country, that is also historic error. I have not ceased to say it to both sides, and I repeat it here. I am not analyzing the historic responsibility -- often it would be shared -- but in the present case, on a territory which is not the subject of a real dispute between Lebanon and Israel, concerning a territory to which Lebanon alone has historic rights and has the freedom of choice, I do not think it wise or just to interfere with the use of force. What then has become of international law? What about the principles on which society is based, which are fragile enough as it is?

This leads me to some decisions. I do not think it desirable to hold a session of the mixed French-Israeli commission at the previously fixed date, that is in the coming few days, as the conflict continues.

If Mr Shamir, the foreign minister of Israel, who wants to come to France on this occasion, would like nevertheless to contact the French Government, every clarification, every explanation is good and he will be received as appropriate, that is to say using language that is clear and honest as befits peoples and countries that respect each other. But this is the situation in which we find ourselves and which is being debated currently within the European Community in the presence of Mr Cheysson on the basis of the Security Council resolution. Yes, I do indeed deeply regret that Israel should have put itself into a situation that brings down on it new condemnation. I have always associated myself regretfully with condemnations of that kind from the moment that I felt, and I continue to feel, the imminent right of the Israeli people to live in peace and not under constant threat. I believe that right is the best defense of Israel's vital interests, as it is of others.

[Question] [Words indistinct] the Palestinian state, of which you have just reaffirmed the need. And then some weeks ago, in an interview, you were more precise, more clear, when you said that after all this Palestinian state could begin as an entity situated on the West Bank, what others call Judaea and Samaria. So, have your thoughts evolved because some parts of the press have been asking you to make a fresh balance of your position, or have you evolved because of other reasons?

[Answer] I listen to the advice of the press with much interest but I seldom take any account of it, and I do not define the policies of France following my morning reading of the daily papers, or even following by evening reading. So, you have mixed two questions together. And you have noted it yourself by the very vocabulary you used. The outlines of a future Palestinian state are not for me to judge, I know nothing of it. It will fall to the negotiators to have their say about the borders, and on top of all this to guarantee those borders. On the other hand, I have always said that if the question came about, then it would be posed first of all on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. If it is impossible for me to define the boundaries, I can still well know where the center is. It would be strange to evoke the Palestinian problem in an ectoplasmic manner, to say there must be a Palestinian state for the Palestinian people anywhere but in Palestine. So the West Bank is the first territorial region of interest as regards the setting up of a Palestinian homeland. As for the rest, I repeat, it is not my affair. It is my wish that the borders are defined in such a manner that the other frontiers, those of Israel, will be fully defended by international society. I have been overwhelmed not by the event but by the multiplicity of your requests. [passage indistinct] Let us try to speed things up, with the replies too.

[Question] Mr President, I understand that you will shortly be leaving for Hungary, and at the end of the year you will be going to Bulgaria. What place will there be in your travels beyond the Iron Curtain for the defense of human rights and simple respect for the Helsinki agreements. With regard to Bulgaria, a physician, Dr Popov, has been conducting a hunger strike since 1 June, after 12 years of struggle to secure for himself and for his family the right to emigrate. Numerous French doctors have publicly affirmed their support for Dr Popov and he himself has addressed an open letter to you through the press with a request for help. Will you give such aid and, more generally, how do you consider your relations with countries that do not respect fundamental freedoms, the notions of political morality?

[Answer] This is a question and then some. Would you have put that question to me if I had decided to travel to Chile?

[Question] Most certainly, Mr President.

[Answer] I wanted to hear it from you. I am not quite certain that this kind of question is as innocent as it appears. I arranged to go to Hungary in July, on 6 July, I believe. I have not for the moment planned to go to Bulgaria but during a recent trip by the minister of external relations an invitation was extended to me, and it may be possible for me to go in 1983. No date has been fixed. On the other hand, I shall go to Romania, probably at the end of September.

I never avoid defending the rights of individuals. Each one of those governments has received my correspondence, my unceasing appeals which are sometimes successful, but all too rarely, to secure releases, some easements, access to freedom. I shall not fail in this duty whereever I go. I have responsibilities of state, I am president of the French Republic. If I am not permitted to defend the interests of France in all countries where human rights are trampled underfoot then I would be confined to a small part of the world. And yet France must be present everywhere. For example, we have diplomatic relations with nearly all the countries of the world, and yet how many offend my conscience? But diplomatic relations do not mean compliance, as I was saying a while ago, nor complicity. I put the questions clearly, Madame, you can trust me in this, and each case which is submitted to me is defended by me. Proofs will be given to you but now is not the time.

[Question] Mr President, a short time ago you told us that there is no question of France rejoining the NATO command and yet you are leaving us tonight to go to Bonn and have dinner with the heads of the NATO governments. I also think that for the first time in 16 years France has invited the NATO foreign ministers to come to France for a meeting next year. Could you explain how you see the evolution of relations between France and the Atlantic alliance, if you still desire, as you did last year, renegotiation of the content of the Atlantic alliance? And finally, do you know to whom Georges Marchais was referring last Sunday when he denounced those who advocate a return of France to NATO and those who want to sell out France to Reagan?

[Answer] Georges Marchais has shown the same confusion that you have and before talking about such matters one should inform oneself. France has not left the Atlantic military, defensive alliance. It left the integrated NATO command so there is no question of going back to be under the orders of the integrated command. There will be no meeting of the integrated command, that is to say the military command of NATO, nor of the NATO defense ministers in France. There will be a meeting of heads of state, it concerns them, or the foreign ministers of the alliance. The alliance exists, we are in it. We would even like to see it working better. And tonight I am going to Bonn when I leave you, leaving you with regret, but I shall not be at a meeting of the integrated NATO command, which is the only institution that France left at the time of General de Gaulle. I shall be meeting heads of state of the Atlantic alliance and on the following day it will be the same heads of state and government who will be meeting in the presence of Pierre Mauroy.

So things are clear: NATO is an expression that is used carelessly, any time and any way. The Atlantic alliance is a defensive military alliance independent of the rest. It is not a question of closing one's eyes or turning one's back by saying I don't know about the problems of strategy with people who are our allies, and with whom we have a daily relationship. What hypocrisy that would be. But we do not accept that France's decisions should be submitted to a command that is outside us. That is the reality. And we will not join it nor receive this command on French soil. This is clear. It is clear for you. It is clear for Georges Marchais. It is clear for all those who talk about this problem with such imprudence. I am sure, and this was your question, that he was not thinking of me.

[Question] Mr President, you were in Israel and you delivered a speech in the Knesset. Do you have the impression now that you were understood by Mr Begin? And do you not think that the second demarche is to make contact with the most interested party in the conflict after Israel, that is to say the Palestinians and, notably, the PLO?

[Answer] Do I have the feeling of being understood now on what I had to say to the Knesset? I did not have that feeling then, on the day that I stood in the Knesset! That is nothing new. And I could not be understood because we have different conceptions of the issue. My visit to Israel was of major symbolic and political importance. I do not accept that one should view Israel as a country that one does not visit, as a people that one ignores. It is a great people. And it is a country which has managed to build itself up admirably and which deserves protection and security. The state of insecurity in which it finds itself has led to an internal policy whose external projections I have often had to reject, and at times condemn.

That is the reality. So, on that level, neither Mr Begin nor I disguised, at the press conference which followed, that we were in disagreement on the constitution, for example, of a Palestinian state where the Palestinian people would have a homeland. And I also asked for preliminary and mutual accord to be reached, a mutual and preliminary recognition. So, let us not go back to that. Meanwhile, I observe the difference of the question you yourself put. Now, you are well aware that in the Knesset I said what I thought was right and the force of history, and that I did not ignore Arab realities. I am pleased that you do me justice from a distance, which will not, nevertheless, make me forget the historic rights of the people of Israel.

[Question] Mr President, in a few days you are going to Spain, and I would like to know what development you expect in French-Spanish relations, obviously taking into account the problems which, if one can put it this way, have done most to poison the relations between the two countries....

[Answer, interrupting] I understand.

[Question] ... the Basques and Spain's entry into the Common Market.

[Answer] I understand. If I am going to Spain, it is because I am seeking to establish good relations with that country. They are not excellent now. We will be dealing with the most delicate issues of general policy: the enlargement of the Common Market and, particularly, terrorism. I will not say any more about this today. I will talk about it on the eve of my departure for Spain. I will talk about it in Spain. I will talk about it on my return. I think this press conference should move on to other topics. It's quite impossible. I am very flattered by this interest, but it's impossible.

[Question] I wanted to ask you, Mr President, do you not fear that relations between France and Latin America, relations between Europe and Latin America, will cool off because of France's and the Common Market's total support for England, Great Britain, in the Malvinas, Falklands affair. At the same time, I wanted to ask you, it is seen in Latin America as a North-South war, and you have ideas on North-South relations which you explained at Cancun. Can France's position at the side of Great ritain be harmful to the ideas of Cancun?

[Answer] It is obvious that the relations of South America with Europe and France may well be compromised. I would not only regret this but I shall do everything in my power to prevent it, because it is important to me that fruitful relations of every sort should exist between Latin America and France. Events do occur over which I have no power. I had no power over Argentina's decision to break off negotiations lasting 17 years with Great Britain and to go into action by a military aggression on the soil of those islands and to launch thereby a fatal turn of events which are not over yet. It is a real dilemma, not easy. One loses at every event. Although it should not have happened, it did happen. France is an ally of Great Britain, a historical ally since the beginning of the century. We have been together in two great world wars. We owe to Great Britain a real debt formed of blood, pain, fear, and also gratitude. We are of the same community.

Great Britain believes it is within its rights, and although France has never recognized Great Britain's sovereignty over the Falklands, since 1833 it has been thus, and we reject -- as I do for Lebanon -- the violation of international law, in other words the preference for war rather than for negotiation. Argentina therefore bears the responsibility for a fatal turn of events which I deplore. Now we come to a stage in this conflict where I hope that it will be possible to revive Security Council Resolution 502. I have solidarity with Great Britain because this is the interest of Europe and of France, because it is in conformity with a long companionship. To the same extent Great Britain, believing it has to meet the challenge and defend its interests and its national pride that could be slighted, has the right to ask France for its solidarity. Nevertheless, this war must not be turned into a war of revenge. There are limits to this combat which I intend to speak of at an opportune moment which should not be far off.

[Question] Mr President, what is your position on Chad?

[Answer] One must be clear about Chad, Ladies and Gentlemen. In what situation did I find Chad on 21 May 1981? It was an occupied country, occupied by Libya. That was reality. A short time before there had been major fighting in which France found itself involved. There was destruction of equipment and there were deaths. The taking of Ndjamena in the preceding period had been (?characterized) by the destruction of the town and by more than 1,000 deaths. What has happened since then? Libya has departed: There is no longer any foreign occupation of Chad. What more do you ask of me? Are you asking me to get involved in internal conflicts? There existed a so-called Transitional Government of National Unity which was recognized by the Organization of African Unity to which all African states belong, including Libya. France decided to conform to the resolutions of the OAU which, having provisionally recognized that government, considered it its duty to place itself between the two opposing sides, in a peaceful way, and which asked for France's aid. This we granted. We support legitimate governments; how do these legitimate governments come into being? Either by force of arms or, sometimes fortunately by the force of universal suffrage, but that is rare. We take account of reality, we do not interfere in internal conflicts in African countries. That is the difference. For us the main thing is that confronted with foreign interference, from wherever, which might arise and which in the previous situation threatened the security of countries like Niger, Central Africa and Cameroon, which we are bound to by agreements, including agreements on military cooperation, we should not get involved in a military adventure which would be harmful to our loyal African countries, to which we shall also be loyal. And we warded off that danger. Today it is a battle between Chadians. No external country is involved. And France will continue, as it is doing today through the French people on the spot, to care for the sick, the injured, to repair the houses, to repair the airport amd the telecommunications.

PANAMANIAN PRESIDENT MEETS MITTERRAND IN PARIS

PA082302 Madrid EFE in Spanish 1747 GMT 8 Jun 82

[By Ramon Luis Acuna]

[Text] Paris, 8 Jun (EFE) -- Today, Panamanian President Aristides Royo discarded any "diplomatic way" of stopping the war of the Malvinas following the British veto of the motion presented as a last resort by Spain and Panama at the UN Security Council.

"We will just have to wait for the military outcome," Royo said, and he charged that the British and U.S. vetoes, although the latter was later modified, were intended to "punish and humiliate" the Argentine Republic.

At a news conference on the future of the disputed islands, Royo told EFE that the Malvinas "will end up being Argentine even though Great Britian may win the current battle."

The Panamanian chief of state, with French President Francois Mitterrand over lunch at noon today, noted that the positions of his country and France on the Malvinas issue are "different."

However, Royo demonstrated "understanding" for the French position by virtue of the Gallic alliance with the United Kingdom, maintained during the two World Wars.

On the other hand, Royo, who will stop in Madrid on Wednesday on his way to New York, where he will participate in the UN disarmament meeting, considered that the Spanish attitude concerning the Malvinas had "improved considerably in the efforts for peace since Spain's initial vote of abstention in the Security Council, which surprised us."

According to Royo, the joint Spanish-Panamanian motion, "which we are tremendously pleased to share with the Spaniards, and which seeks the withdrawal of the two armies from the Malvinas, was made at the last moment. The motion contained all the elements necessary for its acceptance, particularly UN Resolution 502, which had previously been approved." [as received]

Aristides Royo expressed in Spanish, English and also in French, his conviction that the Malvinas conflict "is a colonialist and a North-South war."

The conflict is colonialist because Great Britain sent its navy to defend a territory located 14,000 kilometers from its soil. The war is North-South because of the haste with which "the alliance of the North against the South" was forged, as well as for the cohesion displayed at the nonaligned meetings in Havana and at the OAS sessions in Washington.

The EEC economic embargo against Argentina, he added, was a "mistake" because the people are the ones who really suffer from such sanctions. Royo pointed out that Latin America had not responded with similar measures.

The Panamanian statesman, whose country played a diplomatic role in the Malvinas conflict, as a member of the UN Security Council during the crisis, prefers to think that the relations between Europe and Latin America will not be affected by this war.

Generally, he also approves France's Central American policy. Concerning French arms sales to Nicaragua, Royo said that these sales "are not intended to create imbalances in the area, but to help Nicaragua against any aggression."

In turn, he feels the United States "is making the same mistakes with Nicaragua that they did by isolating Cuba." Royo said "the United States must correct its policy regarding Nicaragua. The United States must change its policy toward El Salvador, where negotiations for a peaceful solution are needed even now, after the elections and the installation of a new government." Royo confirmed that he elaborated on this subject during his meeting with Mitterrand.

He did not rule out the possibility that Panama might join a French-Mexican initiative on Central America. However, he gave assurances that all he had come to ask of the French chief of state is that he contact the United States regarding amendment to Law 96-70, which subordinates the Panama Canal Board of Directors to the U.S. Defense Department.

Royo also mentioned a very curious matter, that of associating France, a resolutely nuclear country, to the Tlaltelolco Denuclearization Treaty, so it may influence the Latin American countries who have not yet endorsed the treaty, to do so.

L'HUMANITE OPPOSES CHANGING SOVIET CONTRACT

PM081221 Paris L'HUMANITE in French 31 May 82 p 5

[Text] Commenting on the French Government's decision to question the contract signed in 1979 between the Soviet Union and Thomson for the supply of a telephone exchange factory, the industry minister [Pierre Dreyfus] has just stated that "some aspects of that contract were not in keeping with France's international commitments." No further details were given.

Last week the minister said that that request for a review was justified "by the development of the international political situation." It seems that, in talking about France's international commitments, the minister was referring to the rules of the Coordination Committee for Multilateral Control of Exports to Socialist Countries -- a semiofficial body set up during the cold war and dominated by the United States.

Indeed, for more than 2 years Reagan [as published] has been mobilizing his forces in an attempt to revive that center, which had fallen into disuse in recent years. Moreover a special envoy sent by the U.S. President has just toured the EEC countries to secure a restriction of trade with the East.

The U.S. administration had already -- unsuccessfully -- stepped up pressure against another Thomson contract with the USSR relating to the remote monitoring system for the gas pipeline linking Siberia to Europe -- a system which enters the category of "strategic products" according to the Americans. It is that clause which is being invoked this time, with particularly strong pressure since some of the components involved in the manufacture of those exchanges are manufactured in our country under an American license. But the United States does not have a monopoly in that sphere. The contract being implemented is important for our country since it represents more than Fr700 million and tens of thousands of hours' work for French employees.

The industry minister made it clear that negotiations with the Soviet Union were continuing, and Michel Jobert stated last week that that problem would be discussed at an interministeral meeting soon.

It would be dangerous to give in to American claims at a time when we have a foreign trade deficit, particularly with the United States, the FRG and Japan, which demands a readjustment of our trade.

FOREIGN MINISTER CHEYSSON REVIEWS VERSAILLES

PM091227 Paris LE MONDE in French 6-7 Jun 82 pp 1, 3

[Maurice Delarue report: "Mr Cheysson's Fears"]

[Text] The situation in the Falklands and in the Near East was discussed at length during Friday evening. "The first part of the dinner (which the foreign ministers had separately) was very gloomy" Mr Cheysson told the press, "because we spoke of nothing but war, bombs, attacks and horror."

The heads of state and of government, for their part, carried out an initial general review and then, according to Mr Attali, Mr Mitterrand's special adviser, they made a "fairly detailed" examination of the situation in the Falklands, by starting "to explore the ways and means of showing their solidarity and the conditions under which some joint approach could be made."

Mr Attali did not wish to specify what should be understood by "joint approach" and merely stated that it is "naturally" an approach with Britain and that it might be made in the United Nations or elsewhere. "It is under discussion," he said.

The remarks made by Cheysson, Mr Haig, and Mr Pym show that although Britain's allies, especially France and the United States, support London in the present phase of the battle, they are worried about the phase which will follow the Argentines' voluntary or forced withdrawal.

According to Mr Pym, Mr Reagan assured Mrs Thatcher, with whom he met on Friday before their departure for Versailles, of the "very firm support." Also according to Mr Pym, the French president and British prime minister "share the same attitude" on the Falklands.

However, in reply to a question, Mr Cheysson said that in the past few days he had scarcely heard "the word negotiation and in particular the word negotiation coming from London." "When we talk about the Falklands at present," the minister said, "we are talking primarily about a situation in which men are dying or are going to die." In these circumstances," he said, "it would be rather indecent to talk about the distant future and hence about the negotiations which, however, will certainly have to take place."

The U.S. secretary of state called on the Argentines, rather insistently, to withdraw voluntarily. To avert the battle for Port Stanley, he said, Security Council Resolution 502 must be implemented. In other words, there must be "a prompt withdrawal or pledge of a prompt withdrawal from the islands." Mr Haig knows (and that is probably what Mrs Thatcher had said to Mr Reagan) that in the present situation short term decisions, in other words the assault on Port Stanley, must be taken by the command on the spot but, he said, if the Buenos Aires Government "announced an immediate withdrawal, I think that the command on the spot would manage to prevent further bloodshed."

With regard to the Near East, the foreign ministers discussed the Iraqi-Iranian conflict at length and "especially a threat which comes from the depths of history, that of the Iranians or the Islamic revolution crossing the Arab border." As regards Lebanon, the minister primarily stressed that he and his colleagues were "overwhelmed by the day's violence" -- the Israeli bombing of Beirut.

Finally the minister began the discussion on economic relations with the USSR which is to be continued by the heads of state and of government. "We found a very broad agreement on the overall objectives," Mr Cheysson said.

"We wnat to have consistent attitudes toward the Warsaw Pact countries. We condemn certain Soviet actions.... We are very determined not to allow transfers of technology which might strengthen the Soviet Union's military potential to be made under cover of trade.... Measures (to ensure that) have already been taken in recent weeks. Aside from that, there may be slight differences between us. Nonetheless, we agree that there is no question of boycotting the Soviet Union or of breaking off human relations and profitable economic relations."

With regard to credit for the USSR, the minister said that an agreement among the OECD countries was "imminent" but, he said, the United States wants more: "complete homogeneity." The credit policy, the French minister stressed, cannot be identical in all Western countries since the degree of inflation varies. "What we are seeking," he concluded, "is to avoid giving the USSR abnormally low credit terms."

SPADOLINI, COLOMBO DEPART FOR BONN NATO SUMMIT

AU091945 Rome ANSA in English 1930 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 9 Jun (ANSA) -- Italian Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini and Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo left here today for tomorrow's NATO summit in Bonn in an international climate pregnant with the threats posed by the Israeli invasion of Lebanon Sunday and the Anglo-Argentine Falklands crisis.

"We are watching a precipitation of events with incalculable consequences for the future equilibria on nerve-centers of the world", said Spadolini in a sombre departure statement.

Reiterating Italy's rejection of force in solving international controversies, he also made the "firmest condemnation" of the Israeli "act of war" in Lebanon, saying they could only increase Mideastern tensions and "place the prospects for peace in the entire region even further away". Sources at the prime minister's office said that other topics he would undoubtedly be discussing were NATO's future and developments in East-West relations. "It is an important occasion for confirming the alliance's continuing vitality, its unchanged force of attraction, and the validity of the ties among the Western nations for preserving joint security," he asserted.

The Italian premier also cited Spain's admission to NATO as reflecting the alliance's defensive nature and its "objectives of safeguarding peace in Europe and the world against all threats weighing on the world's peaceful destiny".

In other points, he said the Italian delegation's role in Bonn, as at the seven-nation summit in Versailles, would be one of "initiative and stimulus" with the aim of "contributing to defining a coordinated and constructive joint position".

PLO DELEGATION MEETS SOCIALIST PARTY'S CRAXI

AU090909 Rome ANSA in English 0849 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 9 Jun (ANSA) -- A delegation from the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) led by Nimmir Hammad met with Italian Socialist Party Secretary Bettino Craxi here Tuesday, a Socialist Party communique said later.

The Palestinians "described the tragic gravity of the situation in Lebanon after Israeli military attack and invasion," the communique asserted.

The Socialists are the second largest party in Premier Giovanni Spadolini's coalition which also includes the Christian Democrats, the Social Democrats, the Liberals and the Republicans.

According to the communique, Hammad repeated that the PLO has no responsibility in the attempted slaying of Israeli Ambassador in London Shlomo Argov on June 3.

This incident was used by Israel as a pretext for its invasion of Lebanon, but according to Hammad, it was the work of a "group hostile to the PLO."

(In London, British sources have said that a "hit list" found on Argov's presumed assailants also contained the name of the PLO's representative in London, hence hinting that the PLO was certainly not involved in the attack).

DAILY REPORTS BALSEMAO'S PARIS PRESS CONFERENCE

PM071539 Lisbon DIARIO DE NOTICIAS in Portuguese 3 Jun 82 pp 1, 3

[M. Bettencourt Resendes dispatch on Portuguese Prime Minister Francisco Pinto Balsemao 2 June Paris press conference]

[Excerpts] The tone of Pinto Balsemao's remarks at a press conference in Paris yesterday just before his return to Lisbon confirmed the main characteristics of an official visit whose result, the prime minister said, was "frankly positive."

The EEC membership process, matters concerning Portuguese emigrees in France and what has now been called "triangular cooperation in African countries" were three of the subjects particularly emphasized. With regard to the first, known stances were reasserted -- both with regard to Paris' overall backing for Portugal's advance toward Europe and with regard to France's known reservations in connection with EEC negotiations, concerning the free circulation of workers and textiles. Nevertheless, a source within the Portuguese delegation informed us with regard to this fundamental sector of our economy that "there are some indications, albeit unclear" that the French might "soften"their demands.

Joint projects in Africa, whether developed at the bilateral level or within the EEC context, are to be regarded with the significance that both countries attach to the European-African dialogue, which has been made clear by the innumerable visits to the black continent by members of the French Government as well as by Eanes' recent visits to Angola and Mozambique and Balsemao's coming visit to Mozambique in June. The subject became more topical following Francois Mitterrand's visit to Lisbon in December and has been a prominent one in Portuguese-French relations since then.

Telecommunications and energy are sectors in which the French are interested in stimulating Portugal's purchasing capacity. According to the prime minister at the press conference, "finance availability will govern the possibility of the purchase of such equipment." With regard to telecommunications, "a committee at present exists to examine the matter" and with regard to nuclear energy, the issue "must be subject to an overall energy plan, which will, of course, involve a major domestic debate."

Asked about the Versailles summit, Balsemao referred in particular to U.S. economic policy, expressing the hope that Washington "will realize the negative effect of this policy on the economies of its European allies."

SOCIALIST PARTY CRITICIZES CABINET RESHUFFLE

LD092218 Lisbon in Portuguese to Europe 1900 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Excerpt] The Permanent Committee of the Socialist Party today expressed its disagreement with the announced cabinet reshuffle and accused the president of the republic of having a share of responsibility for the new lease on life being sought by the Democratic Alliance.

In a communique released to the media, the Socialist Party Permanent Committee states that the ministerial reshuffle, due to its substance and its impermanent nature, is a reprehensible (?factor) of institutional disregard for the democratic system and its representatives.

Not a single problem afflicting the country, the communique goes on to say, will be solved by the circumstantial and hasty reshuffle of a heavily discredited government, but only through the dismissal of the prime minister and the calling of early general elections once the revision of the Constitution has been completed and voted on in parliament.

CALVO-SOTELO COMMENTS ON SENTENCES FOR COUP PLOTTERS

PM091233 Madrid YA in Spanish 5 Jun 82 p 3

[Text] The prime minister personally gave an account of the decisions made by the cabinet in connection with the 23 February [attempted coup] sentence before the television cameras at 2100 hours yesterday evening. These are his words:

At the cabinet meeting held today the government officially took cognizance of the sentence delivered by the Supreme Council of Military Justice on the events which took place 23 February last year. In the light of the sentence, the government, fully respectful of the constitutional state and its institutions and in defense of democratic legality and of the system of public freedoms, has made the following decisions:

1 -- To express its agreement with some of the pronouncements of the sentence and, in particular, with the judgment concerning two of those most responsible for the military rebellion.

2 -- To express, on the other hand, its disagreement with the assessment of some forms of conduct and crininal actions; with the acceptance by the court of certain exculpatory and extenuating circumstances; and with certain arguments and viewpoints contained in the sentence.

3 -- To reject, in particular, because of its political and constitutional importance, the argument in the sentence according to which some defendents were acting with all due obedience until the moment of the public intervention by his majesty the king in the early hours of 24 February -- an argument to be rejected because the armed forces and the civil guard owe obedience, in accordance with the constitution and the prevailing legislation, to the nation's government and to its prime minister, who were present in the Congress of Deputies together with the people's representatives and were manifestly disobeyed in the course of the events.

4 -- To send, consequently, the appropriate instructions to the public prosecutor's office to file with the Supreme Court the corresponding appeal provided by law.

5 -- To state also that the government does not intend to agree to the request for commutations of sentences made by the military court.

6 -- To announce the intention to submit to General Cortes the bill on the reform of military justice envisaged in the prevailing code of military justice.

That was the government's note, Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo continued. In the prime minister's opinion, he added, these decisions represent the final decisions on events which he would all like to forget as soon as possible. A certainly deplorable page in our recent history is turned over. I ask everybody to be calm in their appraisals, restrained in their conduct and confident in our democratic system's ability to resolve Spain's problems. Over and above the deplorable actions which have been judged stand the magnificent example of the king, the increasing strength of institutions, the loyal conduct of the vast majority of the armed forces and our people's democratic firmness. All this is and will be the best guarantee that we will not experience such a crisis again.

Good evening and many thanks.

PRIME MINISTER RECEIVES OPPOSITION LEADERS

PM071513 Barcelona LA VANGUARDIA in Spanish 28 May 82 p 8

[Mariano Guindal report: "Calvo-Sotelo met Monday with Felipe Gonzalez and yesterday with Fraga Iribarne and Santiago Carrillo"]

[Text] Madrid -- The prime minister met yesterday with PCE Secretary General Santiago Carrillo and with Popular Alliance Chairman Manuel Fraga. Last Monday he met with [PSOE Secretary General] Felope Gonzalez.

The aim of these meetings was to exchange views on the current political situation following the 23 May election in Andalusia. The conclusion was that nobody, except Manuel Fraga, wishes to polarize Spanish political life into two large blocs, since Calvo-Sotelo and Felipe Gonzalez and Santiago Carrillo believe that it would be a grave mistake for the consolidation of Spanish democracy. It was also agreed that an early general election would not be desirable.

However, the gravity and complexity of the situation and the enormous parliamentary difficulties which the government will have to face until the end of the legislative term were noted.

Fraga: Act Before Summer

Popular Alliance Chairman Manuel Fraga met for an hour with Prime Minister Calvo-Sotelo. At the end of the meeting Fraga told journalists: "We will continue to support the government until the end of the legislative term." Asked whether the prime minister told him anything new or different from what Calvo-Sotelo had told the press, he replied: "He told me nothing new, and even if he had, I do not know whether I would have told you." He also stated that the need was raised to begin a round of talks between the Popular Alliance and the Union of the Democratic Center in Galicia and Andalusia, with the aim of harmonzing viewpoints, something with which the prime minister declared himself in agreement.

Fraga told journalists that "I reiterated to Prime Minister Calvo-Sotelo the need to create a natural majority. The prime minister was very receptive but stated that he did not agree with my postulates, and so each will have to shoulder his responsibilities." He also emphasized that he told the prime minister that periods of reflection are all very well, but there is no longer any time left for that: "I repeated to him what I have already told Adolfo Suarez; that is, that what is not done before summer is not done in the fall, either. It is not a matter of an ultimatum or of the election having to be brought forward, but an election cannot be improvised at the last moment, and it would be deplorable if the only political group not doing what it must do were that of the government."

Asked whether he believes it necessary for there to be a center party in order to ensure democratic consolidation, he replied that "the center is necessary as an option of moderation, but not necessarily as a political party." Asked whether he was closer to the natural majority following this meeting, he said: "That will be seen later, but for the moment I have nothing more to say."

Communist Party Secretary General Santiago Carrillo met for 45 minutes with the prime minister. Following the meeting, Carrillo told journalists that the meeting took place in a polite atmosphere. "I explained to the prime minister my opinion about the need to make a shift in a progressive direction in political life. The government must change its stance on a number of issues, such as the implementation of the national agreement on employment, the restoration of trade union property; the renegotiation of the organic law on the harmonization of the autonomy process to ensure that it meets with general support, and, in my opinion, the policy which the Spanish Government should pursue in the Malvinas conflict.

I told him that, in my opinion, a bolder and more determined policy should be pursued, and that we should offer to mediate in the conflict and even offer our armed forces to guarantee security in the Malvinas while a peaceful solution is being negotiated. For his part, he expounded to me his views on the Spanish political situation, which, out of politeness, I will not disclose to you."

Concerning the possibility of a coalition government, Santiago Carrillo told the prime minister that "a government of social progress" is necessary. "I know that a wholly rightwing government, such as Fraga would like, is not possible at present, and that a wholly leftwing government, such as I would like, is not possible either; but it is possible to form a government of progress, which has not been done, and which I frankly do not believe will be done, because I did not find Calvo-Sotelo at all receptive on this point."

Lastly, Carrillo stated that he deems it necessary for there to be a progressive center party in Spain, "since a political polarization into two large blocs would be very grave for the country. In addition, I believe that it would not be good for there to be an early general election and that it would be advisable for it to be held at the time indicated by the legislative term."

Felipe Gonzalez: There Will Be No Motion

It was learned yesterday that Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo met for 2 and 1/2 hours last Monday with Spanish Socialist Workers Party [PSOE] Secretary General Felipe Gonzalez. Following this meeting Mr Gonzalez informed his party's Executive Committee of the topics discussed.

According to a member of the PSOE Executive Committee, the meeting took place in a cordial atmosphere, and Calvo-Sotelo informed the leader of the opposition of his intention "to rectify the political situation in order to avoid holding an early election."

Both the prime minister and Felipe Gonzalez agreed on the absolute need to maintain a center party to avert the polarization of political life between left and right. Felipe Gonzales assured the prime minister that his party will submit no motion of censure during the current legislative term, although it will maintain a stance critical of the government but constructive. Felipe Gonzalez expressed his concern to the prime minister about the difficult political situation with which the government will have to deal, and reminded him that there are very tough debates over the next few weeks, such as the debate on the rapeseed oil [toxic cooking oil scandal] or the debate on the organic law on the harmonization of the autonomy process, in which the minorities are opposed to the government. A matter of such great importance as the sentences in the 23 February [1981 -- date of abortive coup] trial is also pending.

Felipe Gonzalez told the prime minister that the PSOE deems it desirable that an early general election not be called, but following the rebuff which Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo has given Manuel Fraga by refusing to accept the natural majority, it is going to be very difficult not to call one.

ROYO ARRIVES IN MADRID, MAKES NO STATEMENT

PA092015 Panama City Circuito RPC Television in Spanish 1730 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Text] Panamanian President Aristides Royo arrived in Madrid on his way to Oviedo, where he will stay for a few days on a strictly private visit.

Adela, Royo's wife who is from Asturias, will wait for him in Oviedo. She arrived there on Sunday.

Royo did not make any statement at the Madrid Airport. Through a Panamanian Embassy official, he told the press that everything he has to say will be said at the UN General Assembly.

Royo arrived in Madrid from Paris, where he stressed that relations between the United States and Latin America cannot be the same after the Malvinas conflict. He criticized the U.S. position regarding the British-Argentine conflict over the Malvinas.

PCE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE REJECTS CARRILLO'S RESIGNATION

LD092030 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 2000 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Text] A report is just in on the PCE Executive Committee meeting.

I am now going to read a note from the PCE Executive Committee, which goes as follows:

The PCE Executive Committee has been meeting to examine the political situation in the country, the results of the elections in Andalusia and the situation in the party.

In the course of the meeting Santiago Carrillo tendered his resignation as secretary general of the PCE. This was rejected by the unanimous vote of all members of the Executive Committee present.

The Executive Committee has decided to convey to the Central Committee (?the minutes) of the debate, with the proposal to the latter that the resignation not be accepted.

[Dated] 9 June 1982, Madrid.

Further Resignation Reported

LD092132 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 2100 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Text] There is a deep crisis in the PCE Executive Committee. PCE Vice-President Nicolas Sartorius has tendered his irrevocable resignation. This decision was made after the Executive Committee refused to accept the resignation of Santiago Carrillo as secretary-general.

It is also said -- although this has not yet been either confirmed or denied -- that Marcelino Camacho has resigned from the PCE Executive Committee.

DENMARK

AKTUELT SEES NO ALTERNATIVE TO JORGENSEN

PM081053 Copenhagen AKTUELT in Danish 5 Jun 82 p 2

[Editorial: "Tne Result"]

[Text] Prime Minister Anker Jorgensen got his "March package" through the Folketing much as he wanted it.

After much fuss, after several rounds of negotiations and more hectic debates than were necessary, the Folketing session ended yesterday by adopting almost all of the original "package." This happened through agreements partly with the Socialist People's Party, partly with the Radical Liberals, but evenly spread responsibility is as effective as joint responsibility.

The summer looks as if it will be hot — and the fall is guaranteed to be politically hot, but a Danish Government's policies must be pursued piecemeal and piloted through Folketing waters which contain nothing but reefs. Satisfactory results have been achieved, and the state is now set for "the necessary": a tax reform.

A reshaping of the system was not included in the agreements which have been reached, but it is nevertheless on the way by virtue of the approach contained in the acceptance of the "March package." The tax system will be the next phase, and the politicians probably now need some recreation and time for thought before the battle recommences.

Things will have to end as they did yesterday. There is not really any other possibility than for Anker Jorgensen's government to continue.

And it will.

FINLAND

SURVEILLANCE INTENSIFIED AFTER SUB REPORTS

LD091306 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 0930 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Text] The Finnish border guards establishment has intensified surveillance of Finland's national borders following the observations of unknown submarines made off the Swedish coast in the Gulf of Bothnia in the last few days. No observations of submarines have been made in Finnish waters, Maj Kari Saksela from the border guards staff said today.

COMMUNIST PARTY FACTION SOFTENS HARD LINE

PM071521 Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 4 Jun 82 p 11

[Erik Appel report: "SKP Minority Softening? -- Aalto's Resignation No Longer Demanded"]

[Text] When the Finnish Communist Party [SKP] Central Committee meets today for a closed meeting at Siikaranta in Espoo the minority will still not be taking part. The "third line" -- including former minority member Nils Torvalds -- will be taking part, however.

But this does not mean that contacts have been broken off and that the minority is prepared to go its own way. On the contrary, in an open letter to SKP Chairman Kajanoja yesterday the minority's negotiators, Taisto Sinisalo, Urho Jojinen and Seppo Toivianinen, offered further negotiations.

In the letter the minority omitted its earlier demand that General Secretary Arvo Aalto resign. And in other respects the letter is being interpreted in majority circles as a softening of the minority's previously extremely hardline negotiating attitude.

In majority circles it is expected that the minority will return to "the fold" before the summer recess, or that "the frost of elections will bring the pigs home."

What is worrying the minority especially at the moment and is considered to be the factor which most clearly speaks for a return to "the fold" is the nomination of Eduskunta candidates. This will take place this summer -- and has already begun in Hame Province's northern district. It is the Finnish People's Democratic League [SKDL] which nominates the candidates and the minority controls only two districts, North Karelia and Kymmene -- the latter only 50 percent.

The minority's negotiators' demarche in yesterday's TIEDONANTAJA is seen in majority circles as a softening of the previously hard-line attitude.

It is being noted that in their six-point open letter to Jouko Kakjanoja the three did not mention General Secretary Arvo Aalto by name. They now merely said that the minority does not consider Arvo Kemppainen to be a suitable member of the Politburo. Nor is any mention made of Taisto Sinisalo's candidacy for the deputy chairmanship.

However, Ele Alenius and his Socialists are made the scapegoat. They party should come out clearly against the attacks "Comrade Alenius and some other Socialists" have made on SKP's independence and principles, the letter said.

The party should also dissociate itself from statements directed against the Soviet Union and the CPSU and which conflict with the party's decisions, the letter stated.

The three also called for a concrete program of action, which could form the basis for a party conference (like the one in Tampere) which would in its turn be a sort of interim phase in the preparations for an extraordinary party congress. Here too people are seeing a softening in attitude.

The three continue to insist that TIEDONANTAJA should be on an equal footing with other party newspapers. Similarly they continue to insist that what they call "violation of district rights" in the election of the party leadership must be put right.

What happened at the party congress was that the majority also elected minority districts' representatives to the Central Committee and minority representatives to the Politburo. This is what the three want to have put right, but they do not mention any names.

The majority will probably be prepared to make some concessions to the minority, for example, increasing the number of Politburo members by one, so that the split would be 7-4 instead of the present 7-3. Similarly the majority could envisage calling minority representatives to the Central Committee's meetings, giving them the right to speak and to make proposals, but not the right to vote.

The minority's negotiators also put forward the idea that the major differences of opinion no matters of principle could be solved through a ballot of members.

Finally, they declared that they are prepared to continue negotiations and almost appealed to Kajanoja not to break these off, despite the fact that there had been no success in reaching agreement in the time allowed.

Majority circles are now saying that it is now the minority which is split, while the ranks of the majority have closed since the party congress.

The fact that at the congress the minority chose not to walk out and split the party, but instead to merely refrain from participation in the work of the Central Committee and the Politburo was because a different decision (a walk-out or acceptance of the majority's "diktat") would have split the minority itself.

General Secretary Arvo Aalto said that the boycott of today's meeting does not mean that the SKP is splitting. This is the impression he has gained from the last few days' negotiations with the minority.

He is still opposed to the idea of an extraordinary congress. "It is no solution, nor an alternative."

Nor is a change of general secretary the key to understanding.

"A new party does not seem in the least realistic," he said.

"The minority's representatives also realize this, although some of them are for it."

BRIEFS

SOVIET-FINNISH COOPERATION -- An agreement on Soviet-Finnish cooperation in energy technology was signed in Espoo today. The agreement concerns a joint research project in nuclear physics. The project, to be implemented in 1982-90, is part of the cooperation between the Finnish Academy and the USSR Academy of Sciences. Finland will contribute FM 2 million to the cost of the Leningrad Nuclear Physics Institute equipment that will be used in the research and to the cost of the research equipment to be built jointly. Suitable equipment will be built for the project to enable the structure of matter to be studied under great pressure, in low and high temperatures and in a strong magnetic field. [Text] [Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1300 GMT 9 Jun 82 LD]

NORWAY

PARLIAMENT VOTES MONEY FOR NORDSAT STUDIES

PM091101 Copenhagen BERLINGSKE TIDENDE in Danish 4 Jun 82 p 4

[NORSK TELEGRAMBYRA report: "Nordsat"]

[Text] Oslo -- On Wednesday [2 June] the Norwegian Storting voted 900,000 kroner to technical, economic and legal studies in preparation for Nordic radio and television cooperation in a Nordsat satellite. The money will cover Norway's expenditure this year in the preparatory phase through 1984, prior to a final decision being made about Nordic satellite cooperation.

SWEDEN

POLES ARRIVE IN AIRPLANE, REQUEST ASYLUM

LD091700 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1600 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Text] Five Poles, three adults and two children, arrived in Sturup Airport outside Malmo today after escaping from Poland in a small survey plane. The fived have asked to be allowed to stay in Sweden. A sixth person who was also on board has stated that he wants to return to Poland.

NAVY CONTINUES SEARCH FOR FOREIGN SUBS

LD101034 Stockholm International Service in Swedish 1000 GMT 10 Jun 82

[Text] The Swedish Navy suspects that one or more foreign submarines may still be in Swedish territorial waters. The search for the submarines is thus continuing with undiminished intensity both along the Vasterbotten coast and in the Aland Sea. It is suspected that the submarine, which was sighted off Holmo near Umea is still in the area but is now in hiding somewhere, waiting for the Swedish forces to reduce their search force. The submarine, which was scared off on Tuesday with depth charges from the area off Vaddo in the Stockholm Archipelago, has not been seen again.

THATCHER ENVISAGES MULTINATIONAL FORCE ON FALKLANDS

LD091828 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1743 GMT 9 Jun 82

[By David Healy, PA Political Staff]

[Text] Britain is prepared to station a substantial military force on the Falkland Islands after they have been repossessed in order to defend them, Mrs Thatcher said tonight. In interviews with the three major American television networks, she also said that Britain could look to the United States for help in this and in handling the thousands of prisoners of war expected after the battle for Port Stanley.

She said this battle had not yet begun.

Mrs Thatcher gave interviews in the gardens at Downing Street to the ABC, CBS, and NBC networks.

On a multi-national force involving the United States, Mrs Thatcher said she hoped the possibility as "still very much alive."

"But before we have even started the main battle for Port Stanley it is a bit difficult to say precisely how things will develop. One has a number of contingency plans. But imagine the lives of these people -- they have had a traumatic experience, a tremendous invasion from the Argentines whom they have always totally rejected before.

And then they have had a battle over their territory, their homes, their businesses, and their homes vandalised.

Some of them have been herded together in Darwin and Goose Green, they had been herded together in a community settlement and had to stay there for a month. It is going to take them some time to get back to normal life, to rebuild their farms and businesses.

It's going to take us some time to help rehabilitate and develop. We shall need help in developing the resources. I think we may need help initially in how we deal with the prisoner of war problem. Then we shall have to provide for defense and we shall have to certainly consider things like a multi-national force."

Mrs Thatcher said she did not imagine that after the invasion the islanders would want anything to do with Argentina on sovereignty -- "nothing but nothing at all."

Mrs Thatcher said that arranging for the defence of the islands "will mean that we will have to make a number of quite considerable expenditures. Freedom is expensive to defend. It is worth defending." And then Mrs Thatcher listed the military deployment Britain would be prepared to make.

She said: "We shall have to extend that airstrip so that we can have major aircraft of a kind that have never been able to land there before. We shall have to have Rapier there to defend it. We shall have to have submarines. We shall have to have some ships. We shall have to defend freedom.

I hope we will be able to get some help -- those islands are strategically important as well as being important in democratic and political terms and I hope everyone will realise that. Some very big oil tankers have to go around Cape Horn to get to Alaska. They have a very enormous strategic value -- they are to some extent also the gateway to the Antarctic which will become progressively more important in resources terms to the world as a whole."

PYM SAYS FALKLANDS' FUTURE 'OPEN QUESTION'

LD091630 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1550 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Text] The future of the Falklands Islands after British re-possession remains an "open question," Foreign Secretary Mr Francis Pym said today.

But reported harsh treatment of the islanders by Argentine forces would make the problem "much harder" to solve, he told the Commons at question time.

"What happens after re-possession has occupied the government's mind to a very great extent," said Mr Pym. "It remains an open question at this stage."

"We have thought about a number of possibilities for the future, but exactly what happens at that point must depend on the exact circumstances of the time."

Mr Pym added later: "in the long term there has to be a settlement in the region if we are going to have the peace which must be a precursor and prerequisite for prosperity."

"In the last fortnight all that has happened is that the Argentine forces, if the reports are to be believed, have treated the islanders there in a way which would cause a great deal of hostility."

"Obviously we have a much harder situation to deal with after re-possession than we would have had a fortnight ago."

But the need for a settlement remained, "however long it may take and whatever form it may take if there is to be prosperity in that region and for the islanders."

Pressed by Shadow Foreign Secretary Mr Denis Healey, Mr Pym denied that U.S. Secretary of State Mr Alexander Haig had ruled out American participation in the eventual formula unless talks were held with the Argentines.

"Mr Haig did not in any way close the door on the possibility of what might be arranged in the future, because the circumstances of the future remain unknown," said Mr Pym.

He added: "After the islands have been repossessed, it will be the government's task to do whatever is appropriate, with as many friends as may be available, to help re-establish the security of the islands and bring about the greatest degree of stability possible in the shortest possible time."

FOUR UK VESSELS DAMAGED, ONE FEARED SUNK

LD092004 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1956 GMT 9 Jun 82

[By Robert Hutchinson and Alan Jones, PA Defense Staff]

[Text] Four British vessels were hit and damaged -- with one feared to have sunk -- in one of the blackest days for the task force since the Falklands conflict began, it was confirmed tonight.

It is understood there were substantial casualties after three attacks were mounted on Tuesday by Argentine war planes: in Falkland Sound, between the two islands, off Fitzroy on the south coast of East Falkland, and in Choiseul Sound, further to the south.

One landing ship, the 4,470-tonne Sir Galahad, may have sunk after the first attack off Fitzroy.

Her sister ship, Sir Tristram, was also hit but was less seriously damaged.

Minutes earlier, the frigate HMS Plymouth was hit by cannon fire as it patrolled Falkland Sound.

And later a small landing craft was bombed off Choiseul Sound. In this attack, two Sea Harriers managed to shoot down four Mirages in a split-second co-ordinated attack with Sidewinder missiles from the rear, each destroying two enemy warplanes which were flying four abreast.

The raids occurred within 90 minutes of each other on Tuesday afternoon as hundreds of British troops were landed at Fitzroy, a second bridgehead just 15 miles from Port Stanley.

They were staged as air defence Rapier missiles were being set up to throw a protective screen against enemy warplanes around the new beachhead and the nearby anchorage.

The surprise bombing attack on Sir Galahad occurred as she was hove-to, ready to come closer into the shore to off-load the two companies of troops -- about 250 men -- she was carrying.

This vessel had already been damaged in a bomb attack two weeks ago when she was off-loading stores in the San Carlos Bay beachhead.

The damage and casualties came after 5 Infantry Brigade's commander, Brigadier Tony Wilson, managed to leap-frog 50 miles ahead by helicoptering his troops to Fitzroy to hold the vital wooden bridge there, already partially destroyed by retreating Argentine forces.

After discovering that the tiny settlement was empty of enemy soldiers, he flew in British troops and reinforced them by sea from Lively Island, south of Choiseul Sound.

These Argentine air attacks seem to herald a new air offensive by Buenos Aires government's air force, which has been licking its wounds in the aftermath of the stunning losses it suffered during the battle before and after the main British landings.

Clearly they have been building up their resources for new attacks designed to destroy the imminent British ground attack on Stanley.

Official estimates in London of the Argentine air losses stand at 71 aircraft -- including the 11 likely to have been lost on Tuesday.

But informed sources put the actual total at 86 -- to include helicopter and aircraft destroyed on the ground by British bombing and special forces raids.

The task force has lost 10 Harrier jump-jets, in combat or in accidents.

Statement on Casualties

LD092034 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2023 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Text] In a statement tonight, the Ministry of Defence said:

"We are now able to say a little more about the effect of the bombing raid on our ships which we reported last night. We know that there were no deaths on HMS Plymouth but there were five people injured. They are under treatment and their next of kin have been informed.

"It is however, feared that casualties from the attacks on Sir Tristram and Sir Galahad were much heavier. Earlier reports indicate a number killed and injured.

"As soon as we have the information next of kin will be informed; indeed this process has already begun.

"But is must be stressed that given the operational circumstances and the different places to which casualties and survivors have been taken it may be some considerable time before this can be completed.

"There is at the moment no further information available in the MOD or in the Services Information Centre. Please do not ring them. As soon as we have any further information a further announcement will be made."

BBC Report on Fighting

LD092328 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2235 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Text] The following is a transcript of the latest report from BBC Reporter Robert Fox with the task force on the Falklands.

It was the fiercest Argentinian air offensive for more than a week and one of the heaviest of the campaigns. Up to 17 Mirage and Sky Hawk A4s were launched from the Argentine mainland during the day.

In late afternoon, Skyhawks struck at two landing support ships, the RFA [Royal Fleet Auxiliary] Sir Galahad and Sir Tristram as they were unloading at Fitzroy Settlement.

Survivors say there was less than 30 seconds warning before bombs hit the accomodation quarters, one landing in the main cargo deck of Sir Galahad, where Welsh Guards were preparing to disembark.

Smoke and flames choked the corridors within minutes as helicopters and boats strove to get the injured and survivors to the shore, where they were tended in field dressing stations. Soon, both Sir Galahad and Sir Tristram, her sister ship, at the time largely empty of stores, were alight.

The worst casualties were being shipped by helicopter to the hospital at San Carlos.

I saw survivors as they came aboard HMS Fearless - young men with their faces blackened and burned. They said there was not even time to put on their anti-flash masks, and most of the injuries were from flash burns. They said that the attacking Skyhawks had appeared to pull up, to toss their bombs at the ships rather than aim them directly. They praised the work of the helicopter pilots, returning again and again through the heavy smoke to pick up the injured, and the doctors and medical assistants who worked into the dark at the first aid post.

During the day, a landing craft from HMS Fearless, plying along the coast, was sunk by a missile from a Mirage, and a number of the crew are missing. The number of missing, injured and dead from the raids is still to be announced.

In one of the first raids of the day, Mirages were seen to attack the frigate, HMS Plymouth. Several bombs dropped and her funnel was hit by a shell which sent clouds of smoke and steam skywards as she came into the San Carlos anchorage here. Fires were controlled and all weapons systems, Seacat missiles and the four-point-five inch guns were working.

One crewman was reported badly injured, several slightly. One Mirage was downed by the Seacat missiles. Six more were seen to be destroyed in the fighting throughout the day. Harriers struck three in one flight and the fourth hit the sea as the pilot seemed to look back for his colleagues. Four more Argentinian planes were hit and possibly brought down before they reached the Argentinian coast.

It is hard to see how long such an air force can go on accepting losses of between 40 and 60 percent of the total number of planes sent out on a days missions.

PAPANDREOU DEPARTS FOR BONN NATO MEETING

NC091503 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Text] Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou departed for Bonn at 1310 to participate in the summit conference of NATO member countries which will take place in the West German capital.

Papandreou was seen off at the airport by Minister to the Prime Minister Koutsoyiorgas, Minister of Public Order Skoularikis and other officials.

Discusses NATO, Reagan Meetings

NC100720 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 0400 GMT 10 Jun 82

[Excerpts] The NATO summit conference will be held in Bonn today. Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou, who has been in the West German capital since yesterday, will attend. The Greek prime minister, within his contacts with leaders of other countries, had a meeting with Chancellor Schmidt yesterday.

Our correspondent in Bonn, Khristoforos Kontaxis, reported that the Papandreou-Schmidt meeting lasted 45 minutes. Deputy Foreign Minister Yiannis Kapsis was present. After the talks, Mr Papandreou stated that it was an important meeting and that he carried away positive conclusions.

In a statement he made to journalists yesterday during the flight to Bonn, Prime Minister Papandreou, among other things, said that the NATO summit conference will issue three declarations: one on general goals, one on defense and one on disarmament.

On the disarmament issue, he said that he consideres it very important. He said that the Greek Government's position that it will not accept the installation of new nuclear weapons in Europe is known. Mr Papandreou will present our national issues, particularly our problems, the Greece-Turkey-NATO issue and the Cyprus issue -- at a high level.

Regarding his meeting with President Reagan today, Prime Minister Papandreou stated that the meeting will be short and that there will be no time for solutions and proposals. He said that it will constitute a first acquaintance and a continuation of the negotiations.

On the issue of the guarantees [of the borders with Turkey], Mr Papandreou said that in his speeches and in his discussion in general, he will not use the term guarantee too much. He said that satellites ask for guarantees and clarifications, and that Greece does not accept this. What Greece asks is that the United States stop tolerating Turkey's expansionist plans.

PEACE MARCH TO U.S. EMBASSY SCHEDULED FOR 10 JUN

NC092145 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 2100 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Text] The Greek Committee for International Detente and Peace as well as many other organizations will stage a peace march tomorrow from Ellinikon and Piraievs to the U.S. Embassy in Athens. The gathering at Ellinikon will beheld at 1600 and at the municipal theater square in Piraievs at 1630 tomorrow.

PLO REPRESENTATIVE, ARAB ENVOYS HOLD NEWS CONFERENCE

TA091022 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Text] The ambassadors of 13 Arab countries to Ankara and their high-ranking representatives as well as PLO Representative Abu Firas this morning held a joint news conference in connection with the Israeli attack on Lebanon.

In a statement at the news conference held at the PLO mission in Ankara, Abu Firas said that the Palestinian people will continue their struggle for existence against Israel's attacks in Lebanon until the end. Recalling that his organization had previously warned that Israel would attack the Palestinian camps in Lebanon, Abu Firas noted that Israel used the attack against its ambassador in London as a pretext. Pointing out that his organization is awaiting material help from all countries in its struggle against Israel, Abu Firas thanked the Turkish people for their interest in the Palestinian cause.

The Lebanese ambassador, who participated in the news conference, said that his country welcomed Turkey's attitude towards Israel and its condemnation of the Israeli attack against Lebanon.

GOVERNMENT TO EXTEND MEDICAL AID TO PLO

TA091616 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Text] It has been announced that Turkey will extend medical aid to the PLO. Foreign Ministry Spokesman Ambassador Nazi Akiman, in a statement to the Mediterranean Agency, said that Turkey has been seeking possible ways of extending aid to the Palestinian people since the beginning of the Israeli attack on Lebanon. Akiman said the following on the issue: The PLO has requested medical aid and doctors from us. Medical supplies and doctors will be sent to the PLO through the Red Crescent. The PLO representation has been informed that the aid will be extended through the Red Crescent.

ARMENIAN DIOCESE CONDEMNS ATTACKS ON DIPLOMATS

TA091619 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1550 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Text] Istanbul, 9 Jun (AA) -- The council of the Armenian Diocese in Turkey condemned the murderous attacks by Armenian terrorists on Turkish diplomats and officials abroad.

The Armenian community in Turkey, a statement from the Patriarchate said, lives in peace and calm without any pressure or discrimination whatever, and rejects the claims set forth on its behalf. The Armenians of Turkey are categorically opposed to violence and bloodshed and unanimously condemn the assassination of Turkish officials, who are often good friends of members of the community, in bloody acts of terror.

'OUR RADIO' REPORTS PRISON HUNGER STRIKE IN ISTANBUL

TA100747 (Clandestine) Our Radio in Turkish to Turkey 0500 GMT 10 Jun 82

[Text] Hundreds of the 2,500 convicts who have been on a hunger strike at the Metris Military Prison in Istanbul for the past 3 weeks to protest oppression and torture have been rushed to hospitals in ambulances. The convicts' parents who have been waiting outside for days have not yet been allowed to see their relatives in the prison. A delegation of 30 parents went to Ankara and submitted a joint petition to Evren, protesting the oppression and torture at Metris Prison. That was on Monday, the third week of the hunger strike.

EUROPEAN COMMUNITY

EC FOREIGN MINISTERS CONDEMN ISRAELI MOVE IN LEBANON

LD092310 Hamburg DPA in German 2215 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Excerpts] Bonn, 9 Jun (DPA) -- On Wednesday, the EC countries condemned Israel's invasion of Lebanon as a "flagrant violation of international law as well as of the most elementary humanitarian principles" at a foreign ministers (?meeting) in Bonn.

In the declaration, which only came about after a hard discussion between the supporters of sanctions against Israel, such as Greece and France, and the supporters of a [word indistinct] stance such as the FRG and Netherlands, any mention of sanction against Israel is avoided. It merely says in the declaration: If Israel continues to oppose demands for the withdrawal of its troops, then the Ten will "examine the possibilities of future action." This formulation which the Ten agreed upon after long discussions, leaves open the question of whether, at a second conference on the situation in Lebanon, the EC countries will take economic sanctions against Israel for the first time since the existence of their Near East policy.

The declaration goes on to say that Israel's action has endangered the efforts for a peaceful settlement of the problems in the Near East, "and is fraught with the immediate danger of expanding into a general conflict."

In the declaration, the Ten support the [word indistinct] of UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar that Israel should "immediately and unconditionally withdraw its troops from Lebanon" and allow the UN interim force to fulfill its task unhindered.

The ministers stressed in the declaration that it is their aim to achieve a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the Near East. The Ten are prepared to help ensure "that the sides in the conflict accept measures for the reduction of tension, for the restoration of trust," to facilitate a negotiated solution. The declaration also says that the EC will examine the question of helping the victims of the Israeli invasion in Lebanon.

CANADA

TRUDEAU APPEALS FOR ISRAELI WITHDRAWAL FROM LEBANON

LD092032 Montreal International Service in English 1900 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Excerpt] Canada has appealed to Israel to withdraw its forces from Lebanon. The appeal is contained in a letter from Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau to Israeli Prime Minister Begin. In it Mr Trudeau accuses Mr Begin of fuelling the flames of violence and hatred in the Middle East, and he urges the Israeli leader to comply with the United Nations Security Council resolution calling for a cease-fire and the withdrawal of Israeli troops. It is the second letter Mr Trudeau has sent to Mr Begin in the past 4 days. Last Saturday, before Israel's invasion of Lebanon, Mr Trudeau appealed to Israel to show restraint.

FBIS DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 113 11 June 1982

CONTENTS

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Genscher Meets With Saudi Foreign Minister J 1
CDU/CSU Parliamentary Group Assesses NATO Summit J 1
Demonstrators Clash in Streets of Berlin J 1

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Pope Departs for Visit to Argentina 10 June L 1
Pope Feels 'Moral Duty' To Visit Homeland L 1
Colombo Positively Assesses NATO Summit L 1
Legislators Protest Israeli Invasion of Lebanon L 2
Colombo Meets Saudi Foreign Minister in Bonn L 2
Spadolini Addresses NATO Summit in Bonn L 3

SPAIN

PCE Still Undecided on Carrillo Resignation N 1
'Leadership Crisis' N 1
Calvo-Sotelo Attends First NATO Summit in Bonn N 1

NORDIC AFFAIRS

NORWAY

Nuclear-Free Zone Conflicts With NATO Status P 1
[AFTENPOSTEN 5 Jun]
'No Unilateral Measures' [AFTENPOSTEN 5 Jun] P 2

UNITED KINGDOM

Nott Reports to Commons on Recent Losses Q 1
Thatcher: Many Casualties Q 2
Government Won't Impose Oil Production Cutbacks Q 2

CYPRUS

Kiprianou Meets USSR, SFRY, Indian Officials R 1
Denktas Interviewed on Intercommunal Talks R 1
[CUMHURIYET 6 Jun]

GREECE

Papandreou on NATO Session, Relations With Turkey S 1
KKE-Interior Executive Office Officials Elected S 2
[I AVYI 9 Jun]

TURKEY

Prime Minister Ulusu Speaks on Lebanon War, NATO T 1
Sea Wolf-II Naval Exercises Begin 10 June T 1
Turkish Nationals Reportedly Killed in Israeli Air Raid T 1
Minister Ozal Discusses Economic Policy T 1

GENSCHER MEETS WITH SAUDI FOREIGN MINISTER

LD101320 Hamburg DPA in German 1246 GMT 10 Jun 82

[Excerpts] Bonn/Jerusalem, 10 Jun (DPA) -- The Israeli invasion of Lebanon dominated the NATO summit in Bonn today. A White House spokesman said that this afternoon President Reagan would receive Saudi Foreign Minister Prince Sa'ud al-Faysal, who has arrived unexpectedly in Bonn. U.S. circles in Bonn have not yet confirmed reports from Jerusalem that U.S. Secretary of State Haig will go to Israel tomorrow.

Prince Sa'ud met with Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher at noon for a talk which Prince Sa'ud termed urgent. He expressed Saudi concern at developments in Lebanon. A meeting with Hans-Juergen Wischnewski, minister in the chancellor's office, is also planned.

Genscher briefed the Saudi foreign minister today on the declaration adopted by the 10 EEC countries last night (?condemning) the military action and strongly criticizing Israel for a flagrant violation of international law and the most elementary humanitarian principles.

CDU/CSU PARLIAMENTARY GROUP ASSESSES NATO SUMMIT

LD101402 Hamburg DPA in German 1259 GMT 10 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 10 Jun (DPA) -- The CDU/CSU Parliamentary group assesses the result of the Bonn NATO summit as a "convincing platform for a credible Western overall policy of safeguarding peace and preserving freedom." This was stated by Manfred Woerner, deputy chairman of the parliamentary group, in Bonn today. He urged the Federal Government not to depart from the path (?laid down in Bonn) in its future policy.

He said that the final document that had been adopted squared with the CDU/CSU's aims for a concept of actively safeguarding peace. This applies especially to the political solidarity of the alliance partners, to greater defense efforts, to efforts for real disarmament and arms control, to stabilizing East-West relations and to (?contributing) to the independence of the Third World.

In the statement the CDU/CSU also welcomes [words indistinct] support for the political aim of German unity by the NATO alliance. In Woerner's opinion, the Bonn statement also contains important (?features) of the Ostpolitik practiced so far by the Federal Government. This is obvious not only in the formulating "real detente," but also [passage indistinct].

DEMONSTRATORS CLASH IN STREETS OF BERLIN

LD110950 Hamburg DPA in German 0925 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Text] Berlin, 11 Jun (DPA) -- There have been serious clashes in Berlin city center between demonstrators and the police during U.S. President Ronald Reagan's visit. The President's cavalcade was untouched by the clashes. A ban on demonstrations had previously been confirmed by the court. Several thousands of demonstrators gathered in Nollendorfplatz in Schoeneberg district. They were initially surrounded by strong police forces but several groups succeeded in breaking through the barbed wire barriers.

Demonstrators threw paving stones and Molotov cocktails at the police. The window display of a furniture store was set on fire and pieces of furniture were used to build street barricades. The police used tear gas and water-cannon against the demonstrators. The Nollendrof subway station was closed. Meanwhile large groups of demonstrators -- the police say 2,000 people -- moved towards the Gedaechtniskirche on Kurfuerstendamm.

POPE DEPARTS FOR VISIT TO ARGENTINA 10 JUNE

AU110834 Rome ANSA in English 0820 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 11 Jun (ANSA) -- Pope John Paul II is scheduled to arrive in Buenos Aires this morning at 1100 GMT to begin a 36-hour stay in Argentina to add balance to his pastoral visit to Great Britain, concluded earlier this month, and to "serve the cause of peace", in the words of a message he sent to Italian President Sandro Pertini last night.

As the Alitalia DC 10 with the Pope aboard was leaving Italian airspace, after a takeoff at 2037 GMT from Rome's Leonardo da Vinci Airport, the pontiff sent the following message to the head of state: Leaving Italian soil to go to Argentina to meet that dear people and in my desire to serve the cause of peace, I send you, Mr President, my greetings and best wishes to extend to all the Italian people..."

The papal plane will land at the Newberry Airport in Buenos Aires after a one-hour technical stopover in Rio de Janeiro, where John Paul will be welcomed by Brazilian President Joao Figueiredo.

POPE FEELS 'MORAL DUTY' TO VISIT HOMELAND

AU101509 Rome ANSA in English 0840 GMT 10 Jun 82

[Text] Vatican City, 10 Jun (ANSA) -- A visit to Poland in the Virgin of Jasna Gora jubilee year of 1982 is nothing less than a "moral duty" for the Polish-born leader of the Roman Catholic Church, according to Pope John Paul II's thinking.

The pontiff, former Archbishop Karol Wojtyla of Krakow, told visitors to his open-air general audience in St Peter's Square, Wednesday that he considered the visit a "moral duty" toward his fellow-countrymen.

Nonetheless, the pontiff stressed, "the right conditions must be created" for the trip to materialize.

COLOMBO POSITIVELY ASSESSES NATO SUMMIT

AU102028 Rome ANSA in English 1930 GMT 10 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 10 Jun (ANSA) -- Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo quoted U.S. President Ronald Reagan's closing remarks to the NATO summit talks here today to the effect that "the alliance is united and determined to stay united" to express his own evaluation of the meeting.

As the talks were drawing to a close, Colombo told reporters that alliance members had agreed to his and West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher's proposal to hold informal consultations on a periodic basis for the very purpose of "bolstering unity between free and sovereign states..."

The sense of today's round of summit talks, Colombo added, was the alliance's determination to promote peace and freedom on all disarmament negotiation fronts, including the conference for European disarmament expected to be organized in the realm of the European security and cooperation conference in Madrid.

At the root of the alliance's desire for dialogue, Colombo said, is the conviction, as expressed by French Premier Pierre Mauroy and shared by everyone, "that negotiations cannot be successful without (military) balance."

It is with that conviction, the Italian diplomatic chief said, that all NATO members agreed to strengthen the alliance's defense network and go ahead with modernization plans of nuclear and conventional armaments.

The United States and Europe, Colombo went on, stand close together in their approach to what they jointly see as the combined need to strengthen their defense and go ahead with armaments control talks.

The members of the alliance, he added, voiced the hope that the Soviet Union is able to understand this position and behave accordingly in a constructive manner. NATO countries also "fully evaluated the negative effects and danger to peace stemming from local conflicts throughout the world," Colombo added. "Even when the solution to these conflicts is not within NATO's role," he concluded, "each (NATO member) will still make efforts to help."

LEGISLATORS PROTEST ISRAELI INVASION OF LEBANON

AU102005 Rome ANSA in English 1951 GMT 10 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 10 Jun (ANSA) -- A group of twenty Italian parliamentarians representing almost all of the nation's political parties went to the Israeli ambassador in Rome today to protest the Jewish state's invasion of Lebanon and aggression against the Palestinian people.

The lower house M.P.s., from the Christian Democrat, Communist, Socialist, Proletarian Democrat, Radical and Independent Leftist groupings were received by the Israeli charge d'affaires in the ambassador's temporary absence.

They voiced their "anguish and condemnation" of the Israeli invasion, which has "indiscriminately struck Palestinian and Lebanese civilians and soldiers."

The parliamentarians called for a political settlement of the Middle East crisis, one that recognized the Palestinian peoples' rights as well as the Jewish state's right to security.

According to the delegation, the Palestinians have the right to build "an autonomous and sovereign state in which they may live freely and democratically." The group called for an immediate stop to the Israeli assault and the withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanese territory.

COLOMBO MEETS SAUDI FOREIGN MINISTER IN BONN

AU101958 Rome ANSA in English 1939 GMT 10 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 10 Jun (ANSA) -- Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo conferred here today with his Saudi Arabian counterpart Prince Sa'ud al-Faysal on the latest developments in the Lebanese crisis.

Sa'ud, who arrived in the West German capital while NATO was starting a round of summit talks this morning, voiced pleasure about the stand the European Ten have taken with respect to the conflict as well as about Italy's "active concern." The two ministers agreed to stay in contact with each other.

On the fringe of today's NATO summit talks, Colombo announced that an Italian navy vessel was sailing towards Lebanon to pick up Italian nationals residing in the war-stricken country who want to return home.

The decision to send the ship to Lebanon was taken in Rome today by Italian Defense Minister Lelio Lagorio upon Colombo's recommendation. Italians will have to be evacuated by sea since Lebanese airports in the war zone have been closed.

A Foreign Ministry communique issued in Rome today disclosed that there are presently about 600 Italians in Lebanon, 300 of whom are in Beirut and none of whom have been hurt in the fighting.

SPADOLINI ADDRESSES NATO SUMMIT IN BONN

AU101940 Rome ANSA in English 1922 GMT 10 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 10 Jun (ANSA) -- Italian Premier Giovanni Spadolini told the NATO summit here today that his government considered the Israeli invasion of Lebanon a "serious offense to peoples' rights."

In his remarks to the summit, Spadolini pointed to the latest outbreak of fighting in the Middle East and the Falklands war in the South Atlantic as the two most pressing "world problems outside the realm of the NATO area which affect the vital interests of Atlantic nations."

Israel's "very grave" initiative of attacking Lebanon, Spadolini said, "upset the already thin prospects for a settlement of the Palestinian problem and, more in general, of the Middle East crisis."

The Lebanese crisis, the Italian government leader went on, is linked to the uncertain developments of the Iranian-Iraqi war. It undermines the precarious balances in the Middle East, not without repercussions on the Mediterranean, which is becoming the most delicate area for the alliance's security, he added.

Spadolini called on his Atlantic partners not to underestimate the role Latin America plays in international relations and in the North-South dialogue in their estimation of the Anglo-Argentine conflict over the Falkland islands in the South Atlantic.

The Rome government leader opened his speech expressing "great satisfaction" over Spain's entry into NATO, an event said to confirm the alliance's "intact vitality" as "an instrument of the West's common defense."

Spadolini also indicated that the tough decisions awaiting the alliance will require "greater internal unity," much the same way as the seven-nation Versailles summit realized that the West's most industrialized nations will have to achieve greater economic and political unity.

But the key problem for the alliance, according to the Italian premier, is still East-West relations, an issue which "dominates our attention."

"The Soviet Union's unacceptable behavior in Poland, Afghanistan and other parts of the world," he went on, has made it necessary "to combine a firm stand with respect to Moscow and its Warsaw Pact allies with our constant and sincere determination to keep communication channels open for the sake of reviving the process of detente."

The damage the wars in Lebanon, the South Atlantic and between Iran and Iraq are doing to the equilibrium of the international scene and the setbacks they have created in efforts to achieve world peace were stressed here today by Italian Premier Giovanni Spadolini in comments to the press about the NATO summit conference.

The Rome government leader did stress, however, that the NATO heads of state and government pledged themselves to the proposition of reviving the detente process.

That pledge, Spadolini said, produced a call to the Soviet Union from NATO members to negotiate a reduction, and not just a limitation, of strategic armaments.

Spadolini also stressed the agreement existing between Europeans and Americans on the aim of seeing serious disarmament talks started. The West, he said, is promoting these talks while making it clear that it stood firm on its bargaining positions.

PCE STILL UNDECIDED ON CARRILLO RESIGNATION

LD102144 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 2100 GMT 10 Jun 82

[Text] Santiago Carrillo's resignation or continuation at the head of the PCE has still not been decided by the party's Central Committee, whose extraordinary meeting was adjourned less than an hour ago and will continue tomorrow. Nicolas Sartorius [PCE vice secretary general] and Marcelino Camacho [leader of the Communist Workers' Commissions Trade Union] have told Radio Nacional de Espana that their resignations are irrevocable.

'Leadership Crisis'

LD110332 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 2300 GMT 10 Jun 82

[Text] Santiago Carrillo read the second part of his report at this afternoon's session of the PCE Central Committee plenum. He acknowledged that a certain crisis exists in the Eurocommunist strategy for which ie is partly responsible because he is not able to convince the majority of the need for such a strategy. However, he immediately said that the so-called "renewalist" wing is also responsible. He cited as moments of crisis the fifth congress of the Unified Socialist Party of Catalonia at which Eurocommunism was renounced, the party's crisis on Euskadi, the movement of solidarity with the renewalists and this group's attitude at the Madrid City Council. He later referred to the manipulation of the party's image by some of the news media, the accusation that the PCE is not a democratic party and the failure of the Andalusian election campaign. Finally, he announced his resignation from the Executive Committee and the Central Committee, and his decision not to stand at the next elections.

Nicolas Sartorius, who has also resigned, said in his report that the results since the party's 10th congress could not be more pitiful. He reiterated the need for a dialogue between the different factions. Marcelino Camacho has also resigned the PCE Central Committee will resume meeting today [11 June] with comments from committee members on the reports submitted.

CALVO-SOTELO ATTENDS FIRST NATO SUMMIT IN BONN

LD101300 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1000 GMT 10 Jun 82

[Excerpt] Bonn -- The heads of state and prime ministers of the 15 countries of the Atlantic alliance will initial today the Bonn declaration, a document in three parts on a new beginning to relations among the allies. Spain, which joined the alliance recently -- on armed forces day, to be precise -- is attending an alliance summit for the first time and is represented by Prime Minister Calvo-Sotelo and Foreign Minister Perez-Llorca. The ceremony to welcome Spain to this NATO summit began soon after 1000. Prime Minister Calvo-Sotelo delivered a speech in which he said that the Spanish Government hopes for cooperation from the Atlantic alliance on central issues of national policies, for instance in finding an early negotiated solution to the dispute over Gibraltar, our incorporation as a member enjoying full rights into the European Communities, and the struggle against terrorism.

Calvo-Sotelo also spoke of his conviction that Spain can provide a bridge between Europe and Latin America, two continents which are daily growing further apart because of the Malvinas war. The prime minister put on record the nature of Spanish policies with the following words: Our European vocation, which urges us toward the Common Market, is perfected and complemented by a similar historical calling toward Latin America, and we wish to put this clearly on record from this first moment. Because the Spain which is today coming into the alliance, Calvo-Sotelo said, knows well that it has no need to leave outside this chamber a single aspect of its own identity, of its international relations and of its personality. And the alliance too knows that Spain would not be prepared to renounce those values; rather it knows that with those values intact it can bring enrichment to the alliance's own heritage.

NORWAY

NUCLEAR-FREE ZONE CONFLICTS WITH NATO STATUS

PM091029 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 5 Jun 82 p 3

[Terje Svabo report: "Isolated Nuclear-Free Zone in the Nordic Area -- Irreconcilable With NATO Membership"]

[Text] The unilateral establishment of a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic area would be impossible to reconcile with the conditions of our membership of NATO and would be in conflict with the joint defense strategy within the alliance. Nor would such a zone increase Norwegian security or reduce the risk of the use of nuclear weapons in wartime. These conclusions dominate the report on disarmament and security which the government presented yesterday. In doing so the present government has clearly shown a different view of important security policy questions from that shown during the latter months of the Labor Party's period in government.

The government considered it necessary to produce a study of nuclear-free zones against the background of the discussion which developed in Norway last year. With the study on nuclear-free zones the government wishes to make it clear that the establishment of such a zone must be seen in a broad security policy context and in particular from the point of view of Norway's own defense policy interests.

The study leaves no doubt of the government's view of the issue, and at a press conference yesterday Foreign Minister Svenn Stray summed it up as follows: In the present situation it would be irresponsible to set plans for a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic area in motion. Such a zone can only be established using a longer-term timetable and as a result of concerted negotiations between East and West. At some point in the future such zones could become of interest as a link in the work for greater security at the lowest possible strength levels.

for the government an extremely important objection to the establishment of such a zone today is that it would conflict with the conditions and the foundations of NATO's common defense strategy. The government takes the view that by becoming part of a unilaterally declared nuclear-free zone Norway would relinquish the right to be defended against an attacker according to the NATO doctrine of flexible response. This is based on the principle that an attacker must not be able to rule out the possibility that NATO could defend itself with nuclear arms.

In real, if not formal, terms a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic area in the present situation would therefore place Norway outside this joint defense strategy. The consequences of this would be a break with some of the most important conditions for our NATO membership.

The report summarizes this as follows: "The establishment of an isolated Nordic nuclear-free zone today would mean that Norway would no longer be able to count on being protected by the overall positive security guarantees which are part of NATO membership. A guarantee, enshrined in a treaty, from the Soviet Union not to threaten the use of nuclear arms against a Nordic nuclear-free zone would not be able to replace the security guarantee which is part of NATO membership. An agreement to this affect could also provide an excuse for interference in Norwegian defense and security policy, and this would not accord with our interests and it would also make our foreign relations situation less stable."

An important factor in this context is that the government's assessment of Norway's strategic importance and position is the same regardless of whether Norway is a member of NATO or not. It points out that Norwegian NATO membership in itself is of no significance for our strategically exposed position. It is Norway's geographical position which is important here.

Therefore Norwegian security will be dependent on our success in maintaining a military balance in the sea are around Norway.

'No Unilateral Measures'

PM091231 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 5 Jun 82 p 3

[Terje Svabo report: "No Unilateral Measures"]

[Text] The government has no plans to start unilateral negotiations with the Soviet Union on fundamental security policy questions. The government makes the clear stipulation that such negotiations can only take place in consultation with our allies and that there are no plans to negotiate with the Soviet Union together with our Nordic neighbors. This is another reason for the government's warning against the proposal for a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic area.

The objections to the establishment of a Nordic nuclear-free zone are also due to consideration of the disarmament negotiations which ahve started or are to begin soon. At yesterday's press conference Foreign Minister Svenn Stray simply said that there is reason to fear that further planning of a nuclear-free zone would make the negotiations more difficult.

It is the government's objective and hope that both the negotiations on medium-range missiles and the negotiations on strategic arms between the United States and the Soviet Union will be effective. In its report the government stressed that the work for disarmament and arms control continues to become a more impoirtant part of overall security policy. The natural consequence of this is that the government now wants Norway to play a more central role in this work in the future.

The presentation of the report coincides with a petition signed by over 500,000 Norwegians calling for a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic area. Foreign Minister Stray said yesterday that he does not think that the government is on a collision course with the signatories and that he too shares their concern for the effects of nuclear arms. However, he made it clear that the government must evaluate all measures for disarmament on the basis of the overall picture.

Foreign Minister Stray said himself that the government's disarmament report does not mean a new line in Norwegian security policy. He is right. But the report does clarify the strategy that Norway should follow in its security policy work.

The main point is that Norway must consult with its NATO allies on security questions. The report makes clear that unilateral initiatives and measures in the present situation are not to be recommended. It stresses that the negotiations must take place as part of a concerted NATO plan.

The government does not hold the view that such a line will lead to paralysis of Norwegian foreign and security policy. The reason given is that consultations with our allies are necessary if initiatives and plans are to have the necessary weight in the eyes of our opponents in negotiations.

NOTT REPORTS TO COMMONS ON RECENT LOSSES

LD101622 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1607 GMT 10 Jun 82

[Text] British troops are poised to go forward with another victory very soon in the Falklands, despite the latest devastating Argentine air attacks on task force ships, Defence Secretary Mr John Nott told the Commons today. And he insisted that Rear Admiral Sandy Woodward's military plans had not been prejudiced by the raid on landing ships Sir Galahad and Sir Tristram.

As expected, Mr Nott declined to give details of British casualities in the attack, warning that this "could be of assistance to the enemy and put our own men at greater risk." However, he did announce that four Royal Marines and two naval personnel were killed in another Argentine air attack on a small landing craft.

Mr Nott told MP's: "Having consulted the military authorities I am not prepared at this stage to give the total numbers of our casualties, and indeed to do so could be of assistance to the enemy and put our own men at greater risk. Meanwhile next of kin are being informed and I will give further information as soon as possible."

Describing the events leading to Tuesday's attack on Sir Galahad and Sir Tristram, Mr Nott told of the coming ashore of 5 Infantry Brigade.

"In order to move forward elements of 5 Infantry Brigade as rapidly as possible to the Port Stanley area and given the appalling weather which was making the logistical problems difficult for helicopters, the force commander moved some forces with heavy stores and equipment around the coast by landing ships."

"But the sea movement coincided with better weather and the Argentines at this time renewed their air attacks on our forces. Our latest assessment is that during these attacks at least seven Argentine aircraft were destroyed and maybe another four, making eleven in all."

Both landing ships were hit, said the defence secretary. Sir Tristram was not severely damaged and had virtually completed off-loading, but Sir Galahad still had men on board having started her own unloading.

Mr Nott said that in another incident, Argentine aircraft had attacked a small landing aircraft, killing four Royal Marines and two navy personnel. Their next of kin were being informed. Mr Nott said that in this incident, all four attacking Mirage aircraft were intercepted by Sea Harriers and shot down.

Of the attack on the frigate Plymouth, during which five Royal Navy personnel were injured, Mr Nott said: "The ship was damaged but she remains operational."

The defence secretary added: "I must tell the House that the task force commander's plans have not been prejudiced by these attacks and the losses of stores and equipment are already being made good from other stocks held ashore."

For the opposition, Mr John Silkin wanted the government to take another resolution to the United Nations to keep up the diplomatic as well as military and economic pressure on Argentina. Mr Nott answered his plea for a resumption of the emergency telephone service for the families and friends of task force personnel, saying this would be restored as soon as possible.

Thatcher: Many Casualties

LD101724 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1718 GMT 10 Jun 82

[By Geoff Meade, PA staff reporter in Bonn]

[Text] Mrs Thatcher tonight warned of "considerable" casualties in Tuesday's Argentine attacks on the British fleet in the Falklands. The prime minister said she was not in a position to give figures. But she added: "We think there must have been quite a considerable number of casualties."

Mrs Thatcher was speaking in Bonn at the end of the NATO summit. Asked about reports of heavy casualties in the latest clashes she said: "We do not know precisely how many because you have to locate every single person before knowing how many there are."

She reminded reporters at the time of the sinking of HMS Sheffield the government released a casualty death figure which later had to be increased. "We are very, very wary now of giving numbers until we are much more sure," she said.

The prime minister referred to Defence Secretary John Nott's speech in the Commons today in which he stated that losses of supplies and equipment in the latest fighting were quickly being replaced. She said: "Of course the biggest blow is the loss of life."

Meanwhile, there were no written declarations of renewed support for Britain over the Falklands in the final communique at the end of NATO summit. But Mrs Thatcher pointed out that NATO colleagues who referred to the Falklands crisis during today's talks expressed their backing for Britain.

She also pointed out that previous NATO statements on the issue had been "very, very supportive indeed." Now that Spain is a member of NATO, it is considered unlikely that a unanimous declaration of support from NATO can be achieved, but there is little doubt that 14 of Britain's 15 alliance partners are still firmly backing the UK.

Asked if she believed in a military campaign against Argentina Mrs Thatcher replied: "I believe in repossessing the Falklands They are British sovereign territory."

GOVERNMENT WON'T IMPOSE OIL PRODUCTION CUTBACKS

LD082200 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1557 GMT 8 Jun 82

[Text] The government is not to impose cutbacks in production from Britain's oilfields for the next 2 and 1/2 years "at least", it was announced today. Energy Secretary Mr Nigel Lawson said in a Commons written reply that the decision would allow the oil industry a firmer basis for development, and help to increase supplies in the 1990s.

He said that under assurances given to the industry in 1974 by the then Labour Energy Secretary Mr Eric Varley, cutbacks "started to become available at the beginning of this year. After very careful consideration I have decided not to impose such cutbacks, at least until the end of 1984," said the minister.

"This will allow the oil industry a firmer basis for its exploration of the investment in the UK continental shelf which will help to increase oil supplies in the 1900s and beyond. My decision is also in line with the conclusions of the select committee on energy in its recent report on North Sea oil depletion policy to which the government will be responding in due course."

Mr Lawson added that he would continue to implement the government's general policy on oil production. "In particular, I shall continue the policy of ensuring that development of new and existing fields proceeds on the basis of good oilfield practice consistent with optimum, oil and gas recovery and that wasteful gas flaring is minimised."

KIPRIANOU MEETS USSR, SFRY, INDIAN OFFICIALS

NC110746 Nicosia Domestic Service in English 0530 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Excerpts] The president of the republic, Mr Kiprianou, continuing his contacts in New York yesterday, had a meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko.

President Kiprianou also had meetings with the Yugoslav president, Mr Stambolic, and the Indian external affairs minister, Mr Rao. During his meeting with Mr Stambolic there was a discussion of the Cyprus problem and an exchange of view on the nonaligned summit meeting due to be held in Baghdad in September. President Stambolic reaffirmed the consistent support of his country for the just cause of Cyprus and its people. A date was also fixed for the visit of the Yugoslav president to Cyprus, which will take place in the last week of August.

DENKTAS INTERVIEWED ON INTERCOMMUNAL TALKS

NC091855 Istanbul CUMHURIYET in Turkish 6 Jun 82 pp 1, 9

[Interview granted by Turkish Cypriot leader Rauf Denktas to CUMHURIYET correspondent Izzet Riza Yalin in Nicosia prior to his departure for New York -- date not specified]

[Text] Question: Is it feasible to divide the intercommunal talks into periods according to the states reached?

Answer: It would be deceptive to divide the talks into periods at this stage. Constitutional issues are being discussed. The issues are interlinked in this framework. Agreement in principle had been reached on the flag, national anthem and similar issues before the Geneva meeting. The Turkish Cypriot view on the "three freedoms" was presented to the Greek Cypriots after the Geneva meeting. They, in turn, submitted their counterviews. No agreement was reached, But the two sides became acquainted with their respective views. They then took up the question of executive organs. The views of both the Greek and the Turkish Cypriot sides have been explained in the broadest lines possible. The details have not been tackled yet.

Question: What are the nine main principles among the points on which agreement has been reached?

Answer: Agreement has been reached on the need for secrecy. Agreement has also been reached on such matters as the flag, national anthem, language, currency, and citizenship, the general aspects of which were taken up in Geneva. The importance of this agreement lies in the sincerity with which the Turkish Cypriot side has presented its views on federation. The agreement reached on these principles exposes the inconsistency of accusations to the effect that we are pursuing a policy of "partition, separatism, and of setting up two separate states."

Question: What are the main points of agreement and disagreement so far?

Answer: On these matters too, principles have been laid down and control methods have been discussed in light of the dangers anticipated by the Turkish Cypriot community. No agreement has yet been reached. Talks are continuing. It is not wise to go into details again. We must be able to enjoy security of life and property in our sector. We cannot be abandoned to the mercy of the Greek Cypriot police and the Greek Cypriot administration.

There will be responsible organs in the federated state encompassing these areas. Can we allow those raiders of Atlilar [aloa], Murataga [maratha], Sandallar [sandalaris] and Ayvasil [ayios vasilios], who murdered innocent people, or people like Nikos Sampson, or those who, as recently disclosed, stored thousands of weapons, plundered 103 Turkish villages and tortured our people for years, to move freely among us, or to enter our state and settle and set up businesses there? I had posed this question to Makarios who had replied: "I appreciate your difficulties. Let these principles be discussed in light of these difficulties." No one can cast a shadow on the right of the Turkish Cypriots to live as decent human beings. The principles are designed to protect this right.

Question: Honorable President, what were the contents of the written document reported to have been submitted on 27 May by the Turkish Cypriot side?

Answer: The subjects we have discussed and the executive powers....

Question: What were the reasons that prompted the meeting which was held with U.N. Secretary General Perez de Cuellar in Geneva?

Answer: As soon as a new secretary general was appointed, Kiprianou wanted to see him. It was natural that he should meet us too. In New York, an assessment will be made of all the matters taken up since the Geneva meeting. It is the view of the Greek Cypriot side that there has been no progress in the intercommunal talks, but the Greek Cyrpiot spokesman himself has admitted that progress has been made. This means that it won't be possible to implement the Kiprianou-Papandreou plan to "kill the intercommunal talks." If the Greek Cypriots abandon the idea of hellenizing Cyprus, the road to reconciliation is open.

PAPANDREOU ON NATO SESSION, RELATIONS WITH TURKEY

NC102051 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1830 GMT 10 Jun 82

[10 June statement by Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou to Greek journalists at conclusion of NATO summit conference in Bonn -- recorded]

[Excerpts] I am particularly pleased tonight to be able to communicate with the Greek people because, indeed, I believe that very important developments for our country have occurred during the last 2 days.

I believe that yesterday a great achievement in Greek foreign policy, was indeed, concluded. On Greece's initiative and with Greece's strong efforts, last night the Ten adopted a stand toward the Israeli aggression on Lebanon and the massacre of women and children in an effort to partition, to trisect the state of Lebanon. I must say that this is the first time that the Ten have adopted a comprehensive stand toward the Arab nation.

Today, we had a full day's conference of the Atlantic Council -- this is how it is called; it is not strictly NATO but the Atlantic Council in which countries that do not belong to the military section, like France, participate. I had the opportunity to speak on the major problems facing Europe, the nuclear arms, and to explain our country's -- our government's -- basic stance on these developments. But I do not wish to go into detail because I do not want to tire you. I would like to stress two important developments of today that concern us.

The first one refers to Greek-Turkish relations. Turkish Prime Minister Ulusu was the next to the last speaker; I was the last speaker. After stressing Turkey's importance for the West and after rejecting the various interpretations regarding the course of Turkey's regime, Mr Ulusu referred to the problem of the Greek-Turkish dispute. He stressed that despite the fact that Turkey wants peace and good neighborliness with Greece, the Greek Government has suspended the dialogue.

I replied to this within the framework of a general position and said that Greece has, indeed, suspended the talks and the dialogue on the Aegean. It has suspended them because it is not going to be led to the negotiations table under threat of force. It is not going to proceed with talks, a dialogue, in the presence of provocative statements and violations of our national territory. I said that Mr Ulusu is definitely right because, if we could develop good neighborly relations and if we could overcome the problems that lead us every day to this strong opposition this would be to the benefit of both peoples, of both countries.

I stressed that in the past I had proposed a moratorium; that is, let us say, the cessation of statements -- provocative statements -- and violations of our national airspace, as a prerequisite to the creation of that climate that would allow the holding of a dialogue.

Moreover, in connection with the major question of Cyprus, I stressed that Greece has supported Great Britain because it does not believe in being the first to make use of force, but that in 1974, another country, Cyprus, was invaded by a NATO member state, that today, a large part of it is under occupation and that this has not been taken up by the West, and particularly the Atlantic Alliance circles, by contrast with the case of the Falkland Islands.

After my speech, President Reagan delivered a long and unscheduled speech. I am not in a position, of course, to say what he said. I can mainly say what I have said. However, he gave a full position that explains U.S. policy on the question of armament, as well as sanctions.

The third event to which I wish to refer is my meeting with President Reagan. The time, of course, was limited, primarily because the burning question that was occupying him at that time was developments in Lebanon. Therefore, he received me between conferences and I had the opportunity to explain to him in a few words the problem facing our country -- our country which is a member of the Atlantic alliance and which is being threatened by a member of the Atlantic alliance especially within the framework of the Atlantic alliance -- and to stress the repercussions for our country from the present situation, the fact that we spend 6.7 percent of our national domestic product on armament at the expense of our policy on health, education, social welfare and economic development. Finally, I stressed the important role which he himself plays or can play should he so desire.

It is natural that during this short period of time he could not be briefed and adopt a stance, but what I can say is that he promised he would be more fully briefed by Mr Haig, who was also present, and would give some consideration to the discussion he had here.

Let me be allowed to say that Turkey agreed to promote a climate of peace in the Aegean region -- there is also a statement that will be released to the press. What is of great importance to us is whether this is going to remain a verbal statement or whether it will be implemented in practice, in which case, of course, this would be a major affair for both our government and our people.

I thank you for listening to me.

KKE-INTERIOR EXECUTIVE OFFICE OFFICIALS ELECTED

NC091727 Athens I AVYI in Greek 9 Jun pp 1, 10

[Excerpt] The new executive office of the KKE-Interior Central Committee was elected during the latter's second meeting which took place on Friday and Saturday.

As the party's press office mentions, in addition to Secretary Yiannis Banias, the following were elected to the 11-member body: Gavroglou Kostas, Yeorgoulas Bambis, Yiannaros Grigoris, Dhiamandopoulos Angelos, Dhrakopoulos Bambis, Kaimakis Nikolaos, Kounalakis Petros, Benas Takis, Papakonstandinou Elli and Filinis Kostas.

The following comrades are new members of the Executive Office: Gavroglou, Dhiamandopoulos, Kaimakis, Kounalakis and Elli Papakonstandinou.

PRIME MINISTER ULUSU SPEAKS ON LEBANON WAR, NATO

TA102217 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 2000 GMT 10 Jun 82

[Excerpt] Addressing the NATO summit meeting held in Bonn this afternoon, Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu said that Turkey is deeply concerned about the developments in the Middle East. According to information received from Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen, Ulusu said that measures must be adopted to urgently stop the war in Lebanon and secure this country's independence and territorial integrity.

Referring to the necessity for solidarity within NATO, Ulusu noted that this solidarity most be effective for relations within the alliance and not only vis-a-vis the outside.

On the subject of the situation in NATO's southeast flank, Ulusu expressed the hope that the atmosphere in Turkish-Greek relations will improve. The prime minister also declared that Turkey supports the recent moves concerning the arms control and disarmament. Ulusu will meet tomorrow with the representatives of Turkish workers employed in the FRG and will return to Turkey on 12 June.

SEA WOLF-II NAVAL EXERCISES BEGIN 10 JUNE

TA101251 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 10 Jun 82

[Text] Naval maneuvers codenamed Sea Wolf-II have begun in Golcuk. Warships, submarines, navy patrol aircraft, navy helicopters and air force aircraft are participating. The ships left Golcuk for the Marmara Sea this morning. Mine countermeasures, mine warfare and joint maneuvers will also be carried out. The exercises will be held in the international waters and air space of the Marmara and the Black Sea until 20 June.

During the exercises, the ships will visit the ports of Samsun, Ordu, Sinop, Trabzon, Rize, Hopa and Eregli, in that order. They will be visited by the citizens in these ports.

TURKISH NATIONALS REPORTEDLY KILLED IN ISRAELI AIR RAID

TA101702 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1550 GMT 10 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 10 Jun (AA) -- The Turkish Ambassador to Damascus has sent two officials to the Lebanese-Syrian border checkpoint where 14 Turkish citizens among others were reported killed in an Israeli air attack while trying to cross from Lebanon into Syria in a convoy.

Foreign Ministry sources said they were now waiting for a first-hand report from the scene of the incident in order to make a final assessment and take appropriate action.

MINISTER OZAL DISCUSSES ECONOMIC POLICY

TA091724 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 9 Jun 82

[Text] State Minister and Deputy Prime Minister Turgut Ozal has said that the contention that the present economic policy cannot be pursued under a regime other than the current one is wrong. He pointed out that even though there was not a parliamentary system in force, public opinion played a great role in the formation of economic policies. Ozal was addressing some 30 foreign bankers and businessmen at a meeting in Istanbul. He discussed Turkey's economic situation and said that the government continuously assessed the constructive criticism leveled against the economic program. He stressed that all the sectors of the economy were now open to foreign capital.

DAILY REPORT

CONTENTS

Western Europe

Vol VII No 114 14 June 1982

AUSTRIA

Pahr Comments on Israel, Disarmament in New York [DIE PRESSE 11 Jun] E 1
Planned 'Vienna Peace Festival' Called Off [VOLKSSTIMME 10 Jun] E 1
WIENER ZEITUNG Reports 308th MBFR Plenary Session [10 Jun] E 1

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Schmidt Addresses Bonn NATO Summit Meeting J 1

FRANCE

Foreign Minister Cheysson Cited on Lebanon Invasion [LE MONDE 10 Jun] K 1
Mitterrand Receives Saudi Foreign Minister K 1
Mitterrand on International Economic, Political Issues K 1
Premier Mauroy Issues Statement on Economy K 4

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Colombo States Position on Lebanese Crisis L 1
Italian Nationals in Beirut Urged To Leave L 2
Parties Support PLO in Lebanese Crisis L 2
Italian General Meets PRC Defense Minister L 3
Spadolini, Colombo Address Cabinet 11 June L 3

PORTUGAL

Balsemao Addresses Nation on Reshuffle M 1

SPAIN

Carrillo Confirms Withdrawal of Resignation N 1
Oliart Addresses Press on Putschists' Trial [YA 5 Jun] N 1

NORDIC AFFAIRS

FINLAND

CP Chairman Kajanoja 'Hopeful' for Party Unity [HUFVUDSTADSBLADET 6 Jun] P 1
Helsinki Reports Trade Agreement With PRC P 1

NORWAY

32 Storting Deputies Oppose Missile Program [ARBEIDERBLADET 9 Jun] P 2

UNITED KINGDOM

Ministry Says 59 Dead in Recent Fighting Q 1
Healey Proposes UN Trusteeship for Falklands Q 1
Saudi Foreign Minister Talks With Thatcher [Riyadh SPA] Q 2

CYPRUS

Kiprianou Speaks on U.S. Arms Support to North R 1
New Decisions on Talks To Be Conveyed Early July R 1
[CYPRUS MAIL 13 Jun]
Lebanon Refugees Arrive in Larnaca by Sea R 2
More Refugees Arrive R 2
Kliridhis on Need To Cooperate With Greece R 2
[O FILELEVTHEROS 14 Jun]
Denktas Completes Talks, Departs New York [Bayrak Radio] R 3

GREECE

Papandreou on NATO Summit, Turkish Relations S 1
Addresses Armed Forces S 1
Comments on Reagan Talks [NEWS 11 Jun] S 2
Spokesman on Improving Turkish Relations S 3
[ELEVTHEROTIPIA 11 Jun]

TURKEY

Foreign Ministry Protests Killing of Turks in Lebanon T 1
Bodies Returned T 1
Iranian Planes Allowed To Use Turkish Airspace T 1
Further Report T 1
Ulusu Returns From Saudi Arabia, Iran, Iraq, FRG T 2
Ulusu: 'Up to Greece' To Resume Talks With Turkey T 2
Further Ulusu Remarks T 3
Ziaul Haq Thanks Turkey for Accepting Afghans T 4
Referendum on New Constitution To Take Place by 14 Nov T 4
Military Prosecuting 2,351 Kurdish Separatists T 4

PAHR COMMENTS ON ISRAEL, DISARMAMENT IN NEW YORK

AU111425 Vienna DIE PRESSE in German 11 Jun 82 p 2

[Georg Possanner dispatch]

[Excerpts] New York -- "I hope that the United States condemns Israel in the Security Council, because that would also strengthen its own political position worldwide." This statement was made by Foreign Minister Pahr Wednesday night in New York following the further escalations of the war in Lebanon. Pahr added that he would also welcome it if the United States were to discontinue its arms deliveries to Israel.

The Austrian foreign minister had come to New York in connection with the UN second special session on disarmament. In a speech that was described as sensational by the New York TIMES, Pahr had called for the development of a "peace technology" which should produce safety through electronic warning, detection and protection systems. The foreign minister spoke of a "concept of an electronic fortress" which would guarantee the states safety at a cost amounting merely to a fraction of the current expenditures for arms technology.

At a dinner for the international UN press crops in New York Pahr indicated that the Voest in Austria, but also companies in the United States, were already working on such a technology and that trial systems had been installed in a country in the Middle East -- he did not say which country. The author of this idea, he said, was the former Austrian Army Command Chief Spannocchi, who is now working for the Voest Corporation in a consultative capacity.

PLANNED 'VIENNA PEACE FESTIVAL' CALLED OFF

AU111250 Vienna VOLKSSTIMME in German 10 Jun 82 p 4

[Summary] Only 1 week after it announced the "Vienna peace festival" that was to be held 6-8 August in Vienna, the Austrian Students Association issued a press release stating that the festival has been called off owing to unexpected difficulties which prevented the second organizer of the festival -- the British "European Nuclear Disarmament" (END) group -- from providing the announced musical program. According to the press release, this will make it impossible to finance the political part of the festival through the sale of tickets for the musical events, as was planned. In its release the students association complains that it was not given adequate financial support for the event from public funds and that public authorities refused to take over secondary liability.

WIENER ZEITUNG REPORTS 308TH MBFR PLENARY SESSION

AU111255 Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 10 Jun 82 p 2

[Text] At yesterday's 308th plenary session of the Vienna negotiations on a reduction of troops in central Europe, GDR chief delegate Andre Wieland declared the Warsaw Pact countries' readiness to accept the Western proposal to list and compare with one another all stances taken by East and West to date. Such a "stocktaking" had been proposed by the NATO states in April to establish where there is consensus and where there are differences. In view of this "danger of a standstill" of the negotiations, Wieland said, the Eastern side is going to "give a try to a written comparison of the positions." A Western press spokesman wlecomed the East's reply to the proposal of the NATO states.

SCHMIDT ADDRESSES BONN NATO SUMMIT MEETING

DW111109 Bonn ARD Television Network in German 0814 GMT 10 Jun 82

[Speech by Chancellor Helmut Schmidt at NATO summit meeting in Bonn -- live]

[Text] President Reagan, Honorary President Trudeau, Mr Secretary General, esteemed colleagues, ladies and gentlemen: The North Atlantic alliance has ensured peace for our people for over a generation. My country, the FRG, is hosting a summit meeting for the first time -- we built a conference hall for it just in case a few years ago. I am happy to most cordially welcome you here in the name of my fellow countrymen.

This is the first time for the prime minister of Spain to take his seat in the community of the alliance. Spain, whose flag we have just honored, thus confirms its will to belong fully to the community of free and democratic states. [applause]

The continuous vitality of the North Atlantic alliance is based on common basic convictions and aims held by our people -- convictions which rest on the best traditions of our nations. I cite the 200-year-old examples of the great French Revolution and the Constitution of the United States of America where the basic rights of the individual have been put down for the first time in a form which has survived the test of time.

What is and remains important from this for all of us is freedom of opinion, freedom from fear and want, justice and solidarity within society. To defend these liberties and primarily to preserve peace, as President Reagan said here yesterday, is why we formed the North Atlantic alliance. We did this out of the conviction outlined as follows by Harry Truman on the occasion of the signing of the North Atlantic Pact in 1949: It is possible for countries to agree on the great principles of human freedom and justice while at the same time permitting in other aspects the great diversity which the human spirit is able to produce. End of quotation.

Without this diversity democracy cannot stay alive. We are therefore proud that the expression of free opinions is possible in our countries and that this is a natural thing for us. Demonstrations, too, have a place in the process of democratic opinion-forming. A state where no demonstrations take place stands under the suspicion of not implementing the full rights of freedom for its citizens. At present the question of peace and ensuring its future is triggering some vehement emotions among the people in many of our countries. Regarding this unrest, clarity and steadiness are required in the alliance's joint policy. We all are deeply concerned about maintaining a balance. We Europeans are primarily affected by the conventional imbalance and by the continuing buildup of medium-range weapons by the Soviet Union.

However, at the same time, new hotbeds of conflict and regional wars are breaking out in all parts of the world outside the alliance's geographical sphere. They are a threat to global peace and we must muster all our strength and influence to prevent these events from expanding. We can meet the comprehensive task of ensuring peace only together and only by a policy of stability and continuity. This is more difficult for democracies than for other regimes. The strength of democracies is their dynamic capability to adapt. However, the frequent changes of governments as well as their necessary sensitivity to temporary opinion trends may also mean weakness.

In the face of a foreign-political, a world-political opposite number, whose strong point is continuity, we must ensure that the strong point of democracy -- namely, dynamic adaptibility -- does not become the weak point of our foreign and security policy. A joint long-term policy requires trusting and close consultations among us. Consultations hold the alliance together. Our alliance is not based on dependence, but on free cooperation of equal partners. This is our strength.

Compared to other social systems, our societies are resistant even in the world economic crisis because they are also able in a deep world recession to guarantee economic stability and social peace. The ability to preserve economic and social stability is -- I use this term quite consciously -- of strategic importance in the world wide contest among various systems. Because without internal peace, external peace is endangered.

With a view to the military threat, the defensive and deterrent capability involves efforts in the conventional field -- to which we Germans make the largest contribution in Europe -- as well as in the nuclear sphere. Both are indispensable. However, pursuing a balance is not enough in itself. Because neither side trusts the other, there is the danger of an arms race which can raise the balance to a higher level on both sides. However, an arms race would jeopardize the goal of security.

Apart from the necessary military strength, guaranteed security also includes the equally necessary continuous and consistent efforts for control and disarmament. It is only agreed security -- security agreed on between the West and East on the basis of an agreed balance on the lowest possible level -- which offers real stability and security.

It is this relationship which despite many setbacks has caused the states of the alliance for 15 years to hold to the two elements of the basis philosophy of the Harmel Report. On the one hand, ensuring a balance through sufficient military strength, defensive capability and political solidarity on the part of the alliance so as to deter pressure and aggression and, on the other, a policy of dialogue and negotiations, a willingness to cooperate with the East, and a policy of treaties, in particular on arms control and disarmament.

Finally, we see more clearly today than when the alliance was founded the importance of the nonalignment of the Third World states and the importance of nonalignment for the stability of the entire world. Here, too, we realize the manifold aspects of this. It is one of the many strong points of our democracies that we cooperate with the variety of Third World states peacefully and in a friendly manner, without wanting to make them dependent on us.

The present difficult political and economic international situation, however, gives rise not only to concern but also to hope. We do have a chance to bring about a change for a more stable world, but we are also at a crossroads. To believe without a doubt that peace can be permanently ensured from one day to the next is a dangerous illusion. It is only by many small steps in the same direction that we can really come closer to our goal.

We will also in the future hold to the principle of the Harmel Report that -- and I quote from the report -- collective defense is a stabilizing factor in world politics. It constitutes the necessary prerequisite for an effective policy aimed at further detente. End of quotation. At this meeting we not only want to confirm our consensus on this subject but we also want to develop it further in consultations. At the same time, we want to represent it publicly. Then the saying of British historian Edward Gibbon will become valid for us: The winds and waves are always on the side of the ablest navigators. Or, to quote Geothe: He who catches the moment is the right man.

Let me conclude my speech with a very cordial greeting to our guests. Mr fellow countrymen are happy to host our friends and partners in the alliance. However, rather than being hosts for just 2 days, we want to be good friends and partners. Our deliberations will show that the mutual confidence among free partners will again grow into the calm self-confidence in the strength of an alliance. This self-confidence will enable us also in difficult times to consistently promote a policy that has been determined to be correct. Thank you very much. [applause]

FOREIGN MINISTER CHEYSSON CITED ON LEBANON INVASION

PM111355 Paris LE MONDE in French 10 Jun 82 p 4

["M.D." report: "Mr Cheysson: Paris' Condemnation of the Invasion Is Complete"]

[Text] "France's condemnation of the Israeli invasion is complete," External Relations Minister Cheysson said to the National Assembly External Relations Commission on Tuesday 8 June.

Several commission members, especially Mr Couve de Murville (RPR), had expressed regret at France's hesitation following the Israeli attack on Lebanon. Mr Cheysson explained that the scale of the intervention had not been immediately obvious. France had "deplored" it and then "vigorously condemned" it. But, the minister said, at Versailles on Sunday evening Mr Mitterrand said: "France has no hesitation in condemning the Israeli intervention any more than it hesitated in condemning [footnote: and not "it had no hesitation in convincing" as we erroneously wrote in the first edition of LE MONDE on 8 June] the other military interventions of Lebanese territory when they were made against the Lebanese Government's will." Mr Cheysson stressed that that sentence summed up the French stance.

Mr Cheysson said the same at a meeting on Tuesday, at their request, with a delegation of Arab ambassadors led by their senior member Mr Ben Abbes (Morocco) and including the leaders of the Arab League and PLO delegations in Paris Mr Yazid and Mr Souss. The minister expressed his emotion at the suffering of the Lebanese people and "of their guests" (in other words the Palestinians). He stressed that France has "a moral commitment toward the Lebanese people and the Arab peoples." The president of the republic will make himself very clear during his press conference this Wednesday, he said.

The Arab diplomats said they were "satisfied." PLO Representative Souss, in particular, described the meeting as "positive."

The EEC foreign ministers are meeting in Bonn this Wednesday and will probably issue a communique condemning the Israeli intervention.

MITTERRAND RECEIVES SAUDI FOREIGN MINISTER

LD111238 Paris Domestic Service in French 1200 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Text] Francois Mitterrand received Prince Sa'ud al-Faysal at the Elysee this morning. The Saudi foreign minister said he is satisfied with the French position, which he considers completely clear.

MITTERRAND ON INTERNATIONAL ECONOMIC, POLITICAL ISSUES

AB102145 Paris Diplomatic Information Service in French 1330 GMT 10 Jun 82

["Mitterrand Press Conference 9 June in Paris -- excerpts: International Political Issues"]

[Excerpts] [Question] Mr President, in Versailles, France championed the stability of exchange rates through your voice and the voices of your ministers. Can one conclude from this that the participation of the French franc in the European Monetary System for the coming months, if not the coming years, must be taken for granted?

[Answer] Mr Fabra, you are placing me in a position that I do not wish, that is, that of playing the prophet, and you are raking up an issue which I discussed with you twice, recently; first when I met with about 15 journalists who are experts on the issue; then during a limited press conference in Versailles.

If we are pleading for the setting up of an international monetary system to check the excessive fluctuations of exchange rates, if we are looking for common references, if we refuse to submit to the dictate of a single currency and to see all trade encumbered because the exchange rates of the dollar vary with fluctuations sometimes difficult to understand -- or too easy to understand -- we are then just not going to start destroying what exists.

Thus, when I call for an agreement among the currencies, the dollar, the European Monetary System including the European currency unit, and the yen, it is (?not contrary to the) desired construction.

What I want to tell you is that stability requires a system. Nothing is perfect. Bretton Woods was not perfect, but nothing is worse than the underground struggle which the major industrial countries, those with strong currencies, are engaged in. This war is being waged at the very moment when military discipline is expected from those very countries in their budgets and objectives. That is so illogical that I must champion understanding and harmony and remain attached to the existing system.

[Question] Then I would like you to elaborate on your recent remark on France's position toward the Soviet attitude. Is it coherent to suspend the political dialogue with the Soviet Union, as has been the case for 1 year, while maintaining economic and financial cooperation with it following the pattern of the gas agreement with Algeria?

[Answer] Things are not as simple as that. We have not stopped our political dialogue with the Soviet Union. Mr Gromyko and Mr Cheysson are scheduled to meet the day after tomorrow in New York. We maintain constant relations with the Soviet authorities: Such relations are warm or cold. It is certain that from over there, the cold is more frequent than the warmth. I will say this is natural. However, there can be warmth from time to time. But one must pay attention that it not be too hot.

We have not broken our political relations with the Soviet Union: I even wish to improve them. But not at the expense of a certain number of principles. I do not accept, I do not want to ingore the Afghan crisis or the situation in Poland. I will not ignore the Soviet overarmament on the European continent. So now the discussions are launched. The situation must be improved. But I am not prepared to exaggerate political relations as long as those issues remain unresolved. Perhaps you would like one to forget Afghanistan, Poland and the SS-20 type missiles. That is your problem. I will not, in any case, I will not forget.

I believe that the verbose demagogy used here and there should not stop the president of the republic being open on the one hand -- and I am open -- toward the Soviet Union as well as the other eastern countries -- I am open to a great policy of peace and progress -- or make him accept complacency on the other hand.

You have also referred to agreements. The contract for gas, which has been established in French francs, has existed for several years, and under the agreement, the total gas supply will be 12 billion cubic meters. The two sides in the negotiations asked for more. That represents 5 percent of our total energy supply and 30 percent of our gas supply for the year 1990. This is reasonable. We are diversifying our sources of supply and I am happy that we have eventually been able to sign agreements with various sources in order not to depend on one source.

[Question] Mr President, my question is on the major international issues which you have not mentioned.

[Answer] Tell me which ones.

[Question] What does France expect from the UN special session on armament? In general, what is France's contribution to the problems of disarmament?

[Answer] Even though I am not expecting anything, I do not cease to entertain hope. I do not cease to take initiatives, but I avoid direct involvement.

France can play a useful role. The minister of external relations will make France's proposals and express its views at the United Nations. One talks of disarmament. Attempts are so far aimed at reducing the level of overarmament. Let us understand what we are talking about.

France is ready to participate in all possible control measures. If general disarmament — I mean disarmament and not overarmament -- was initiated now, without any illusions, in particular by the United States and the Soviet Union, and reached a low enough level for me to reexamine France's position, we would do it.

In the present circumstances, it is unthinkable that France renounce the force at its disposal. It will therefore not participate in negotiations. It will not agree to be included in the negotiations as the two superpowers wish, for easily understandable reasons: The Soviet Union, because no other nuclear force than its own would then be maintained in Europe, and the United States, because they would not dislike us going back to the NATO Integrated Command, which is out of the question.

So, I want to repeat, our contribution to disarmament could only be effective if the superpowers renounced (?the high level of armaments). The two can destroy each other seven or eight times, which makes at least six or seven times too much, if not much too much. France has power, just enough power -- but the decision lies with me -- to weigh on the balance of power in a defensive way aimed at ensuring the security of our territory. I want to preserve anything that can be used in the defense of this territory. It is the very condition for our national independence.

[Question] Mr President, you said just now that it is out of the question for France to rejoin the NATO command. However, you are going to dine this evening with the NATO heads of government. Also, I was made to understand that, for the first time in 16 years, France has invited NATO foreign ministers for a meeting in France next year. So, could you tell us how you see development of relations between France and the Atlantic alliance and if you still nurse, as you did last year, the idea of renegotiating the contents of the Atlantic alliance. Finally, do you know whom Georges Marchais was referring to when he denounced those supporting the return of France into NATO and those who want to sell France to Reagan?

[Answer] Georges Marchais made the same misinterpretation as you did. Before discussing such issues, one has to be properly informed.

France has not left NATO. It has not left the Atlantic defense and military alliance. It left the Integrated NATO Command. Therefore, there is no coming back under orders from the integrated command. There will therefore be no meeting of the integrated command, nor that of NATO defense ministers, in France. There will be a meeting of either NATO heads of state — that is their business -- or that of the foreign ministers of the alliance, which exists and of which we are a member. We will remain in it and we even want it strengthened. This evening, in Bonn, where I will travel to when I regretably leave you, I will not attend a meeting of the integrated command of NATO which is the only organization France quit during the regime of General de Gaulle. I will meet the NATO heads of state, and the following day the same heads of state and government will hold their meeting, which will be attended by Pierre Mauroy. So, things are clear now. NATO is a word used at any time and in any war. NATO is a defense and military alliance. We should not therefore close our eyes or turn our back and say: I don't know anything about problems of strategy.... These people are our allies, with whom we have constant relations, so that would be hypocritical. But we will not accept that France's decisions be subject to the approval of any command we have no control over. That is the truth. We shall not join it and we shall not receive this command on French soil.

Is that clear? It is clear for you, it is clear for Georges Marchais, it is clear for all those who discuss this issue — in this case carelessly. That is why I am convinced that Georges Marchais — I reply to your question -- was not referring to me....

[Question] Will the government persist in its global attitude of suspicion toward the various pacifist trends that spring up here and there or will it try to achieve a balance between the positive aspects and the negative ones?

[Answer] This is an excellent definition. It is just what I want. I do not want pacifists who are detrimental to peace. As for those who are serving its cause, I say long live pacifism. It all depends on how they peform.

PREMIER MAUROY ISSUES STATEMENT ON ECONOMY

LD131338 Paris Domestic Service in French 1100 GMT 13 Jun 82

[Statement by Premier Pierre Mauroy from the Hotel Matignon in Paris -- live]

[Text] For the last year we have been implementing the policy which we proposed to the country and which it ratified. That policy has already brought several successes. In the sphere of growth we are doing better than our partners: As a result of stimulatory measures, our economy is experiencing appreciable growth, while those of our partners are stagnating and in some cases regressing. In employment we are doing better than our partners: The numbers of those in work have already stopped decreasing, and the increase in unemployment has shown a very clear deceleration in France while it is accelerating sharply in our partners' countries. But an international revival is not (?in the cards). We are suffering the excessive effects of the inflation which we inherited, an annual inflation rate which I remind you was 14 percent. We have begun to reduce that rate of inflation, to slow down price rises. But the results obtained are neither sufficiently appreciable nor sufficiently rapid as compared with the development of prices of some of our partners.

This situation leads us to adapt our policy to the difficulties of the course. This is what the president of the republic has called the second phase of the change. What are its charcteristics? We will continue our effort at revival by pursuing the action undertaken last year in support of consumption, with assistance for investment. The government is counting on the dynamism of the heads of enterprises. The new monetary parities offer additional possibilities for developing our industry and commerce, to recapture shares in the domestic markets and to develop our exports. As for the nationalized enterprises, in 1983 they will devote fr25 billion to investment.

We will also continue our efforts in fighting unemployment with the aim of consolidating and enlarging on the initial successes. The objective of creating or freeing 100,000 jobs in 1982 within the framework of the solidarity contract scheme will be attained. So far we have created or freed 50,000 jobs. New measures will in addition complete the arrangements already set up. After the solidarity contracts and the guaranteed training for 16-18 year-olds we will open up a third front for the benefit of the long-term unemployed. I will give details of this to departmental labor directors meeting in Paris tomorrow.

As for the fight against inflation, we are altering our speed in order to reduce the gulf which separates us from some of our partners in this matter and which imposes a burden on our currency and on our foreign trade balance. The government intends, through energetic action, to obtain decisive results in the shortest possible time. We must bring our inflation rate down to below 10 percent over a period of 4 months -- July, August, September and October -- by a general freezing of prices and incomes.

In order that the measures -- which were decided this morning at the restricted cabinet meeting and which will be described in detail at the Council of Ministers -- might reach their full effect, the participation of all is necessary. In the first place: the participation of the two sides of industry. I will thus receive them on Thursday in order to involve them in our action. Parliament will also soon have the matter referred to it so that it can provide the government with the necessary means of legislative order.

The policy which has been undertaken in the last year is the only one able to reconcile the requirement of growth and social justice, to fight with the same vigor against unemployment and against inflation. We will continue along this path, adapting the pace and the means each time it proves to be necessary. For everyone knows that it is easier to drive at full speed than to climb a mountain. We have given ourselves the means to succeed; The French will succeed by rallying together and mobilizing all their wishes. Today's constraints are the price which has to be paid to attain our objectives.

Strengthened by the ever renewed confidence of the French people, the government, in an initial phase, undertook profound actions with the aim of stimulating the country's industry. These were nationalizations and the new rights of workers. The success of the second phase of the change involves a triple effort: an effort to master our economic and financial equilibrium, an effort to give new dynamism to our industry and develop our technology, an effort of solidarity and social justice. More than ever the country needs to be united and mobilized. To achieve this objective, the most glaring inequalities must be reduced, primarily those that separate the French people with a job from those without one. Solidarity is the highest expression of public-spiritedness and of freedom and responsibility. It is through solidarity that we will succeed all together and for all.

COLOMBO STATES POSITION ON LEBANESE CRISIS

AU111544 Rome ANSA in English 1515 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 11 Jun (ANSA) -- Immediate and unconditional Israeli withdrawal and a full return to Lebanese sovereignty, political independence, and territorial unity and integrity are the major points in the Italian Government's position on the Lebanese crisis, Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo told the Lower House here today.

Warning that the Israeli invasion might spark unpredictable consequences even outside the Middle East, Colombo pointed out that immediate and unconditional Israeli withdrawal was the "only condition" for re-establishing "civil coexistence" in the Middle Eastern state.

Colombo voiced a similar position when he called in Israel's ambassador in Rome this morning to voice the Italian Government's "firmest deploration" for the invasion.

In his parliamentary speech, Colombo also listed Italian moves since March and April when first fears emerged over a possible end to the truce then in effect.

When he visited Tel Aviv in May, Colombo repeatedly made it clear to the Israeli leaders that they must show moderation and self-control, the diplomatic chief recalled.

He also pointed out that the Italian position is in full harmony with the statement released by the ten EEC foreign ministers on the fringe of the recent NATO summit in Bonn.

The EEC statement vigorously condemned the Israeli invasion, urged a return to Lebanese independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, and, most importantly, warned that further EEC action can be expected if Israel refuses to withdraw its troops so as to enable the U.N. peace-keeping [force] to carry out its duties.

Colombo also recalled the EEC's Venice statement of June 1981 in which the Ten asserted two principles as the basis for any Mideastern settlement:

-- The existence and security of all states in the region.

-- Justice for all the peoples in the region.

"This implies recognition of the Palestinian people's legitimate rights and, of course, Israel's existence and security," Colombo said.

He added that this was why the EEC is arguing for the presence of the Palestine Liberation Organization in any talks for an overall settlement, a position, he said, which is widely supported, even by the United States.

He also argued that Lebanon must now be given "effective guarantees" in the form of "adequate international control forces" with two tasks:

-- Towards Lebanon, to prevent external attempts at destabilization.

-- With respect to Israel, to prevent any repetition of attacks on its northern territories.

Meanwhile, as Colombo was speaking in Parliament, the Foreign Ministry's Director-General Francesco Malfatti, received a delegation of Arab ambassadors on his behalf.

Speaking for all the Arab diplomatic missions accredited in Rome, the diplomats voiced appreciation for the position adopted by Italy over the Israeli invasion.

ITALIAN NATIONALS IN BEIRUT URGED TO LEAVE

AU112012 Rome ANSA in English 1911 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 11 Jun (ANSA) -- Italian nationals residing in Beirut are receiving assistance from the Italian Embassy there and have been advised to move from the western sector of the capital, those areas most exposed to the Israeli military offensive, to the Christian eastern sector, a Foreign Ministry spokesman in Rome reported this afternoon.

In East Beirut, the spokesman said, a center has been set up for those Italians who wish to be repatriated abroad the ship Carrle.

Falangist authorities in the capital, it was learned, have said they will facilitate the embarkation of Italians seeking to return to Italy.

The spokesman said that no casualties had been reported among the Italians living in Beirut as a result of the recent fighting.

PARTIES SUPPORT PLO IN LEBANESE CRISIS

AU112010 Rome ANSA in English 1921 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 11 Jun (ANSA) -- The Israeli offensive underway in Lebanon was described here today as "an attempt by Israel to exterminate an entire people, the Palestinians," by spokesmen for Italy's three biggest political parties, the Christian Democrats, Socialists and Communists which, together, account for some 80 percent of the representation in parliament.

The statement condemning the Israeli invasion and an urgent plea for "immediate aid in the form of money or medical products" for the thousands of victims of "Israeli aggression" came during a press conference called by the Italian-Arab Friendship Association.

The nation's party of relative majority, the Christian Democrats, was represented by M.P. Franco Cabras, flanked by the head of the Communist Party Foreign Relations Bureau, M.P. Giancarlo Pajetta, socialist M.P. Michele Achilli, and Eliseo Milian of the small Proletarian Unity Party.

Also present for the press conference were the representative in Rome for the Palestine Liberation Organization, Nimir Ahmad, and Msgr Hilarion Capucci, the former head of the Greek Catholic community in Jerusalem.

In response to newsmen's questions, Cabras said that he favored government recognition of the PLO despite "some difficulties to be overcome" and said that he was opposed to a break with Israel on the diplomatic and economic levels.

The Christian Democrat M.P. and other party spokesmen urged the Rome government to take steps in connection with the Israeli invasion within the framework of the European Economic Community and spoke out critically against Italy's participation in the multilateral peacekeeping force in the Sinai.

Socialist Achilli went further to argue that the Camp David framework accords, the basis for the Italian participation in the Sinai force, are one of the causes of the present aggression because they "cover" the Jewish state's flanks.

According to the Communist spokesman, Pajetta, Italy must also lodge protests against the aggression with the United Nations and ask the Washington government, a NATO partner, to suspend all military, financial, and economic aid for Israel. He also identified Israeli policy as a "grave threat to peace."

Pajetta said that the Israeli-Syrian ceasefire announced this morning cannot be effective so long as Israeli troops stay on Lebanese soil and called for the "unconditional withdrawal of Israel back behind its own frontiers."

ITALIAN GENERAL MEETS PRC DEFENSE MINISTER

AU121429 Rome ANSA in English 0900 GMT 12 Jun 82

[Text] Beijing, 12 Jun (ANSA) -- Italy's defense chief of staff, General Vittorio Santini is in China on a week-long visit.

The general, who arrived in Beijing Thursday, was received yesterday at People's Assembly building by Defense Minister and State Advisor Geng Biao. He also had talks later in the day with his counterpart, General Yang Dezhi.

SPADOLINI, COLOMBO ADDRESS CABINET 11 JUNE

AU121513 Rome ANSA in English 0930 GMT 12 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 12 Jun (ANSA) -- Premier Giovanni Spadolini outlined in considerable detail the government's activities at an international level when he addressed the cabinet here Friday. He dwelled on the summit of industrialized nations in Versailles (June 4-6), U.S. President Ronald Reagan's one-day visit to Rome June 7th, and the NATO summit in Bonn on June 10th.

With regard to the sessions in Versailles, Spadolini said the most important political development to emerge had been the renewed pledge made by the heads of state and government to work jointly on concrete goals to ensure lasting, stable economic growth.

He stressed that Italy plans to contribute actively to the drawing up of criteria and means by which to build closer cooperation among the monetary authorities of North America, Japan and the European Community. This Italian contribution must be given from a position of full parity with the other nations, he emphasized.

The premier said that with regard to East-West trade, aggrement must be reached jointly on cautionary commercial criteria aimed at setting limits on export credits.

Spadolini noted that participants at the Versailles summit had drafted a vigorous third world strategy and agreed on the need to hurry global negotiations, without, however, repeating the misunderstandings which cropped up at Cancun (Mexico) in 1981. Food and energy were singled out as high priority sectors, he noted.

Turning to Reagan's talks here, which focused on Lebanon, the Iran-Iraq war and the fighting in the South Atlantic, Spadolini said that Rome and Washington saw eye-to-eye on these conflicts. Their shared viewpoint was once again noted at the NATO meeting in Bonn, the premier continued.

The Atlantic allies consolidated their will to promote a policy towards Eastern Europe tempering firmness with a willingness to open a dialogue and pursue detente, Spadolini said. Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo then reported to the cabinet on the work of the Atlantic Council in Bonn and the latest developments in Lebanon.

Earlier in the day he had addressed the House in these topics and highlighted the fact that Israel and Syria had agreed to a ceasefire in Lebanon.

Colombo said that the situation was full of great uncertainty and that it was necessary to work for the rigorous observance of the truce so as to arrive at a rapid and complete withdrawal from Lebanon of Israeli forces.

At this time of growing international tensions, he said that the Atlantic alliance had in Bonn demonstrated its vitality and its solidity. He said he noted that NATO had maintained it defensive character and its fundamental role of safeguarding conditions of balance and security in Europe and the world.

Out of the NATO summit meeting clearly emerged a greater cohesion among the Atlantic partners and the firm will to give new impetus to a dialogue with the nations of Eastern Europe, Colombo concluded.

BALSEMAO ADDRESSES NATION ON RESHUFFLE

LD122348 Lisbon in Portuguese to Europe 1900 GMT 12 Jun 82

[Speech by Prime Minister Pinto Balsemao, to the nation, on 12 June -- recorded]

[Text] The first ministerial reshuffle in the government over which I preside was completed today. This is a normal act in a democracy, invariably initiated by the head of the executive. In the Portuguese case this means the prime minister upon whom the responsibility falls of chosing the members of his team.

To delay a ministerial reshuffle, to find in it distorted means or to search for nonexistent intentions is to adopt attitudes running counter to democratic normality.

The government is an organ of sovereignty answerable to the Assembly of the Republic and to the president of the republic. Theeighth government is a government of the democratic alliance and, in accordance with the parliamentary majority that supports it, it is duty-bound to implement the program that it once submitted to the Assembly of the Republic's veto.

We are in the government because the Portuguese people opted for our blueprint, a blueprint for changing Portuguese society. And all those who accept to become members of the executive are therefore pledged to contributing to its achievement. This entails their rejection of any other alternative blueprints, be they parliamentary or extraparliamentary.

It is for this very reason that, in each given situation, the government must find itself strengthened in order to tackle the challenges it must face. It is also for this reason that ministerial reshuffles occur. They do not signify a judgement on those leaving nor the glorification of the newcomers. They are merely, democratically, a changing-of-the-guard between people committed to giving their best for the execution of the blueprint in which they collectively believe.

It is for this reason, moreover, that any reshuffles in the executive, whenever deemed useful by the prime minister, must not be conditioned by foreseeable events, be they the revision of the Constitution or any others.

Furthermore, as far as the revision of the Constitution is concerned, the government cannot and must not interfere in this exclusive area of jurisdiction of the Assembly of the Republic. There is, therefore, no constitutional logic invoking the revision of the Constitution as grounds for passing judgement on the timeless of a government reshuffle.

The government, while an organ of sovereignty, is a democratic institution. It is the government of the entire nation, the Government of Portugal, and in accepting this status it is influenced by no preconditions or prejudgements or specific issues, and much less by any opportunistic appeals to those in power.

The challenges confronting us are many and difficult. To a large extent they are no different from those experienced everywhere by most Western democracies. The industrialized economies are confronted with the specters of crisis, unemployment, inflation and falling production. And the crisis does not exist only, nor mainly, in the free and democratic countries. The Eastern countries, the autocratic regimes with collectivized economies, are experiencing it to an even more spectacular extent.

Our small, open and not yet fully developed economy cannot but reflect the effects of the world economic crisis. And it is our fundamental task to tackle and overcome them. Of course not everything is in our hands, but it is up to us all to make the main effort without being intimidated by the prophets of doom nor by the campaigns aimed at preventing the creation of the indispensable climate of confidence.

In this struggle the government has achieved undeniable results. Thus, in the second semester of 1981 there was a fall in unemployment both with regard to the first semester and to the equivalent period of 1980. And in May of this year the overall price rise did not exceed 0.09 percent. Moreover we have made the final repayment of the foreign debt in which our gold reserves were used as collateral. This means that, since a few days ago, our gold reserves are once more free of any mortage.

In this connection one cannot but regret the facile way in which some opinion groups pass comment on our external and internal financial situation, and the way in which their comment finds an echo in political leaders in posts of responsibility. Their attitude does not serve the national interest.

We must still tackle and confront the challenges of social justice, housing, education, health and basic infrastructures. Action in the sphere of social justice must be a priority for any government seeking to change Portuguese society for the better. Without social justice, instead of being the central consideration and ultimate goal of economic policy, man becomes its instrument, its means or pretext. Social justice strengthens the ties of collective solidarity and allows the sedimentation of positive consensuses among the Portugese.

This is an aspiration of the Portuguese men and women who have reponded with serenity and firmness to the repeated attempts to disrupt social stability, as was seen clearly during the two foiled strikes promoted by the General Confederation of Portuguese Workers.

We shall also confront and overcome the challenge posed by Portugal's growing projection in the world. To this end we are relying on the strength of our culture and language, on the presence of our emigrants in the five continents and on the transparency of our foreign policy, a foreign policy that remains unchanged and has been skillfully interpreted by those now leaving the government, a foreign policy seen to be consistent and well adjusted with regard both to a difficult and fluid international context and to the permanent and unchangeable values of Portuguese reality.

In short, I regard the ministerial reshuffle as the most adequate from the institutional, political and functional standpoints.

From the institutional standpoint, if the correct relationship among the organs of sovereignty has in any way been disrupted it cannot be blamed on the government, and neither the Portuguese people nor the interests of our country will tolerate a government enjoying equivocal or reserved political confidence.

From the political standpoint it is clear that the political course previously mapped out and pursued by the executive will remain totally unchanged.

From the functional standpoint, the reshuffle has ensured the creation of conditions for resolving the main problems diagnosed

Finally, the very timeliness of the reshuffle has been confirmed by the reactions it has evoked.

And it is important that it be made quite clear that there cannot be a prime minister nor a government other than fully-fledged ones, enjoying full powers, all the more so when the executive concerned is based on a solid and consistent parliamentary majority.

The electoral verdict of 5 October 1980 must be respected. It represents the establishment of a veritable legislative contract with those to whom we are answerable above all, the electorate and people of Portugal.

CARRILLO CONFIRMS WITHDRAWAL OF RESIGNATION

LD130908 Madrid Domestic service in Spanish 0700 GMT 13 Jun 82

[Text] Early this morning Santiago Carrillo announced that he is continuing as PCE secretary-general after reconsidering his decision to resign. For his part Nicolas Sartorius confirmed his resignation as party deputy secretary-general. However, he told journalists he will continue in the Executive Committee.

Prior to these two decisions the PCE Central Committee approved a draft resolution in which it ratified its approval of the measures passed at the tenth congress. At the same time it reaffirmed the policy of democratic collaboration and the Eurocommunist strategy. In the same draft, which was approved by 67 votes in favor, 4 against and 12 abstentions, the Central Committee ratified its desire to keep the party's doors open to all those who wish to return. Finally, the PCE Central Committee ratified its respect for the defense of the workers' commissions' independence.

OLIART ADDRESSES PRESS ON PUTSCHISTS' TRIAL

PM110849 Madrid YA in Spanish 5 Jun 82 p 3

[Unattributed report: "Government's Decision Unanimous and Solidary"]

[Text] Defense Minister Alberto Oliart answered amply at a press conference following the Cabinet meeting all the questions concerning trial 2/81, instituted because of the events of 23 February [1981 -- date of abortive coup in Spain], as well as those concerning the appeal which the government has requested the public prosecutor to file. The defense minister was accompanied by CRISDE [expansion unknown] chief, General Rodriguez Toquero.

In the first place, Oliart pointed out the unanimity and solidarity of the members of the cabinet concerning the decision to request the public prosecutor to submit an appeal, which is currently being studied by the minister of justice, as well as by a group of jurists. He spoke of calm respect in the face of "one of the most painful chapters of the transition, which we are fortunately now closing." In relation to the sentences, he also said that different viewpoints might be held as regards the assessment of forms of conduct but not as regards the sentences resulting from them. He added that the court had been consistent and had applied each of the articles correctly, in accordance with those assessments. He referred to the acquitted officers, who have become compulsorily on call, according to the official gazette, as of yesterday, specifying that they will maintain this situation until final judgement, "although it is possible that some will soon be assigned," but not others, whose sentences will be the subject of appeals.

He also announced the submission to the Cortes of the new reform of military justice procedure, and added that during the course of the above-mentioned trial shortcomings of the previously effected reform were seen, especially in its aspect of streamlining procedure.

Asked whether he had studied the possibility of his resignation, the minister replied: "I have not contemplated resigning. I have never sought any appointment, and as long as I have the prime minister's confidence, I will remain a minister."

Asked also about the assessments with which the government was less in agreement concerning the sentences, the minister explained that those of conspiracy and aiding the rebellion are debatable in light of the account of the events in the indictment.

As regards the state of opin on in the armed forces, he stated that there is no tension between the civil power and military power. He also declared that the sentence is not a destablizing factor for democracy, and added: "I do not believe that there is a tendency in the armed forces toward autonomy from political power. The armed forces, with their own peculiarities, have a tendency toward handling their problems internally."

Last, when asked about the financial and political cost of the trial, the minister explained that he only had in hand the total for the fitting out of the army geographical service, which was estimated at 35 million pesetas. As regards the political cost, the minister concluded: "I believe that the trial started a lengthy interval of expectation which has fortunately been ended. I have found this trial highly important, hopeful and encouraging, because it places us on a par with the countries of the modern world, which base their coexistence on peace and freedom."

Ordinary Cabinet Meeting

Last, in relation to the appeal ordered by the government, Mr Oliart specified that this was based on a different appraisal as regards the assessments. "These entail a specific sentence which is laid down in the code of military justice, and so it is not that the government disagrees with the severity of those sentences, which in fact are applied consistently, but that it disagrees with certain assessments which are debatable in the light of the account of the events."

Following the defense minister's statement, Secretary of State for Information Ignacio Aguirre specified in view of reports which have appeared over the last few days that the Cabinet meeting held yesterday was of a purely ordinary nature and that it had been announced prior to the publication of the sentences in the trial of those involved in the 23 February events.

FINLAND

CP CHAIRMAN KAJANOJA 'HOPEFUL' FOR PARTY UNITY

PM101329 Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 6 Jun 82 p 9

[Unattributed report: "Kajanoja Prepared to Lower Threshold for Minority"]

[Text] Finnish Communist Party [SKP] Chairman Jouko Kajanoja is hopeful about the possibility of achieving internal unity within the party. At the SKP's Central Committee meeting on Saturday [5 June] Kajanoja said that the party is prepared to lower the threshold for minority participation in the work in the party's leading organs. "There have been no significant attempts to bring about a final split or a victory for the majority or purges," Kajanoja said.

The SKP is opposed to a zero growth line in the coming negotiations on the wage rises for the year and is demanding an increase in real wages corresponding at least to increase in productivty. The party's new Central Committee ended its first meeting on Saturday by also demanding effective index-linked arrangements in the new collective wages agreements for workers in the public and private sectors.

The Central Committee met only partially, since the minority's representatives did not take part in the meeting. Immediately after the extraordinary party congress a few weeks ago the minority announced that it would not be taking part in the work of the new party leadership. Since the congress the two sides have held negotiations under the leadership of the party's new Chairman Jouko Kajanoja, but so far at least there have been no results.

Chairman Kajanoja, who had been counting on the minority's participation in this Central Committee meeting, has not lost hope, however. In his speech at the Central Committee meeting on Saturday Kajanoja said that there has been a willingness to lower the threshold for minority participation. There is a willingness to propose confidence-building organizational solutions within the framework of the decisions made by the extraordinary party congress. Kajanoja also took the view that the atmosphere is calm and promising.

As far as economic and wage agreement policy are concerned the party's point of departure at present is that employment is the most important concern. The most important ingredients in an economic policy which would improve the employment situation are further development of public service, an increase in the population's social security -- in party through improved protection for jobs -- and an increase in wage-earners' real incomes. At its meeting on Saturday the Central Committee also adopted a stance on the almost month-long strike in the civil enginering industry. The party gives the strikes its full support and demands that controls on strike-breaking be tightened.

HELSINKI REPORTS TRADE AGREEMENT WITH PRC

LD112126 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1430 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Excerpt] Finland and the PRC have concluded their first long-term trade agreement. At the same time the trade between the two countries will go over to freely convertible currencies. Ilpo Ropponen examines the trade between Finland and China: If the trade between Finland and China amounted to less than 0.5 percent of the value of Finland's total foreign trade. Exports to China amounted to FM180 million, most of it wood-processing industry products and fertilizers. Imports from China amounted to FM120 million, chiefly textiles, clothing and foodstuffs.

At present it may be said, however, that the Chinese markets are interesting, and therefore the Finns attach importance to the possibilities of developing trade with China. The Chinese economy at present is at a kind of turning point. This is shown, for instance, by China's joining of the IMF, and it is due to this that the trade between Finland and China has become somewhat freer. According to IMF rules, the trade between its members must take place on the basis of freely convertible currencies, not as bilateral goods exchange.

NORWAY

32 STORTING DEPUTIES OPPOSE MISSILE PROGRAM

PM111055 Oslo ARBEIDERBLADET in Norwegian 9 Jun 82 p 7

[Tone B. Jamholt report: "Missiles -- Desire for Rethink in Storting"]

[Text] Thirty-two Storting deputies voted against the further construction of installations for new medium-range missiles in Europe when the Storting discussed NATO's infrastructure program Tuesday. Of the 32, 21 were from the Labor Party, 4 from the Socialist Left Party, 3 from the Christian People's Party, 2 from the Liberals and 2 from the Center Party. The numbers were described as surprisingly high.

The debate showed that the Conservative Party and the Progressive Party are the only parties in the Storting with no desire to introduce new ideas in the security debate. Another feature of the debate was that many women came forward to express their fears at the Armageddon that could result from a nuclear war. They included Labor women Kirsti Grondahl, Sissel Ronbeck, Inger Lise Glorv, Annelise Dorum, Grete Knudsen and Liv Andersen. They all supported the motion from give deputies from five different parties that in the present situation Norway should not take part in the construction of installations for new medium-range missiles in Europe, a motion whose proincipal signatory was Harald Synnes (Christian People's Party).

The women pointed out that negotiations have only been going on for 2-3 months, whereas preparations for deployment are already well advanced. Now that the stipulation in the dual decisions that negotiations and deployment preparations take place in parallel has been ignored, the dual decisions's credibility is weakened. This undermines the negotiations. They gave their support to the peace movement by claiming, for example, that we already have enough nuclear arms. We do not need more. Nuclear arms are not defensive weapons. They are weapons of mass destruction which break with all ethical principles, they claimed.

Gro Harlem Brundtland put the view of the majority of the Labor Party group by pointing out that the credibility of the negotiating line is important. When the negotiations are delayed, when doubts about willingness to negotiate arise, it is all the more necessary to indicate that we attack the greatest importance to evaluating whether the preparatory work for possible furture deployment could be on a scale or take such forms as to weaken the dual decision's negotiation stand. She was confident that the government would make such an evaluation.

Defense Minister Anders Sjaastad said the intention behind NATO dual decision was to right the major imbalance in medium-range nuclear arms. The pressure on the Soviet Union must be maintained. To this end it is of central importance that the practical preparations be carried through. The weapons systems are now being developed. The bases in the five European host countries are now being planned, and one project is already under construction, he told the Storting.

Knut Frydenlund (Labor Party) took the view that a halt in the preparations for deployment could have the effect of signaling to the Soviet Union that it need not make any concessions during the negotiations.

MINISTRY SAYS 59 DEAD IN RECENT FIGHTING

LD131932 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1838 GMT 13 Jun 82

[Text] Fifty people died in Tuesday's Bluff Cove bombings and a further nine British crew were killed and 17 injured in a more recent attack on the cruiser HMS Glamorgan, Defence Secretary Mr John Nott announced tonight. Those who died on Tuesday were 43 British troops, three officers and two crew of the landing ship Sir Galahad, and two crew of the landing ship Sir Tristram. The more recent casualties came when the Glamorgan was hit by enemy fire during bombardment of Port Stanley. Mr Nott also disclosed that 46 men were wounded during Tuesday's attacks, and "a number" suffered minor injuries.

He told reporters that British forces now firmly held Mount Longdon, Two Sisters and Mount Harriet, all of which dominated ground to the west of Port Stanley. About 400 Argentine prisoners had been captured, together with considerable quantities of equipment -- including mortars and anti-tank weapons.

Mr Nott said: "Since my statement last night our forces have been consolidating their successful attack on the high ground to the west of Port Stanley". He said land operations had been supported by attacks from Harrier aircraft, and naval gunfire from ships of the task force. "There was also a successful Vulcan attack on Port Stanley airport" he said. "These attacks made a major contribution to the success of our troops. However in the course of the bombardment, the destroyer HMS Glamorgan was hit by enemy fire, and nine members of the ship's company were killed and 17 injured". The minister said next of kin had been informed. The Glamorgan had sustained some damage, but she remained operational, and was continuing her activities. "In further operations today an Argentine patrol craft was detected, attacked and disabled by Sea Harriers from HMS Invincible." he said.

Mr Nott then explained the reason for delaying announcement of the Bluff Cove casualties. He said it was important for the success of the land operation that the Argentinians were not able to assess exactly when, how or in what strength the task force would attack. "It is clear that the Argentinians greatly over-estimated the extent of the casualties and damage resulting from their air attack on Sir Tristram and Sir Galahad on Tuesday," he said. "We wished them to remain uncertain about our strength on the ground and our capability to mount an early attack," he said. "None of this, of course, delayed the notification of next of kin, all of whom have been informed."

Mr Nott said: "The landing ships were carrying large numbers of troops from the Welsh Guards and supporting units." "Forty-three men died in the attack, or are missing, presumed dead."

"Forty-six men were wounded, and a number sustained minor injuries. There were also casualties among the crew of the landing ships. On Sir Galahad three officers and two members of the crew were killed, and two officers and nine crew were injured. On the landing ship Sir Tristram two members of the crew were killed. All the remainder of the crews are safe. The wounded are receiving treatment on board British hospital ships."

Mr Nott ended his statement: "Our successes on the ground over the weekend mark another significant step to securing the complete and final withdrawal of Argentine forces from the Falkland Islands. There is some way still to go, but the outcome is not in doubt."

HEALEY PROPOSES UN TRUSTEESHIP FOR FALKLANDS

LD131340 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1322 GMT 13 Jun 82

[Text] Shadow Foreign Secretary Denis Healey today proposed a UN trusteeship to administer the Falkland Islands involving the United States and other Latin American countries -- though not Argentina, which he said had "ruled itself out of court". He said on the ITV programme Weekend World that the Argentines "may not like it but they may have to lump it."

Mr Healey said Labour as much as the government wanted to see an early military victory with minimum loss of life, but he said he was not convinced that Argentine troops on the Falklands would cease fighting even with the fall of Port Stanley. Another 2,000 troops mostly on West Falkland might well carry on the battle.

Mr Healey said not only the Labour Party was opposed to a "fortress Falkland solution" in which Britain maintained a massive garrison on the islands to deter any future attacks. He said it would require three soldiers for every islander to maintain. In addition it would cost pounds 1 million for each islander on top of the pounds 1,500 million which the operation had already cost. And thirdly, said Mr Healey, it would not have the backing of our allies.

"I put the number of soldiers whose lives would be permanently at risk at the top of the list," he added. He said once the fighting was over "we will be under very heavy pressure from all our allies, Americans, Europeans, especially the French and Germans, to try to get a negotiated settlement to which we pledged ourselves in Resolution 502 and which Mr Pym repeatedly says he wants, although his voice seems to have been silenced since the chairman of the Tory Party (Mr Cecil Parkinson) took over the Foreign Office."

And he also said be believed that the 500 Falkland Island families could not finally be allowed to dictate the terms of the outcome of the dispute.

Later, on the BBC radio programme The World This Weekend, Home Secretary Mr William Whitelaw said the government would still like other countries to help with the future defence and administration of the islands, but "it will fall to us at the end of the day." And he also said he believed Mrs Thatcher "has shown the most fantastic courage of any prime minister for a very long time" over the Falkland crisis.

SAUDI FOREIGN MINISTER TALKS WITH THATCHER

LD112018 Riyadh SPA in English 1915 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Text] London, 11 Jun (SPA) -- British Premier Margaret Thatcher has expressed grave concern at the Israeli action in Lebanon and told visiting Saudi Foreign Minister Prince Sa'ud that the British Government had made its views very clear to Israel, it was officially announced here.

A spokesman for the premier's office was commenting on talks between Prince Sa'ud and Mrs Thatcher during which the Saudi foreign minister delivered a message from King Khalid. The [words indistinct] had arrived here earlier today from Paris where he called on French President Francois Mitterrand for similar purpose.

The foreign minister carried messages to Western leaders as part of King Khalid's efforts to put an end to the Israeli aggression on Lebanon and ensure Israel's immediate withdrwal from the country.

The spokesman said Mrs Thatcher reminded the Saudi foreign minister that Britain had voted in favour of UN Security Council Resolutions 508 and 509 calling for a ceasefire and an immediate withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanon.

Both Mrs Thatcher and Prince Sa'ud were agreed during the meeting that the Americans were the key to the situation although U.S. envoy Philip Habib's efforts had met such problems, he added.

Mrs Thatcher raised the subject of the Falklands conflict and said that as with the Middle East hostilities it reflected the need for nations to uphold the rule of law, the spokesman said.

Referring to King Khalid's message to Mrs Thatcher, the spokesman said it thanked the premier for her efforts in the cause of peace in the Middle East and called on her to do everything possible to help restrain the Israelis.

After calling on Mrs Thathcer, the Saudi foreign minister met with his British counterpart, Francis Pym. The two ministers exchanged views on the Israeli invasion and discussed future prospects for peace in the Middle East, providing the ceasefire reached today was not broken.

Meanwhile, commenting on the ceasefire a Foreign Office spokesman said "we are pleased that a ceasefire has been announced. It is essential that fighting should now come to an end and that Israel should comply with U.N. Security Council Resolution 509 and withdraw its forces from Lebanon," he (?added).

In Paris, Prince Sa'ud told reporters after an hour's meeting with President Mitterrand that the French leader had reaffirmed his country's support for Lebanon's unity and territorial integrity. Prince Sa'ud said that the kingdom and France were agreed on the gravity of the situation following Israel's invasion of Lebanon.

He added that France also called for a cessation of military operations immediately, an unconditional Israeli withdrawal from the country and that Lebanon be given the chance to solve its own problems.

The prince explained that the kingdom's current moves were designed to assess the international situation to ensure Israel's immediate and unconditional withdrawal from Lebanon.

He affirmed that Saudi Arabia shared the Lebanese Government's views on the matter.

Referring to the impending Arab meeting to discuss the situation in Lebanon, Prince Sa'ud said his country was awaiting a visit to the kingdom tomorrow by Arab League Secretary-General Chedli Klibi for a briefing on the latest developments.

Prince Sa'ud arrived from Bonn (?last) night after delivering a similar message to American President Ronald Reagan, who was attending a NATO summit in the West German capital.

The foreign minister also conferred with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt as part of the kingdom's moves to prevent a deterioration of the situation in Lebanon in addition to ensuring Israel's withdrawal from the country.

In Tunis, Arab League sources said that an Arab foreign ministers meeting would be held in the Tunisian capital tomorrow.

The meeting would be at the request of the Lebanese Government for Arab moves to confront the Israeli aggression on Lebanon, the sources added.

The league secretary-general is currently in Qatar where he conferred with the Emir Shaykh Khalifah Ibn Hamad Althani on the Lebanese situation after holding similar talks in Bahrain.

KIPRIANOU SPEAKS ON U.S. ARMS SUPPORT TO NORTH

NC131215 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1030 GMT 13 Jun 82

[Excerpts] Speaking at a dinner in San Francisco, which was given in his honor by the Union of Northern California Cypriots and the Greek American community, President Kiprianou reaffirmed Cyprus' determination not to succumb or yield regardless of difficulties but to continue the struggle until full vindication. President Kiprianou stressed: We want to make it clear to everyone that under no circumstances are we going to agree to legalization or consolidation of the faits accomplis or accept a partitionist or other solution that would lead to partition. The president also declared that Cyprus will not accept a solution that would not safeguard the inalienable rights of its citizens, including the right of refugees to return to their homes.

Mr Kiprianou said that the Cypriot people have Greece -- the government, political world and Greek people -- and Hellenism everywhere as their mainstay in their struggle. He also praised Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou's intensive efforts to promote the just cause of Cyprus. Furthermore, President Kiprianou expressed the Cypriot people's warmest thanks for the Greek Americans' help and called on them to intensify their efforts for the salvation of Cyprus.

The president further recalled that Turkey has invaded Cyprus by using U.S. arms in contravention of U.S. legislation and continues to occupy part of Cyprus' territory with U.S. arms. He said: This should be seriously taken into consideration by the U.S. citizens and should not escape their attention. Mr Kiprianou added: It would be unjust if history wrote about the American people that they tolerated the use of U.S. arms against Cyprus. President Kiprianou also stressed that Turkey depends economically and militarily on the United States. He added: We logically expect the United States to exert its influence on Turkey to withdraw its occupation troops and abandon every thought of expansionism, division or consolidation of the invasion results. President Kiprianou said: The achieving of a just solution in Cyprus no only is in the interest of the Cypriot people but also in the interest of the United States itself and the entire world.

President Kiprianou reiterated that we are seeking the full independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Cyprus. He said: We are seeking a united Cyprus, where all its citizens, regardless of national origin, can enjoy the benefits of freedom and peace.

Answering questions from newsmen before the dinner, President Kiprianou said U.S. President Reagan and Soviet President Brezhnev should meet to prepare the ground for disarmament. Mr Kiprianou also said there should be a complete ban on nuclear weapons after their production had been suspended.

NEW DECISIONS ON TALKS TO BE CONVEYED EARLY JULY

NC130706 Nicosia CYPRUS MAIL in English 13 Jun 82 p 1

[Text] The Cyprus Government will convey some decisions to the UN secretary general next month.

A statement issued in Nicosia yesterday said that, on certain points discussed in New York, decisions will be taken in Nicosia "after consultations in a new meeting of the president with the Greek premier."

After formulation, these will be sent to the UN secretary general early in July, it said.

The intercommunal talks, scheduled to resume in Nicosia on June 22, still have to cover the subjects of executive organs for the new republic and territory.

Yesterday's statement confirmed that the UN secretary general presented no new ideals during the New York talks.

But the secretary general has decided to take some action on the case of the missing.

It also said that the president, in his talks with the president of the UN General Assembly Mr Kittani. Discussed the question of an eventual Cyprus debate in the Assembly. This will be discussed by the Governments of Cyprus and Greece.

In his speech to the House of Representatives last week, AKEL leader Mr Papaioannou indicated that such an appeal might revive demands for an ad hoc committee of nonaligned countries to help UN efforts in the intercommunal talks.

LEBANON REFUGEES ARRIVE IN LARNACA BY SEA

NC111926 Nicosia Domestic Serivce in Greek 1900 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Text] A total of 270 persons arrived in Larnaca today on board 5 small boats. Most of the arrivals are aliens who resided in Lebanon. Among them are members of diplomatic missions. The Lebanese arrivals were quartered in hotels in Larnaca, while the aliens are making arrangements to depart for their countries. The Cyprus authorities provided all possible facilities for the arrivals.

The refugees stated that more small boats attempted to depart from Lebanon with non-combatants, but that they were intercepted by Israeli warships which forced them back. They also stated that yesterday morning a motor convoy leaving Tripoli was bombed by the Israeli air force.

More Refugees Arrive

NC130724 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 0700 GMT 13 Jun 82

[Text] The steamer Space One arrived in Limassol Harbor at 0730 today carrying Cypriot and foreign students of the American University of Beirut. Of a total of 98 students who arrived, 81 are Greek Cypriots, 11 Turkish Cypriots, 3 Saudi Arabians, 1 Greek, 1 Jordanian and 1 Egyptian girl student.

Communications Minister Mavrellis went aboard the vessel and thanked its owner, Mr Sikalis, for the safe transportation of the students. The students' chairman expressed his thanks to the Cypriot Consul in Beirut, Mr Samaha, and the Lebanese authorities for their efforts. At the same time, the Turkish Cypriot Consul's care and efforts for their return to Cyprus.

The vessel carrying the students was intercepted during her voyage by two Israeli patrol boats. After checking the passengers' identities, the Israelis allowed the vessel to continue on her voyage.

When Space One was about 6 miles off Limassol Port, District Medical Officer Maliotis went aboard to render any needed medical treatment to the students.

KLIRIDHIS ON NEED TO COOPERATE WITH GREECE

NC140847 Nicosia O FILELEVTHEROS in Greek 14 Jun 82 pp 1, 12

[Text] In his address yesterday to his party's Famagusta District conference at Paralimni, Glavkos Kliridhis, chairman of the Democratic Rally, DISI, replied to charges that he changed position on the [intercommunal] talks process.

At the outset, Kliridhis said that "Greece is the only country on which we can rely," adding that "the policy of each Greek government on the Cyrpus issue is an important factor which any Cypriot party must seriously take into consideration when laying down a policy for handling the Cyprus issue."

The relevant passage of Kliridhis' address is as follows:

"After my address to the Nicosia-Kyrenia meeting last Sunday in which I reiterated our position that close cooperation between Nicosia and Athens is an imperative prerequisite for the survival of Cypriot Hellenism and the successful outcome of our struggle and I declared that DISI agrees with the Papandreou policy on the Cyprus issue.

The government spokesman in his statement charged that, while at other times I was a warm supporter of the intercommunal talks and I jeered at internationalization, I had now changed my mind, letting it be understood that I did not do this on the basis of my convictions but only to align myself with Athens.

"Even if things were so, I do not hesitate to state that the alignment of the line of a Cyprus party so that it can follow the line of a new self-supporting and democratically elected Greek government cannot become the basis for charges against this party, PARTICULARLY when this party has ALWAYS firmly stressed that close and sincere cooperation between Athens and Nicosia must be the cornerstone for Cypriot policy.

"It is time that all should understand that the policy, at each given instance, by every new Greek government on the Cyprus issue is the most important factor which must be seriously taken into consideration by a Cypriot party in the process of establishing its own policy on the Cyprus issue".

Kliridhis then mentioned that in 1975 he received a written mandate from Archbishop Makarios to conduct negotiations and that he personally supported that negotiations should be conducted not on procedural matters but on matters of essence. "In such an eventuality," he added, "these negotiations would have led either to a just solution or to collapse within a short time due to Turkish intransigence. In the second instance we would have proceeded to different tactics for the promotion of our issue while Turkish intransigence would have been established and proven."

Kliridhis continued, "When after 2 years the Greek Cypriot side submitted complete proposals and the Turkish intransigence was something which could easily be proven internationally, I made the following recommendations in 1978:

"A -- The Cypriot Government should prepare a 'formula' for the solution of the Cyprus issue;

"B -- Diplomatic struggle should be waged to promote this formula within the Western world, the Eastern and nonaligned countries;

"C -- An appeal should be lodged with the UN Security Council on the basis of Article 37 of the constitutional charter requesting Security Council recommendations for the solution of the Cyprus Issue.

"THEREFORE, it is obvious that the DISI position on the inefficiency of the negotiations process is nothing new, since it dates back to 1978."

Kliridhis supported the policy of internationalization for the purpose of achieving practical measures and not just for the sake of collecting resolutions and concluded: "DISI lauded the policy of internationalizing the Cyprus issue as it was announced by the Papandreou Government because this policy does not limit itself to the search for resolutions but extends to giving priority to the Cyprus issue in the bilateral, multilateral, allied and, generally, in all the foreign relations of Greece."

DENKTAS COMPLETES TALKS, DEPARTS NEW YORK

TA121344 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 1300 GMT 12 Jun 82

[Text] President Rauf Denktas departed New York today by air after completing his talks. During his stay in New York, Denktas met with UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar. Denktas is expected in Cyprus on 14 June. Meanwhile, Foreign Affairs and Defense Minister Kenan Atakol, who was accompanying Denktas in New York, is expected to remain there. Yesterday, Atakol attended the Islamic Conference meeting. He is continuing his contacts with representatives of other countries.

PAPANDREOU ON NATO SUMMIT, TURKISH RELATIONS

NC111645 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1500 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Text] Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou returned to Athens this afternoon from Bonn. During a discussion he had with newsmen on board the plane, the prime minister expressed reserved optimism about the climate created for a moratorium in Greek-Turkish relations within the framework of the NATO summit conference. The prime minister said: Indeed, this climate exists, but we cannot give guarantees to the Greek people that it will be maintained because it does not depend on us but on Turkey, which has carried out violations and provocations.

Mr Papandreou added: Nevertheless, it is an achievement that Turkish Prime Minister Ulusu has undertaken an obligation toward the alliance.

Asked if a Greek-Turkish dialogue will follow, Mr Papandreou said Greece does not know what the pending issues are between the two countries. When the time comes and the appropriate climate is created, we will ask Turkey to tell us what the pending issues are. The prime minister stressed that Greece would not go to the negotiating table before an end is put to every threat. Mr Papandreou stressed emphatically: Greece does not negotiate under the threat of arms.

Addresses Armed Forces

NC122016 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1700 GMT 12 Jun 82

[Report by Aris Xipolitidhis]

[Excerpts] Our national interests are a matter of top priority for our government, Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou stressed at noon today in an address to armed forces officers during a luncheon given in his honor at the officers club in Serrai, where Mr Papandreou went after having watched the final phase of the Agamemnon-82 military maneuvers.

After reiterating that the Armed Forces are defending the country's integrity and independence selflessly, the prime minister referred to the crucial times through which the entire eastern Mediterranean region is passing as well as to his talks at the recent NATO summit meeting. Mr Papandreou also stressed that Greece has no objections to a dialogue with Turkey, but only if the provocative violations of our national area by Turkey stop. He added that after the commitment undertaken by Ankara during the summit, if there is any violation he will summon the ambassadors of the NATO member countries and denounce it.

Finally, after stressing that following his meeting with President Reagan he is more optimistic, Mr Papandreou concluded:

[Begin Papandreou recording] For our government, it is absolutely clear that the pursuit and achievement of peace in the area, in the Aegean, can be attained only to the extent that our country has the means to avert and prevent any attack against its national area. Regardless of any guarantees, promises and good-neighborly relations, at this big crossroads of the world between North, South, East, West and burning Middle East where Greece is situated we are obliged to defend both our territorial integrity as well as peace through our dynamic presence whatever it may cost.

As you know, a government like ours wants to place health, education, social welfare and economic development in top priority. However, we know that all these will be meager hopes and aimless actions if we cannot secure peace and territorial integrity for our country. For this reason, our national independence and territorial integrity are on the top of our priorities, which means a strong, war-prepared armed forces that can guarantee both our borders and peace, because these two go together.

I would like to assure the country's armed forces that we are proceeding with a long-term plan for a 10-year period. We have already made some announcements concerning our basic program for the air force, and we will proceed not only with similar studies but also announcements concerning the other two branches.

I apologize if I have been too lengthy, but I really wanted to give you this free and absolutely sincere explanation. I would like you to know one thing: That our government places our national interest as the first question, a strategic question, because it knows that if the national interest does not come first, we will be building on sand and, unfortunately, there are many and strong winds in the area.

I raise my glass to the health of the armed forces, their leaders and to their officers and men. To your health. [end Papandreou recording]

Comments on Reagan Talks

NC122114 Athens NEWS in English 11 Jun 82 p 4

[Text] Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou yesterday confirmed there is an improved climate in Greek-Turkish relations, following a statement at the Bonn NATO summit expressing hope for the improvement of relations between the two neighbors, but said he could not guarantee the Turkish Government would honor its commitment.

Papandreou, in statements to reporters upon his return to Athens from the Bonn NATO summit, at 1600 [1300 GMT] yesterday, also expressed "surprise" at some Athens press reports that his meeting with President Ronald Reagan in Bonn aimed at Greece's "reentrapment" in the Atlantic alliance.

"Reports of a truce between Greece and Turkey are accurate," Papandreou said, but added: "Because we have lived with that problem for many years, I would like to say that I cannot give the Greek people any guarantees that Turkey will, in effect, honor the truce.

"We have not violated their territorial waters or airspace and have no intention of doing so," Papandreou said. "They have violated ours."

The prime minister described Thursday's statements as "a great achievement," as it was essentially made before the 16 members of the Atlantic alliance. "This means," he said, that Turkey has made a definite commitment to the alliance, but I am, of course in no position to assure the Greek people that the truce will be honored. This is not up to me, but up to Mr Evren, and I want to avoid excessive optimism."

On his meeting with President Reagan, Papandreou said he could not understand where the talk about "entrapment" or "re-entrapment" came from.

"We are presently in NATO's military wing" he said "but the agreement under which Greece's return to military NATO was achieved in the fall of 1980 has not yet materialized."

"Beyond this, the only thing we did in Bonn was to stress Greek positions, to present them in all clarity," the prime minister said.

He said a private meeting with President Reagan would be the duty of any Greek prime minister, when there are crucial pending issues concerning national security and national survival.

"We must all recognize that the United States is a superpower and, as I stressed during the conference, the Soviet Union is also a superpower. We must act accordingly. This does not mean we must bow our heads, but it does mean that it is our duty to seek a dialogue before proceeding to unilateral action, Papandreou said.

Responding to reporters' questions the prime minister said Greece will not negotiate with Turkey on bilateral problems until it senses an end to all threats in the Aegean.

"I must once more stress that Greece will not sit at a negotiating table until the last shadow of a threat is removed," Papandreou asserted. "Greece does not negotiate under the threat of arms. For this reason, we hope that what the Turkish prime minister said the other day reflects their true view and position. If this is the case, then we are, indeed, entering a new era in the area."

The prime minister said he presented Greece's security problems to Reagan and that the U.S. President recognized this was an important matter and promised to be thoroughly brought up to date on it. Papandreou said he could not exclude a further trip to Washington; such a trip, however, would be decided if a deadlock emerged in Greek-U.S. negotiations.

Papandreou described Greece's initiative to convene a special EEC foreign ministers session to discuss the situation in Lebanon as the most important initiative Greece has undertaken in recent years." He expressed his regret that NATO did not accept the EEC decision condemning the Israeli action.

The Greek premier said he conveyed to his 15 fellow NATO leaders the message from the huge peace demonstration in Bonn.

"I told them that the peace movement reflects the concern, fears and desires of the peoples of Europe and that it is a huge mistake for Western governments to fail to embrace and adopt this huge peace movement which we believe in," the premier said.

SPOKESMAN ON IMPROVING TURKISH RELATIONS

NC111559 Athens ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 11 Jun 82 p 1

[By Yeoryios Votsis]

[Excerpt] Bonn, 11 Jun -- Sudden developments in Greek-Turkish relations and expected progress in the Greek-U.S. dialogue (according to yesterday's meeting between Mr Andreas Papandreou and President Reagan and which may be continued in Washington with a possible visit there by the Greek Prime Minister) occurred in Bonn yesterday afternoon.

After the talks between the Greek and Turkish prime ministers, each country's government spokesmen released the following statement:

"Both sides expressed their desire to improve the climate between the two countries in a spirit of good will and peace."

With the reservation expressed by Mr Papandreou this could be interpreted as the beginning of the resumption of the Greek-Turkish dialogue. He said: "Verbal declarations are not enough, deeds are needed that would show the other side's good will. A dialogue under the threat of arms and the practice of violations and provocations is meaningless."

FOREIGN MINISTRY PROTESTS KILLING OF TURKS IN LEBANON

TA111640 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Text] Eleven Turks were killed and 27 Turks were wounded, five of them seriously, during the bombing of the Jusiyah border checkpoint on the Lebanese-Syrian border by Israeli warplanes yesterday morning.

A statement issued by the Foreign Ministry spokesman says that the Turkish citizens were waiting at the border checkpoint, trying to leave Lebanon because of the war. Efforts are being made to identify them.

The Israeli charge d'affaires in Ankara was summoned to the Foreign Ministry and the attack was protested. He was also told that the situation was very serious. He was then informed that the Turkish authorities reserve the right to demand the necessary material and moral compensation for Turkish citizens killed or wounded in the attack.

The Israeli charge d'affaires replied that he would immediately contact the relevant authorities and would inform the Turkish Foreign Ministry of the investigation. He pointed out that his country would fulfill all its responsibilities of it was established that the incident occurred as a result of an attack by their own aircraft.

The Israeli charge d'affaires submitted the text of a statement by the Israeli Foreign Ministry spokesman expressing regrets about the death or wounding of Turkish citizens during the clashes in Lebanon.

Bodies Returned

TA122102 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 12 Jun 82

[Text] The bodies of 5 out of 11 Turks killed during the bombing of the Jusiyah border checkpoint on the Lebanese-Syrian border by Israeli warplanes were returned to the Nusaybin checkpoint in Turkey today. A Turkish Radio and Television correspondent has learned that the victims have been identified as Ziya Hakan, Sehmuz Olcay, Sabri Akin, Mehmet Turgay and Huseyin Yaman. During the bombing, 27 Turks were wounded, 5 of them seriously.

IRANIAN PLANES ALLOWED TO USE TURKISH AIRSPACE

TA121511 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1458 GMT 12 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 12 Jun (AA) -- Iranian planes transporting relief aid to Lebanon can use Turkish air space provided that advance permission is obtained for each flight, the Turkish Foreign Ministry said Saturday.

A ministry spokesman said such flights should not exceed more than two a day. He said the permission was granted purely for humanitarian reasons.

Further Report

TA131518 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1445 GMT 13 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 13 Jun (AA) -- Turkey has given permission for Iranian planes carrying food and medical supplies to Palestinian forces in Lebanon to fly through Turkish airspace.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman repeated an earlier announcement that Turkey had agreed to the Iranian request on condition that the planes, a maximum of two a day, carried only food and medicine.

Turkey, a member of the Islamic Conference organization is also sending medical supplies to the Palestinians.

Turkey has repeatedly condemned the Israeli invasion and has protested over an Israeli attack on buses carrying Turks on the border between Syria and Lebanon on Thursday. The Foreign Ministry said 11 Turks were killed and 27 wounded in the attacks. So far only 5 of the 11 Turks killed have been identified.

Sources in southeastern Turkey near the Syrian border said about 250 Turks working in Syria and Lebanon were also waiting to cross back into their homeland. Officials said they were investigating whether they had valid passports.

ULUSU RETURNS FROM SAUDI ARABIA, IRAN, IRAQ, FRG

TA121542 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1504 GMT 12 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 12 Jun (AA) -- Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu flew back home Saturday from a prolonged visit to Saudi Arabia, Iran, Iraq and West Germany, where he tried to mediate the war between Turkey's two neighbours and attended the NATO summit.

In reply to questions at the Ankara airport, he said if a healthy dialogue had to be established between Turkey and Greece, then the two sides had to avoid making provocative statements first of all.

He described the NATO summit held in Bonn as one that demonstrated alliance solidarity. It was a most useful and productive meeting of all the alliance leaders, which agreed to increase the defensive capacity of the NATO nations and to take measures to strengthen the economies of several members, he said.

Mr Ulusu said he visited both Baghdad and Tehran and tried to impress on the warring parties that the continuation of the war was not to their best interests.

ULUSU: 'UP TO GREECE' TO RESUME TALKS WITH TURKEY

TA111811 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Excerpts] Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu has said that the talks with Turkey were suspended by Greece and it is up to Greece to resume them. Ulusu who attended the NATO summit meeting in Bonn yesterday held a news conference at the Turkish Embassy in Bonn today. Ocal Onay from the Turkish Radio and Television news center reports from Bonn that at his news conference, Ulusu said that in his speech at the NATO summit he discussed the situation in NATO's southeastern wing and also expressed the desire to see improvement in the current atmosphere in relations between Turkey and Greece. Ulusu pointed out that the Greek prime minister also expressed a similar hope and that this mutual expression of hope was received with pleasure by the NATO allies.

Asked how Turkish-Greek relations would develop following the NATO summit, Ulusu said: naturally, this depends entirely on Greece's attitude. As you know, a dialogue had been started after a UN Security Council resolution and the Bern Agreement in 1976. The dialogue was continuing. It was broken off by Greece, after Mr Papandreou came to power. We explained that this is how we view the situation. In return, Greece made good will remarks, honestly and frankly -- I will not say it expressed its view because it is impossible to call it a view -- but it made good will remarks. However, the point is to see action. I repeat, we expect them, in all honesty, we expect them to take the step. We did not halt the talks. They must resume the talks because they halted them. Personally, I came to believe that there is a tendency in that direction.

Ulusu said that the NATO summit had been held in a very positive atmosphere.

Ulusu said that in his speech at the summit he expressed Turkey's views on NATO's defense and East-West relations. On the latest developments in the Middle East which gave rise to concern, Ulusu said that he stressed the necessity to put an end to the clashes in Lebanon and the importance of protecting that country's independence and territorial integrity.

The prime minister noted that in his speech at the summit he discussed the situation in Turkey and the timetable for a return to democracy. He said: I said that we were determined about the return to democracy, that we did not need any unconstructive criticism from Western Europe and that such things would not influence us. Naturally, I also discussed the issue of terrorism which is important for us, which causes us great grief through the loss of our valuable sons. I explained that it is necessary to cooperate on this issue and not to tolerate the culprits. My remarks received general approval.

Ulusu said that during the summit, he had the opportunity to meet several prime ministers, even if the meetings were short. He added that these meetings were very useful.

Ulusu said that during his meeting with FRG Chancellor Schmidt he briefed him on the situation in Turkey and on the work being conducted to restore democracy as well as on the economic and social situation inthe country. He added: We also discussed the hostility to aliens being felt by our citizens working in the FRG -- a hostility that has gained significant dimensions and that is causing concern to our citizens there. I discussed the work of the high coordination council on workers' problems of which I am the chairman, the problems and expectations of our workers in the FRG and our views on the issue. Chancellor Schmidt explained the FRG's situation and stand and its economic considerations. He said that his government was approaching the problem of hostility toward aliens and that very soon a meeting would be held with parties, church officials, unions and businessmen. He stressed that they do not intend to take coercive measures against alien workers.

Ulusu pointed out that he and Schmidt agreed to cooperate on the problems of the Turkish workers in the FRG and their adaptation to German society.

Replying to a question, Ulusu said that during the Islamic Conference good will committee meeting held in Jidda, in which he himself participated, Iran had told the committee that it would not enter Iraqi territory.

Further Ulusu Remarks

TA121712 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 12 Jun 82

[Text] Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu has said that in order to have the hoped for resumption of the dialogue between Turkey and Greece, provocative statements must first be avoided. Ulusu made this statement at his arrival to Ankara's Esenboga Airport today after attending the Islamic Conference's good will committee meetings in Jidda as well as the NATO summit meetings in Bonn. He added that during his statement at the summit he stressed that NATO solidarity was crucial not only for the world at large but for the alliance itself as well.

Recalling that Turkey wanted an improvement in the present atmosphere in its relations with Greece, Ulusu said that the same desire was also expressed by Greek Prime Minister Papandreou during the NATO meetings in Bonn. Ulusu said that though his contacts in Bonn created the impression that an atmosphere of dialogue with Greece was possible, later the Greek prime minister made provocative press statements.

Ulusu continued: In order to have the hoped for resumption of the dialogue between Turkey and Greece, provocative statements must first be avoided. I could not verify the veracity of statements attributed to the Greek prime minister in the [Greek] press. I hope that they will prove to be wrong. However, if such statements were in fact made by him then I cannot but qualify these as provocative.

Ulusu then reviewed his activities both at the Jidda meetings and the NATO summit. He said that the committee came to the conclusion that efforts to stop the Iran-Iraq war should be continued and that more meetings be held in the future on this subject. Ulusu recalled that the NATO summit decide to strengthen solidarity in the alliance and increase its defense potential. It also decided, he said, to take common measures that will provide economic and social stability in the member countries.

He added that during the Bonn meetings, he had the opportunity to have beneficial contacts with officials of NATO member countries. He said that during his talks with German Chancellor Schmidt, he discussed the problem of hostility in the FRG against foreign workers and the Turkish guest workers' problems.

ZIAUL HAQ THANKS TURKEY FOR ACCEPTING AFGHANS

TA111822 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Text] Pakistani President Ziaul Haq has expressed his appreciation for the material and moral support being extended by Turkey to the Afghan refugees. He said: We are greatly pleased about the Turkish Government's decision to accept some Afghan refugees.

In a statement to Turkish Radio and Television in Pakistan, Ziaul Haq pointed out that there have always been ties of mutual respect and friendship between Turkey and Pakistan. He said the number of Afghan refugees in Pakistan had now reached 2.6 million, adding that they were being looked after within the framework of Islamic principles of brotherhood and neighborliness. Ziaul Haq stated that several Islamic countries have extended help but that Turkey's acceptance of part of the Afghan refugees was very meaningful from the humanitarian point of view.

The Pakistani president stressed that the Afghan problem should be solved politically and that such a solution could be achieved if the foreign troops in Afghanistan withdrew, the refugees returned to their country, the Afghan people were given the right to determine their own future and if Afghanistan regained the status of a nonaligned Islamic country.

Ziaul Haq thanked the Turkish people and Head of State General Evren for the humanitarian help they were extending to the Afghan refugees.

REFERENDUM ON NEW CONSTITUTION TO TAKE PLACE BY 14 NOV

TA111539 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1515 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 11 Jun (AA) -- A referendum on the new constitution will be held on 14 November this year at the latest, authoritative sources told an ANATOLIA correspondent.

Close to 23 million voters over 21 years of age will be eligible to vote. Officials of the high election board said they are preparing for a roll call of eligible voters in September in order to bring voters' registers up to date.

MILITARY PROSECUTING 2,351 KURDISH SEPARATISTS

TA111826 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Summary] The Army VII Corps and Diyarbakir, Urfa, Mardin, Siirt, Hakkari and Van Martial Law Command military prosecutor in prosecuting 2,351 members of the illegal Kordestan Workers Party [PKK-APO], "which aims at separating part of the lands under the sovereignty of the state from the state administration and establishing an independent Marxist-Leninist state in eastern and southeastern Turkey." The defendants are charged with murders, wounding incidents, shooting incidents, kidnapping, pamphlet distribution and carrying firearms.

DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 115

15 June 1982

EUROPEAN COMMUNITY

EEC Ministers Issue Statement on Lebanon [LE MONDE 11 Jun] B 1
Loan to Israel Postponed B 1
Thorn Condemns U.S. Steel Import Restrictions B 1

AUSTRIA

Kreisky Sends Message to Egypt's Husni Mubarak [WIENER ZEITUNG 13 Jun] E 1
Arab Envoys Appeal [ARBEITER-ZEITUNG 12-13 Jun] E 1
Call To End Bloodshed [ARBEITER-ZEITUNG 14 Jun] E 1
Pahr, SFRY's Mojsov Discuss CSCE in New York [WIENER ZEITUNG 12 Jun] E 1

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Genscher Welcomes PRC's Huang Hua for 3-Day Visit J 1
Hold 2-Hour Talk J 1
Invited Brandt To Visit J 1
Schmidt Views Reagan Visit, Demonstrations J 1
Genscher Comments on Summit, Foreign Policy J 2
'Foreign Troops Out of Lebanon' J 4

FRANCE

Chevenement Outlines Economic Policy in LE MATIN [28 May] K 1
Cot Defends Government's Attitude on Lebanon [LE MONDE 12 Jun] K 3
Initiative To End Fighting K 4
French Citizens Evacuating K 4
President Mitterrand To Visit Austria 16-17 Jun K 4

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Spadolini Again Condemns Israeli Actions L 1
Djibouti Foreign Minister Arrives on Visit L 1
Prime Minister Spadolini To Visit Spain 2-3 July L 1
Trial of Red Brigades Resumes After Break L 2
Papal Envoy Leaves for Consultations in Warsaw L 2

PORTUGAL

Spanish, Portuguese Foreign Ministers Meet M 1
Democratic Alliance Leaders on Political Scene [DIARIO DE NOTICIAS 5 Jun] M 1
PSP Secretary General Cited on Party Crisis [DIARIO DE NOTICIAS 6 Jun] M 2

SPAIN

PSOE's Secretary General Holds Press Conference N 1
[YA 5 Jun]

UNITED KINGDOM

Final Assault Launched; Argentines Surrender Q 1
'Rout' Reported Q 1
Thatcher Announces Cease-Fire Q 1
Troops Surrender Q 1
14,800 Argentines Q 3
Clarification Sought Q 3
Garrison Planned Q 4
EEC Urged To Maintain Embargo on Argentina Q 5

CYPRUS

Israeli Military Said Using Radars in Cyprus R 1
[MESIMVRINI 12 Jun]
Government Denial [O KIRIKAS 13 Jun] R 1
KHARAVYI Scores U.S. Embassy Official's Actions [11 Jun] R 1
Medical Aid To Be Given to Lebanon, Palestinians R 2
[I ELEVTHEROTIPIA 11 Jun]
TFSC Aid R 2
Denktas Returns From United Nations 14 Jun R 2
[Bayrak Radio]
Comments on Talks [Bayrak Radio] R 2
Turkish Cypriots Protest Arrest of Syrian Captain R 3
[Bayrak Radio]
Briefs: Moscow Visit Postponed R 3

TURKEY

Prime Minister Ulusu Comments on Aegean Question T 1
Prime Minister Departs for Saudi Arabia T 1
Deputy Prime Minister Departs for Libya T 1
Data on Detainees, Cases Before Courts Released T 2
AFP Report T 2
Iranian Red Crescent Delegation Arrives T 2
Livestock Exports to Lebanon Reportedly Halted T 2
TCP Supports Hunger Strike in Istanbul Prison [VOTCP] T 3
Our Radio Attacks Reagan's European Remarks T 3
Briefs: Highway Talks With Italy T 3

EEC MINISTERS ISSUE STATEMENT ON LEBANON

PM141505 Paris LE MONDE in French 11 Jun 82 p 4

[Text] The following is the text of the declaration on Lebanon adopted by the EEC foreign ministers in Bonn on Wednesday, 9 June:

The EEC member states strongly condemn the new Israeli invasion of Lebanon. Like the bombing which preceeded it and which caused an intolerable number of human lives to be lost, this action is unjustifiable. It is a flagrant violation of international law and of the most elementary humanitarian principles. In addition it jeopardizes efforts to find a peaceful solution to the Near East problems and poses an imminent threat of a general conflict.

The Ten reaffirm their attachment to Lebanon's independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity and national unity, which are vital for peace in this region. The Ten strongly support the appeals launched by the UN secretary general. They urge all the sides involved to conform to Security Council Resolutions 508 and 509 (Footnote: Resolution 508 adopted on 5 June after the Israeli bombing urged those involved to end all military activity; 509 adopted on 6 June after the launching of the land invasion urged Israel to withdraw to the international border) and urge Israel in particular to withdraw all its military forces from Lebanon immediately and unconditionally and to place the UN Interim Force in Lebanon in a position to accomplish its mission unhindered.

Should Israel continue to refuse to conform to the above-mentioned resolutions, the Ten would examine possibilities for future action. The Ten's objective is to work for a Lebanon free from the cycle of violence condemned several times in the past.

This cannot be dissociated from the establishment of a comprehensive, just and lasting peace in the region. They are prepared to make their contribution to bringing those involved to accept measures aimed at reducing tension, restoring confidence and facilitating a negotiated solution.

The Ten will urgently examine, within the Community bodies, the use of the means at the community's disposal with a view to giving aid to the victims of these events.

Loan to Israel Postponed

LD141558 Brussels in French to Africa 1500 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] The European Economic Community has posponed the signing of a financial protocol worth $40 million with Israel following the Israeli invasion of Lebanon, The 5-year agreement involved EEC loans to Israel under special conditions.

THORN CONDEMNS U.S. STEEL IMPORT RESTRICTIONS

LD141632 Brussels Domestic Service in French 1600 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] In Brussels, the president of the European Commission has strongly condemned the American attitude to trade and monetary matters. He attacked in particular the American decision to set up a customs barrier to prevent the importing of European steel to the United States. Gaston Thorn implied that the European Community may take reprisals against the United States. This is the first time during his term as president of the European Commission that Gaston Thorn has spoken so harshly of the United States.

KREISKY SENDS MESSAGE TO EGYPT'S HUSNI MUBARAK

AU141120 Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 13 Jun 82 p 1

[Text] Cairo -- Chancellor Bruno Kreisky has sent a message to Egyptian President Husni Mubarak informing him that the Socialist International (SI) will discuss the events in Lebanon after the Israeli invasion at the forthcoming meeting of its leading body.

Arab Envoys Appeal

AU141121 Vienna ARBEITER-ZEITUNG in German 12-13 Jun 82 p 1

[Text] Vienna (APA) -- In a joint statement on the Lebanon crisis, the Arab ambassadors in Vienna on Friday thanked Chancellor Kreisky for his "firm position" on this question, and the Austrian Government for "condemning this unjustified aggression." In their statement the mission chiefs appeal to the chancellor and to the Austrian Government to make every effort "in view of the gigantic loss of human life among the civilian population and the systematic destruction in Lebanon by Israel, to put an end to this massacre."

Call To End Bloodshed

AU141231 Vienna ARBEITER-ZEITUNG in German 14 Jun 82 p 1

[AZ editor Eva Pfisterer dispatch from Malmoe]

[Excerpts] Malmoe (AZ) -- At a peace rally in southern Sweden on Sunday, Chancellor Kreisky addressed a dramatic appeal to the conscience of the world and primarily the conscience of the Israeli people, pleading for an end to the terrible bloodshed in Lebanon and the restoration of the Lebanese people's sovereignty. Kreisky, who was awarded the "lat leva" ("let live") peace prize of ARBETET, Sweden's largest socialist daily, declared that it was simply not true that there would not have been any opportunity for preparing peace. He himself, the chancellor declared, was a living witness to the fact that there had been very realistic opportunities to pave the way for a lasting peace.

At the same time Kreisky appealed to the Socialist International to no longer remain silent on the events in the Middle East. The United Nations must also most resolutely condemn what happened, he said. Addressing an audience of thousands of people, Kreisky appealed to those who suffered so much under Hitler. It is necessary to tell the young Israelis that nothing good can come from a war -- only injustice and brutality, he said.

PAHR, SFRY'S MOJSOV DISCUSS CSCE IN NEW YORK

AU141225 Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 12 Jun 82 p 2

[Text] New York (APA) -- On the periphery of the UN second special session on disarmament, Foreign Minister Willibald Pahr has met with his new Yugoslav counterpart Lazar Mojsov for a talk. This talk, which was held in a very friendly atmosphere, was devoted to bilateral and international questions.

As has been learned from Austrian delegation quarters, the ministers discussed above all the situation of the CSCE. As exponents of the group of neutrals and nonaligned countries, the two ministers exchanged information about the conditions in which the Madrid negotiations are to be continued in November. Thus they agreed in principle on holding in the fall -- before the resumption of the CSCE conference -- a meeting of the neutral and nonaligned countries on the narrowest possible basis to discuss the joint policy for Madrid.

GENSCHER WELCOMES PRC'S HUANG HUA FOR 3-DAY VISIT

LD141008 Hamburg DPA in German 0921 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 14 Jun (DPA) -- Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua arrived in Bonn on Monday morning for a 3-day visit. Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher welcomed his Chinese counterpart who had come from New York and was picked up in Frankfurt by helicopter. After an initial meeting with Genscher over lunch Huang Hua is to meet SPD Chairman Willy Brandt and Bundestag Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Rainer Barzel (CDU) this afternoon.

Hold 2-Hour Talk

LD141626 Hamburg DPA in German 0921 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 14 Jun (DPA) -- After their initial 2-hour talk in Bonn today, Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher and Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua expressed their earnest desire to deepen cooperation between the Federal Republic and the PRC. Genscher emphasized the importance that the Federal Government attaches to German-Chinese relations.

The Chinese foreign minister said that China is particularly interested in the development of the European communities and European union. He elaborated on this topic in a 1-hour talk with Rainer Barzel (CDU), the chairman of the Bundestag Foreign Affairs Committee. According to informed sources, Huang Hua regards a strong Europe as a major and crucial factor in the balance of forces between the superpowers.

At lunch today Genscher and his Chinese counterpart discussed the federal president's and Genscher's visit to Beijing in October. The federal foreign minister praised China's readiness, already shown by its participation at the North-South summit in Cancun, to assume global responsibility and contribute to stability. Genscher explained the result of the NATO summit in Bonn and expressed the hope that problems in Chinese-American relations can be overcome.

Invited Brandt To Visit

LD141726 Hamburg DPA in German 1708 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 14 Jun (DPA) -- In a 1-hour talk today with SPD Chairman Willy Brandt, the Chinese foreign minister renewed the official invitation to Brandt to visit the Chinese People's Republic. According to SPD sources, it will be examined whether the visit can take place in the spring of 1983. The two men discussed the North-South dialogue in connection with the results of the recent Versailles economic summit, the future work of the North-South commission, led by Brandt, as well as the world economy, East-West relations and disarmament.

SCHMIDT VIEWS REAGAN VISIT, DEMONSTRATIONS

DW141005 Bonn ARD Television Network in German 2035 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Interview with Chancellor Helmut Schmidt by reporter Ernst-Dieter Lueg in the program "Report From Bonn," date not given -- videotaped]

[Text] [Question] Mr Chancellor, what will be the outcome of the 3 days Reagan spent in Germany and Berlin?

Will the feeling of depression remain because the principles of disarmament and security agreed in the sterilizedneutral zone of Bonn was categorically rejected at the same time by 300,000 young people?

[Answer] I do not believe that the young people wanted to categorically reject the disarmament policy of the West. I do not believe that they were even fully informed about it. As regards Reagan's visit to Europe, Paris, Rome, London, Berlin and Bonn, it is important that almost the entire American leadership has fully engaged itself with regard to talks with the Europeans. It has absorbed many new things. As regards the demonstrations, I would suspect that a democracy where no demonstrations take place is not a democracy.

[Question] The politically routine business after these conferences will be concerned particularly with disarmament demanded by the young people on the other side of the Rhine. Could the American President tell them something substantial about progress achieved in Geneva?

[Answer] I believe that American policy has gained substantially in past months regarding disarmament and arms control. We have brought influence to bear on it with many good arguments, not just we Germans, but we Germans particularly. I feel a certain satisfaction that this is bearing fruit. I am rather optimistic regarding the further development of disarmament matters in the course of 1982.

GENSCHER COMMENTS ON SUMMIT, FOREIGN POLICY

DW141117 Bonn ARD Television Network in German 2035 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Interview with Foreign Minister and FDP Chairman Hans-Dietrich Genscher by reporter Friedrich Nowottny in the program "Report From Bonn"; date not given -- videotaped]

[Text] [Question] The foreign policy of the Schmidt, Genscher government, if I may say so, was gloriously supported during the NATO summit and the visit of the American President. You could actually be content, even self-content.

[Answer] Not self-content, but it is important for a country such as the FRG, located at the border between the alliance systems, and living in a divided country, that we have the support of all our allies with regard to foreign and security policies. We need this if we want to safeguard our national interests in a divided country.

[Question] You were also applauded by the CDU/CSU for the statement which was adopted here. Could you imagine that the foreign policy pursued now by Helmut Schmidt and by you could also be pursued by you and a CDU chancellor?

[Answer] Mr Nowottny, it is important to find support for your foreign policy not only by your allies. In the current situation in our divided country it is important for the Federal Government to obtain as much support as possible for as many parts of its foreign policy as possible, including the opposition.

[Question] In other words, continuity exists in a foreign policy which you could actually pursue with every other partner as well?

[Answer] It is correct that the FDP is the continuity factor of German foreign policy, because we are the party which has supported the opening to the West as well as the policy of cooperation and detente with the East. We guarantee to the citizens of our country that this continuity, linked with the West and aimed at detente and cooperation, will be continued in any case in the future. As the FDP chairman I am campaigning for this policy and for my party.

[Question] Mr Foreign Minister, political continuity is a ticklish matter. In the next days when routine work will have caught up with you, this continuity in the alliance with the SPD must be demonstrated here in Bonn. Is that still possible?

[Answer] Mr Nowottny, we have just said correctly that our foreign and security policies have been supported. Both government parties now have the duty to see to it that the policy which we introduced last year with the demand of a change is aimed at a consolidation of public expenditures, at limiting public debts, at making investment means available to create jobs -- at a continuation of this policy. It must not be broken off or disrupted. We must not spoil the success of this policy ourselves, a policy which is showing the first positive signs as demonstrated by the interest rate signals of the Federal Bank. In other words: In discussing the 1983 budget we must further adhere to the strict law of solid financing. That will not be easy, but it is a challenge for both government parties. We bear responsibility here for the economic and financial future of our country.

[Question] Was the loud criticism of their own policy voiced by both government parties the reason why the Hamburg voters abandoned the coalition parties?

[Answer] I believe that it was certainly one of the main reasons.

[Question] Does the FDP accept some of the blame?

[Answer] We have tried to support this policy most clearly. I believe that we rather succeeded in this respect. But we are also involved in the picture presented by the government as a whole, and as regards the negative side of it, we have contributed much less to it than others.

[Question] The FDP is constantly forced to make coalition statements. Such a statement is due next week in Hesse. Has it already been formulated?

[Answer] This decision is up to the Hessians on 17 June, and they will make it.

[Question] Any recommendations?

[Answer] We will certainly discuss it once more, but the decision is always up to the respective land organization. I would very much warn against doctrines on whether or how to make coalition statements. This must be decided also in connection with current problems on federal or land levels. I believe that in the current situation it is important for the Free Democrats to remain loyal to themselves, to keep free of tactical considerations and to make one thing quite clear to the voter: They are most of all a free democratic party, that is an independent and sovereign party, the liberal force in the FRG.

[Question] Regardless whether they will be represented in the government, the opposition, or not at all in parliament?

[Genscher] A party must aim at pursuing a policy in parliament and if possible in the government. Not simply to be participating in the government, but because in our parliamentary system the implementation of a policy one considers to be the right policy is easiest from within the government.

[Question] No matter with which party?

[Answer] That will be decided by current problems on which a decision must be made.

'Foreign Troops Out of Lebanon'

DW150935 Cologne Deutschlandfunk Network in German to East and West Germany 0900 GMT 13 Jun 82

[Interview with Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher by reporter Karl Donat in the program "Interview of the Week," date and place not given -- recorded]

[Excerpt] [Question] Mr Genscher, I want to begin with a question to the foreign minister in connection with developments in the Middle East. With the Israeli cease-fire the worst danger -- that the fire could spread over the Middle East -- seems to be over. But how long will that last without a political solution? Israel is aiming for a political solution also with regard to the Lebanon problem. The 10 European Community states have sharply condemned the Israeli action, but they have also said that they aim for a Lebanon free from violence. Could you say something concrete about a political solution for Lebanon?

[Answer] Those who have observed developments in Lebanon in past years have seen that controversies were fought on the backs of the people in Lebanon, controversies which did not emanate from Lebanon. I believe that the developments of past years were a challenge to the United Nations, committing all responsible forces of the world to attempt to find a Lebanese solution reestablishing the sovereignty of the country, safeguarding the authority of the country's state organs and securing the integrity of Lebanon through international guarantees.

These are also the aims of the European Community. In other words: Reestablishing the former status would not do, nor would insisting only on the withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanon. It is of course necessary. We say that also in agreement with the decisions of the UN Security Council, but if we want to avoid Lebanon becoming a hotbed of unrest, everything must be done to find a political solution for Lebanon which must become an independent country whose integrity will be guaranteed by the United Nations in a form still to be defined.

[Question] Mr Genscher, what is your opinion of a resolution of the European People's Party which demands the retreat of all Israeli and Syrian troops, the dispatching of an international peace force and the simultaneous disarming of the Palestinians?

[Answer] I have expressed our intention in the discussions we have had also with representatives of Arab countries to cooperate in a solution where no foreign troops will be present in Lebanon except those who safeguard an international guarantee if the elected authorities of Lebanon want it. We cannot control the country and we shall see what the elected Lebanese authorities will say about these problems pertaining to the future of their country.

[Question] If you say foreign troops, do you also mean armed PLO troops?

[Answer] I believe that the elected Lebanese authorities will have a say in this matter.

CHEVENEMENT OUTLINES ECONOMIC POLICY IN LE MATIN

PM091235 Paris LE MATIN in French 28 May 82 pp 4-5

[Didier Buffin, Jean-Francois Doumic and Alexis Liebaert interview with French Research and Technology Minister Jean-Pierre Chevenement; date not given]

[Excerpts] LE MATIN: Are there not at present certain management imperatives that threaten to delay the fundamental decisions?

Chevenement: It is only from a rightwing viewpoint that the desire to advance along the path of change and the desire for rigor are contradictory. A socialist government's desire for good management cannot be identified with the conception of rigor embodied by Mr Barre. Mr Barre's rigor seemed designed for everyone, but in fact it was for the workers. It is not and cannot be the same as ours. A leftwing government cannot adhere to a classic "stop-go" policy, as the economists call it, especially because if the "go" is easy the "stop" is difficult. Our government does not lack resources. It can act directly on the level of investments. More than half of industrial investments are made by public enterprises, even though they contribute only 20 percent to production. Is this not an essential tool? And these same public enterprises account for half the spending on industrial research, more than half our exports. Here is an initial field open to initiatives, to mobilization, to planning. Our sights must be set on vigor and on the ability to mobilize.

The country must be mobilized. What was done yesterday for the war can be done now to regain our independence and for the tasks of peacetime. There is no more pressing need than to restore a profound motivation among our fellow citizens. So it is a political battle, in the best sense of the term, that must be waged. And I have never yet seen a battle won by keeping swords sheathed.... This is as true of the economic battle and the cultural battle as it is of the political battle.

LE MATIN: Does the present policy meet these aspirations?

Chevenement: The foundations have been laid and you cannot ask social bodies, any more than living organisms, to change faster than at their own rate. One can regret that it is not faster, but it is a collective problem in which everyone has his own share of responsibility. The government, the citizens, the workers, no matter where they may be -- and I am not excluding journalists....

LE MATIN: Is this rate now imposing the "lull" mentioned by Mauroy which Delors referred to some months ago as a pause in the reforms?

Chevenement: One must not confuse matters. Pierre Mauroy spoke about "embarking on a new stage." As far as I know, Jacques Delors announced no pause. He did advocate "a pause in the announcement of reforms." And indeed it is necessary to make the very utmost of the reforms already carried out. This is the first thing to do. There must be no mistake about the nature of the time we are living in and of the accessible objectives. We are in a country that can and must go further along the path of living democracy. The objective in the present historical period is not socialism, which implies a level of awareness, of good citizenship, in short, a development of mentalities, from which we are still a long way off. What we can expect from the French people is that they make an initial effort toward a better understanding of what is at stake and a greater mobilization. To mobilize the resources of intelligence, to nurture the spirit of cooperation, to appeal for good citizenship -- all this will appear to LE MATIN readers like a very old argument. The fact is that the values of hard work, effort and responsibility were discredited for a whole period. But without these values we can never build a modern republic.

LE MATIN: Since the present objective is not socialism, what is it?

Chevenement: Well, it is to progressively build the modern republic. In the present historical period the French model is a mixed economy, very open to the world market and dominated by capitalism. But it is a society in which the weight of the public sector, democratic tradition and leftwing political and trade union sectors is such that it is possible to build there a kind fo democracy which I do not know how to define. I would have said "advanced" if the word "advanced" had not been discredited in the recent past. So let us say a vanguard democracy. France can find an original place for itself within the world economy and the international order.

The republic will not be built in a day and the socialist republic will encounter no fewer obstacles because it is being established at the end of the 20th century than the radical republic did at the end of the 19th century.

LE MATIN: Let us move on to the Communist Party. Do you consider that it has two irons in the fire?

Chevenement: Judging from its leaders' statements, the Communist Party has embraced the idea of a long-term change in which it must be involved. This is in the interests of democracy. Indeed, who can fail to see that a break in the union of the left would inevitably and immediately lead to a swing to the right? It is in the interests of France, which must be able to mobilize all its forces in the coming period.

LE MATIN: Does that imply any special activity for the Socialists in the negotiations leading up to the municipal elections?

Chevenement: These negotiations have not yet properly begun and it seems to me that the desire to preserve the leftwing majority's cohesion exists on both sides.

LE MATIN: To be more specific, do you believe it would be legitimate to make gifts to the Communist Party?

Chevenement: I cannot take my party's place. It is a matter that concerns the party and that must be discussed primarily on the spot before being broached at the national level, and then not within the government but between the two party leaderships.

LE MATIN: Are you pleased that the majority system has been abandoned for the municipal elections?

Chevenement: I have always been in favor of a system that enables the minorities to express themselves and the majority to govern and thus shoulder its responsibilities. Too many people in France lack clear ideas about the functioning of democracy. Democracy is a system in which the people decide. But they decide "corporately" under the conditions specified by the constitution: In other words, the people exercise their prerogatives of sovereignty by electing deputies every 5 years and a president of the republic every 7 years. On that basis there is a government which is designated by the president of the republic and which must have the confidence of the Assembly. It is the government which embodies legitimacy and which has the right to command. Therefore it has the right to demand obedience once decisions have been legally taken, it being well understood that good practice consists of always gathering all opinions, carrying out very broad consultation and ensuring that all viewpoints are heard -- as far as possible -- before any decision is taken. But once it has been taken, it must be implemented. This is what democracy is. And what is true at the state level is also true at the local level. A mayor must have a solid majority in order to carry out a municipality's policy. Universal suffrage is too serious a thing for consistent democrats to allow it to be discredited by continuous challenges in favor of electoral methods that are apparently democratic but that are often the surest way of destroying democracy. I am therefore in favor of a certain degree of proportionality, which will facilitate pluralism and enable the opposition to learn to shoulder its responsibilities, but only on condition that the majority vote is respected. The citizens must know who is in charge.

LE MATIN: The way in which European farm prices were set marks a break with the practices observed hitherto -- a break that could be heavy with consequences for the future.

Chevenement: I do not believe so. In any case, the agreement reached with Britain shows that eventually the rule of unanimity was safeguarded. Shrewd pragmatism is needed in this kind of matter. It is true that Europe is somewhat short of breath 25 years after the Treaty of Rome was signed. Who could deny it? But is that not simply because the Europeans -- the ones who first launched that Europe -- have committed the sin of economism? A Common Market can never replace a joint plan. How will Europe's identity be established along the North-South and East-West axes in a period of serious and prolonged crisis? This is the real question. I yield to the belief that a country such as ours, which is placed in the heart of Europe and in the vanguard of democracy, can play a greater role, with its deterrent force and its relative weight, in gradually asserting this European identity. Europe will not be forged in one or two generations. Let us not raise false issues. The idea of a federation is not topical. Let us forge a variable-geometry Europe on the basis of the problems that arise. Let us strengthen our solidarities. In short, let us make a political endeavor.

LE MATIN: It is often said that the left's return to power marks an Atlanticist turning point in French politics, a rapprochement with the United States....

Chevenement: The left's advent to power marked the entry of four Communist ministers into the French Government which, I believe, does not correspond at all to the orders issued on several occasions by the U.S. administration to both Italy and Portugal.... National independence is the only policy consistent with France's interests and -- may I say in passing -- with the interests of its allies, if you think about it.

LE MATIN: As author of the plan, are you satisfied?

Chevenement: I am never satisfied, in principle. I have never have been, for that matter. When I joined the French section of the Workers International in 1964 it was in desperate straits. The state of the left was desperate after May 1968 and before the Epinay congress. After 1978 the union of the left was in a desperate situation. And when the presidential campaign had to be carried out in 1981 it seemed so desperate that 4 months before the elections there were not many of us -- believe me -- to form the so-called "post-10 May" group, with Jacques Fournier, Nicole Questiaux and a few others. Our maxim is still the same: Intelligent pessimism; resolute optimism.

COT DEFENDS GOVERNMENT'S ATTITUDE ON LEBANON

PM141521 Paris LE MONDE in French 12 Jun 82 p 4

[Excerpts] In the National Assembly on Thursday, 10 June, Health Minister Ralite announced "the forthcoming departure of a medical mission to Lebanon led by Professor Minkowski."

Mr Couve de Murville (RPR, Paris) criticized "the complete lack of feeling or even of mere interest shown at the Versailles summit toward the tragic events in Lebanon by the leaders of the main Western countries who were commenting vaguely on the world's economic problems." Referring to the statement issued by the seven on 6 June, he said: "It was made with a tear in the eye but there was no indignation, no condemnation and no sympathy for the victims."

Cooperation and Development Minister Cot stated: "How can France be accused of indifference when in the past year representatives of the External Relations Ministry, including an ambassador, have lost their lives because France was showing its interest in Lebanon and when the stance adopted by our country today has been described by some people as excessively courageous? Out of regard for representatives who have no hesitation in taking great risks -- and in particular I would like to pay tribute to our Ambassador Paul-Marc Henry, who is remarkably active in Beirut -- I am sorry that you have spoken these words."

After recalling Mr Mitterrand's statements on this subject and the joint demand by France and the EEC countries for "an immediate and unconditional withdrawal of Israeli troops in keeping with Security Council Resolutions 508 and 509," Mr Cot added: "Is there any need to recall that the Israeli action and the bombings which preceeded it are unjustifiable? They have caused the loss of an intolerable number of human lives and are a flagrant violation of international law because this is a new serious attack on the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of Lebanon, a friend of France, to which we are bound by many emotional and historic ties." With regard to the role of the UN Interim Force in Lebanon, Mr Cot remarked: "It is clear that it has not fulfilled the role entrusted to it."

Initiative To End Fighting

LD141752 Paris Domestic Service in French 1700 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] France has just taken an initiative to put an end without delay to the bombardments and fighting in Lebanon, an Elysee communique states. Tomorrow a French emissary is going to Beirut to meet with Lebanese President Elyas Sarkis.

The French Government said once again that it is prepared to place itself at Lebanon's side so that country's integrity, unity and independence can become a reality again. It must furthermore be noted that France deplores that two cease-fires have been ineffective, that France (?extends a warning) against the fighting in Beirut, finally that in this communique France solemnly asks Israel to put an end to the bombardments and fighting without delay.

It should furthermore be noted that this French initiative does not demand an Israeli withdrawal from the Lebanese territories which have been invaded, contrary to the Kremlin, which spoke this afternoon of an insolent Israeli aggression.

French Citizens Evacuating

LD141324 Paris Domestic Service in French 1100 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] We have just learned that the evacuation of French people living in Lebanon has begun. Two French liners, the Azur and the Montcalme, started to embark the French who want to leave Lebanon at the port of Juniyah, situated north of Beirut. It is assessed that 700 to 1,000 people will thus leave Beirut in the coming few days, not only Frenchmen but also citizens of other European countries.

PRESIDENT MITTERRAND TO VISIT AUSTRIA 16-17 JUN

LD140926 Paris Domestic Service in French 0900 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] It has been officially announced that Francois Mitterrand will visit Austria 16-17 June. This will be the first visit paid by a French head of state to Vienna since the last world war.

SPADOLINI AGAIN CONDEMNS ISRAELI ACTIONS

AU141556 Rome ANSA in English 1525 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 14 Jun (ANSA) -- Italian Premier Giovanni Spadolini restated the Rome government condemnation of the Israeli offensive across the border in Lebanon and referred to an Italian role of moderation and balance in relations with Buenos Aires in remarks on the current international situation published in the new edition of the weekly, OGGI.

"We condemned the Israeli attack," the head of government told the interviewer and continued, "I renew the firm condemnation of the Italian Government even more strongly in that this condemnation originates with a country which has devoted prodigious energies for a peaceful and broadly based solution for the conflict between Arabs and Jews."

In connection with Anglo-Argentine fighting in the South Atlantic, Spadolini said that, "Italy is in a position which allows it to conduct a role of moderation and balance in dealings with Buenos Aires.

"We have already expended efforts in this direction, in agreement with our European Economic Community partners, and we will continue to work along these lines in these difficult weeks ahead."

Speaking about his recent encounters with American President Ronald Reagan in Rome and at the NATO summit in Bonn, the premier affirmed that the President is "determined to give new impetus to the East-West dialogue.

"As Europeans," he added, "we are more than ever convinced that Euromissile negotiations must lead to something useful before the summer of 1983."

Spadolini is now in New York where he will address the UN special assembly on disarmament on Tuesday.

DJIBOUTI FOREIGN MINISTER ARRIVES ON VISIT

AU141955 Rome ANSA in English 1933 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 14 Jun (ANSA) -- Djibouti's Foreign Minister Moumin Bahdon arrived in Rome today for a three-day visit.

He will take part in the work of the mixed Italo-Djibouti commission aimed at bolstering cooperation ties between the two countries.

He was welcomed at the airport by Djibouti's ambassador to Paris, Ahmed I. Abei, and Italian officials.

Also taking part in the sessions of the mixed commission will be Italy's Foreign Undersecretary Roberto Palleschi.

PRIME MINISTER SPADOLINI TO VISIT SPAIN 2-3 JULY

AU111556 Rome ANSA in English 1530 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 11 Jun (ANSA) -- Italian Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini will be making an official visit to Spain on July 2-3 at the invitation of his Spanish counterpart, Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo, according to an official announcement here today.

He will be paying back the visit which Calvo Sotelo made to Rome in March.

TRIAL OF RED BRIGADES RESUMES AFTER BREAK

AU142000 Rome ANSA in English 1946 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 14 Jun (ANSA) -- The trial against Red Brigades terrorists involved in the kidnap and murder of Italian statesman Aldo Moro was resumed today after a ten-day break, with testimony from "repentant" brigadist Patrizio Peci.

Today's audience lasted less than an hour so that lawyers in the case could hold a meeting to discuss the arrest of Rome lawyer Giovanni Lumbardi who has defended numerous terrorists in the past. She herself is being held on charges of participation in armed gangs. Peci outlined the process which led to his decision to turn state's evidence. He said that several months before his arrest in 1980, he had begun to realize the "impotence" of the Red Brigades in their attack on the state and the "inability" of the organization to make significant inroads among factory workers. It was only once he found himself in a jail cell, however, that he came to feel that by leaving his former comrades at liberty they were free to commit more murders.

Peci was unable to hide his emotions when he spoke of his brother Roberto, who was killed by the Red Brigades last year out of revenge. Also present at today's court session was Remo Pancelli, a brigadist arrested a few days ago in Rome. He was loudly welcomed by other defendants who, like him, have not cooperated with justice officials. When Peci began to give testimony today several of the defendants left the room in sign of protest. Another repentant terrorist, Antonio Savasta, who was involved in the kidnapping of U.S. General James Lee Dozier, asked to be accompanied out of the chamber before Peci finished his testimony.

Peci was the first Red Brigadist to turn state's evidence, even before legislation was passed granting eased sentences for terrorists who agree to cooperate with justice officials.

PAPAL ENVOY LEAVES FOR CONSULTATIONS IN WARSAW

AU141603 Rome ANSA in English 1535 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 14 Jun (ANSA) -- Problems connected to a Papal visit to Poland in August for the 600th anniversary of the Black Virgin in Jasna Gora, in Czestochowa on August 26, are likely to be at the center of consultations conducted in Warsaw by Apostolic Nuncio Msgr. Luigi Poggi. Before his departure from Rome today to fly to the Polish capital for a two-week stay, the special papal envoy told newsmen, "The religious nature of my trip, evidently, does not exclude this possibility" of discussing a summer papal visit.

In June 1979, during John Paul II's first visit to his homeland since becoming pope, he voiced his intention to make another pilgrimage to be present for the celebrations in Czestochowa. The delcaration of martial law in Poland last December 13 and the creation of a military committee of national salvation in Warsaw, however, cast a series of doubts over the feasibility of the future papal return to the country. As recently as the weekend, aboard the flight back to Rome at the end of his 30-hours visit to Argentina, Pope Wojtyla restated his desire to make the trip. At the end of May, the Polish Episcopal conference referred to the "timeliness" of a papal visit in the summer but the military regime, led by General Wojciech Jaruzelski, has not yet disclosed its position on the matter.

According to sources in Warsaw, Polish leaders are debating whether the papal visit, including a meeting with Polish military authorities ruling the country, would represent and endorsement for the regime or whether the appearance of the native son at the head of the Roman Church would give a new lease of life to the opposition, including the disbanded Solidarnosc free trade union movement.

Msgr. Poggi is scheduled to complete his mission in Warsaw and return to Rome on June 29.

SPANISH. PORTUGUESE FOREIGN MINISTERS MEET

LD141500 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1400 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] The talks between Spanish Foreign Minister Perez-Llorca and his Portuguese counterpart Vasco Pereira began early this afternoon at the Foreign Ministry in Lisbon. It is the annual meeting of the Council for Hispano-Portuguese Cooperation.

The new Portuguese foreign minsiter recalled the support Portugal had given to Spain's entry into NATO, and he stressed the aspects of bilateral relations which must merit attention from the respective governments. Lisbon wants to see a cut in the unfavorable trade balance with Spain, resolve the fisheries problem, negotiate a new consular agreement and guarantee cooperation on nuclear safety.

In his reply to the welcome given by Vasco Pereira, our foreign minister expressed gratitude for Lisbon's support for Spain's entry into NATO, and he reaffirmed the strong resolve of the Spanish Government to seek from NATO nothing that might jeopardize the present interests of Portugal in the alliance.

DEMOCRATIC ALLIANCE LEADERS ON POLITICAL SCENE

PM140921 Lisbon DIARIO DE NOTICIAS in Portuguese 5 Jun 82 p 3

[Unattributed report: "Local Authorities Give Rise to Democratic Alliance Criticisms of Eanes"]

[Text] The Democratic Alliance yesterday deemed it "deeply deplorable" that the president of the republic has recently been advocating the acceptance of lists of independents in local elections. The Democratic Alliance leaders' meeting, which took place at Popular Monarchist Party [PPM] headquarters, also assessed the political situation and the drafting of joint lists for the next local elections.

"We analyzed the current political situation in the light of the PCP's isolation from the other democratic forces," Minister Ribeiro Teles told DIARIO DE NOTICIAS at the end of meeting, adding: "We also analyzed the president of the republic's recent statements and the unconstitutionality represented by advocating lists of independents in local elections."

At the level of these local elections, Riberiro Teles regarded as "a demonstration of the Democratic Alliance's vitality" the submitting of joint lists "in many cities and towns of our country," as well as the separate running of the parties comprising the government coalition in other localities.

According to the information given by that member of the government, the handling of the constitutional review was also debated at the summit. In connection with a possible cabinet reshuffle, Ribeiro Teles said that this is "a matter which concerns the prime minister and not really the summit." However, the minister specified that Pinto Balsemao "gave information concerning some steps taken for the reshuffle in progress."

The summit was attended by Pinto Balsemao, Antonio Capucho, Nascimento Rodriguez and Amandio de Azevedo for the Social Democratic Party; Freitas do Amaral, Basilio Horta, Lucas Pires and Luis Beiroco, for the Social Democratic Center Party; and Ribeiro Teles, Borges de Carvalho, Ferreira Periera and Sousa Lara, for the PPM.

At the end of the meeting a communique was distributed, which states that "the Democratic Alliance summit believes that there are new and decisive factors in the political process, the first of which is the Communist Party's current isolation, discord -- now impossible to hide -- and despair."

According to the note, "The cause of this isolation is the agreement of the democratic forces of Portuguese society on the revision of the constitution and on the consolidation of the democratic institutions, without tutelage of any kind." The document also points out that "that agreement demonstrates the real ability of the democratic political forces to reach agreement on grave and difficult issues such as those of the system, despite the illegitimate interventions by other state bodies."

At the level of the local elections, "the Democratic Alliance summit took cognizance of the current state of the interparty negotiations with a view to the drafting of joint lists, in accordance with the criteria defined in the opportunely concluded national protocol."

PSP SECRETARY GENERAL CITED ON PARTY CRISIS

PM141527 Lisbon DIARIO DE NOTICIAS in Portuguese 6 Jun 82 p 3

[Excerpts] [Portuguese Socialist Party (PSP) Secretary General] Mario Soares acknowledged yesterday that there is an "internal crisis in the PSP," and stated that a "clarification" is essential for the party — "or at least the section of the party which so wishes" -- to be galvanized for "the great struggles which are approaching." Soares, who was speaking at a district meeting of PSP councillors and party members organized by the Lisbon Urban Area Federation, harshly criticized the deputies who believe that the agreement between the PSP and [Portuguese President] Eanes has been violated by the current party leadership.

"There are highly qualified players in the PSP who are scoring their own goals; there are comrades who adopt public stances only in order to blacken the image of the party's national leadership; there are comrades who have a strategy which involves defeat for the PSP, specifically in the local elections, in order, hypothetically, to take over the PSP leadership afterward. The internal crisis exists. Let us acknowledge it because, without a clarification, nobody will believe that we are an alternative when there are comrades who deny it and say that it is only possible with the president, as if the president were the leader of the opposition or had to interfere in the parties' life."

Mario Soares made this denunciation while demanding that the next PSP national committee meeting "discuss the party's internal crisis in order to diagnose the illness and consider the remedies." According to him, some of the Socialists who are condemning the party leadership are motivated by "personal ambitions," others "by loyalty to blueprints alien to the PSP," and yet others by "the wish to take over the party."

"This is a matter of the PSP's survival: Either we are capable of undertaking a clarification, or the party ceases to have a raison d'etre. Perhaps this is what some people want, in order to give place to other blueprints, but, as far as I am concerned, I will fight against that," Soares declared, stating next:

"Since the congress, I have continuously held out a hand, struggling for party unity. But whenever the PSP is in a position to fight, there are comrades who set about diminishing the party members' perception of the party's offensive capability."

The PS secretary general leveled these criticisms after describing as "a really ridiculous pretext" the argument which some members of the former secretariat invoke to declare that the agreement between the PSP and Eanes was violated: that of the president's powers. "It is a ridiculous pretext, based on a mere adverb -- 'politically' -- and an argument which, moreover, is flawed by an enormous injustice, since the PSP has made no great concession to the Democratic Alliance. The consensus draft which Parliament will appraise substantially incorporates the Republican and Socialist front draft," Mario Soares stated.

The Socialist leader believes that, in addition to the PCP, there are others who, "although not having the courage to say so, are working persistently to avert the revision." This allusion was aimed once more at the PSP leaders "who say that the agreement with Eanes was not honored."

Mario Soares also referred to the issue of the "Eanist party or presidential party," stating that he is not opposed to its emergence, although he believes that Eanes would be committing a "grave offense" against his electorate. "But it would be very advantageous and positive for that party to put itself forward," Soares said, "because if that is not done, the specter will always disturb the national atmosphere -- something which is very harmful, especially at a time when we are witnessing a real economic disintegration."

The PSP secretary general also said that "the time has come to ask Eanes what he wants and whether he approves of the moves which are being made in his name against the parties, and especially against the PSP." "It must also be asked," he continued, "what is the stance of the PSP members who were in the national committee of support for President Eanes' repeat candidacy -- an organization which performed its role and should have been wound up but seems to be continuing. Those people must define their stance clearly."

About to end his impromptu speech to Lisbon district councillors and party members and after once more condemning the socialists who "strive to blacken the party's image and only use it to become deputies or mayors," Mario Soares explained the reasons for the severance of relations with the PCP announced a few days ago by the PSP standing committee.

After terming it unacceptable for a party not to refrain from interfering in another's life, calling for indiscipline by its deputies, Soares said that the PCP "is experiencing a profound crisis, which stems from the fact that it has no strategy and does not know what it wants." Soares even doubts whether the Communists want the ousting of the government and of the Democratic Alliance since, according to him, "they define as their principal enemy the PSP, which is precisely the sole alternative to the Democratic Alliance."

In the meantime, the PSP press office has stated in a communique that it "notes that the PCP leadership has produced no satisfactory or politically sound reply to the grounds put forward by the Socialists for a suspension of relations with the PCP."

In its communique, the PSP "emphasizes the contradiction in the argument of the PCP secretary general, who on Portuguese television (during the four leaders' last debate) no sooner praises the absence of PSP concessions to the Democratic Alliance then immediately afterward, when it appears tactically expedient to him, he refers to the Socialists' imaginary and false capitulation."

In the meantime, at a 10-hour meeting with journalists held within the context of the "questions to the PSP" series, Mario Soares said that the internal situation of crisis in his party would end "with all the consequences resulting from that." And he added: "I feel that I have my back to the wall; I cannot let the party die in my hands."

In the Socialist leader's opinion, there are three groups within the minority sector: one which in fact is already outside the PSP, another which is obdurate toward the majority for psychological reasons, and a third which is toying with the alternation of power within the PSP and with the possible emergence of a presidential party in order afterward to secure a coalition under Ramalho Eanes' aegis.

After listing previous crises and splits in the PSP, Mario Soares described the current situation as "more complex and grave" and even admitted, albeit indirectly, that a split might be the way to surmount the internal conflict, since no political organization, "however tolerant," can accept party members who only cause "the party problems."

As far as General Eanes is concerned, the Socialist leader expressed the opinion that the head of state would not uphold the viewpoint that the agreement concluded with the Socialists had been violated. In addition, and although showing himself convinced that a presidential party would not emerge, he said that the current situation of uncertainty about the matter is unacceptable.

PSOE'S SECRETARY GENERAL HOLDS PRESS CONFERENCE

PM101355 Madrid YA in Spanish 5 Jun 82 p 6

[Report on Spanish Socialist Workers Party Secretary General Felipe Gonzalez 4 June press conference in Madrid]

[Text] Socialist leader Felipe Gonzalez regards the sentence in the 23 February case as a demonstration that "there is an autonomous military power group that presumes to remain independent of the civil government." The sentence, he added, creates negative effects both in the functioning of the democratic institutions and the armed forces. "The exemplary nature of the heaviest sentences is not enough: The violated law must be restored. The officers delcared to be in insurrection by the sentence cannot continue to be officers of the army. It is a contradiction of the system. Nor can it be argued in their defense that they merely acted with due obedience, because it would cost them little to try again to eliminate the institutions."

This is how the Spanish Socialist Workers Party [PSOE] Secretary general announced his criticism of the sentence in the 23 February case at a crowded press conference, attended by more foreign than national journalists, to whom the opposition leader showed off his great skill in linking ideas and the thoughts that qualify them. But he also conveyed conviction and resoluteness in his opinions on the delicate political situation that the country is experiencing. Above all, he showed that he has learned his part, whereby he also managed to convey the confidence that voters look for in a political leader. This is the same confidence that he placed in the democratic institutions which, in his opinion, will succeed with the aid of the people's will in surmounting the delicate predicament in which we have been placed by the inability of successive centrist governments to govern effectively.

In conclusion, on the subject of the sentence, Gonzalez said that internal discipline will be difficult in the army. He said in this connection that this sentence cannot be compared with another recent one on which a number of soldiers who refused to eat and who are now in prison were accused of sedition. Those who assault parliament and attack national sovereignty, on the other hand, are absolved. "It will be difficult," he added, "for the armed forces to perform their role in defending the nation and in maintaining the constitutional order. In short, the sentence does not restore legality of make the punishments fit the crimes committed. I therefore believe that the code of military justice must be reformed as soon as possible. We believe it should be reformed right away. In any case, if we socialists form a government we will do it. We politicians must exercise power resolutely and determinedly, without transferring our responsibilities to anybody else, as has often been done in Spain, with civilians resorting to the military to restore a situation that the civilians could not achieve through the ballot box." The government, Gonzalez said, must exercize its power resolutely or it places the supremacy of the democratic institutions in jeopardy. It is not a matter of seeking a confrontation between the civilian and military authorities: There must be coexistence in line with the constitutional order. It is not the military, but the regular courts, that must judge the behavior of its members, especially when we are dealing with actions against the state institutions.

Gonzalez acknowledged that neither he nor his party has "adequate institutional relations to emerge smoothly." But he does not believe that this situation "will create any difficulties in the event of us socialists coming to power." It is obvious, he added, that "we must also surmount historical mistrust, because until 1977 the PSOE was not legally active."

The socialist leader believes that any appeal or appeals made against the sentence in the 23 February trial could be absorbed by the democratic system with the same relative cost incurred by the trial itself, which was initially expected to be greater due to the harangues designed to implicate certain institutions. "But it has become clear that the king was at all times within the constitutional law." Nor does Gonzales believe that the failure of such appeals could influence the general elections, even if they occur at the same time.

Gonzalez lamented the fact that the civilian conspiracy behind the coup was not laid bare and said that his party would not request the defense minister's resignation. He added that this was a conclusion that the government would have to draw, reflecting on whether it would now be in the public interest to replace some members of the cabinet in order to complete its legislative term with a little more vigor.

This led to a long series of questions, lasting 90 minutes, concerning the political issues of the moment, apart from the sentence. Gonzalez issued a loud and clear "no" to any socialist cooperation with "any operation to form a caretaker or coalition government. If the government cannot complete its legislative term, then let it bring the elections forward to the fall."

Gonzalez said that his party will continue to support the government if there are "insuperable difficulties for democracy, especially against those opposed to freedom." He added, however, that they would not cease to express as harsh a criticism as necessary on crucial issues.

"Let us not deceive ourselves," he added, "this legislative term is over. And if we had to dissolve parliament, we would do so in September, because it cannot be done in December, having previously discussed a budget that will bind whichever government emerges from the elections. The budget must be discussed so that it can become effective in time, especially in view of the present economic situation, and because the coming period of sessions will be no more than an extended prelude to the election campaign. Some people," Gonzalez quipped, referring to [Popular Alliance leader] Fraga, "have already embarked on their campaign and will be spending the summer vacationing all over Spain."

With regard to Adolfo Suarez' article in a Madrid newspaper, he said that "it expresses his thoughts, but that it seems to have been altered at the last moment," and pointed to evidence of this.

Following his conversation with Calvo-Sotelo, Gonzalez said that he did not gain the impression that the prime minister had any plans for what to do in the coming months, "not even with his own party." The socialist leader declined to discuss the Union of the Democratic Center Party's [UCD] crisis, but he did say that the assessment that the electoral space of the center-right had not been resolved was correct and that the UCD "can occupy a political space with adequate competitive scope, but without lapsing into a patronizing attitude with regard to votes, because nobody's votes are guaranteed forever." He stated his belief that there is a desire for a center-right coalition before or after the elections.

Gonzalez said he did not wish to broach economic matters, though he did express his concern at the fact that the budgetary deficit has exceeded not only the figure calculated by the government but even the additional expanded figure suggested by the socialists, which was not accepted for fear of exceeding the forecasts of the national agreement on employment. I am not going to talk about the extent of our bankruptcy, about the suspension of payments or about other signs that show that the economic situation has deteriorated. We will have an inflation rate of about 15 percent. But not everything is bad: With regard to employment prospects, we may succeed in complying with the national agreement on employment.

For all these reasons this time the budget will more than ever determine the policy of the government that presents it and administers it. "It would be futile for one government to present it and another to administer it," Gonzalez said. Therefore, it is reasonable to talk about elections in the fall, which implies not reopening parliament in September just so that period of sessions can be a focus of preelection conflicts. We need a government that has the time to present a budget. Let it not be discussed in May, which is what happened in 1979, the socialist leader said.

He denied that his party is aiming to contest the elections jointly, because that would, he said, imply "that we have no confidence in the social majority for the change that we are offering the voters, with a willingness to govern alone if we have an adequate majority. If not, we shall see with which forces we can extend that majority in order to be able to govern. We have no fear of governing; we have a desire to exercise power responsibly and stringently, out of conviction and out of a sense of survival. The priority will be to defend the stability of the system, although, if we are the ruling party after the election, we will be confronted with a difficult economic situation."

"With the employers we are the same as before the Andalusian election, with the difference," Gonzalez specified, "that some employers have now revealed themselves as frustrated politicians. But we believe in the desire of most employers to maintain good institutional relations with all parties."

Gonzalez answered the various questions about NATO by emphasizing, in the first place, that neither he nor his party are anti-NATO. "We do not like the military blocs, we could have preserved our Westerness without joining the alliance. Entry -- because we are now only in the 'NAT' (North Atlantic Treaty) and have still to join the 'O' (the Organization) -- will pose more difficulties than the government would first acknowledge. To this end he read again the resolution of the Congress of Deputies plenum, when the government was authorized to join NATO, in which the same majority which gave the authorization advised that in the membership negotiations the security of the entire peninsular and extrapeninsular territory (that is, including Ceuta, Melilla and the Canary Islands) and the priority of the recovery of Spanish sovereignty over Gibraltar must be guaranteed. "And we will demand, Gonzalez said, "that all points of this resolution be fulfilled."

Concerning the contradictory statements by NATO Secretary General Joseph Luns about whether Ceuta and Melilla are or are not covered by the alliance's defensive umbrella, Gonzalez said that "Luns should be pensioned off, because he said the reverse 18 months ago. Perhaps he has changed his stance because of the Spanish Government's weakness."

"Joining NATO," he added, "should not mean a change of attitude in the armed forces. That seemed to me insulting to anybody wearing a uniform. The military will not change their attitude toward the democratic institutions because Spain is or is not joining the alliance."

As regards the Malvinas conflict, which, in his opinion, is changing international relations, especially because it is opening up a rift between Europe and Latin America, Gonzalez said that Spain could have done something more about that conflict. he recognized the Argentines' right to the islands, but he condemned both the Argentine and British stances in using violence. "The Argentine people, who have been led by the president of the junta, General Galtieri, to a military defeat, will have to draw their conclusions. When Calvo-Sotelo goes to Bonn 5 June, I do not know how Luns could dare to assert that the entire Atlantic alliance supports Britain in this conflict. Nobody knows how much Spain's joining the Atlantic organization will cost. We only know it increases defense expenditure. But if we socialists attain power and we have already joined, we will fulfill our pledge to consult the people."

FINAL ASSAULT LAUNCHED; ARGENTINES SURRENDER

'Rout' Reported

LD141926 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1912 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Robert Hutchinson and Alan Jones, PA defense staff]

[Text] British troops could be in control of Port Stanley within hours after routing the 7,000-strong Argentine garrison, Whitehall sources indicated tonight. The Argentine troops were said to be on the run, fleeing through the deserted streets of the Falklands capital. More than 6,000 British marines and soldiers were in hot pursuit. The rout came only hours after the second phase of the final assault plan was put into effect.

A third phase had been planned but land forces commander Major-General Jeremy Moore signalled his men to press on when the Argentine defenders broke and started running from Mount William just two miles from Stanley. The British tide swept through the so-called Galtieri line of fortifications, over-running trenches and machine gun posts with little general resistance. But there were hard fights at Mount Tumbledown and Wireless Ridge, a 350-foot ridge of land which overlooks the former Royal Marines base at Moody Brook and lies 1,800 metres across the harbour from the town.

There was a buzz of excitement at the Ministry of Defense in London as a British victory looked imminent. It was also learnt tonight that another Argentine Mirage jet has been shot down by a Sea Dart missile fired from a British warship.

Thatcher Announces Cease-Fire

LD142132 London BBC Domestic Service in English 2113 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Announcement by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to the House of Commons on 14 June -- live]

[Text] May I give the House the latest information about the battle of the Falklands. After successful attacks last night, General Moore decided to press forward. The Argentinians retreated. Our forces reached the outskirts of Port Stanley. Large numbers of Argentine soldiers threw down their weapons. They are reported to be flying white flags over Port Stanley. Our troops have been ordered not to fire except in self-defense.

Talks are now in progress between General Menendez and our deputy commander, Brigadier Waters, about the surrender of the Argentine forces on East and West Falklands.

I will report further to the House tomorrow.

Troops Surrender

LD150628 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0624 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Excerpts] The battle for the Falklands is over. Argentinian forces in Port Stanley surrendered at 9 pm Falkland time last night, and are being returned to Argentina. The end of the 75-day conflict was signalled in this dramatic message, released by 10 Downing Street, from Major General Jeremy Moore, the land force commander:

"In Port Stanley at 9 pm Falkland time tonight 14 June Major General Menendez surrendered all Argentine Armed Forces in East and West Falklands, together with their impedimenta. Arrangements are in hand to assemble the men for return to Argentina, to gather in their arms and equipment, and to mark and make safe their munitions.

"The Falkland Islands are once more under the government desired by their inhabitants -- God save the queen. Signed, J. Moore."

Talks had gone on through the night to reach a formal surrender after the 7,000 strong Argentine garrison in Port Stanley had run up the white flag following a determined British push on the capital. The Argentine troops were reported to have fled through the deserted streets with more than 6,000 marines and soldiers in hot pursuit.

General Menendez, the Argentine governor general of the islands, is expected to ask Britain for free passage to the country of his choice, because he does not want to return to Buenos Aires and dishonour. Earlier in the campaign he had sworn to fight to "the last bullet and the last man."

First reports of a ceasefire came last night from the Argentine high command. But the first official news in Britain came in a special Commons statement by the prime minister shortly after 10 pm.

Mrs Thatcher, who leaves for New York today to address a special United Nations debate on disarmament, promised MP's another government statement this afternoon. There were loud cheers and waving of order papers as the prime minister sat down.

A cheering crowd signing "Rule Britannia" greeted her when she returned to Downing Street from the Commons. The prime minister told the throng: "We know what we had to do and we went about it and did it. Great Britain is Great again."

Defence Secretary Mr John Nott predicted that the Union Jack would be flying again over Port Stanley within a few hours. Speaking at the Defence Ministry shortly after hearing Mrs Thatcher announce the ceasefire, he said: "We are absolutely delighted with the news."

In addition to the Port Stanley garrison, there are about 1,000 Argentine soldiers at Fox Bay and Pebble Island on West Falkland.

In the Commons, Labour leader Mr Michael Foot said there would be "genuine, widespread rejoicing at the prospect of the end of the bloodshed." And both Liberal leader Mr David Steel and Dr David Owen of the SDP congratulated the British troops on their victory.

The number of British servicemen killed or missing, presumed dead, in the Falklands conflict was last night put at more than 220. A Whitehall source said the casualties had been lighter than expected.

"Taken overall the casualties have been light, although of course we regret every single one of them," he said. The mood at the Defence Ministry was one of "enormous relief."

It was disclosed last night that more than 20 British troops and about 50 Argentines died in fierce fighting which followed the first phase of the assault on Port Stanley at the weekend. In the second phase of their campaign to re-take the islands' capital, British forces swept through the so-called "Galtieri line" of fortifications, over-running trenches and machine gun posts with little resistance.

But there were tough fights at Mount Tumbledown and Wireless Ridge, a 350-foot ridge of land which overlooks the former Royal Marines' base at Moody Brook and lies 1,000 metres across the harbour from the town. It was at Moody Brook that last night's ceasefire talks took place.

Outside, the shooting had stopped and all was quiet. Britain's final assault plan was implemented with marines, paratroopers, guardsmen and Gurkhas.

When the Gurkhas moved towards Mount William, 2 1/2 miles from Port Stanley, the Argentine defenders turned and fled, dropping their rifles and abandoning mortars and machine guns.

As they scurried into the town they came under heavy artillery fire from 105mm howitzers flown onto Wireless Ridge and were bombarded by navy ships. Many Argentines simply surrendered on the spot in small groups.

Major General Moore had originally planned to launch a third phase in the final attack -- an assault on 450 foot high Sapper Hill to the south-west of Stanley. But, with a rout obviously in progress, he signalled to his tactical commanders "press on" and the British forces swept on in hot pursuit of the fleeing Argentines.

The war -- the Ministry of Defence still insists it is self-defence under Article 51 of the UN Charter -- has cost the Argentines nearly 100 aircraft, one cruiser and almost 800 dead.

Besides the 220 British servicemen killed, four warships and one merchant ship, the Atlantic Conveyor, have been sunk.

14,800 Argentines

LD151140 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1132 GMT 15 Jun 82

[By Robert Hutchinson and Alan Jones, PA defense staff]

[Excerpts] An estimated 14,800 Argentine troops were involved in the Falklands surrender, some 6,000 more than the total British land forces, according to authoritative sources in Whitehall today. In Port Stanley, 11,000 Argentine prisoners of war were today under British Army guard, their weapons piled up.

Victory has brought new problems for the British commander Major-General Jeremy Moore -- many of the Argentines captured at Port Stanley are said to be "in a bad way" suffering from exposure, exhaustion and frostbite.

The number of Argentines captured has astonished the Ministry of Defence. Sources believe the Hercules reinforcement flights have been secretly landing nightly with more and more troops for the "last bullet last man" defence General Menendez promised, but failed to deliver.

A supply ship has also been found in Stanley Harbour which had slipped through the navy cordon enforcing the 200 miles total exclusion zone around the islands.

Once the Argentines have had their names, ranks, and numbers recorded, and been shipped out of the islands, special runway repair teams already on the Falklands will work 24 hours a day to get Stanley Airfield working again. Despite the constant and ferocious air and naval bombardment of the runway and facilities, it is believed in London the airfield could be operational again in just two days.

Clarification Sought

LD151248 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1227 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Text] Britain is seeking to establish from the Argentine authorities whether hostilities between the two countries over the Falklands are at an end, the Foreign Office said today. These inquiries, writes PA diplomatic correspondent Tom McMullan, are being made through the Swiss Embassy which represents Britain in Argentina since the break in diplomatic relations.

A Foreign Office spokesman said there was a "linkage" between hostilities and the obligations imposed on Britain under the terms of the Geneva convention relative to prisoners of war. The spokesman said that under the terms of the Geneva convention, Britain was required to return prisoners of war at the end of hostilities, if not before. "That obligation will be honoured," the spokesman said.

Whitehall officials said the search for confirmation that hostilities had ended did not imply that Britain was suggesting continued fighting. So far, however, there had only been a surrender of Argentine forces on the Falklands after discussions between the commanding officers. What was needed was a formal indication of the position of the Argentine Government.

Officials would not speculate on the options open to Britain if such confirmation is not forthcoming. For Mrs Thatcher and her ministerial colleagues, it is felt to be vital to have some indication of the attitude of the Argentine Government in formulating future policy for the islands.

Argentina from its mainland bases could continue to harass the islanders after the heat of the immediate battle has died down. So far, British officials have not been prepared to discuss the possibility that Argentine prisoners might be held as a bargaining counter until the Argentines offer a pledge that hostilities are at an end.

Garrison Planned

LD151012 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0940 GMT 15 Jun 82

[By Robert Hutchinson, PA defense correspondent]

[Text] The 3,000 men of 5 Infantry Brigade look set to form the first garrison of the retaken Falkland Islands, according to Whitehall officials today.

Three Commando Brigade, with its three Royal Marine commandos and artillery battery, will probably be the first to be pulled out because of their NATO commitment to defend the alliance's northern flank in Norway.

Officials predicted that the garrison will probably be relieved on a regular six monthly or annual basis. Cost of maintaining the garrison is estimated at least 100 million pounds a year, according to the officials.

On top of this will be the cost of repairing damage caused by the Argentine occupation forces; building new roads and facilities, and laying new telephone lines. Building a new runway at Port Stanley is estimated at 20 million pounds alone, said the sources.

Royal Engineers are already en route from Ascension Island to the Falklands to undertake this work, it is understood. The Pentagon has already offered a package of military hardware to Britain which will boost the garrison's defences, it is believed.

This included the missile improved Hawk -- an acronym for Homing All the Way Killer -- which has a lethal performance against aircraft, and the shoulder-fired Stinger missile which has already been used by the SAS to shoot down a Pucara aircraft in the early stages of the land war.

More ammunition for the garrison is on its way to the Falklands and the Royal Navy is producing contingency plans for a number of frigates to be stationed in the South Atlantic to protect against aircraft and submarine attack on shipping supply routes from Ascension.

This naval force -- estimated by some in Whitehall to number around 10 percent of the total strength of the Royal Navy -- will also include one or two nuclear submarines, it is understood.

Lord Shackleton, now hurriedly revising his 1976 report on the future of the Falklands, said today that an enlarged military garrison on the islands could be enormously important for the future of their economy.

Mrs Thatcher called in the former Labour leader of the House of Lords earlier in the crisis to ask him to revise his pigeonholed 1976 report on the future of the islands. Lord Shackleton now expects to present his revision to the prime minister "fairly soon."

He has brought the original 10-man team of specialists who produced the two volume report together again. Their report considered every aspect of the economy of the Falklands and its dependencies, such as South Georgia, from sheep farming through to the huge potential yields of krill -- tiny crustaceans -- in the South Atlantic. They estimated that the yields of blue whiting alone might provide equivalent to all Britain's annual fish catch.

Today Lord Shackleton said: "One general point now is that if there is a military garrison there that could be enormously important for the economy of the islands -- more than anything else -- in a place with such a small population.

"That population is going to be a great deal bigger if there is a garrison. I think we have got to look at the impact of having extra people there."

The team's 1976 report said that although the population and economy of the islands were in decline there was potential for transformation. Lord Shackleton said today he hoped there would be cooperation with other nations in the region -- "My original report said that was desirable, and I stick to that."

While he did not want to discuss future relations with Argentina over the islands, he pointed out that in the past Chile and Uruguay had had important roles to play with the Falklands.

EEC URGED TO MAINTAIN EMBARGO ON ARGENTINA

LD151034 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1007 GMT 15 Jun 82

[By Geoff Meade, PA staff reporter in Brussels]

[Excerpt] Britain is urging the continuation of Common Market trade sanctions against Argentina, despite the surrender of the invasion force. The tough embargo recently renewed indefinitely by seven of the UK's EEC partners should remain in place until the war over the Falklands has ended, British officials in Brussels were insisting today.

A spokesman for Mr Leo Tindemans, the Belgian foreign minister who is currently in charge of EEC policy-making, said: "Political directors of the ten Common Market countries are in consultation about whether what has happened amounts to a ceasefire or an end of the war."

In the context of the EEC ban, the distinction is a crucial one for the government. The message to Britain's partners today was that the fighting may have stopped, but the diplomatic and political struggle over the future of the islands is far from finished.

That struggle, EEC delegations are being told, requires continued, strong moral backing for the UK from the Community.

ISRAELI MILITARY SAID USING RADARS IN CYPRUS

NC121536 Athens MESIMVRINI in Greek 12 Jun 82 p 1

[By correspondent A. Viketos]

[Excerpt] Nicosia -- About 20 Israeli military experts "have been admitted" into the Troodos Mountain radars (installed by the British) to watch military movements in the area and appraise them within the framework of Israel's interests. This was disclosed yesterday by a well-informed source, who added that these experts arrived at the restricted radar zone through the Akrotiri bases (in Limassol).

In the meantime, the first refugees from the Lebanese war arrived at Larnaca Harbor yesterday. There were 110 persons -- Lebanese Phalangists and foreign nationals, including French diplomats.

Government Denial

NC130701 Nicosia O KIRIKAS in Greek 13 Jun 82 p 12

[Text] "There is no truth in the press report that there are Israeli agents at the British radars on Troodos." This statement was made yesterday by the government spokesman, without clarifying how the government has established that there are no Israelis at Troodos.

What is certain is that the government has absolutely believed the "explanation" given by the British. According to the explanation, men of the UN [peace force] are leaving Lebanon because of the events there and come to Akrotiri, whence they are taken to Troodos and housed in special facilities.

The government spokesman has also denied the report in a weekly newspaper that Israeli aircraft violate Cypriot airspace during their operations in Lebanon.

KHARAVYI SCORES U.S. EMBASSY OFFICIAL'S ACTIONS

NC111005 Nicosia KHARAVYI in Greek 11 Jun 82 p 3

[From the "Views and Comments" column: Scandal and Provocation]

[Text] It seems that some Western diplomats have decided to move their vehement war, which they have up to now been waging against the Cypriot democratic forces in the darkness of the political sidelines, to the open stage of a political showdown. This is proved by the action of U.S. Embassy diplomat Paul Hacker, who converted a Turkish Cypriot coffee shop in Pyla into a site for a political gathering in order to speak publicly and bluntly against the cooperation of the Cypriot political parties, to slander the leftwing forces and to deliver an anticommunist sermon.

This behavior constitutes a scandalous violation of all diplomatic customs. It constitutes a flagrant intervention in Cyprus' political affairs and an undermining of the positions of the government and the Cyprus state. It is also an open provocation against our people, who do not accept lessons on democracy or freedom from any foreigner, particularly from the representatives of those who are actually to blame for the Cypriot people's tragedy and who work as advisers for the abolition of democracy and freedom in Cyprus. This country has suffered enough as a result of the American plots, undermining activities and interventions in Cyprus. It is not possible to allow the carrying out -- particularly openly and officially -- of such intriguing. Such a thing would be tantamount to suicide. This should be made clear to the American and to any other Western diplomats who might be preparing to campaign against the patriotic democratic forces. Along with Cyprus' strong official protest to the U.S. Government, it should also be demanded that Paul Hacker be removed immediately from this country.

MEDICAL AID TO BE GIVEN TO LEBANON, PALESTINIANS

NC110836 Nicosia I ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 11 Jun 82 p 1

[Text] During its meeting yesterday under Acting President of the Republic Ladhas, the Council of Ministers decided to give practical support to the Palestinian and Lebanese peoples, who are fighting for their freedom.

As a first demonstration of support, pharmaceutical supplies will be sent to Lebanon immediately.

The council also decided that Cyprus' hospitals will be made available for the treatment of those who are seriously wounded.

TSFC Aid

TA112116 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 2000 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Text] The Turkish Federated State of Cyprus and the Red Crescent will send medical supplies and food to Lebanon, which is in a difficult situation as a result of the Israeli attacks. The Red Crescent will send 19 tons of food and medical supplies by land tomorrow. Part of the aid will be given to the PLO.

The Turkish Federated State of Cyprus announced that wounded Palestinians who come to Cyprus can be treated in its hospitals. It also decided to send a medical crew, medical supplies and food to Lebanon.

DENKTAS RETURNS FROM UNITED NATIONS 14 JUN

TA141742 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 1530 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] President Rauf Denktas returned home today after completing his talks with UN Secretary General Perez de Ceullar concerning the latest developments in the Cyprus issue. It was announced following the talks that an identity of views was reached between the UN secretary general and Denktas to the effect that the intercommunal talks were the best way to reach a solution to the Cyprus problem.

Comments on Talks

TA150539 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 0415 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Statement by Turkish Federated State of Cyprus President Rauf Denktas at Ercan State Airport on his arrival in Cyprus; 14 June -- recorded]

[Text] As you know, I left for New York to make a reassessment of the intercommunal talks with the honorable UN secretary general, Perez de Cuellar. I have returned after completing my contacts. We have made a profound assessment. As has already been announced in New York, Mr de Cuellar shares our views. [Words indistinct] that there is now way other than the intercommunal talks. He also shares the view that progress has been made at the talks. We briefed him on the Greek Cypriot attempts aimed at absolutely ending the talks. Then there was the meeting of the nonaligned group. Contrary to the optimistic assessment in the UN secretary general's report, they [presumably the Greek Cypriots] returned with a very bad resolution which cast a shadow on the office of the secretary general. They continued their attitude in Cyprus by (?arresting) various captains. Furthermore, they are airing many unfounded (?allegations) against us and against Turkey at many international meetings. We have expressed our views and concerns on the issue to the secretary general and we have asked him to [word indistinct] Kiprianou -- when he sees him -- that the Greek Cypriots renounce this attitude. Of course, we cannot tell the secretary general what to do but we let him know what Turkish Cypriot stand is on the issue.

Meanwhile, the Palestinian incidents have begun. What we have seen on television reminded us of our suffering at the hands of the Greek Cypriots for 11 years. Innocent people have been left without shelter. When we saw the women running in the streets carrying their children we thought of what we went through during the 1963-64 incidents. I believe that all world countries should cooperate to put an end to this situation for humanity and for peace.

Of course, the death of King Khalid, a great friend of the Turkish Cypriot community and a supporter of Islamic unity, has deeply grieved us. He has been replaced by his brother, the [word indistinct] of the same path. We believe that he will struggle in the same manner for Islamic unity and will stand by the Turkish Cypriot community as a strong friend. We extended our condolences to our Saudi brothers. It is our duty to once again express our condolences here.

To sum up, the discussion of the Cyprus issue at the UN Secretariat General at a time when hot wars are going on in many regions of the world underscores the fact that efforts are being exerted to bring to the negotiating table the countries involved in clashes because the only way to peace is through negotiations and not through clashes. We are at the negotiating table. We are negotiating for peace. We are negotiating with sincerity. Leaving the negotiating table carries with it a great responsibility and everyone should be well aware of this fact. I can say that our contacts have been very positive. We found the opportunity to meet many people. Mr Atakol will remain in New York for another week. Extension of the UNFICYP mandate will be discussed at the UN Security Council. I also asked him to hold contacts with the representatives of Islamic countries because they have now adopted a position against our attendence at the Islamic conference. They [presumably the Greek Cypriots] have appealed to the islamic countries to reject Turkish Cypriot presence at the Islamic Conference. These cannot be considered acts of friendship and good-will. It is our duty to explain to all the Islamic countries this mentality which is against our presence in a religious organization together with all its implications. Atakol has begun this duty there and we shall continue it here.

TURKISH CYPRIOTS PROTEST ARREST OF SYRIAN CAPTAIN

TA141149 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in English to Cyprus 1115 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] The Prime Minister, Mr Cagatay, has said that the economic embargo imposed on the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus by the Greek Cypriot administration undermines peaceful efforts for a Cyprus settlement. He was referring to the arrest by the Greek Cypriot police of the captain of the Syrian vessel, Dina, for calling at the port of Famagusta.

Mr Cagatay said that the Greek Cypriot embargo did not hold out much hope for the future and adversely affected the intercommunal talks. He said the Greek Cypriots had been taking part in high-level contacts for the successful conclusion of the intercommunal talks and at the same time had been doing everything possible to deadlock the talks. This, Mr Cagatay said, is a typical example of the Greek Cypriot administration's lack of sincerity.

The prime minister recalled that in the Denktas-Makarios agreement of May 1979, both sides had agreed to abstain from any action which might jeopardize the outcome of the intercommunal talks. Therefore, he added, the latest Greek Cypriot action had been protested to the UN secretary general by President Denktas.

BRIEFS

MOSCOW VISIT POSTPONED -- Mr Yeoryios Ladhas, acting president of the republic and House of Representatives president, yesterday received Soviet Ambassador Sergey Astavin, who informed him that the Supreme Soviet has agreed to the requested 1-week postponement of the visit to the Soviet Union by a parliamentary delegation under Mr Ladhas. Thus, the visit will begin in 5 July and end on 12 July instead of 28 June to 5 July. This postponement has become necessary because the president will most probably be out of Cyprus until 2 July. [Text] [Nicosia O FILELEVTHEROS in Greek 13 Jun 82 p 12 NC]

PRIME MINISTER ULUSU COMMENTS ON AEGEAN QUESTION

TA141335 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1200 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 14 Jun (AA) -- Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu said Monday no commitment had been made at the recent NATO summit in Bonn on the Aegean question.

Asked to comment on a call by Greek Premier Andreas Papandreou for a moratorium on rights and usage in the Aegean, Ulusu said before leaving for Saudi Arabia that an exchange of views and understanding would be needed first on "what a moratorium is."

The important thing at the Bonn summit was, he said, that "grounds for starting negotiations" on the Aegean dispute had been laid.

Premier Ulusu hoped Turkey and Greece could resume negotiations on the bases of equity and international rules.

PRIME MINISTER DEPARTS FOR SAUDI ARABIA

TA141113 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu has departed for Riyadh to extend condolences on behalf of Head of State Gen Kenan Evren and the Turkish Government following the death of Saudi King Khalid ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz.

In a statement at Ankara's Esenboga Airport before his departure for Saudi Arabia, Ulusu noted that King Khalid ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz died at a time when the Islamic community is faced with big problems and said: On this sad day, we extend our condolences to the entire Saudi royal family, government and people. I would like to reiterate my belief that the prosperity and happiness of Saudi Arabia will continue under the administration of the new Saudi King Fahd.

Replying to journalists' questions at the airport, Ulusu said that the work on the minimum wage is continuing and that the necessary adjustment will be effected after the linkage between the minimum wage and seniority compensation is severed.

In reply to a question on Turkish-Greek relations, Ulusu said that an optimistic atmosphere was created during the NATO summit meeting, and he expressed the hope that the talks will continue in order to solve the problems within the framework of the principles of equity and international rules.

Ulusu was seen off at Esenboga Airport by State and Deputy Prime Minister Zeyyat Baykara and Ankara Mayor Mustafa Gonul.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER DEPARTS FOR LIBYA

TA132018 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 2000 GMT 13 Jun 82

[Text] Minister of State and Deputy Prime Minister Turgut Ozal left for Libya this evening. In a statement at Yesilkoy Airport before his departure, Ozal said that he will hold contacts on economic issues in Libya within the framework of previously signed Turkish-Libyan agreements. He added that Turkish contractors' and exporters' relations with Libya and the problems they encounter will be discussed at the meetings. Ozal will leave Libya for France on 18 June and will attend an OECD meeting to be held in Paris. Developments in the Turkish economy will be assessed at the OECD meeting. Furthermore, views will be exchanged on aid to be extended by the OECD member countries to Turkey this year.

DATA ON DETAINEES, CASES BEFORE COURTS RELEASED

TA111725 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1535 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 11 Jun (AA) -- Some 19,125 persons were under arrest, and 1,105 in detention in Turkey at the end of April 1982, according to figures released by the martial law coordination office at the general staff headquarters.

Martial law courts had sentenced 23,145 defendants in various cases coming before them since the declaration of martial law, and the number of prisoners serving time in civil or military institutions for "ideological offences" was 6,091.

The military courts had completed 27,275 out of 33,782 cases coming before them, while trial on 6,507 cases still continued.

AFP Report

NC112111 Paris AFP in English 2058 GMT 11 Jan 82

[Text] Ankara, 11 Jun (AFP) -- A total of 19,125 people [words indistinct] under arrest in Turkish military prisons, with an additional 1,105 persons under 45-day detention, military sources here announced.

In a report on legal (?activities) in Turkey since the military coup of September [words indistinct] the coordination bureau of martial law said that 23,145 people have been sentenced and another 6,091 transferred to civilian prisons after conviction.

In a report published by the Turkish press directorate last May, the number of persons under arrest for "terrorist activities" since the military coup had been given as 43,140, with the military prison population listed [words indistinct].

Meanwhile, a Turkish military prosecutor has called for the death penalty against 131 defendants in the trial [words indistinct] Workers Party" (PKK), which began three days ago in Mardin, southeastern Turkey. He demanded prison [word indistinct] five to 20 years for the remaining 250 defendants.

The Mardin group of PKK is accused of commiting 23 murders, 28 robberies and 15 armed clashes in an attempt "to establish a Marxist-Leninist independent Kurdish state [word indistinct] southeastern territories of Turkey."

IRANIAN RED CRESCENT DELEGATION ARRIVES

TA141743 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1535 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 14 Jun (AA) -- A five-man delegation from the Iranian Red Crescent, headed by President of the Red Crescent Society Dr (R. Ferouz Abadi), arrived in Ankara Monday to discuss the prospective reunion of POW's of the Iran-Iraq war with their families.

The Iranian Red Crescent team will confer with Turkish officials, including those of the Turkish Red Crescent, Tuesday. Dr (Firuz Abadi) and his delegation will be in Turkey 3 days.

LIVESTOCK EXPORTS TO LEBANON REPORTEDLY HALTED

TA131508 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1450 GMT 13 Jun 82

[Text] Mersin, Jun 13 (AA) -- Livestock exports to Lebanon from the southern port city of Mersin have been completely halted because of the Israeli invasion of that country, exporters said. An exporter told newsmen that several Lebanese ships were still awaiting at the Mersin port for the war to end. As soon as hostilities ceased, the ships would depart, he added.

TCP SUPPORTS HUNGER STRIKE IN ISTANBUL PRISON

TA110722 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 11 Jun 82

[Statement by Turkish Communist Party's Central Committee concerning the hunger strike being held at the Metris military prison in Istanbul; date not given -- read by announcer]

[Text] For more than 20 days, 2,500 progressive and patriotic conflicts are waging a hunger strike at the Metris military prison in Istanbul. Some of the strikers, who are protesting the barbaric pressures of the military junta at the prison houses, are at the brink of death. Most of them have already been hospitalized. Representations by the relatives of the convicts to officials, including head of the junta Evren, are not taken into consideration while pressures continue and even the parents of the convicts are detained.

The Turkish Communist Party [TCP] supports this heroic resistance at the convicts at the Metris prison in Istanbul. The TCP appeals to all people to support the struggle being waged by the progressive and patriotic convicts that the military junta is trying to bury alive and not to forget them.

Executions must be halted; all political prisoners must be released; tortures during questioning at police stations and the 45-day detention without trial must be stopped; the torture of convicts after they have been imprisoned must be prevented; the restrictions forced on the defense during trials as well as censoring of the press concerning the procedures at the courts must be lifted; an immediate stop must be put to the inhuman tortures and pressures in the prisons. In particular, the shameful methods of torture practiced against women prisoners must be stopped immediately; the forced reeducation of the prisoners, the difficulties being made for those who need medical and other aid, limitations on visits to prisoners and the punishment in cells must be abolished; all inhuman prison conditions must be changed radically.

The TCP appeals to all the people to protest the fascist pressures being waged in the junta dungeons against the distinguished sons of our people and to prevent the efforts by the junta to destroy physically the fighters for peace and liberty whose convictions it could not destroy.

OUR RADIO ATTACKS REAGAN'S EUROPEAN REMARKS

TA150924 (Clandestine) Our Radio in Turkish to Turkey 0700 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Station commentary: "The Reagan administration's new tactic in continuing its enmity against peace; paying lipservice to peace"]

[Text] Dear listeners, U.S. President Reagan toured various Western European countries last week. Reagan resorted to every trick in a bid to show everywhere he sent that he supported peace. Addressing the FRG Bundestag, Reagan tried to appear as a genuine dove of peace. He said: My heart is with those attending the peace marches. I would also like to march in the frontlines of these demonstrations.

Dear listeners, no doubt Reagan's statements amazed many. Many began to ask whether it was really Reagan who was on the rostrum. It is impossible not to agree with them. The Reagan they know is one who is a staunch enemy of peace demonstrations, one who sees Moscow involvement behind every peace movement, one who is the initator of armament and the engineer of the thesis of a limited nuclear war in Europe. Why is such a person now frequently speaking about peace? Dear listeners there is nothing astonishing in this fact. There is now a strong world peace movement. This peace movement has come to the doorsteps of the White House. It has gained international dimensions. The social and class base of this movement is constantly expanding. The Soviet Union has put forward constructive proposals and taken concrete steps to limit nuclear and strategic arms, reduce tension in the world and increase security.

The Soviet Union has decided to unilaterally freeze the deployment of nuclear missiles in its European territory and to unilaterally reduce the number of previously deployed missiles. The Soviet Union put forward concrete and constructive proposals at the Geneva talks in which the limitation of medium range missiles in Europe is being discussed. All these moves are gaining the support of larger forces and all peace-lovers and thus becoming a powerful weapon in the hands of peace forces. Blatant attacks against the peace movement at such a moment and a policy of open aggression are insufficient to help the U.S. administration conceal its policy of tension and clashes. The U.S. administration is now trying to resort to more subtle methods. That is why the U.S. administration is now trying to assume a peaceful role.

As has been pointed out by the former Soviet ambassador to Bonn during a statement on FRG television, Reagan's peace statements are part of a political maneuver. Reagan, with his peace mask, is trying to break the peace activities which are gradually increasing and the social base of which is expanding in Western Europe. Through this policy of deceit, Reagan is trying to conceal from the peace-loving masses U.S. imperialism's policy of madness and the danger it poses to peace and humanity.

Orsan Oymen, in his article entitled "The New Reagan, From Hawk to Dove," stressed this point in the daily MILLIYET on 11 June. In his article, Oymen says: The reality is as follows: let the U.S. police station in the Middle East, namely Israel, continue to bomb Beirut with some 500 tanks. Let Great Britain of the EEC and NATO continue to sink ships on behalf of its former colony some 13,000 kilometers away. The extras behind the curtain are continuing to rehearse their roles. Let us continue to pay lipservice to peace.

Dear listener, Reagan's peace statements are nothing but a fake peace mask. The Reagan administration, today as well as yesterday, is the chief enemy of the peace movement and the chief initiator of nuclear armament. It is the source of the danger of nuclear war. Today, as was the case in the past, there are more important issues for the Reagan administration. This reality was once again revealed in the recent NATO summit meeting in Bonn. Reagan and his partners have further opened the door to new and greater dangers at the Bonn meeting. The junta's prime minister, Ulusu, who also attended the Bonn meeting, signed the plans of Reagan administration which will drag the world toward a nuclear holocaust. The junta is supporting NATO and U.S. imperialism in a bid to keep the dictatorship alive. It is in favor of U.S. imperialism's death plans. The junta is opening our territory to the AWACS spy planes and the Rapid Deployment Forces which are to be used in the event of a U.S. attack against the Arab countries in the Persian Gulf. In short, a handful of generals and civilian reactionaries are sacrificing our beautiful homeland to U.S. imperialism.

Dear listeners, our beautiful homeland is becoming the tool of such dangerous plans. Is it possible to prevent such a policy? Yes, it is possible. There are forces in our country which can succeed. The only condition for success is the unity of action of all forces which do not want our country and our people to perish, against U.S. imperialism and the military dictatorship it supports.

BRIEFS

HIGHWAY TALKS WITH ITALY -- The Turkey-Italy Joint Highway Transportation Committee met in Rome today. The functioning of the existing highway transportation agreement between the two countries will be assessed during the talks. The committee will also discuss transit passage of transport vehicles and the mutual increasing of entrance fees for trucks, as well as new methods that will facilitate highway transportation between Turkey and Italy. [Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 14 Jun 82 TA]

DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 116 16 June 1982

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Schmidt Discusses Disarmament, Peace Movement J 1
Boelling Denies Schmidt Planning Resignation J 2
CDU/CSU Quarrels in Secret Session Reported J 3
[FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE 14 Jun]

FRANCE

Cheysson Receives Israeli Foreign Minister K 1
Meeting With Mitterrand K 1
Explains Policy on Lebanon K 1
Press Conference K 1
Arab League Condemnation [LE MONDE 15 Jun] K 2
Briefs: Credit To Aid Lebanese K 2

NORDIC AFFAIRS

SWEDEN

Riksdag Votes on Future of Defense Forces P 1
[SVENSKA DAGBLADET 5 Jun]
Navy Fires on Submarine in Territorial Waters P 1

UNITED KINGDOM

Thatcher Outlines Victory in Commons Statement Q 1
Chairs Cabinet Meeting Q 3
Nott Interviewed on End of Hostilities, POW's Q 4
Argentine Jamming of BBC Broadcasts Ends Q 4
Britons in Beirut Urged To Go to Eastern Sector Q 4

GREECE

Turkish Aircraft Violate Airspace 15 Jun S 1
KKE Criticizes Rapprochement With NATO, U.S. S 1
[RIZOSPASTIS 11 Jun]

TURKEY

Foreign Minister Meets Gromyko in New York T 1
Prime Minister Ulusu Returns From Saudi Arabia T 1
Deputy Prime Minister Ozal Meets Al-Qadhdhafi T 1
Spokesman Comments on Papandreou Statements T 2
Embassy Officials in Beirut Reportedly Safe T 2
Turkish Cypriot Delegation Arrives in Ankara T 2

OTHER COUNTRIES

EUROPEAN COMMUNITY

EEC Consults on Ending Sanctions on Argentina U 1

CYPRUS

Turkish Cypriot Delegation Leaves for Turkey [Bayrak Radio] U 1

PORTUGAL

New Minister Comments on Cabinet Changes U 1

SCHMIDT DISCUSSES DISARMAMENT, PEACE MOVEMENT

DW151215 Cologne Westdeutscher Rundfunk Network in German 2010 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Chancellor Helmut Schmidt interview by Reporter Haller in New York; date not given -- recorded]

[Text] [Question] Many people, not only in the FRG, are asking themselves why disarmament matters do not develop any faster. You are probably asking yourself the same thing: Why is it that no faster progress can be achieved?

[Answer] At any rate it is not the fault of the FRG. We are not the sole partner of the East in any of these fields, neither in the field of so-called intercontinental strategic nuclear arms -- this matter is being negotiated solely between Moscow and Washington, we are not involved, we are only involved as advisers -- nor in the field of European medium-range missiles which are negotiated in Geneva between Moscow and Washington. We are not involved at all, we are involved just as advisers. Also, with regard to the Vienna negotiations on the bilateral reduction of conventional armed forces, we do not sit alone across from the Eastern side, we sit there together with a large number of West European governments and the American Government. So it is our fault least of all.

In the course of past years the two world powers found it rather difficult to compromise in all these fields. I think that the lowest point in this respect has been overcome in the meantime, because alongside the Geneva negotiations on medium-range weapons there will be negotiations on intercontinental strategic arms by the end of this month.

I am rather optimistic with regard to a new impetus of the Vienna negotiations on the reduction of conventional forces. The West will launch a common initiative. I am also not without optimism as regards the Madrid follow-up confernce of Helsinki which is supposed to lead to a general European disarmament conference. All this is connected with the fact that the leadership on both sides have realized that disarmament must be pursued independent of ideological quarrels, political interests and mutual accusations which one believes one must voice. This thesis is supported by the fact that Brezhnev and Reagan want to meet this year.

And yet you are right that I belong to the people who are impatient. I have been impatient for 20 years. It was more than 20 years ago that I wrote for the first time about disarmament. I was involved and my involvement has not decreased although I have learned quite a lot about the difficulties. The greatest difficulty lies in the lack of confidence with regard to the honesty of the respective adversary.

[Question] You have talked for a long time about the silence between the big powers. Something seems to be developing there indeed. The great UN principle involving the renunciation of force, however, seems to be endangered at the moment in many different parts of this world where there is shooting and killing.

[Answer] That is true. Both things you said are true. First I want to deal with the first sentence. The silence between both world powers, which I have publicly criticized several times, is coming to an end. Thank God! We have earned quite some merit with regard to its coming to an end. Second, you are right that fighting and killing is going on in many parts of the world, sometimes without participation, or direct participation of the two superpowers. The war between Iran and Iraq is a case in point, and the war in southern Lebanon is another. You can also cite one more example, such as the Ogaden conflict between Ethiopia and Somalia.

[Question] Don't forget the Falkland Islands.

[Answer] No, I did not forget them, I could have named them too. The two world powers are not involved in the Falkland conflict either. The renunciation of force principle of the UN charter is being violated in many cases. Thank God that none of the violators has so far attempted to escalate the armed military conflict to the highest level of a nuclear conflict. But nobody can exclude that danger absolutely. Therefore, in the New York special assembly, I objected to the argument that the only important thing is to avoid a nuclear conflict, as if other military conflicts were less threatening. Millions of people were killed in World War II by conventional arms.

[Question] Here in New York you have repeatedly mentioned the moral significance of pressing for disarmament. That also involves the peace movement.

[Answer] That is correct. A number of positive elements is involved in the peace movement in the whole world. The German media to a certain extent created the impression that the peace movement was something German. There is something German to it, but there is also part of it which lives in the eastern parts of Europe although it cannot publicly display itself there. It also lives in other parts of the world, such as here in New York City, where some 600,000 people demonstrated for peace last weekend.

These people are restless and impatient. I share their impatience. I do not share, however, the occasionally somewhat rash utopian and idealistic judgment that matters could be improved by one-sided disarmament. If the other side does not cooperate, it could lead within a short time to becoming politically dependent on the other side. Disarmament must be a bilateral matter, and it must be agreed to through a signed treaty, for otherwise you cannot rely on it.

[Question] You did not say, however, that passion is on the side of the demonstrators and reason on that of the politicians.

[Answer] The politicians could well be a bit more passionate with regard to disarmament, while the demonstrators could well use a bit more political reason.

BOELLING DENIES SCHMIDT PLANNING RESIGNATION

DW151405 Cologne Deutschlandfunk Network in German to East and West Germany 0448 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Telephone interview with Klaus Boelling, chief of the Federal Press and Information Office, presently in New York, by reporter Kroenig, date not given -- recorded]

[Excerpt] [Question] Chancellor Helmust Schmidt gave a speech yesterday at the UN special assembly which I would like to discuss with you. But first I would like to ask you a question in response to rumors and respective publications: Is the chancellor considering resigning because of the anything but pleasant domestic political situation? You could hear and read such rumors.

[Answer] Chancellor Schmidt did not have any such idea prior to his trip to the New York UN special assembly, nor did he occupy himself with such a though here. The chancellor assumes that the objectively existing difficulties can be overcome by a joint effort of the two parties forming the goverment. He himself is prepared to find realistic solutions for the 1983 budget, and he is certain that the vice chancellor is prepared to make a similar effort. There is no need to deny anything from here because all of it is nonsense.

[Question] So there are no such considerations in this direction for the time after the Hesse elections?

[Answer] The chancellor is firmly determined to do his duty. He is also certain that Vice Chancellor Hans-Dietrich Genscher will stick with this coalition. It is superfluous to deal with rumors whose origin is known in a time of so much foreign-political tension. It is sufficiently known in Colonge, Bonn and everywhere else in the FRG. We have read reports in today's papers with great interest, saying that considerable and serious conflicts exist in the ranks of the opposition.

[Question] Which is nothing bad and which is quite legitimate?

[Answer] That is quite okay, but seems to contain some real material for speculation.

CDU/CSU QUARRELS IN SECRET SESSION REPORTED

DW140925 Frankfurt FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE 14 Jun 82 pp 1, 2

[Report by Bonn correspondent signed FY.]

[Excerpt] Bonn, 13 Jun -- New grave tensions have come up in the CDU leadership with regard to personnel. They seem to involve the candidate for chancellor. This aggravation is demonstrated by the extraordinary step of calling an unscheduled, strictly confidential CDU Presidium session on Saturday in Bonn, without including some of the aides who usually participate. The initiative for the session came from Schleswig-Holsten Minister-President Stoltenberg. It was learned that one of the reasons was Stoltenberg's and the north German CDU's discontent regarding consideration by a Kohl government if a government change were to take place in Bonn in the near future -- the CDU seems to generally expect it now. The unrest in the CDU top echelon was also caused by the fact that the north German CDU assumes that far-reaching agreements have been made secretly between Kohl and the south German CDU/CSU union without informing the north German CDU or seeking their participation.

The tension of the highest leadership body was demonstrated in a session a week ago. In a session behind closed doors after the Hamburg local elections, sharp controversies were taking place and Kohl's leadership was openly criticized by Stoltenberg. Kohl had agreed in a session of all CDU/CSU faction chairman some two weeks ago in Wuerzburg not to recognize graduations from integrated schools in CDU-governed laender. Stoltenberg claimed that in doing this Kohl had violated a presidium decision in favor of recognizing graduation from integrated schools. Stoltenberg charged that Kohl had thus violated party statutes.

The north German CDU is irritated because it feels tht it will not be sufficiently represented in the cabinet in case of taking over the government. This fear is based on the assumption that if a government is set up between the CDU/CSU union and the FDP, the latter will keep the foreign, domestic, economic and food ministries, and that the CSU will also man four ministries with Strauss as finance minister, Zimmermann as defense minister and Schneider as regional planning and housing minister. If Stuecklen remained Bundestag president, a fourth CSU ministerial position would be out because of the CDU/CSU party proportion agreement. Under these circumstances only the Ministry of Justice would remain for the north German CDU, argues the party. Stoltenberg, who was willing to cooperate in a Strauss cabinet as the second man, believes that such a position would not mean considering him properly if a cabinet were set up in the near future.

CHEYSSON RECEIVES ISRAELI FOREIGN MINISTER

LD151202 Paris Domestic Service in French 1100 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Text] Yitzhaq Shamir was received in Paris by Claude Cheysson this morning. The Israeli foreign minister will also be received by Francois Mitterrand this afternoon. Israel would like France to take part in an international force deployed in southern Lebanon. There is talk in Paris that France would take part only if requested to do so by Lebanese authorities. The secretary general of the Foreign Ministry, Francis Gutmann, is going to Beirut this afternoon and Lebanon attaches great importance to his visit.

Meeting With Mitterrand

NC151828 Paris AFP in English 1820 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Text] Paris, 15 Jun (AFP) -- President Francois Mitterrand today insisted in talks with Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhaq Shamir here that Israel immediately withdraws its troops from Lebanon, a presidential spokesman said.

President Mitterrand, who had a 45-minute meeting with the Israeli foreign minister, said the French Government will "support and endorse any process which would allow the legitimate Government of Lebanon to restore Lebanese integrity, unity and independence," Spokesman Michel Varelle said.

Mr Shamir declined to comment on leaving the meeting, but was expected to hold a press conference later. He arrived in France yesterday.

Explains Policy on Lebanon

LD151810 Paris Domestic Service in French 1700 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Text] The Israeli foreign minister [Yitzhaq Shamir] was received for 45 minutes late this afternoon at the Elysee Palace by Francois Mitterrand. Jean-Luc (Esse) questioned him at the press conference he has just given:

[Begin Shamir recording] We are searching for a political solution which will permit our forces to withdraw and return home and will guarantee the security of the citizens in the northern part of our state. That is to say, we would like to have a zone of security in Lebanon where there would be no further possibility for the terrorists to renew their attacks against us. We believe that this is in the interests of peace in our region, in the interests of world peace, and we will find sufficient support to create a (?force) which would constitute a political solution to this problem. [end recording]

Press Conference

NC151917 Paris AFP in English 1912 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Text] Paris, 15 Jun (AFP) -- The Israeli invasion of Lebanon was not to capture the leaders of the Palestine Liberation Organization, Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhaq Shamir said here today.

The capture of Palestinian leaders was secondary to Israel's main objective of "stopping terrorist activities," Mr Shamir said during a press conference following a 45-minute meeting with French President Francois Mitterrand.

The Israeli minister linked any eventual withdrawal from Lebanon to the creation of a Lebanese "security zone." The establishment of such a zone would require the formation of a multinational force in Lebanon, the agreement of a free and independent Lebanese Government and a desire to cooperate with Israeli authorities, Mr Shamir said.

He said Israel was not fighting against the Palestinian people, but against the PLO, whom he called the source of the tragedy.

Mr Shamir also announced that European and Asian allies of the PLO had been captured in Lebanon.

Earlier today, Mr Shamir met with French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson, who said any decision regarding French participation in a multinational force in Lebanon would depend on the wishes of Lebanese authorities. Secretary-General of the Foreign Ministry Francis Gutmann left here today for Beirut to discuss Lebanese views of the situation.

About 1,000 leftist Jews hostileto Israeli action in Lebanon demonstrated outside the Israeli Embassy here during Mr Shamir's stay. Mr Shamir's visit is part of an Israeli diplomatic offensive that includes Prime Minister Menahem Begin's visit to the United States this week.

Arab League Condemnation

PM160809 Paris LE MONDE in French 15 Jun 82 p 4

[Excerpt] Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhaq Shamir was expected in Paris in the afternoon of this Monday, 14 June, for an "official visit" according to the Israeli Embassy, while according to the Quai d'Orsay it is merely a "working visit." Mr Shamir is to have a meeting Tuesday with Interior Minister Gaston Defferre, and that will be followed by a working session. He will hold [apparent line drop] before lunching with Mr Claude Cheysson who [apparent line drop]. He will then hold a press conference and attend a dinner given in his honor by Senate Chairman Alain Poher. The next day he will be entertained to lunch by the diplomatic press.

Although President Mitterrand said in his press conference 9 June that the joint cultural meeting which was to be held in Tel Aviv this Monday was not opportune but that "any discussion is good" and that Mr Shamir will hear "clear and honest talk" in Paris, the visit is viewed in a serious light by the Arab states. Stressing that he was making an "Arab League declaration," Mr M'mahed Yazid, director of the Arab League office in Paris, stated Sunday: "The league and the Arabs are surprised at the announcement of an official visit which comes at a time when Lebanon and Beirut are still burning and the thousands of people killed in the Israeli aggression are still being counted."

BRIEFS

CREDIT TO AID LEBANESE -- France has decided to make available a credit of Fr 500,000 to aid the Lebanese population. This sum will be handed over to the International Red Cross. [Text] [Paris Domestic Service in French 1300 GMT 15 Jun 82 LD]

SWEDEN

RIKSDAG VOTES ON FUTURE OF DEFENSE FORCES

PM101215 Stockholm SVENSKA DAGBLADET in Swedish 5 Jun 82 p 6

[Erik Liden report: "The Defense Forces' Future -- The Most Important Decisions"]

[Text] During an hour of voting the Riksdag made hundreds of decisions on the overall direction the defense forces would take in the next 5 years. The most important were:

MILITARY DEFENSES will receive 83,050 million kronor, or 16,610 million kronor per budget year -- after the Moderate Coalition Party gave its support to the government's proposals. The voting figures were 170-149 with 20 Communists abstaining.

CIVIL DEFENSE will receive 1,780 million kronor, or 312.5 million per budget year. A unanimous decision by the Riksdag.

ECONOMIC DEFENSES will receive 1,050 million kronor, or 210 million per budget year. A Social Democratic amendment was lost by 170 votes to 169.

WARTIME HEALTH CARE will receive 320 million kronor, or 64 million per budget year, after a vote in which the Moderate Coalition Party and the Social Democrats voted through funds for the whole of the 5-year period by 240 to 97. The government had proposed a 2-year allocation of funds.

A NEW PRICE COMPENSATION SYSTEM for inflation and the like was approved in a 319-20 vote. This will amount to 2.5 million kronor next year.

CONSCRIPTS' PAYMENTS were increased in line with the government proposal by 1 krona per day. The Social Democrats' proposal of 4 kronor per day was rejected by the Riksdag in a 170-169 vote.

The Riksdag also rejected the Social Democratic proposal for the amalgamation of the Defense High Command and the high command staffs of the individual services in a 170-169 vote. The motion tabled by the Left Party-Communists and [Social Democrat] Maj-Britt Theorin on the JAS issue lost in a 136-28 vote as did the Social Democrats' amendment which was lost by 172-167.

The question of codetermination for conscripts was returned to the Riksdag Defense Committee after voting ended in a tie at 169-169.

NAVY FIRES ON SUBMARINE IN TERRITORIAL WATERS

NC151130 Paris AFP in English 1100 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Text] Stockholm, 15 Jun (AFP) -- The Swedish Navy fired yesterday on what was believed to be a foreign submarine within Sweden's territorial waters off the coast of Aland Island in the Baltic Sea, a Defense Ministry spokesman said today. A patrol boat with sonar equipment spotted the vessel on Monday afternoon, three days after contact had been made in the same area.

The navy has been scouring Sweden's eastern coast for the past 12 days in search of a submarine reported by several people in the Gulf of Bothnia separating Sweden from Finland, north of the Baltic Sea.

Authorities have been unable to confirm the presence of another foreign submarine spotted off the coast of Vaeddo, just 50 km (32 miles) north of Stockholm, last Wednesday. The vessel returned to international waters without being identified after the navy fired off depth charges.

THATCHER OUTLINES VICTORY IN COMMONS STATEMENT

LD151526 London BBC Domestic Service in English 1431 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Statement by Prime Minister Mrs Margaret Thatcher to the House of Commons -- live]

[Text] With permission, Mr Speaker, I should like to make a statement on the Falkland Islands. Early this morning, in Port Stanley, 74 days after the Falkland Islands were invaded, General Moore accepted from General Menendez the surrender of all the Argentine forces in East and West Falkland [cries of "hear, hear"] together with their arms and equipment. In a message to the commander in chief fleet, General Moore reported: The Falkland Islands are once more under the government desired by their inhabitants. God save the queen.

General Menendez has surrendered some 11,000 men in Port Stanley and some 2,000 in West Falkland. In addition we had already captured, and were holding elsewhere on the islands, 1,800 prisoners, making in all some 15,000 prisoners of war now in our hands.

The advance of our forces in the last few days is the culmination of a determined military effort to compel the Argentine Government to withdraw its forces from the Falkland Islands. On the night of Friday, 11 June, men of 42 and 45 Commandos and the 3d Battalion of the Parachute Regiment, supported by elements of the Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers, mounted an attack on Argentine positions on Mt Harriet, Two Sisters and Mt Longdon. They secured all their objectives and during the next day consolidated their positions in the face of continuing resistance.

I regret to inform the House that 5 Royal Marines, 18 paratroopers and two Royal Engineers lost their lives in those engagements. Their families are being informed. Seventy-two marines and paratroopers were wounded. We have no details of Argentine casualties. Hundreds of prisoners and large quantities of equipment were taken in these operations. The land operations were supported by Harrier attacks and naval gunfire from ships of the task force, which made a major contribution to the success of our troops. In the course of the bombardment, however, HMS Glamorgan was hit by enemy fire. We now know that 13 of the crew died in this attack or are missing.

Throughout Sunday, 13 June, the 3d Commando Brigade maintained pressure on the enemy from their newly secured forward positions. Meanwhile, men of the 5th Infantry Brigade undertook reconnaissance missions in preparation for the next phase of the operation. HMS Hermes flew her 1,000th Sea Harrier mission since leaving the United Kingdom.

The Argentines mounted two air raids that day. The first was turned back by Harriers of the task force before it could reach the Falklands. In the second raid, A-4 aircraft made an unsuccessful bombing run and one Mirage aircraft was shot down.

During the night of Sunday, 13 June, the second phase of the operations commenced. Second Battalion the Parachute Regiment secured Wireless Ridge and the 2d Battalion the Scots Guards took Tumbledown Mountain by first light on Monday the 14th of June. The 1st/7th Gurkhas advanced on Mt William and the Welsh Guards on Sapper Hill.

At 2 p.m., London time, large numbers of Argentine troops were reported to be retreating from Mt William, Sapper Hill and Moody Brook in the direction of Port Stanley. British forces pressed forward to the outskirts of Port Stanley. Large numbers of Argentines threw down their weapons and surrendered.

At 4 o'clock the Argentine garrison indicated its willingness to talk. Orders were given to our forces to fire only in self-defence. Shortly before 5 o'clock a white flag appeared over Port Stanley. Initial contact was made with the enemy by radio. By midnight General Moore and General Menendez were talking.

The surrender of all the Argentine forces on East and West Falkland was agreed at 1 a.m. today, London time. Some of our forces are proceeding to West Falkland to organize the surrender of the Argentine forces there.

We are now tackling urgently the immense practical problems of dealing with the Argentine prisoners on the islands. The weather conditions are severe, permanent accommodation is very limited and much of the temporary accommodation which we had hoped to use was lost when the Atlantic Conveyer was sunk on 25 May. We have already repatriated to Argentina amost 1,400 prisoners, and the further 15,000 now in our custody are substantially more than we had expected. With the help of the International Red Cross we are taking urgent steps to safeguard these prisoners, and hope to evacuate them as soon as possible from the islands, in accordance with our responsibilities under the Geneva convention. This is a formidable task.

We have today sent to the Argentine Government, through the Swiss Government, a message seeking confirmation that Argentina, like Britain, considers all hostilities between us in the South Atlantic -- and not only on the islands themselves -- to be at an end. It is important that this should be established with clarity and without delay. [cries of "hear, hear"]

We must now bring life in the islands back to normal as quickly as possible. Despite the difficult conditions and the onset of the Antarctic winter, mines must be removed. The water supply in Stanley is not working, and there will be other urgent tasks of repair and reconstruction.

Mr Rex Hunt and members of the islands council at present in this country will return as soon as possible. [loud cries of "hear, hear"] Mr Hunt will concentrate on civilian matters; General Moore will be responsible for military matters. They will in effect act as civil and military commissioners and will, of course, work in the closest cooperation.

After all that has been suffered, it is too early to look beyond the beginning of the return to normal life. In due course, the islanders will be able to consider and express their views about the future. When the time is right, we can discuss with them ways of giving their elected representatives an expanded role in the government of the islands.

We shall uphold our commitment to the security of the islands. [loud, indistinct shouts from the backbenches] If necessary, we shall do this alone, but I do not exclude the possibility of associating other countries with their security. Our purpose is that the Falkland Islands should never again be a victim of unprovoked aggression. Recognizing the need for economic development, I have asked Lord Shackleton to update his 1976 report on the economic potential of the islands. He agreed to do this as a matter of urgency, and I am most grateful to him.

Mr Speaker, the House will join me in expressing our deep sense of loss over those who have died, and our sorrow for their families. The final details will not become clear for a few days yet, but we know that some 250 British servicemen and civilians have been killed. They died that others may live in freedom and justice.

The battle of the Falklands was a remarkable military operation, boldly planned, bravely executed and brilliantly accomplished. We owe an enormous debt to the British forces and to the merchant marine. We honor them all. They have been supported by a people united in defense of our way of life and of our sovereign territory. [loud cries of "hear, hear"]

Chairs Cabinet Meeting

LD151206 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1200 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Text] Mrs Thatcher chaired a special meeting of the cabinet today which straight away began tackling the problems of the surrender in the Falklands. Their biggest immediate problem is how to handle thousands of Argentine prisoners who have fallen into British hands.

The word in Whitehall is that the government is proceeding with "extreme prudence" in face of Argentine declarations that the battle for Port Stanley may have been lost, but the war goes on. The government stands by its determination, stated by Mrs Thatcher many times, that the Falklands will be defended against any fresh attacks.

Although the ceasefire has been settled for the Argentine forces on the islands, the government will be pressing for an unequivocal declaration of a complete cessation of hostilities from the junta in Buenos Aires.

The timing of Mrs Thatcher's visit to the United Nations, where she is due to speak at a special session on disarmament tomorrow afternoon, is now likely to be thrown out -- but she is still determined to speak there sometime this week. She may not now leave London as scheduled, but delay her departure until tomorrow. This has still to be fixed.

Cabinet ministers today relayed their congratulations to all British forces on and around the islands through the Chief of the Defence Staff Sir Terence Lewin, who attended a meeting of the "war cabinet" at Downing Street this morning before the full cabinet met.

The mood of the government is said to be one of "great thankfulness" that the fighting on the islands is over, coupled with enormous admiration for the British forces. There is also said to be a "very real awareness" by Mrs Thatcher and her colleagues of the sacrifice in dead and wounded in retaking the islands.

The major immediate problems facing the government and the military authorities on the islands involve the thousands of Argentine troops who have laid down their weapons. They are said to be very short of food and accommodation for them is minimal. Reports from the Falklands today that the Argentines have been breaking the blockade by sea and air are being treated sceptically in Whitehall in the light of the food shortage.

The bulk of the prisoners may be returned to Argentina as soon as possible, but some key figures may be retained until the government has an unequivocal assurance from Buenos Aires that all fighting has ceased.

As firm news of the ceasefire came through last night, Mrs Thatcher and her "war cabinet" colleagues met in her room at the Commons to prepare the dramatic statement she delivered to MP's on the end of the fighting. After her statement, they returned to her room where she and the ministers, who have been in political control of the fighting, had a drink together.

The government is now expected to contact the Argentine junta about the immediate problems facing both sides through Swiss diplomats who have been handling British affairs in Buenos Aires since Argentina severed diplomatic relations with Britain at the time of their invasion.

Meanwhile the victory in the Falklands was compared to the Battle of Agincourt by the lord chancellor, Lord Hailsham, as he left Downing Street. "This was one of the most remarkable feats in the history of arms," he said. "You have to go back to Agincourt. There is nothing that succeeds quite so well as success."

Asked what the atmosphere was like at the cabinet meeting, he said: "We were all very grateful to the prime minister for her leadership, courage and clarity of mind."

NOTT INTERVIEWED ON END OF HOSTILITIES, POW'S

LD152352 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2340 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Text] Defence Secretary John Nott said on television tonight he could not be certain hostilities were at an end until the government received an answer from Argentina to this effect.

Mr Nott, interviewed on BBC and ITN was asked if he thought that what had happened today constituted an end to the war. He replied: "I believe it is, although until we get an answer from Argentina I cannot be certain whether they will continue hostilities from the mainland."

Mr Nott said Britain had a good idea where Argentine submarines lay in the area but added: "I am not saying."

He admitted the number of Argentine troops was more than they expected. "It is higher than we had imagined because we have not got their order of battle," he said. But Mr Nott insisted British intelligence was the best in the world.

He described the final operation as "a brilliant and marvellous performance on behalf of the whole of the country."

Asked about repatriation of the prisoners he said: "We must wait to see whether the Argentines wish to cease hostilities." He said that if they did not under the Geneva convention, they were prisoners of war and Britain had a right to retain them.

"The Geneva convention is very clear on the rights of prisoners and we would be very scrupulous in meeting every requirements of the convention," he said.

ARGENTINE JAMMING OF BBC BROADCASTS ENDS

TA160411 London BBC World Service in English 0400 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] The jamming by Argentina of BBC broadcasts to the country and to the Falkland Islands has ceased. Engineers in Britain say it ended before the scheduled transmissions yesterday of the BBC English language program "Calling the Falklands" and the BBC's Spanish service to Argentina. The jamming began on 3 May and initially affected the Spanish service before it was extended. Recently it became more intensive, but its not clear how effective it has been.

BRITONS IN BEIRUT URGED TO GO TO EASTERN SECTOR

LD150408 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0330 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Text] Britons in Beirut endangered by Israeli attacks on the Lebanon are being warned by the Foreign Office in London to move from the Western sector of the city, controlled by the Palestine Liberation Organisation, to the eastern sector.

The F.O. message was broadcast by the BBC World Service last night to the 2,500 Britons in the Lebanese capital. British citizens were advised to contact the Cyprus Airways office in East Beirut where a British Embassy representative was available.

The message was prompted by fears of a major attack by Israel against Palestinian targets in the west of the city, and it was broadcast three times during the night.

TURKISH AIRCRAFT VIOLATE AIRSPACE 15 JUN

NC151942 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1830 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Text] The government spokesman announced that Turkish aircraft violated Greek national airspace this morning. The Greek Government asked for explanations from Ankara on the basis of the moratorium arranged in Bonn. Press reports state that these violations took place in Portolagos, Ayios Evstratios and Lesvos.

It is recalled that Prime Minister Papandreou, both after his return from Bonn and at the briefing he gave to the armed forces in northern Greece, stressed that the implementation of the moratorium, that is, the moratorium between Turkey and Greece concerning provocative statements and acts, depends on Ankara and not on Athens. Turkey is the one that repeatedly provokes and not our country.

It is known that Foreign Minister Kharalambopoulos has summoned the Turkish ambassador, Mr Alacam, and asked for explanations on these violations. At the same time, Deputy Foreign Minister Kapsis summoned U.S. Ambassador Stearns and FRG Ambassador Sigrist and briefed them on the issue.

KKE CRITICIZES RAPPROCHEMENT WITH NATO, U.S.

NC111708 Athens RIZOSPASTIS in Greek 11 Jun 82 p 1

[10 June statement released in Athens by the press bureau of the KKE Central Committee]

[Text] The KKE has categorically stressed that the government is following the wrong path by demanding "guarantees" from the Americans and NATO. These "guarantees," even if given, have no practical value. They proclaim the Americans as regulators of area problems and have very dangerous consequences. These observations are confirmed by life itself.

Following the stubborn refusal of the Americans to give even these verbal "guarantees," the government retracts and now refuses to demand these "guarantees" limiting its efforts to an abstract expression in some NATO communique noting that "the borders of member countries are inviolable even by members themselves."

It becomes obvious that by insisting on moving within the Atlantic alliance's framework, the government -- instead of exerting pressure on NATO as it claims to do -- is forcing itself to make bigger concessions. It is characteristic that in his statements NATO Secretary General Luns openly scoffs at Greek foreign policy and cynically presents Greece as a "hooked fish" of the Atlantic alliance.

As evidenced by recent international experience, both in the Middle East -- with the Camp David [agreement], the price of which is now being paid by the Palestinians and Lebanese -- and the Falklands crisis, the nomination of Americans as arbitrators of problems has catastrophic results for the people.

The government must weigh the consequences of its tactics. Only a nationally independent policy without bases and out of NATO would have our people's resolute support, could shield our homeland and secure for it the essential international support in all peace-loving countries so that it might defend its security and rights.

[Dated] 10 June 1982

FOREIGN MINISTER MEETS GROMYKO IN NEW YORK

TA152208 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 2000 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Text] Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen, who is currently in New York for the UN General Assembly meetings on disarmament, met with Soviet Minister of Foreign Affairs Andrey Gromyko. Disarmament issues, international issues concerning the two countries and bilateral relations were discussed during the meeting, which was held at the UN headquarters.

Turkmen also met with Bangladesh Minister of Foreign Affairs Doha today and exchanged views on various international matters and bilateral relations.

Turkmen, who is continuing his bilateral contacts, will meet with Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs Emilio Colombo this evening and UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar tomorrow morning. He will address the UN General Assembly tomorrow and depart New York on 17 June.

PRIME MINISTER ULUSU RETURNS FROM SAUDI ARABIA

TA152209 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 2000 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Text] Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu, who went to Riyadh yesterday to extend condolences on the death of Saudi King Khalid ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz, returned to Ankara this evening. He was received at Esenboga Airport by Culture and Tourism Minister Ilhan Evlyaoglu, Ankara Governor Mustafa Gonul, Ankara Martial Law Commander Lt Gen Cevcep Ergun and Mayor Suleyman Onder.

In a statement at Esenboga Airport, Ulusu said that he extended condolences to King Fahd, who received him in Riyadh today, on behalf of Head of State Gen Kenan Evren and the Turkish Government on the death of Khalid ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz. Ulusu noted that he congratulated King Fahd and wished him success in the most responsible post in Saudi Arabia, adding that he also extended his condolences to Crown Prince 'Abdullah ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz, the members of the Saudi Government and the royal family.

Ulusu continued: I would like to use this opportunity to reiterate my belief that the existing relations of friendship and cooperation between Saudi Arabia and Turkey will continue to strengthen and develop under the administration of King Fahd.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER OZAL MEETS AL-QADHDHAFI

TA151734 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Text] State and Deputy Prime Minister Turgut Ozal, who is currently conducting contacts in the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah, has been received by Libyan Chief of State Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi. In a statement after the meeting last night, Al-Qadhdhafi said that he attaches importance to the friendship between Turkey and Libya and wants mutual efforts to be increased to further develop the relations between the two countries.

Today, Ozal held separate meetings with the Libyan General People's Committee secretary, 'Aziz at-Talhi; Heavy Industries Minister 'Umar al-Muntasir; Planning Minister Fawzi al-Shakshuki and Social Security Minister Ibrahim Hasan. Later, a meeting was held with Ozal, Libyan Housing Minister Muhammad al-Manqush and Hasan. The economic and commercial relations between Turkey and Libya were discussed during the meeting and the ways of overcoming certain difficulties of implementation were dwelt upon.

The official talks between Turkey and Libya will end tomorrow.

SPOKESMAN COMMENTS ON PAPANDREOU STATEMENTS

TA151437 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1400 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Statement by Foreign Ministry Spokesman Ambassador Nazmi Akiman in connection with Greek Prime Minister Papandreou's remarks on relations with Turkey at the NATO summit in Bonn, 15 June -- recorded]

[Text] No detailed talks have been held by the Turkish delegation with Greek Prime Minister Papandreou in Bonn. The only matter on which the two sides reached an identity of views was to express their hope that the atmosphere reigning in relations between Turkey and Greece would improve. For the realization of such an atmosphere, the first step should be to avoid statements that do not reflect the truth and that could cause misunderstandings. It is certainly out of the question for Turkey to diverge from its views and stands concerning Greece. It is our understanding that at this stage the two parties should act in a way that will contribute to improving the existing climate between the two countries and to finding ways that will revive the process of negotiations between them.

EMBASSY OFFICIALS IN BEIRUT REPORTEDLY SAFE

TA151703 Ankara ANATOLIA in Turkish 1550 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 15 Jun (AA) -- Foreign Ministry Spokesman Ambassador Nazmi Akiman has said that "Turkey is continuing its (?stance) as the only factor of stability in the Middle East."

Pointing out that "the situation in the Middle East has reached dangerous dimensions and Turkey is surrounded by fire," Akiman said that "Turkey is alert and careful. We are carefully assessing the situation."

Akiman noted that during the Israeli attack on Lebanon, the Turkish Embassy in Beirut could not be contacted for some 40 hours due to a power outage and said:

"We have been coming across reports that Turkey has lost its contact with its embassy in Beirut. This must not be misunderstood. Although Israel is bombarding the vicinity of our embassy, the members of our embassy are in good health. There is no cause for concern. We were unable to communicate with our embassy for some time due to the power outage during the bombing. However, we established contact through the Red Cross in Geneva. According to latest reports, the window panes and frames of our embassy were damaged. The morale of our officials there is high."

Akiman stated that there is no intention to recall the members of our Beirut Embassy.

TURKISH CYPRIOT DELEGATION ARRIVES IN ANKARA

TA152213 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 2000 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Text] A delegation headed by TFSC Prime Minister Mustafa Cagatay arrived in Ankara tonight as the guest of Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu. The delegation, which is comprised of seven TFSC ministers and three deputies, was received at Ankara's Esenboga Airport by State and Deputy Prime Minister Zeyyat Baykara and Culture and Tourism Minister Ilhan Evliyaoglu as well as the chief representative of the TFSC in Ankara, Cemal Askin.

In a statement at the airport, Cagatay expressed pleasure at visiting Turkey, adding that his delegation will study important economic development projects and benefit from these in the economic development of the TFSC.

In his turn, Baykara said that the TFSC is taking a great leap forward in the path to economic development and expressed the conviction that the Turkish Cypriot community will attain prosperity in the future. Baykara also noted that the cooperation between Turkey and the TFSC is continuing to develop.

EUROPEAN COMMUNITY

EEC CONSULTS ON ENDING SANCTIONS ON ARGENTINA

NC151140 Paris AFP in English 1118 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Text] Brussels, 15 Jun (AFP) -- The 10 countries of the European Economic Community (EEC) are in consultations on ending the economic sanctions against Argentina which the community imposed two and a half months ago when the Argentinians seized the Falkland Islands, the Belgian Foreign Ministry said today. The decision to hold consultations was taken today after the announcement of a cease-fire by British and Argentine forces on the islands. Initially the EEC halted imports from Argentina on April 10 for one month, in solidarity with Britain. In May the sanctions were extended briefly without participation by Ireland and Italy. Then on May 24 the "eight" extended them again for an indefinite period.

CYPRUS

TURKISH CYPRIOT DELEGATION LEAVES FOR TURKEY

TA151638 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 1530 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Text] A 13-man delegation headed by Prime Minister Mustafa Cagatay flew to Ankara today as the guest of Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu.

In a statement before his departure, Cagatay said that during its stay in Turkey, the delegation will have the opportunity, through various briefings, to learn the political, economic and social problems facing Turkey. Pointing out that the members of the delegation will observe the latest developments in Turkey, particularly the economic situation and the various investments and projects, Cagatay said: Despite the difficult conditions, Turkey is taking significant steps toward surmounting obstacles through the consistent, decisive and conscious measures it adopted. Seeing these steps on the spot and learning about them from officials will help us in our efforts to strengthen the economy of the TFSC. Noting that the countries are subject to special conditions, particularly in the economic field, Cagatay said that joint efforts and actions are necessary to solve certain problems and that joint efforts will be discussed during his contacts in Turkey. Cagatay expressed the hope that his visit will yield positive results.

PORTUGAL

NEW MINISTER COMMENTS ON CABINET CHANGES

LD122338 Lisbon in Portuguese to Europe 1900 GMT 12 Jun 82

[Excerpt] In an interview today, the new minister for parliamentary affairs, Marcelo Rebelo de Sousa, stated that any attempt by the president of the republic to dissolve parliament would be considered a constitutional coup d'etat.

The minister was referring to possibilities recently aired by some political analysts in light of pressures from Socialists and Communists for the dissolution of parliament and early general elections. He pointed out that the question was merely hypothetical and that there were no indications that such a development might occur in the near future. But if it did, he added, it would have unforseeable internal consequences because the dissolution of parliament at a time when it has started the revision of the constitution would render the approval of the new constitution not viable for months to come. Marcelo de Sousa also said that government's action in the recent past had been reduced by 60 or 70 percent due to the need to meet political challenges that left little time for the tasks of government. In his opinion the present reshuffle is a positive sign of the vitality of the Social Democratic Party of which he is a member. He is also critical of Gen Ramalho Eanes for delaying his assent to the new appointments.

DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 117 17 June 1982

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Genscher Hosts Dinner for PRC Foreign Minister J 1
Schmidt Meets With Huang Hua J 1
Minister Defends NATO's Nuclear Deterrence J 1
Lambsdorff Reacts to U.S. Steel Imports Levy J 3
Rejects U.S. Criticism J 4
Finance Minister Views New EC Exchange Rates J 4
SPD's Bahr Praises Soviet UN Announcement J 4
CDU/CSU Rejection J 5
Spokesman Examines Mideast, Falklands Issues J 5
Briefs: Supplementary Budget J 5

FRANCE

Mitterrand Interviewed Before Austrian Visit K 1
U.S. Envoy Will Have To 'Explain' Remarks K 3
[LE MONDE 13-14 Jun]
Hernu: Armed Forces Must Share Austerity Burden K 3
[LE MONDE 10 Jun]
Cheysson, Gromyko Hold Meeting in New York K 4
[LE MONDE 13-14 Jun]

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Spadolini Meets With Gromyko in New York L 1
Cuts Short Trip, Returns Home L 1
Colombo Comments on End of Falklands Conflict L 2
Pope Holds Talks With PLO Observer in Geneva L 2
Industry Minister Interviewed on Economic Policy L 2
[L'EXPRESSO 6 Jun]

PORTUGAL

PCP Statement on PSP Severance of Relations M 1
[AVANTE! 9 Jun]
Briefs: PCP Delegation to Bulgaria; M 2
Portuguese-Angolan Agreement

NORDIC AFFAIRS

FINLAND

Prime Minister Comments on Soviet Announcement P 1

NORWAY

AFTENPOSTEN Views Labor Party Policy Split [10 Jun] P 1

UNITED KINGDOM

Pym Interviewed on Cease-Fire, Falklands Future Q 1
Text of Argentine Surrender Document Published Q 4
Health Problems Endangering Argentine POW's Q 5
MP Views Future of NATO Defense Spending Q 6
[THE DAILY TELEGRAPH 15 Jun]
Defense White Paper on Navy Cuts Expected Q 7
[THE DAILY TELEGRAPH 11 Jun]
Bangladesh Leader Meets With Thatcher 15 Jun [Dacca] Q 8

CYPRUS

Kiprianou Position on Dialogue Reiterated R 1
SFRY's Stambolic Reaffirms Support for Cyprus R 1
Denktas Objects to Greek Statement at UN [Bayrak Radio] R 1
Atalay on Extension of UNFICYP Mandate [Bayrak Radio] R 2
Atakol Decries Greek Cypriot 'Political Embargo' R 2
[Bayrak Radio]

GREECE

Kharalambopoulos Departs for New York 16 Jun S 1
Papandreou's Illness Delays Air Exercise S 1
Envoy on UNFICYP Mandate, Cyprus Dialogue S 1
[TO VIMA 16 Jun]
Florakis To Attend Dimitrov Celebrations S 1
Briefs: Soviet Ship Repairs S 1

TURKEY

Turkmen Addresses UN Session on Disarmament T 1
Turkish Cypriot Delegation Visits Ulusu T 1
Ulusu Statement [Bayrak Radio] T 1
Irmak Rejects Political Groupings in Assembly T 2
Suspension of U.S. Aid to Israel Urged T 2
[TERCUMAN 11 Jun]
PLO Envoy on Lebanon Conflict, Turkish Support T 3
[TERCUMAN 10 Jun]

OTHER COUNTRIES

AUSTRIA

Chancellor Kreisky Criticizes Israeli Labor Party U 1
[ARBEITER-ZEITUNG 16 Jun]

NETHERLANDS

Economics Minister Given Social Affairs Portfolio U 1
[NRC HANDELSBLAD 12 Jun]

SPAIN

French President To Visit Madrid 22-24 Jun U 1

GENSCHER HOSTS DINNER FOR PRC FOREIGN MINISTER

LD151642 Hamburg DPA in German 1508 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Excerpt] Bonn, 15 Jun (DPA) -- At a dinner at the Goedesburg Castle in honor of the Chinese foreign minister this evening, Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher paid tribute to the friendly relations with the PRC and emphasized the great measure of mutual understanding. He also stressed the widespread interest shown by the German public in cultural relations.

Hua Huang and CDU Chairman Helmut Kohl today emphasized West European stability as an important element in global security. A CDU spokesman said that Kohl will visit Beijing as soon as possible.

Schmidt Meets With Huang Hua

LD161652 Hamburg DPA in German 1500 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 15 Jun (DPA) -- Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt today received Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua, who conveyed greetings from the Chinese leadership. Both Schmidt and Huang Hua expressed satisfaction at the state of German-Chinese relations. The chancellor briefed Huang Hua on the course of the latest NATO summit meeting in Bonn.

Huang Hua arrived on an official visit to Bonn on Monday, and had detailed political talks with his German opposite number, Hans-Dietrich Genscher, party chairmen and Federal President Karl Carstens and today also visited the Rhineland-Palatinate. He gave a farewell dinner in the Chinese Embassy this evening for his German hosts and will go on to Luxembourg tomorrow.

MINISTER DEFENDS NATO'S NUCLEAR DETERRENCE

DW161021 Hamburg ARD Television Network in German 1900 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Interview with Defense Minister Dr Hans Apel by reporter Wolfgang Moser in the program "Report"; date and place not given -- videotaped]

[Text] [Question] There were some 300,000 peace demonstrators in Bonn, 500,000 in Rome and 700,000 in New York. The demand of millions of citizens for less armament, particularly less nuclear armament, must ring quite loudly in the ears of a defense minister who considers nuclear armament indispensable. Am I right in assuming that the NATO summit in Bonn has confirmed that you and your colleagues agree that everything should remain as it is, such as nuclear deterrence, NATO's dual decision and so on?

[Answer] You cannot say at all that everything should remain as it is. In connection with statements of President Reagan, this summit has made it clear that NATO is interested in deeply cutting the nuclear armament of both military blocs, of the East as well as the West. We see very well the necessity to push back the nuclear element. It is not realistic, however, to believe that you could immediately do without the nuclear parts of deterrence, of safeguarding peace. Last but not least, because even if we would ban the nuclear element, it would remain in the heads of the people and in the instruction books, so that the possibility would remain to arm oneself with nuclear weapons in an emergency.

[Question]; NATO strategy, which in case of war envisages or does not rule out the use of nuclear arms, is considered as doubtful not only by the peace movement, but also more and more by military representatives and politicians, including those of the CDU.

I would like to quote your former colleague McNamara, former U.S. secretary of defense, who is certainly not a dreamer. He said the following: Sooner or later deterrence will fail and if we, that is NATO, follow our first-strike policy in such a case, Western civilization will probably be destroyed. What does that mean to you? Is that panicking or is it the word of a man who is courageous enough to say the truth?

[Answer] Well, he is courageous enough to say the truth. But the truth looks somewhat different for the Europeans. Let us assume there would be a conventional conflict in Europe. If this conventional conflict were not stopped immediately, it would have the same result for Europe and particularly the FRG, namely the destruction of our civilization. It is, therefore, important that no first strike of any weapon should take place. The military blocs should realize that conflicts cannot be solved with military means, regardless which military means. The question is how to do this. Do we need nuclear arms to do it or not?

I say that for the time being we need the nuclear element for at least two reasons. First, because we are conventionally so much weaker than the Warsaw Pact. Those who want to follow McNamara must follow him also with regard to other problems such as massively strengthening NATO's conventional armament. Second, we need this also at present so that the risk of preserving peace will remain undivided in the Western camp. American policy must at all times take account of the fact that if deterrence fails, if our peace policy should fail, if there is a shooting war, then America too bears this risk. And America bears it particularly at present because of the possibility of nuclear extension of a conflict.

[Question] Is it not just a question of belief whether the Americans would really be prepared to risk their own existence because of the FRG?

[Answer] It is not a question of belief, but a matter of sober assessment of interests. If you omit the fact that NATO is naturally an alliance of similar values, NATO is particularly strong because joint interests are also being represented, and because joint interests are being pursued with regard to third parties. This is the best putty to hold the alliance together.

[Question] You say that conventional defense as suggested by McNamara as an alternative to a first nuclear strike, thorough conventional defense would cost more. Aren't the cost problems caused by the fact that the Bundeswehr is the wrong army, as more and more former high-ranking Bundeswehr officers maintain? Instead of buying Leopard tanks which are very expensive -- DM5 million apiece -- we should better have procured antitank weapons. Would not a consistent defense policy be cheaper and call for less personnel? Do we have the wrong army?

[Answer] We have the right army if you want what we want, namely the peace-safeguarding function of the Bundeswehr and its allies here in Central Europe in an advanced position at the FRG borders. The principle is defense from advanced positions [vorneverteidigung) and not forward defense (vorwaertsverteidigung). If you consider other structures of the Bundeswehr, and they are being suggested by those you have mentioned, you must be prepared to first yield great areas of the FRG to the attacker in order to recapture them later. I cannot imagine at all how we could make such a concept clear to the German citizen, a concept aiming for defense deep in the country. I cannot imagine that this could have a deterrent effect. Deterrence must begin in such an advanced position that the risk for the attacker would be great.

[Question] But McNamara says deterrence will fail. He does not say it could fail, he says it will fail sooner or later. It means that the alternative for the Bundeswehr in case of an attack is nuclear defense if we do not want to capitulate. This would again mean destruction of the country.

[Answer] No, no. It would be a wrong interpretation of NATO stretegy to maintain that we want to or may replace conventional weakness with nuclear deterrence.

[Question] That is the doctrine.

[Answer] It is not the doctrine. The doctrine says that we must be conventionally strong enough to defend ourselves, but with the possibility to use other means if conventional deterrence fails.

[Question] If the Soviets will have advanced to the Rhine in 4 days, which happens in most Bundeswehr maneuvers.

[Answer] It does not happen in most Bundewehr maneuvers. In any case: Conventional defense cannot be replaced by nuclear defense. This is point number 1. Point number 2 is: I reject it being claimed with absolute certainty that deterrence will fail. With what certainty can you make such statements? After all we have experienced 37 years of peace, or of a nonwar situation in Europe, despite or maybe just because of nuclear deterrence.

[Question] Dr Apel, something that proved correct for 37 years -- nobody doubts it because it is proven by realities -- can be obsolete some day. When NATO was established, the West was by far superior to the East. Allegedly it is not so now. In addition, the development of arms technology has experienced something like a revolution. In short, the danger of war, even by accident, has grown enormously. Must not a strategy which would be suicidal in such a case be replaced as quickly as possible by something more reasonable?

[Answer] Well, there must be further development of NATO strategy because of arms technology and because of the fears and worries of many citizens which are also a political reality. But please let us note the fact that NATO, which has changed its strategy once before, needed 10 years to change from massive nuclear retaliation to a most refined flexible response, some 10 years!

[Question] Honestly, would such a strategy debate have taken place without the peace movement?

[Answer] You cannot see it like this. Questions of citizens certainly play a great role in a democracy. That is the strength of the democracy. As a politician one must answer them. But I believe that the debate is based on general developments which have gone on for a long time. I think it will be sped up by the peace movement and the critical youth.

LAMBSDORFF REACTS TO U.S. STEEL IMPORTS LEVY

LD121316 Hamburg DPA in German 0915 GMT 12 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn 12 Jun (DPA) -- Federal Minister for Economic Affairs Otto Graf Lambsdorff has expressed his regret about the decision of the U.S. Department of Commerce to introduce compensatory import levies for state-subsidized steel products from seven EEC countries. On Saturday, in Bonn, the minister underlined the political aim of the Federal Government of favoring an (?accelerated) reduction in subsidies in Europe. He spoke against suggestions within the EC that the trade conflict with the United States with regard to steel should be solved by voluntary limitations on supplies.

Lambsdorff said that the European steel producers affected by the American compensatory levies had the possibility of having the U.S. measure investigated within the International Tariff and Trade Agreement, GATT. This way would be considerably better than agreements on voluntary curbs on trade between the United States and Europe, which in principle are not positively different from subsidies and compensatory levies.

Rejects U.S. Criticism

LD141624 Hamburg DPA in German 1454 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 14 Jun (DPA) -- The federal minister of economic affairs, Count Otto Lambsdorff, has defended the Federal Republic against American charges that it had allowed itself to be blackmailed into making concessions in Eastern trade owing to the military threat from the East. "There can be no question of that," he told an anniversary meeting in Bonn today of the German Marshall Fund of the United States. "Cooperation is not capitulation," he said.

He pointed out that German trade with the East accounted for only about 5 percent of total exports and was far below trade with Switzerland and Austria. German economic relations with the East had not been stepped up, contrary to economic logic, in support of any paramount political objectives. But they were an important contribution to stabilizing East-West relations. "I believe," he said, "that one cannot conduct successful arms control negotiations if one breaks off cooperation in all other fields."

FINANCE MINISTER VIEWS NEW EC EXCHANGE RATES

DW140831 Hamburg ARD Television Network in German 1800 GMT 13 Jun 82

[Interview with Finance Minister Manfred Lahnstein by reporter Bainczyk; date and place not given -- videotaped]

[Text] [Question] Three currency adaptations in three quarters of a year with higher exchange rate changes, is that not proof of an increasing burden to be carried by the European exchange system"

[Answer] The European currency system adaptations certainly have followed each other rather quickly. It demonstrates how much West European economies are affected by world economic difficulties, because these economies are much more dependent on world economy than, for example, the United States economy. Yet I do not want to make critical remarks here with regard to the European economic system. The system has stood its test, particularly in this time, due to the outstanding linkage between the possibility to change exchange rates and the necessity to take respective economic, monetary and financial-political measures. It pertains particularly to those who want to decrease their exchange rates or devaluate their currencies, if you want to put it that way.

SPD'S BAHR PRAISES SOVIET UN ANNOUNCEMENT

LD161058 Hamburg DPA in German 0953 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 16 Jun (DPA) -- The Soviet Union's announcement that it will not be the first to use nuclear weapons was today described by the Social Democratic disarmament expert Egon Bahr as a first-rate confidence-building measure. Bahr said on Deutschlandfunk that this unilateral prior concession by Moscow created good preconditions for negotiations.

Bahr said that the announcement made in the UN General Assembly's special session on disarmament in New York does, however, have its limitations. Even if the United States follows the Soviet action, the arms spiral is still not halted, for the two sides could go on producing nuclear weapons. Moreover, the Soviets' considerable arms in the conventional sphere must not be overlooked. Disarmament talks are still important and irreplaceable.

CDU/CSU Rejection

LD161306 Hamburg DPA in German 1141 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 16 Jun (DPA) -- The CDU/CSU described the Soviet proposal not to be the first to use nuclear weapons as a trick. The opposition's foreign policy spokesman, Alois Mertes, and the chairman of the Defense Committee, Werner Marx, also expressed amazement at SPD disarmament expert Egon Bahr who called the offer a confidence-building measure.

Mertes said that the proposal presented by Gromyko was clearly aimed at destroying the credibility of the American guarantee of security in Europe. If Bahr judges this to be a Soviet prior concession, this is a "stab in the back to the Atlantic alliance's policy of peace."

The Soviet proposal clearly implies that Moscow reserves for itself the first use of conventional weapons, said Mertes. In this assessment he refers to Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt who stated to the United Nations that anyone wanting to concentrate on a comprehensive ban on the first use of certain weapons seems to be saying that there could be other wars. But this should not be accepted.

Mertes and Marx also see in the Soviet move an attempt by Moscow to divert attention away from its conventional superiority. Marx said that it is indicative that Gromyko made no mention of U.S. President Ronald Reagan's proposal which includes the essential fields of disarmament.

SPOKESMAN EXAMINES MIDEAST, FALKLANDS ISSUES

LD161642 Hamburg DPA in German 1424 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 16 Jun (DPA) -- In the Federal Government's view there can be no mere return to the status quo in Lebanon. This was how Deputy Government spokesman Lothar Ruehl reacted today in Bonn to questions of whether the Federal Government, in addition to the withdrawal of the Israeli invasion troops, also demands the withdrawal of all other foreign forces from the country. Ruehl said that the Federal Republic makes no demands in connection with the Israeli intervention exceeding those of the United Nations or the EC.

Ruehl said that the Lebanon crisis and the ending of the hostilities over the Falkland Islands were the subject of a report by Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher at today's cabinet meeting. The Federal Government hopes that the territorial integrity, sovereignty and independence of Lebanon can be restored and the Middle East states' mutual relations do not suffer lasting damage as a result of the Israeli attack. Ruehl said in this connection that the self-determination of the Palestinian people must also be "dealt with."

It is said in Bonn that the EC foreign ministers in Luxembourg on Sunday plan to discuss lifting the boycott against Argentina following the end of the fighting over the Falkland Islands. Consultations by the partner states are already underway, the Foreign Ministry spokesman said. Ruehl refused to give any information as to how long the boycott, which is indefinite in principle, will last.

BRIEFS

SUPPLEMENTARY BUDGET -- Bonn, 16 Jun (DPA) -- The federal cabinet today approved the supplementary budget for 1982. According to the Federal Finance Ministry, it increases the budget this year by DM7 billion to 33.86 billion. The supplement is necessary in particular because of an incorrect estimation of unemployment. Additional expenditure for the Federal Labor Office amounts to DM5 billion. Added to this are tax revenue shortfalls amounting to a good DM2 billion. Other additional loads which have arisen are to be balanced through savings, among other things, in interest outlay and through increases in administrative revenue. [Hamburg DPA in German 1218 GMT 16 Jun 82 LD]

MITTERRAND INTERVIEWED BEFORE AUSTRIAN VISIT

AU161040 Vienna Domestic Television Service in German 2000 GMT 15 Jun 82

["Exclusive interview" with French President Mitterrand in Paris, date not given -- recorded; beginning of answers in French with German translation superimposed]

[Excerpts] [Question] Mr President, your visit is the first by a French president to Austria since Napoleon I -- why is this visit so short?

[Answer] Oh, one is complaining already. It is the first visit. Well, I am not responsible for the omissions of my predecessors. In my opinion they had [words indistinct]. I am going now, because I want to go. It was not planned originally, but there was a standing invitation. I am very happy to be able to go to this country, to become acquinted with its people and especially to meet with Chancellor Kreisky, who has been a friend for many years. But I did not want to wait as long as would have been required for an official visit with all the formalities and protocol requirements. Hence we agreed that I would come quickly, and later would come again for a fully official visit.

[Question] How are the relations between the two countries in your opinion? Are there common interests?

[Answer] They are good relations. One could only regret that they are not more extensive. The existing relations are firmly anchored and good. On various occasions I have had consultations with leading Austrian politicians. We can build on the foundation of good relations. I only believe that we should make these relations even more active.

[Question] Is Austria still an example or even a model for France?

[Answer] It is a good example....

[Question] But not a model?

[Answer] Well, that would perhaps be an overstatement, because the historical, political conditions, the environment is different in both countries. But Austria is a good example of conscientious work, which in most fields has been carried out with a lot of persistence and has produced undeniable results, gratifying results.

[Question] Is France now closer to the United States? Has it become more "Atlantic" than it was under your predecessors?

[Answer] Such a definition is rather pointless in my opinion. My predecessors were already the representatives of France. They were the allies of the United States, and we have remained allies. We are complying with this alliance. On the one hand, our security is guaranteed through this defensive alliance, on the other it is ensured through our own armament, our nuclear weapons. We will continue to pursue this course. Well -- better relations, less good relations -- sometimes there are human problems which arise. There is the type of relations between chiefs of state, diplomats -- but this a fact that France is a partner in an alliance, and that it complies with its obligations within this alliance. This does not prevent us, however, from telling the United States what we think, if I disagree with this or that measure. This is what I have done, especially in the case of Latin America.

[Question] One has the impression that the peace movement in France is not as strong as it is in other countries -- what is your opinion about this?

[Answer] There is no deep-rooted peace movement in France. It is known that the French Government -- that is a matter of course -- has always advocated peace, and that -- which is less a matter of course -- it has always made every effort to use all chances for peace.

This means, in other words, that we are faithful to our alliance, but we also have a defense of our own. But, as I said last week, we remain open to dialogue with the USSR and the East European countries. We have not shut any doors. We have our convictions, our aims, our strategy. We condemn overarmament [ueberruestung], especially if we are threatened by it. And I Believe that public opinion in France is aware of this, and this is why there is no real reason for a peace movement in the sense you mean. Of course there are movements which refer to this ideology, that is quite normal.

[Question] Why do you not want French nuclear weapons to be included in the disarmament talks?

[Answer] At the present stage of the negotiations between the USSR and the United States -- these negotiations are making very slow progress and I would welcome it if they were making faster headway -- the issue at stake is a limitation of overarmament, and not yet a genuine limitation which can lead to disarmament. I am not playing with words here, but the superpowers are actually only negotiating about the way to avoid further overarmament. France is in a different situation. France has made great endeavors to keep its armament at the deterrence level, and it has a strong defensive armament designed to compel any potential opponent to respect our independence -- but no more than that. Thus we do not have any safety margin -- such a margin could develop and be used only if there were an essential disarmament bythe superpowers. The superpowers have a potential which permits them to annihilate one another several times over. Hence France cannot enter into this discussion, because it does not involve the same problems.

[Question] Mr President, at present there are quite serious conflicts in the world. Do you think that the Falklands crisis is the first North-South armed conflict?

[Answer] I do not think so. There has already been a North-South conflict, between the USSR and Afghanistan, a conflict which is still going on. On the other hand, I believe that it would be exaggerated to depict the Falklands crisis as a North-South conflict. There is no population that was oppressed by a country from the North, since the Falklands population is virtually 100 percent British. If this war threatens to escalate and to become more and more a war polarizing the hopes and aims of the South -- especially of South America -- vis-a-vis the former colonial power Great Britain, then this element can of course become stronger. The caricature could show certain similarities with the reality, but we have not come that far yet.

What is involved here is primarily rights that must be respected. First of all the right which any civilized nation must respect: Problems must not be solved unilaterally by force. Argentina has resorted to forcible attack, and that is where it went wrong. Now, as far as the question of sovereignty is concerned, this is something that can be discussed. We have from the very beginning supported the UN Security Council Resolution No 502. We believe that this resolution demarcates the limits of reason. France is in solidarity with Great Britain, whose national pride and interests were attacked. However, France will not allow itself to be dragged into operations that would lead to a rupture with Latin America, which is very near to our heart.

[Question] Our last question concerns the Middle East problem: Chancellor Kreisky, with whom you perhaps have not always agreed regarding this issue, has been stressing for a long time that lasting peace without the Palestinians is impossible. Do you believe that after the Israeli aggression in Lebanon and in view of the extent of the operations, peace is still possible at all?

[Answer] I cannot tell you that. I desire this peace, but it seems to become more remote every day. Nevertheless I keep hoping that it will become possible.

As president of the French Republic, however, I cannot confine myself to expressing wishes, and I will do everything in my power to bring about the mutual advance [vorhergehende] recognition between the Israelis in the state of Israel which has been recognized by the United Nations and which has a right to safe and recognized borders, and the representatives of the Palestinian people who have a right to a fatherland and a state structure that complies with their wishes.

I hope that this mutual recognition will come about. For, otherwise, years might pass with all the ups and downs of history we have already experienced. In the interest of these peoples I hope that it will be possible to overcome the currently existing antagonism. I repeat once more: France wants to be neither arbiter nor mediator -- it has friends in both camps and hopes for support by other countries in its endeavors to achieve peace, which should precede a far more positive phase of fruitful cooperation between these two peoples that have the right to exist.

[Question] You mean the Palestinian and the Jewish people?

[Answer] Of course, that is what we are talking about.

[Question] But there is still Lebanon.

[Answer] So, you speak about Lebanon? But there is no latent war between Lebanon and Israel. No, there is the present situation, and you know that I have emphatically condemned the Israeli intervention in Lebanon, but I do not believe that it could lead to a permanent conflict between the two countries. For the actual problem that is the crux of the matter is the fate of the Palestinian people.

U.S. ENVOY WILL HAVE TO 'EXPLAIN' REMARKS

PM161047 Paris LE MONDE in French 13-14 Jun 82 p 4

[Text] On Friday, 11 June, the External Relations Ministry reacted to statements made in Lyons by U.S. Ambassador to France Evan Galbraith, who is making a tour of the provinces. The Quai d'Orsay spokesman expressed his "surprise" following Mr Galbraith's statements on the French attitude to terrorism and said that the latter would be received at the ministry "very soon," where he will be asked for "the necessary explanations."

During a press conference in Lyons on Thursday, Mr Galbraith expressed the view that France did "not always draw a distinction between exiles and terrorists" and seemed to link that remark to others on "Libyan terrorism."

Mr Galbraith, for his part, moderated his Lyons remarks in Dijon on Friday, according to our Cote d'Or correspondent Robert Cerles. "I wanted to pay tribute to the action taken by Mr Defferre, who recently took steps to improve protection for U.S. Embassy staff in Paris.... My intention was to recall that France, like the United States, has a traditional policy of welcoming exiles. That policy is an honorable one but, for some time, some of those refugees have abused it in order to perpetrate outrages. It is therefore necessary for distinctions now to be drawn and for vigorous action to be taken against those abuses. That is what Mr Defferre did," Mr Galbraith said.

HERNU: ARMED FORCES MUST SHARE AUSTERITY BURDEN

PM150913 Paris LE MONDE in French 10 Jun 82 p 10

["J.I." report]

[Excerpt] At a meeting in Paris on Tuesday, 8 June, attended by around 40 military chiefs of all ranks from the three branches of the armed forces and the gendarmerie, meeting for the first time in a year, Mr Hernu examined what he called "the essential point relating to the future of our armed forces," in other words the 1983 defense budget and the 1984-1988 planning law.

"Although it is too early to give any details about that budget and that law," the defense minister said, "it is already possible to say what guidelines our action will follow in the coming years. The world economic situation is imposing on our country an extraordinary austerity effort in order to overcome the crisis into which it has been plunged for 7 years. Everybody will have to take part in that effort and, as usual, defense cannot escape from it. Moreover it would not be desirable for it to do so." "As you can see, I am calling on you to make a special effort on austerity," Mr Hernu added.

The 1982 military budget is FR 123 billion, which should represent around 3.89 percent of the gross domestic commercial product. When parliament voted on the budget at the end of last year the defense minister stated that he had received an assurance from the prime minister that the military budget planned for 1983 would represent around 3.94 percent of the same gross domestic commercial product.

When visiting army units in eastern France last May, Mr Mauroy said in reply to journalists' questions that he would try to keep his promise.

Mr Hernu's appeal to the armed forces' chiefs for increased financial austerity can be interpreted — at a time when the final choices for the 1983 budget are being made -- as an announcement that the military community must be prepared to be treated on the same footing as the other national institutions, unlike previous years when it enjoyed some priority in the distribution of public funds.

CHEYSSON, GROMYKO HOLD MEETING IN NEW YORK

PM160757 Paris LE MONDE in French 13-14 Jun 82 p 4

["N.B." dispatch]

[Text] New York -- External Relations Minister Claude Cheysson, who spent 24 hours in New York on the occasion of the UN session on disarmament, entertained his Soviet counterpart Gromyko to dinner on the evening of Thursday 10 June.

The two men spent 90 minutes alone in what the French minister's entourage described as the "best French-Soviet meeting since 10 May 1981." According to the same informants, the discussions were "pragmatic, free from ambiguity, each knowing where the other stood after the statements made by the president of the republic during his recent press conference." The talks took place "without affected pathos and without aggressiveness," the Soviets realizing that the French sometimes have positions close to theirs on some regional problems without, however, "wiping the slate clean on the Afghanistan and Poland questions."

During a press conference the minister attacked those who want to "disarm the Third World," saying instead that the developing countries must be able to defend their autonomy. But the only way they can do so without completely bankrupting themselves is within regional organizations.

Questioned on Poland, Mr Cheysson stated: "There has been no progress since the speech delivered by General Jaruzelski on 13 December (proclaiming martial law). That is a great disappointment. We are still awaiting the start of real political dialogue. If it happens we will be very happy to resume and increase our economic aid to Poland."

SPADOLINI MEETS WITH GROMYKO IN NEW YORK

AU160857 Rome ANSA in English 0840 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] New York, 16 Jun (ANSA) -- In a meeting here Tuesday with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrey Gromyko, Italy's head of government Giovanni Spadolini defended his country's decision to go along with a U.S. request to install missile ramps on Italian soil.

Both Italy and West Germany, who has also agreed to missile installations, have scrupulously respected the nuclear nonproliferation treaty, Spadolini recalled.

Italy is in favor of strategic arms negotiations that would lead to a reduction in existing arsenals rather than merely a limitation, he said.

For his part, Gromyko clarified the announcement made at the U.N. to the effect that the USSR would never be the first to use nuclear weapons. The Soviet Union is seriously committed to a disarmament policy and in this framework is willing to debate with the U.S. in all sectors of armaments, he told the Italian premier.

Earlier in the day, Spadolini, in an address to the United Nations, denounced Soviet interference in the internal affairs of other states, like Poland, in violation of the U.N. charter.

The Italian leader asked Gromyko for an explanation of the Soviet stance on the Middle East with regard to Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization and called for a more correct international stance on the part of Moscow.

Cuts Short Trip, Returns Home

AU160915 Rome ANSA in English 0835 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Excerpts] New York, 16 Jun (ANSA) -- Italian Premier Giovanni Spadolini cut short his trip to the United States and returned home after addressing the United Nations' special session on disarmament here Tuesday.

Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo remained in the States and will have a round of consultations in Washington today with U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig, which will largely focus on the latest developments in Lebanon.

In his speech to the U.N. yesterday, Spadolini called for controls on future arms agreements and the creation of a register for all international arms transactions. His plan calls for the creation of a U.N. body that could oversee mechanisms checking arms agreements until gradually it would have its own corps of international inspectors for this purpose.

His proposed register for international transactions of conventional arms should be placed under the supervision of the U.N. Disarmament Center, in his view.

Speaking later to newsmen, the Italian premier said that in Bonn the EEC statement on Lebanon had contributed to the ceasefire established in that country. He said he entrusted an important role to the U.N. in the stabilization of the Mideast.

He added that he had no certain proof backing Israeli assertions that Italian Red Brigades and other terrorists have been arrested in Lebanon.

Spadolini said that with regard to the Falklands the U.N. must be the center of a great stabilizing move aimed at finding a peaceful solution to the entire complex problem posed by the islands in the South Atlantic.

Italy will work for the direct involvement of European nations and the United States is pushing for a rapid resumption of a dialogue with Argentina and the rest of the Latin American continent, the Italian leaders said.

COLOMBO COMMENTS ON END OF FALKLANDS CONFLICT

AU152013 Rome ANSA in English 1934 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Text] New York, 15 Jun (ANSA) -- The end of military operations in the Falkland Islands may represent a "turning-point" for the Anglo-Argentine crisis in the southern Atlantic, Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo said here today. Voicing "bitterness and regret" for the "young victims" on both sides, Colombo also committed Italy to seeking a "quick re-establishment" of warm relations between Europe and Argentina -- "and, more in general, between Europe and Latin America."

According to the Italian diplomatic chief, this process should pass through a "strengthening of democracy on that continent which has fundamental importance in the framework of the West and for world equilibria." "We still think that negotiatons are the valid path for overcoming the basic aspects of the Anglo-Argentine crisis over the archipelago, and we are convinced it should be pursued with good will," he added.

Colombo is in New York for the U.N. General Assembly's special session on disarmament.

POPE HOLDS TALKS WITH PLO OBSERVER IN GENEVA

AU152009 Rome ANSA in English 1912 GMT 15 Jun 82

[Text] Geneva, 15 Jun (ANSA) -- Pope John Paul II had an unscheduled meeting with the Palestine Liberation Organization's permanent observer to the international organizations in Geneva Dawud Barakat here in the late morning to discuss the Israeli invasion of Lebanon. According to reliable accounts of the meeting on the fringe of the pope's one-day visit, the PLO representative voiced his thanks for the pope's speech in favor of the "Palestinian people's rights" in Rome Sunday. The sources said Barakat also voiced appreciation for the remarks with which the leader of the world's Catholics declared his readiness to visit Lebanon.

Speaking with reporters in flight back from his two-day stay in Argentina, the pope said he would be ready to go to Lebanon in the "appropriate conditions." According to first accounts of the meeting, Barakat told the pope that the "fate of the Palestinians is also entrusted to your good offices."

INDUSTRY MINISTER INTERVIEWED ON ECONOMIC POLICY

PM151141 Rome L'ESPRESSO in Italian 6 Jun 82 pp 219-222

[Salvatore Gatti undated interview with Italian Industry Minister Giovanni Marcora: "Italians: Be Serious!"]

[Excerpts] Rome -- L'ESPRESSO: Senator Marcora, you are in effect leader of the DC delegation in the government. You are also in charge of a key economic ministry -- the Industry Ministry. The government's economic policy has now clearly failed. Do you agree?

Marcora: As soon as the government was formed I immediately argued to Spadolini that the country had to be informed of the real situation in which the Italian economy was languishing. The prime minister did that, but for a number of reasons -- and unfortunately this counts in politics -- Italians did not believe him. So the non-DC premiership, which the DC desired and supported, has unfortunately been unable to realize its full potential.

L'ESPRESSO: However, the government did originally fail to mention a crucial point, namely the public deficit, arguing until recently that it was 50 trillion lire, whereas it is almost 70 trillion.

Marcora: Indeed, on 7 September 1981 the State Accounting Office supplied the government with an overall picture of the budget from which it appeared that, after a series of complex measures, the requirements would be 65,542 billion lire. So my theory, which I presented in the first 10 days of October was that, on the basis of a number of complex calculations which I will not now explain, the deficit would be about 64 trillion lire. Then some irresponsible person said that my assertion was a DC maneuver against the non-DC government. He would have done better to remain silent.

L'ESPRESSO: So would you rather have set the ceiling at 64 trillion lire then?

Marcora: No, I suggested cutting spending and increasing revenue, knowing that if the public sector accounted for 64 trillion out of the total 70 trillion available in ordinary internal credit, financing for enterprises would have been virtually nil, the possibility of cutting taxes nil, and thus unit labor costs would not have diminished.

L'ESPRESSO: Fiscal revenue has been too low. You have accused Finance Minister Rino Formica of not being tough enough, of fiscal demagoguery. Why?

Marcora: That is not what happened. Rino Formica is one of the best people I know... and I am not kidding! What I said in fact is that I certainly do not demand that my friend Rino meet the same fate as Prina, finance minister under the monarchy, who was beaten to death with stones and umbrellas outside the royal palace in 1814, but that he in turn cannot presume to earn votes by being finance minister; that would be too much!

L'ESPRESSO: There have been no cuts, and revenue has been low: a poor record. And yet the government has managed to cut inflation to 16 percent, which was its objective.

Marcora: Well.... A certain psychological effect has been obtained by repeating this figure of 16 percent. But it has been achieved mainly as a result of the world slump. In any case it is not much, if you consider that the United States has gone from 14 to 4 percent -- a drop of 10 percent! To keep up with that we should have aimed at about 10 percent.... The disparities with respect to other countries' inflations rates have not improved in our favor, in other words. Indeed, in many cases they have deteriorated.

L'ESPRESSO: Has the social pact, which Spadolini called "Bargaining with the social partners," not failed too?

Marcora: Spadolini has managed to maintain a certain degree of social peace in the country for a year; the number of hours lost through strikes has diminished, productivity has increased and absenteeism has decreased. But of course some of the aims of the government program with regard to this fundamental point have not been achieved.

L'ESPRESSO: Have the industrial policy objectives not failed too?

Marcora: I would say definitely not. We have 2.5 trillion lire already authorized under Law 675. We have the Technological Innovation Law: We passed the law on energy saving last week.

L'ESPRESSO: What pressing "package" of measures will you submit at the stocktaking [among government parties]?

Marcora: Here, briefly are some points: people must pay the cost of services. By restoring a real social band [fascia sociale] for the National Electricity Power Board (which now reaches 90 percent of the population) we could recover 1.4 trillion lire. We could recover a further 2.2 trillion lire from municipalized and city services and another 500 billion lire by slightly adjusting mail and railroad charges -- a total of 4 trillion lire. Plus an adjustment to value-added tax, but only on condition that it is deducted from the indexing system. And, of course, a real containment of salaries. In Germany they are falling, but in Yugoslavia they have decreased 20 percent in 2 years. In Italy, however, the trade unions continue to defend them stubbornly, but they cannot do so any longer. Last, since there are not only the workers -- who have enjoyed tax relief totaling 4.95 trillion lire -- but also the employers -- who this year will benefit from government contributions to welfare payments totaling 7 trillion lire -- and since there are factories that do not need it, we will have to review these contributions in a rather more selective light, helping enterprises that need it to compete abroad.

PCP STATEMENT ON PSP SEVERANCE OF RELATIONS

PM170829 Lisbon AVANTE! in Portuguese 9 Jun 82 p 2

[Apparent text of 3 June PCP Central Committee note: "Publicity and Demagogic Maneuver"]

[Text] 1 -- In a communique issued yesterday the Socialist Party [PSP] standing committee announced that it is suspending all political relations with the PCP.

This decision appears to be connected with a recent PCP Central Committee statement calling on Socialist Party members, voters and deputies to prevent not their electoral pledges but those which were upheld and put forward by the "Democratic Alliance" from being enshrined at the PSP's hands in the revision of the constitution.

The PCP's stance on the revision of the constitution in progress -- based on the "Democratic Alliance's" agreement with the PSP/Mario Soares and allowing changes in the system of political power which, if approved, would gravely endanger the democratic system -- is well known.

Also well known are the PCP's persistent calls for a struggle to avert this danger, thus satisfying the feelings and concerns existing in broad democratic sectors and among the popular masses, clearly expressed in the powerful development of the struggle, which at meetings and demonstrations and, in particular, through two impressive general strikes, has put forward the Portuguese people's protest and the demand for urgent measures against the "Democratic Alliance's" reactionary plans in which the revision of the constitution plays an important role.

2 -- It is therefore surprising that the PSP standing committee, instead of expressing understanding and sensitivity to the urgent need to fight reaction and its plan to destroy the democratic system, has adopted a stance which openly helps the "Democratic Alliance's" subversive plan.

Moreover, that stance is rather ridiculous. As is known, the PSP leadership has been implementing for years the measure which it now says that it has adopted.

The PCP has repeatedly made proposals to the PSP for meetings between the two parties to examine the possibilities of understanding and joint action. These proposals for meetings have always been rejected by the PSP leadership.

Thus, relations between the two parties have long been virtually "suspended." The PSP statement thus takes on the nature of a publicity play and demagoguery.

This decision to sever political relations with the PCP has therefore no practical significance. The PSP members and supporters will judge its significance and the fact that it has been made against the PCP when, as is known, the PSP leadership has never adopted such a stance with respect to any of those parties, despite the reactionary parties' frequent attacks on the democratic parties and on the PSP itself.

3 -- It is obvious that, with this statement, the PSP standing committee intends:

-- To divert attention and deceive public opinion about the gravity of the "Democratic Alliance"/Mario Soares agreement.

-- To create new sources of argument and discord among democrats, weakening resistance to the "Democratic Alliance's" subversive plans.

-- To intimidate and discourage the PSP members' and voters' struggle against the "Democratic Alliance" and in defense of the democratic system.

-- To seek to heal on the basis of anticommunism rifts and curb conflicts within the PSP which the standing committee itself describes as an "internal crisis," and to restore artificially its unity, jeopardized by Mario Soares' alliance with the "Democratic Alliance."

The PCP is certain that this ridiculous operation will not be crowned with success; rather, it will help clarify the PSP/Mario Soares' real stances.

4 -- The PCP's policy of alliances does not change at the whim of merely short-term factors; rather, it is inspired by the higher interests of the people, the country and democracy.

It is not the PSP standing committee's extraordinary stance which will change the PCP's policy of alliances, both social and political.

Accordingly, the PCP persists in its policy of unity among all the democratic forces -- specifically, between communists and socialists, between the PCP and the PSP.

Despite the PSP standing committee's stance, the PCP persists in its total readiness to consider, at any moment and at all levels and grades, the possibilities of cooperation in defense of the interests of the workers, the people, the country and the democratic system enshrined in the constitution.

5 -- At this crucial moment for Portuguese democracy, the PSP secretary general and standing committee prefer alliances and agreements with reaction, with the "Democratic Alliance" and with the big capitalists to any alliance with the workers movement, with the PCP.

But the PCP is certain that at the present time the great bulk of PSP members and voters do not support the "Democratic Alliance"/Mario Soares agreement for the revision of the constitution and declare themselves in favor of the defense of democracy and of the defense and continuation of the Portugal of April [1974].

BRIEFS

PCP DELEGATION TO BULGARIA -- A delegation of the Portuguese Communist Party [PCP] has left for Bulgaria. The delegation was headed by PCP Secretary General Alvaro Cunhal. [Text] [Lisbon in Portuguese to Europe 1230 GMT 14 Jun 82 LD]

PORTUGUESE-ANGOLAN AGREEMENT -- The Bank of Portugal and the National Bank of Angola have signed a line of credit worth 6.3 million contos. Joao Abel Neves, vice governor of the National Bank of Angola, says that the agreement is an additional protocol to a financial agreement between the two banks which has been in force since 1979. This additional protocol envisages a 90 million dollar line of credit for consumer and other products. [Lisbon in Portuguese to Europe 1230 GMT 9 Jun 82 LD]

FINLAND

PRIME MINISTER COMMENTS ON SOVIET ANNOUNCEMENT

LD161336 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 0930 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] Prime Minister Kalevi Sorsa regards the Soviet announcement yesterday that it will not be the first to use nuclear weapons as a very significant initiative in disarmament. Prime Minister Sorsa returned this morning from a week's visit to the UN General Assembly special session on disarmament. He was accompanied on his return by the Diet Foreign Affairs Committee. According to Prime Minister Sorsa, it was noted at the United Nations that the session should be regarded as successful if it achieves even a narrow, but concrete disarmament program.

NORWAY

AFTENPOSTEN VIEWS LABOR PARTY POLICY SPLIT

PM151555 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 10 Jun 82 p 2

[Editorial: "The Split in the Labor Party"]

[Text] It is a very serious matter when 21 Storting deputies from the Labor Party -- or around one-third of the party's Storting group -- go against commitments which Norway has made as a member of NATO. Not only for the Labor Party itself, a party which for the majority of the period since the last war has stood guarantor for Norway's policy of alliance, but for the nation as a whole. It is -- as [former Norwegian Foreign Minister] Knut Frydenlund has pointed out on a number of occasions -- simply not possible for any government to pursue a credible foreign policy without broad support from the Norwegian Labor Party.

In the present situation there are no doubts as to what view the majority of the Norwegian Labor Party takes on all important questions affecting Norwegian foreign and security policy. But, as we have pointed out the past, it is impossible to ignore certain new tendencies and attitudes which naturally enough create uncertainty about the party's future course.

The opposition on foreign policy within the Labor Party goes deeper -- and is more widespread -- than for a long time. This opposition has become apparent with particular force in recent years on issues connected with NATO's nuclear policy and the contingency stockpiling of equipment for U.S. forces in the event of a crisis or war situation. To a certain extent what we are seeing here is a reflection of arguments and views characteristic of the current radical peace movement and could possibly be interpreted as a temporary phenomenon. However, after more detailed analysis we have to state that the new foreign policy opposition is formed from attitudes which deviate greatly from the line which the Labor Party has taken since World War II. What is particularly characteristic of this line is the feeling of responsibility for Norwegian security and the policy of concern for common Western security needs.

We can reflect on what the new attitude in the Labor Party could mean for Norwegian foreign and security policy if they gradually won increasing support in the party. It is true that this is all hypothetical, but we are dealing here with a tendency which is making itself felt more and more, and which is taken very seriously by many of the Labor Party's leading politicians. Everyone is agreed that the time is now ripe for a more open and detailed debate on foreign and security policy. But it must not be a debate in which the leadership should allow itself to be carried along by the current, without any desire to take an active and committed part in influencing and -- and guiding -- developments. The uncertain, conflict-filled period through which we are now living makes demands on political leaders, perhaps as never before. We take the view that it is correct for everyone -- regardless of party -- to define his task within this context.

PYM INTERVIEWED ON CEASE-FIRE, FALKLANDS FUTURE

LD161530 London BBC Domestic Service in English 1210 GMT 16 Jun 82

[From "The World Today" program: Robin Day interview with Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs Secretary Francis Pym in London -- live]

[Excerpts] [Question] With me in "The World At One" studio is Mr Francis Pym, the foreign secretary and a member of the inner war cabinet. Mr Pym is just back from Saudi Arabia, where he went to pay respects to the dead king and to greet his successor. Mr Pym was away when the Argentine surrender in the Falklands was announced. And as foreign secretary, Mr Pym will be concerned with securing an end to all hostilities by Argentina, and as you heard, the task force commander this morning has warned that thousands of Argentine prisoners will die of malnutrition and disease unless Argentina immediately agrees to an end to all hostilities. Foreign Secretary, first of all, does this mean that we have not yet had any confirmation from Buenos Aires that the Argentine agrees to stop all hostilities in the South Atlantic?

[Answer] That's right; we have as yet had no reply -- no reply at all. And naturally we're pressing for a reply through the Swiss and through other sources and we hope we'll get one today.

[Question] And the problem about the prisoners must be causing you as foreign secretary considerable apprehension, musn't it?

[Answer] It's weighing very heavily on our minds. We've heard the reports about the conditions in which the Argentines are in. And that is obviously very serious. And we want them to go back of course as quickly as possible, but of course we want cessation of hostilities to occur. I think it was terrible that the Argentines put so many young, untrained or half-trained soldiers on the island and I can't think why they put so many there -- even worse, to allow them to get into this condition. And therefore of course it's a major matter to try and get them back as soon as possible. Otherwise we might have a disaster relief kind of situation on our hands.

[Question] Haven't you -- judging by what Admiral Woodward has said this morning -- haven't you already got that on your hands? He says the problem of coping with them and feeding them and housing them is getting nearly impossible. And have you not got to get international help on this?

[Answer] Yes, indeed, we are seeking help from our friends and of course we will use our own resources and some of our own ships there. But the urgency of course is to ensure that hostilities have ceased. And we asked yesterday Argentina to confirm that that is so, and it's obviously most urgent on a humanitarian basis apart from any other consideration that we get an affirmative answer as soon as possible.

[Question] And at the inner war cabinet meeting this morning, were you able to reach any decisions on this question or simply to confirm what you've just said?

[Answer] We discussed it in detail and how we might react when we get the reply and how we might deal with the situation. And we went into all the details, because clearly on a humanitarian basis, it's a very important issue.

[Question] Can you just explain the problem of the prisoners of war in relation to the need for a cessation of all hostilities? Are you saying: No prisoners of war -- despite the terrible conditions in which they are, will be returned if we don't get this undertaking?

[Answer] We haven't said that, but of course under the convention, when hostilities have ceased then we are required to send the prisoners back, which naturally we would wish to do. And one would have thought that the people of Argentina would be the first to want this enormous number of prisoners to be returned. And therefore there is a huge incentive for them to want the cessation of hostilities to take place immediately.

[Question] Are you asking from the Argentine junta an end to all hostile action as a term of the Falklands Islands surrender agreement which was made with General Moore?

[Answer] I think you've got to make a distinction between the two, because the arrangement made between Generals Moore and Menendez was an agreement between two commanders in the field on the ground. And what we're asking from the Argentine Government is a confirmation that all hostilities have ceased.

[Question] Why have the cease-fire terms arranged between the two generals on the ground not yet been published?

[Answer] We're trying to get hold of the actual copy so that we can do that.

[Question -- interrupts] But don't you know what is in it?

[Answer] We intend to do that. Yes, indeed, that they should surrender and lay down their arms and they discussed the arrangements for looking after them and the details of [words indistinct]

[Question -- interrupts] But have the cease-fire terms been seen by you and others in the government?

[Answer] I have not seen the actual text.

[Question] But has the government?

[Answer] I don't think so, the actual text...

[Question -- interrupts] Why is that?

[Answer] ...of the actual documents. But I think it may be that it's come to Northwood by signal now -- the actual text of it. But we know in a telegram the outline of it.

[Question] But if all these details and vivid correspondents' dispatches can come through to London, why can't the cabinet get the terms of the cease-fire?

[Answer] Of course, again, we -- it only struck us this morning that we haven't seen the actual text, although we've seen the outline of it. So we will no doubt in [words indistinct]...

[Question -- interrupts] On the prisoners of war question, are you making special arrangements to seek the release of our prisoner of war in the Argentine -- the Harrier pilot? There may be others, but...

[Answer -- interrupts] Yes, indeed, and of course the journalists, which are in a different category, but all along I've been trying to secure the release of those journalists -- without any success so far. And I know they aren't prisoners of war, but nonetheless we're trying to get their release as well as the one pilot.

[Question] Are you in favor, Foreign Secretary, of EEC sanctions against Argentina being lifted now?

[Answer] When hostilities are over, yes -- very much so. And I think that some of those countries will certainly be making the strongest representations to Argentina themselves to say: Look, you really must end hostilities now, and then if you do, economic measures will be lifted.

[Question] Would you be in favor of lifting sanctions of arms sales to Argentina at the same time?

[Answer] Well, we certainly won't. I think this is something that we will consider together in the ten -- the whole question of arms sales, which has always been difficult, has been revealed in a new light by recent events....

[Question -- interrupts] You don't want the French sending them more Exocets?

[Answer] Well, naturally not. But it isn't only in Argentina where arms sales are going to be a real problem. I think we have got an international problem here which we might be well advised to have a look at again.

[Question] Can you explain, Foreign Secretary, why Mr Rex Hunt is to return to the islands not as governor but as a joint commissioner along with General Moore?

[Answer] Yes, because in his original role he was governor and commander in chief and all the rest, but now, after what has happened, we have a completely new situation and it's quite clear to everyone, and to him -- Mr Hunt -- that General Moore remains in military charge -- at any rate, for the time being. And therefore he is going back to fulfill the civil part of his functions and he will cooperate -- obviously they both will -- very closely together on the civil side and on the military side.

[Question] Does this joint commissionership -- the civil governor and the military commander -- is this new system devised to emphasize that the islands are not returning to the old colonial status but to some undefined transitional status on the way to handing the Falkland Islands over to some international grouping?

[Answer] It is merely a common sense, practical arrangement to deal with the situation as it is at the moment.

[Question] Is it your view, Foreign Secretary that sooner or later there will have to be negotiations between Britain and the Argentine about the whole sovereignty question?

[Answer] I don't see that. I must say, I think after the events of the last 2 and 1/2 months it's very, very difficult indeed to see that. What we've got to achieve is a restored relationship in the whole region -- with all the countries in the region. I think with Argentina it's going to be particularly difficult -- obviously it is, after what has happened. Because it's in the interests of the islands to have a stable situation in that region. There must be peace, there must be stability and there must be confidence. And there must also be security. And we've not closed our minds to the possibility of widening arrangements for security to include other countries. All that has got to be discussed and perhaps negotiated. But on the immediate thought of any negotiations with Argentina -- obviously that's quite out of the question.

But what I can visualize, in the fullness of time, is that one could come to some business and commerical arrangements with Argentina which might be in the interests of the islanders. But, you know, it's very early days; this battle has only just been won, and we've got to pick up the pieces now, help the islanders to reestablish themselves and become rehabilitated and look at the whole future and the economic development of the islands, which clearly is going to be in their interests. And while we're doing that, I think we've got to create the best relationships we can with Latin America and try and create the best background possible for the well-being and the prosperity of those who live on the Falkland Islands.

[Question] Is it still the British Government's policy -- and I quote the prime minister's words used twice in Parliament -- that the wishes of the islanders are paramount?

[Answer] Yes, that is right. There's been much discussion over the last 2 months about that word and whether or not it's right to give them a veto. My own view about it is that a kind of veto arrangement is not right, but the islanders must have plenty of time now to settle down again, to consider the future, to consider what has happened and see what is in their best interests. And we shall be very closely in touch with them. And I must say, I find it difficult to think that at the end of the day, we will not come to some arrangement with them that suits them and takes full account of their wishes -- which may or may not be regarded as paramount -- and is sensible for them and their families in the future. I think it's going to take quite a long time to work that out, but we've made it totally clear all along that the process of self-determination is a fundamental issue; it's in the United Nations Charter, it doesn't only apply to the peoples of the Falkland Islands but there are many other people around the world it applies to. But that is clearly a very important aspect of the future of the islands.

[Question] But in that answer, Foreign Secretary, you began by saying the wishes of the islanders are paramount, and then towards the end you appeared to be saying: Well, they're not really paramount, but they will be fully consulted.

[Answer] Well, the word paramount that you quoted was used at the beginning of this issue on a number of occasions. In fact it was also used by leading members of the opposition on earlier occasions. What I'm trying to say is that in the debate about this very important question in the succeeding 2 months, there has been a debate about whether that should put them in the position of vetoing whatever it was that was thought from our point of view or from other points of view to be the best arrangement. And what I'm trying to say to you is that I think the view now -- which I certainly hold -- is that the wishes of the islanders have got to be taken fully into account and their interests, and with those wishes in mind, and with the various options in mind and before them in the light of what has happened, I would imagine that there will be little difficulty in arriving at an arrangement for the future that will fully accord with their wishes.

[Question] And they will be given no veto over the whole diplomatic policy of Britain in the South Atlantic or in Latin America?

[Answer] I don't believe they will want it, because I think there are various choices; I think they'll be fairly clear with advantages and disadvantages in each; and I think they'll want some months longer to see which is going to be best. And we will certainly wish to help them. And I would have thought that between us all, we will arrive at the most sensible arrangement -- which may be self-government or it may be one other form of government or it may be -- who can tell at the moment? I think over a long period of time, we shall arrive at an arrangement which will accord with what they want.

TEXT OF ARGENTINE SURRENDER DOCUMENT PUBLISHED

LD161526 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1506 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] The Ministry of Defence today issued the text of the Argentine surrender document from Port Stanley.

It says: "I, the undersigned, commander of all the Argentine land, sea and air forces in the Falkland Islands, M R M (Mario Menendez) surrender to Major General J J Moore CB, OBE, MC as representative of her Britannic Majesty's Government.

"Under the terms of this surrender, all Argentine personnel in the Falklands Islands are to muster at assembly points which will be nominated by General Moore, and hand over their arms, ammunition, and all other weapons and war-like equipment as directed by General Moore, or appropriate British officers acting on his behalf.

"Following the surrender, all personnel of the Argentinian forces will be treated with honour in accordance with the conditions set out in the Geneva Convention of 1949.

"They will obey any directions concerning movement, and in connection with accommodation.

"This surrender is to be effective from 2359 hours Zulu (GMT) on 14 June (2059 hrs local) and includes those Argentine forces presently deployed in and around Port Stanley, those others on East Falkland, West Falkland, and all the outlying islands."

The document is signed by General Mario Menendez, commander of the Argentine forces and Major General Jeremy Moore.

In the document two words are crossed out, and initialled by General Menendez. One of the words is "unconditionally" regarding the Argentine surrender to Major General Moore. The other crossed out word is illegible.

HEALTH PROBLEMS ENDANGERING ARGENTINE POW'S

LD161104 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1056 GMT 16 Jun 82

[By Chris Moncrief, PA chief political correspondent]

[Text] Hundreds of Argentine prisoners on the Falkland Islands could die from malnutrition, hypothermia and disease unless Argentine declares an immediate end to all hostilities, Rear Admiral "Sandy" Woodward warned today.

The task force commander's grim words came after the Argentine junta had still not confirmed whether they accepted that there was a total cessation of hostilities.

He said that the 15,000 Argentine troops who had surrendered to British forces now posed a problem of disaster relief proportions to him. "But with the 8,000 mile supply lines and the task force itself still threatened by the Argentine Navy and Air Force, the problems of bringing medical aid, food supplies, warm clothing and shelter are increased to the point of impossibility.

"This is a problem of the Argentines own making. It was foolishness to put 15,000 troops out on a limb where they could not be re-supplied," Admiral Woodward said in a press statement. "They are already suffering from malnutrition, exposure -- in some cases hypothermia -- trench foot, scabies and diarrhea brought on by lack of food and pure water, proper clothing, shelter and sanitation.

"There is no way I can shelter these numbers. Even feeding them for a week in present circumstances presents huge problems -- not just of supplies but of cooking and distribution and hygiene as well."

"Meanwhile, conditions are getting worse as winter arrives. There is a force-10 gale at sea and blizzards on the islands," said Admiral Woodward. "Thus I have my usual defensive problem and now a major disaster relief problem on top. I must continue to protect the task force and the supply lines from Argentine air and sea attacks. "If a choice has to be made, however, defence comes first." In a final dramatic appeal to the junta he added:

"The Argentines must appreciate that I cannot keep their troops dry and warm and fed while we are still subject to attack. They must face the facts and agree a halt to all, repeat all, hostilities."

The massive new problem, on a scale not previously envisaged by the task force, was being debated urgently by the so-called war cabinet at Downing Street this morning. Britain wants to repatriate at least some of the prisoners by British ships direct to Argentine ports. But this is plainly a non-starter until Britain gets a firm assurance from President Galtieri that all hostilities are over.

The British Government is engaged in intensive diplomatic activity through the Swiss Embassy in Buenos Aires, which is looking after British interests there, and with the Brazilian Embassy in London, which is attending to Argentine interests here.

The British Government now hopes that the dramatic message from Admiral Woodward will force President Galtieri into an immediate statement which will enable the Argentine prisoners to be repatriated before they start dying.

MP VIEWS FUTURE OF NATO DEFENSE SPENDING

PM151329 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 15 Jun 82 p 14

[Article by Julian Critchley, Conservative MP for Aldershot and vice-chairman of party's Defense Committee: "Bringing the Falklands Spirit to the Defence of Europe"]

[Text] The Falklands imbroglio, which has distracted our attention from defence in the North Atlantic, may have the effect of persuading the government to allocate more resources to defence: not just to the navy; but to the army and Royal Air Force as well. Gen Bernard Rogers, the NATO supreme commander, has called for a 4 per cent increase in real terms each year from members of the alliance. That is an additional 1 per cent. He should have a following wind.

NATO spends more money on defence than does the Warsaw Pact (the Soviet Union alone spends more than the United States) but the pact is stronger than NATO in Central Europe where it matters. The Soviets, as is well known, have larger conventional forces, better theatre nuclear weapons, and, at the very least, parity with the United States in strategic nuclear weapons.

We should ask ourselves once again whether the present NATO strategy of flexible response and forward defence is still the best we can do, given growing inferiority? Were deterrence to fail, and the Soviet Union to attack with conventional weapons, NATO would be faced with the probability of having to use its nuclear weapons first in circumstances that could only be to our disadvantage. And would not the political decision to use nuclear weapons first, and thereby possibly save our forces from being overrun, be one that would be continually postponed, thus getting the worst of both worlds? The Russians believe, and we fear, that nuclear "escalation" would be inevitable.

There is wide agreement in the alliance that it would be desirable to reduce our reliance on nuclear weapons and strengthen our conventional forces. We have no wish to make a choice between suicide and surrender. This point of view takes in a wide cross-section of opinion, from the more thoughtful Conservatives to the more responsible nuclear disarmers. But, at the same time, there is widespread resistance to changing NATO strategy, because it is politically a very sensitive thing to do, and because there is no apparent substitute available. Thus, despite the misgivings, there is great reluctance on the part of many Europeans -- who believe that to think about fighting a conventional war makes such a war more likely -- to re-think it.

The European members of NATO are more populous and richer than is the Soviet Union. Why then do we not have a proper conventional defence? There are two reasons: The gap between NATO forces and those of the Warsaw Pact is seen to be too large to bridge (which it is not); and the cost of matching Soviet forces one for one, in troops, tanks, artillery and aircraft, is too expensive. But we do not have to match Soviet forces in order to achieve a balance. Technology and brains could do it for us.

The United States Army has conceived a new doctrine which is known as "Airland Battle 2000." This concept proposes to change the way in which war in Europe might be fought.

It would use inherent NATO strengths to exploit fundamental Warsaw Pact weaknesses. Just as the exponent of judo uses an opponent's weight against him, so new weapons and munitions could first blunt and then destroy any Soviet offensive. New technology and larger European reserves could, in combination, raise the nuclear threshold and make victory in a conventional war more likely.

Soviet strategy is based on a pre-emptive attack (in the belief that war has become inevitable) launched suddenly and with great power. It would be a blitzkrieg which would be critically dependent on maintaining momentum. Waves of attackers would attempt to break through NATO's forward defences at points of Soviet choosing. In effect, the Soviet forces intend to pile on wave upon wave at a rate which permits rapid replacement of losses and ensures a swift victory by keeping the defender off-balance. Thus Soviet success depends on the arrival, intact and at the right time and place, of reinforcements.

The "Airland Battle 2000" doctrine, which has yet to be adopted by NATO, is designed to exploit Soviet weakness. Were NATO to succeed in isolating the first wave of attackers from the second by attacking the latter, the momentum of the invasion would be broken. It is this momentum that the new U.S. Army doctrine seeks to halt by destroying or disrupting Soviet second echelons before they reach West German territory, and by launching early counter-attacks against isolated Soviet forces inside NATO space. This would be a dramatic change from the comparative passivity of NATO's linear forward defense.

How would it work? "Airland Battle 2000" builds on three major advances in the technology of conventional weapons which have already taken place. There is the substantially improved deadliness of conventional weapons carrying improved munitions which can be delivered from aircraft. There is the great potential of micro-electronics to enhance the ability of frontline units quickly to collect, handle, distribute and act on information about the enemy, improved electronic counter-measures that would interrupt the enemy's radar and communications, and improvements which are already taking place in the ability to move into place and target improved conventional firepower against large concentrations of troops.

Interdicting aircraft, and missiles with newly-developed conventional warheads, could sever a Warsaw Pact attack at the neck, and place the responsibility for the first use of nuclear weapons where it properly belongs -- on the other side.

for the first time it looks as if the military can come up with a scheme that could enable NATO to purchase of little extra cost a proper conventional defence of Europe. Clearly, we cannot reduce defence spending; it also seems clear that few NATO members will increase spending substantially, particularly in the present economic climate.

It may be left to Britain, fresh from the traumas of the Falklands, to take the initiative in support of Gen. Rogers's proposal of a 4 per cent increase in real spending to cover the years 1983 to 1988. To date we have done no more than to maintain an increase of 3 per cent, which was agreed to by James Callaghan in 1977.

While it is too soon to reach a definitive conclusion as to the military implications of the Falklands, it seems pretty plain that technology remains the queen of the battlefield. We can reasonably infer from that that any war in Europe would be determined by the side which can best ally fighting spirit to high technology, bearing in mind that NATO, which is a defensive alliance, can make do with the smaller forces provided they are the better equipped.

DEFENSE WHITE PAPER ON NAVY CUTS EXPECTED

PM111133 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 11 Jun 82 p 5

[Desmond Wettern report: "Angry Naval Staff Wants Cuts Revised"]

[Text] The government is to publish a defence white paper before the start of the parliamentary summer recess at the end of next month which will slightly modify cuts in the strength of the navy planned a year ago. But unless there are far more sweeping revisions than those now expected, the anger of the naval staff over the latest defense briefing notes given to Conservative MP's is unlikely to be calmed.

Published by the Conservative Political Centre under the heading "Modernising Britain's Defense" the paper has been produced to guide MP's on defence topics.

It claims that "any suggestion that our capacity to respond to the crisis (in the Falklands) was weakened by a rundown in the strength of the Royal Navy is nonsense."

Yet many merchant ships have had to be chartered or requisitioned notably as troop transports, trawlers for deepwater minesweeping and repair ships because of the rundown of the amphibious forces; the shelving for three years of plans to build new minesweepers and the scrapping late last year of the navy's only surviving repair ship.

The paper also claims: "There will be more ships and submarines operational in 1985 than there are today." But with the number of destroyers being cut from 65 in 1979 to 42 operational in 1985, with eight more in reserve, there will be a 20 per cent decrease in the number of these ships available at any time. The number of nuclear-powered fleet submarines has been cut from the 20 originally planned to 17.

Although the paper reiterates the June, 1981, white paper statement that two carriers will be retained instead of the three previously planned, this represents a reduction of two-thirds of the carrier strength for much of the time to allow for refits and repairs.

The paper says: "A massive modernisation programme for the fleet is in hand...and we are increasing the number of our nuclear submarines, the main threat to the Soviet fleet, from 12 to 17.

By ending half-life modernisations of existing ships -- which means cancelling modernisation of the navy's principal anti-aircraft missile, the Sea Dart -- curtailing the number of ships that will have the Sea Wolf missile for defence against sea-skimming missiles, the fleet will face growing obsolescence in the latter part of the 1980s.

BANGLADESH LEADER MEETS WITH THATCHER 15 JUN

BK160334 Dacca Domestic Service in English 0145 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Excerpts] Chief Martial Law Administrator [CMLA] Lt Gen H.M. Ershad and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher exchanged views on a wide range of bilateral, regional and international issues of mutual interest in London yesterday. At a meeting held at the official residence of the British prime minister for about an hour, the leaders of the two countries also discussed increased bilateral economic cooperation. The British prime minister assured that her government would consider increased British economic assistance for the development of Bangladesh.

Mrs Thatcher congratulated Gen Ershad for the bold way in which he is tackling the problems in Bangladesh and expressed her confidence that Gen Ershad will be met with continued success in this regard.

The CMLA discussed with Mrs Thatcher the circumstances leading to the proclamation of martial law in the country and the main goals of his government. Gen Ershad particularly elaborated on the objectives of his government in the fields of agriculture and food production, the process of decentralization of administration, encouragement of private investment -- both foreign and local -- and reinvestment of nationalized enterprises. The two leaders also discussed British assistance in oil exploration in Bangladesh.

Earlier, Gen Ershad was given a warm welcome on his arrival in the British capital yesterday. Sir (Donald Logan), special representative of the British foreign secretary, received the CMLA at Heathrow Airport. Bangladesh High Commissioner to Britain Fakhruddin Ahmad was present on the occasion.

Gen Ershad leaves London this morning for New York where he will address the second special session of the UN General Assembly on disarmament tomorrow afternoon.

KIPRIANOU POSITION ON DIALOGUE REITERATED

NC161402 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1030 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] On being asked the government's reaction to yesterday's address by the permanent Greek delegate to the United Nations, Dhoundas, specifically to his reference to the presence of the occupation troops and the conduct of the intercommunal dialogue, the government spokesman replied that President Kiprianou has made repeated statements on this subject. The spokesman referred to the interview the president gave to the ATHENS NEWS AGENCY on 2 May. In his interview, President Kiprianou stated that despite the fact that the presence of the occupation troops in Cyprus has turned the intercommunal dialogue into a Nicosia-Ankara dialogue, this dialogue must be continued and all limits must be exhausted to establish whether progress can be achieved within a reasonable time and on the basis of the recommendations of the UN secretary general for speeding up the dialogue and for discussion of the basic issues.

SFRY'S STAMBOLIC REAFFIRMS SUPPORT FOR CYPRUS

NC161510 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1400 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] Mr Stambolic, president of the SFRY state Presidency, has reiterated his country's support for the Cypriot people's struggle. In a message on the occasion of Sarajevo radio day observed in the Cyprus Broadcasting Corporation's programs, Mr Stambolic said the peoples of Yugoslavia have from the beginning supported the just and lasting settlement of the Cyprus issue through negotiations between the two national communities of Cyprus on the basis of the independence, territorial integrity, unity and nonalignment of the friendly country of Cyprus. Mr Stambolic added: This solution is not only in the interest of Cyprus but also of peace and security in the Mediterranean.

In his message, the Yugoslav president referred to the close ties of friendship between Cyprus and Yugoslavia as well as their cooperation. Mr Stambolic said: The foundations of this cooperation were laid by President Tito and President Makarios. He also stressed the significance of cooperation between the two countries within the framework of the Nonaligned Movement.

DENKTAS OBJECTS TO GREEK STATEMENT AT UN

TA161210 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in English to Cyprus 1115 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] President Denktas has repeated that the Turkish Peace Forces would not leave Cyprus until a sound agreement was reached between the Turkish and Greek Cypriot communities. President Denktas was replying to a statement at the UN Security Council by the Greek permanent representative at the United Nations, Mr Dhoundas [as heard]. In the statement Mr Dhoundas said Greece would withdraw its forces from Cyprus if Turkey did so and that Greece would contribute to the expenses of the UN police force which would be established in the island. President Denktas described this statement as insolence.

President Denktas recalled the sufferings of the Turkish Cypriot community from 1963 to 1974 and said that Mr Dhoundas had no right to say that the Turkish Peace Force should be withdrawn from Cyprus because these troops had brought peace to the island and saved the independence of Cyprus by preventing it from becoming a colony of Greece.

He stressed that the Turkish Cypriot community needed the Turkish Peace Force to save it from aggression by the Greeks who are continuing to arm themselves. President Denktas said the conditions for the existence of the communities in Cyprus side by side had been determined at the summit meetings and the points of agreement in these did not permit Mr Dhoundas to make such proposals at the UN Security Council. He stressed that Turkish Cypriots had both the strength and knowledge to defend themselves and did not need money from Greece for that purpose.

ATALAY ON EXTENSION OF UNFICYP MANDATE

TA161234 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in English to Cyprus 1115 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] The United Nations Security Council has unanimously extended the mandate of the United Nations Peace Keeping Forces in Cyprus for another 6 months. The resolution adopted was similar to that of 14 December 1981 and expressed support for the 10-point summit agreement of 19 May 1979. It welcomed the resumption of the Cyprus intercommunal talks and requested the secretary general to continue his mission of good offices.

Speaking after the resolution, the New York representative of the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus, Mr Atalay, said that the reference to the Government of Cyprus in the third paragraph of the resolution did not reflect the legal and factual realities in the island and was misleading from all points of view. He recalled that since the Greek Cypriot armed attempt to destroy the bicommunal partnership and unite the island with Greece there was no legitimate government of Cyprus. He stressed that the unwarranted reference to the Greek Cypriot wing as the Government of Cyprus contradicted the state of affairs established by the basic articles of the 1960 Constitution and was completely unacceptable for the Turkish Cypriot side.

Mr Atalay said that he had, nevertheless, been authorized by the government of the Turkish Federated State to consent to the extension of the mandate of UNFICYP until the 15th of December 1982 and promised that the Turkish Cypriot side would cooperate with the force to make the operation a success. He further expressed the hope that the modus operandi and mandate of UNFICYP would be revised in accordance with the realities in the island. Mr Atalay expressed full support for the intercommunal talks and referred to the missing persons issue. Referring to the missing persons issue, he said that from outset the Turkish Cypriot side had discharged its responsibility in good will and good faith but he added that the Greek Cypriot side had created false difficulties. Mr Atalay also referred to the economic blockade imposed on the Turkish Cypriot community and described it as inhuman. He said that the Greek Cypriot side was still pursuing a relentless war of economic oppression and political isolation against the Turkish Cypriot community in gross violation of the UN Charter and point six of the summit agreement between Mr Denktas and Mr Kiprianou.

Mr Atalay said that the recent unconstructive and irresponsible statements of Mr Papandreou, the Greek prime minister, had caused considerable concern and anxiety as to the future of the intercommunal talks. He said that these statements of Mr Papandreou were a good example of Greek aspirations.

ATAKOL DECRIES GREEK CYPRIOT 'POLITICAL EMBARGO'

TA161249 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 1115 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] The minister of foreign affairs and defense, Mr Atakol, has said that the economic and political embargo by the Greek Cypriots against the Turkish Cypriot community was inconsistent with the atmosphere of political truce and conciliation which is indispensable for the continuation of the Cyprus intercommunal talks. In a letter to the permanent representatives of Islamic countries at the United Nations, Mr Atakol drew attention to the Greek Cypriot efforts to strip the Muslim Turks of Cyprus of their basic human, political and economic rights.

He was replying to a memorandum by the Greek Cypriot administration sent to the Islamic Conference organization in an effort to prevent the participation of the Turkish Cypriot community at the forthcoming meeting of Islamic Conference foreign ministers in Niger in August. Mr Atakol stated that the legitimate representatives of the Turkish Cypriots had attended the Islamic Conference meetings (?irregularly) since 1976 and that the Greek Cypriots were illegally posing as the Government of Cyprus with no authority or jurisdiction over Turkish Cypriots. He stressed that this new move by the Greek Cypriots was nothing more than a new phase of the anti-Turkish and anti-Islamic initiative declared by the Greek prime minister, Mr Papandreou. He expressed confidence that the members of the Islamic Conference will not allow the Muslims in Cyprus to suffer at the hands of the non-Muslim majority.

KHARALAMBOPOULOS DEPARTS FOR NEW YORK 16 JUN

NC161325 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] Foreign Minister Yiannis Kharalambopoulos departed for New York at noon to participate in the UN General Assembly session on disarmament. Kharalambopoulos will address the international organization on Friday to propound Greek views on the issue of disarmament.

PAPANDREOU'S ILLNESS DELAYS AIR EXERCISE

NC162130 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1830 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] Prime Minister and Defense Minister Andreas Papandreou is ill with a case of slight influenza. For this reason, the air exercise that was to have taken place tomorrow in his presence at the Kranea Firing Range has been postponed. It will be held later in the prime minister's presence.

ENVOY ON UNFICYP MANDATE, CYPRUS DIALOGUE

NC161409 Athens TO VIMA in Greek 16 Jun 82 p 8

[Text] The Security Council has approved the renewal of the UN peace force mandate in Cyprus until 15 December 1982. In its resolution the Security Council urged the two communities to continue the talks without delay in order to achieve results.

Speaking at the Security Council in this connection, Greek Ambassador Mikhail Dhoundas said that he agreed to the renewal of the peace force's mandate in Cyprus for 6 more months since the Government of the Republic of Cyprus had given its consent. Dhoundas expressed his sorrow over the Turkish side remaining intransigent in its extreme positions, something which, he stressed, does not permit us the hope of breaking the deadlock.

At the same time, a resolution proposed by the French chairman of the council asked the UN secretary general to continue his mission of mediation so that a political solution might be achieved between the Greek and the Turkish Cypriot communities.

FLORAKIS TO ATTEND DIMITROV CELEBRATIONS

NC142153 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1830 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] KKE Secretary General Kharilaos Florakis is in Sofia at the invitation of the Bulgarian Communist Party Secretary General Todor Zhivkov. Mr Florakis will attend the international Soviet conference organized in Sofia by the Bulgarian Communist Party Central Committee on the life and work of Georgi Dimitrov, leader of the international communist movement, on the occasion of his 100th birthday anniversary.

BRIEFS

SOVIET SHIP REPAIRS -- A new agreement has been signed for repairs on yet another Soviet ship at Neorion Sirou. The 3,500 ton Soviet vessel, Diloui, will be undergoing repairs estimated at $1.3 million. [Text] [Athens NEWS in English 15 Jun 82 p 5 NC]

TURKMEN ADDRESSES UN SESSION ON DISARMAMENT

TA170630 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 0415 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Turkish Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen has asked for the UN disarmament committee membership to be increased and the inclusion of Turkey in the committee. Addressing the UN special session on disarmament, Turkmen noted that even at a time when the United Nations was busy discussing global peace, Israel continued its aggressions in Lebanon. Pointing out that Turkey was concerned with developments in the area, Turkmen called for an end to this situation.

Turkmen stressed that countries participating in the UN special session on disarmament should deal with international terrorism supported by illegal smuggling and sales of arms. On the issue of the existing nuclear war threat in the world, Turkmen said that such a war would result in the death of millions of human beings and the destruction of all existing civilizations in the world.

TURKISH CYPRIOT DELEGATION VISITS ULUSU

TA161454 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] A delegation headed by the prime minister of the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus, Mustafa Cagatay visited Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu this morning. In a statement before the meeting, Ulusu said that the Turkish Cypriot delegation's visit will be beneficial from the viewpoint of further enhancing the relations between Turkey and the Federated State. Cagatay said that the Turkish Cypriot community's economic and social situation will be analyzed and that on their return they will try to raise the relations between the federated state and Turkey to the highest level. The delegation, which is composed of seven ministers headed by Cagatay and three deputies, later called on Zeyyat Baykara, minister of state, deputy prime minister and chairman of the Cyprus Coordination Council. The Federated State's representative in Ankara, Cemal Askin, was also present at these meetings.

Ulusu Statement

TA170720 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 0415 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] The motherland's prime minister, Bulent Ulusu, has reiterated that Turkey still is determined to contribute toward achieving the desired level of prosperity and happiness for the Turkish cypriot community. Ulusu made this statement during a dinner at the foreign visitors mansion in Ankara in honor of Turkish Cypriot Prime Minister Mustafa Cagatay and the delegation accompanying him. Ulusu said that the well-intentioned stand that both Turkey and the TFSC have adopted in the past and will adopt in the future in efforts being exerted for the peaceful solution of the Cyprus problem as well as the strong ties and complete understanding between them would continue to be the most significant factor in transforming Cyprus into an island of peace, liberty, stability and cooperation.

Pointing out that it was only natural that the close cooperation and understanding between Turkey and the TFSC should be further developed for the success of the national cause, Ulusu said that within this framework he believed it was beneficial to convey in a most realistic way Turkey's situation in various fields to the esteemed representatives of the Turkish Cypriot community. It is our understanding that in this manner our common efforts will be based on stronger grounds.

Ulusu concluded by saying that at this point -- reached after a long and difficult period full of a great number of exemplary efforts in the struggle for independence, through the heroism, determination and strong resistance of the Turkish Cypriots -- further efforts to consolidate the future of the Turkish Cypriot community will, on the one hand, provide for the establishing of a balance of power in the island and, on the other, contribute to political stability and regional peace.

Replying to Ulusu, Cagatay said that the existence of a (?resolute) Turkish Cypriot community on the island would contribute to the realization of peace. Noting that Turkey's contributions were essential in the stage the Turkish Cypriot community has presently achieved, Cagatay expressed his hope that these contributions would continue in the future. Our people, united as one and supported by the motherland in its stand, will continue to exert efforts for peace. Our most genuine desire is for the Greek Cypriot community to contribute also, in a responsible way, to efforts for the achievement of peace.

IRMAK REJECTS POLITICAL GROUPINGS IN ASSEMBLY

TA161720 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1620 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 16 Jun (AA) -- President of the Consultative Assembly Sadi Irmak said he disapproves of political groupings among the members.

In a press conference here today Irmak referred to the news reports about alleged political groupings and said:

"The Consultative Assembly, comprising a part of the Constituent Assembly, has undertaken a very important task. The only objective of this assembly is to successfully and responsibly complete its task. This assembly, meeting under the guidance of Ataturk's principles, considers free debate and free expression of ideas an undisputed rule of the democratic system.

"The new constitution will emerge as the synthesis of freely debated ideas. The presidency is determined to lay the basis for free debate and discussions.

"But the presidency disapproves of political groupings outside the scope of free debate of all ideas, and considers it a national duty to raise its disapproval."

SUSPENSION OF U.S. AID TO ISRAEL URGED

NC150956 Istanbul TERCUMAN in Turkish 11 Jun 82 p 2

["In the Light of Day" column by Ahmet Kabakli: "Has the United States Lost its Bearings?"]

[Excerpts] It would be only too appropriate if the Israeli prime minister were to be called such names as "the Israeli Monster," "Menahem Hitler" or "Adolf Begin."

If we were to do justice to his small size, we would say that no one like him has stooped so low or got so involved in the filth of killing so many people, young or old, or attempted to stage demonstrations of "conquest" in such holy and defenseless towns as Jerusalem and Sidon.

The Nazis attacked the world and soaked it in blood. In doing so, they inflicted more hardships on the German nation than on the Jews. However, they committed this monstrosity using their own tanks and aircraft, their own technology and inventions. But this Adolf Begin is using U.S. jets and tanks. With the help of $1.766 billion from the United States he is massacring Muslim women and children in the neighborhood.

Undoubtedly, Begin will end up in a tribunal like the one in Nuremberg. Unfortunately, honorable Reagan may not be sitting in that tribunal next to Menahem Hitler, but he will not be one of the judges trying him either.

I am afraid that Israel will have to pay for this aggression and barbarism, which is inherent in mad, nonsensical, spiteful and racist leaders, through painful losses.

Nations are given many opportunities to refrain from "becoming intoxicated by victory" and to use their common sense. But, unfortunately, many have failed to use such an opportunity in time.

For instance, had poor Iraq come to its senses last year and opposed Saddam, it would not be suffering under Khomeyni's subjugation today. Had Germany resisted Hitler, had the Russians risen against Stalin and had the Greek race refused to act to the mad tune of Papandreou's flute, the world would be a much better place. But you might ask: "What then would history write about?"

Israel is currently the attacker in Lebanon. It is in conflict with the Palestinians and the Syrians. It is heading toward the whirlpool of the Islamic world like Pharaoh's soldiers advancing in the middle of the Nile. But some day Israel too will be intercepted and compelled to atone for its belligerence. Begin will then be subjected to much hardship. But the United States, Reagan and Haig, have no right to act unwisely, madly and even stupidly. Begin and his fellow travellers are not the kind who will stop when asked or begged to do so.

The first thing the United States should do is to suspend financial aid and arms delivery to Israel for a few years. It should then be condemned and cursed by all the world organizations. But the United States is a preposterously strange country. It denounces Israel in words and orders an attack with its hand. When the situation gets out of hand, it takes Israel's side. For instance, the United States vetoed the Security Council resolution on 9 June condemning Israel and calling on it to withdraw to its own frontiers immediately and to comply with a cease-fire.

This is sheer lunacy. If it befits a great state like the United States to be used as a means for Israel's hostility against the Islamic-Arab world, one wonders why the Soviet Union has not done so far what is incumbent on it.

PLO ENVOY ON LEBANON CONFLICT, TURKISH SUPPORT

NC150902 Istanbul TERCUMAN in Turkish 10 Jun 82 pp 1, 8

[Text] Ankara news desk -- Mission chiefs of 13 Arab states in Ankara held a press conference at which they condemned Israeli attacks on south Lebanon during the past 6 days.

Speaking at the press conference on behalf of the 13 Arab states, Abu Firas, PLO representative in Ankara, stated that they wanted military equipment and aid from Turkey.

In response to a question as to whether the appeal PLO leader 'Arafat made to the Soviet Union involved the dispatch of Soviet troops to the region, Abu Firas said: "We do not want anyone to send troops to help us contain the Israeli attacks. We have not asked for any such force from the Soviet Union either. What we need is military equipment and aid. We have requested this not only from the Soviet Union but also from all our brotherly countries including Turkey."

Stating that they appreciated Turkey's sympathetic attitude toward the Arab countries in connection with the Israeli attacks, Abu Firas added: "We wish here to thank the Turkish Government." Abu Firas then stated that the Israeli attacks during the past 6 days constitute a great menace to peace in the region as well as in the world and added that these attacks were the result of a serious plot. He further added that having suffered terrible losses, Israel opened fire not only on military targets but also on civilians. Abu Firas stressed that the number of Israeli troops in Lebanon is estimated at 80,000, that despite Israel's announcement that the cities of Tyre and Sidon had fallen, these cities were still resisting. He added: "So far, 66 Israeli tanks have been destroyed, 3 planes and 1 helicopter shot down and 245 Israeli soldiers killed."

Stating that the Palestinian fighters would continue to fight to the bitter end, Abu Firas protested against the U.S. veto of the Security Council resolution condemning the Israeli onslaught.

At the end of the press conference, the Lebanese ambassador to Ankara thanked Turkey on behalf of the Lebanese Government and people for its reaction to the Israeli aggression.

AUSTRIA

CHANCELLOR KREISKY CRITICIZES ISRAELI LABOR PARTY

AU161335 Vienna ARBEITER-ZEITUNG in German 16 Jun 82 p 3

[Text] Vienna (SK, APA) -- The attitude of the Israeli Labor Party constitutes a serious problem for the Socialist International [SI], because its attitude toward the war in Lebanon is not in line with SI principles. This was stated by Chancellor Kreisky on Tuesday after the cabinet meeting. He declared that he would make no bones about his opinion, but said that he was not thinking of expelling the Israeli Labor Party from the SI because he is against administrative measures.

Kreisky described the situation in Lebanon as disastrous. He said that he had seen a genuine danger of war in this region for many months, and that years ago he refused to authorize the stationing of Austrian soldiers in southern Lebanon -- something which at that time was criticized by the opposition but now has turned out to have been right.

Regarding the committee to aid the Palestinians proposed by 14 Austrian Socialists, Kreisky said that of course he favored such aid. However, it would be of merely symbolic value, since the Arab states, being the richest in the world, would certainly also help the Palestinians. Moreover, he said, it must be ensured that any [Austrian] aid is of a humanitarian nature and that it is clear who will receive such aid. It is obvious that it will be necessary to do something first of all for the Lebanese civilian population. Since a large part of this population is Palestinian, the aid will benefit them as well. At first medicines and similar products will be sent there, he said.

NETHERLANDS

ECONOMICS MINISTER GIVEN SOCIAL AFFAIRS PORTFOLIO

PM161055 Rotterdam NRC HANDELSBLAD in Dutch 12 Jun 82 p 1

[Excerpt] The Hague, 12 Jun -- Secretary of State for Economic Affairs P.H. van Zeil has also been appointed secretary of state for social affairs, Prime Minister van Agt announced after yesterday's cabinet meeting. At the Social Affairs Ministry Van Zeil will deal with questions connected with working conditions and certain areas of the government's job promotion policy.

SPAIN

FRENCH PRESIDENT TO VISIT MADRID 22-24 JUN

LD141340 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1300 GMT 14 Jun 82

[Text] The diplomatic information office of the Foreign Ministry issued a communique early this afternoon stating that President of the French Republic Francois Mitterrand will pay an official visit to Spain 22-24 June at the invitation of King Juan Carlos.

DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 118 18 June 1982

CONTENTS

AUSTRIA

French President Meets With Press; Views Talks E 1
Explains Lebanon Declaration E 1
Kreisky Says Israel's Peres is 'Finished' E 2
[WIENER ZEITUNG 17 Jun]
Nationalrat Condemns Invasion E 2
[ARBEITER-ZEITUNG 17 Jun]

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

FDP To Enter Coalition With CDU in Hesse J 1
Genscher Views Decision J 1
DIE WELT Comments [18 Jun] J 1
Afghan Resistance Delegation Meets Party Leaders J 2
Economics Minister Lambsdorff Leaves for Greece J 2

FRANCE

Mitterrand Returns From Visit to Austria K 1
Hernu Sees Little Prospect of Euroforces K 1
[LE MONDE 16 Jun]
Finance Minister Defends Franc Devaluation K 2
[LE MONDE 15 Jun]
LE MONDE Views EMS [15 Jun] K 2
Israeli Foreign Minister Greeted Coolly in Paris K 3
[LE MONDE 17 Jun]

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Pertini Receives Ivory Coast President L 1
PCI Officials Receive Argentine CP Delegation L 1
[L'UNITA 15 Jun]
Communique on Italian-Tunisian CP Talks Reported L 1
[L'UNITA 14 Jun]
ANSA Reports Slaying of PLO Man in Rome L 3
Israel Blamed L 3
Killings Discussed L 3
Colombo Deplores Killings L 4
Two Red Brigade Members Arrested in Milan L 4
Policemen, Prisoner Killed in Highway Attack L 4
Mafia Boss Ferlito Killed L 4

PORTUGAL

Eanes Explains Reservations on Government M 1
[EXPRESSO 12 Jun]

SPAIN

Government To Seek Gibraltar Command Within NATO N 1
[EL PAIS 6 Jun]

NORDIC AFFAIRS

DENMARK

U.S. Reservations Blocking EEC Chairman's Visit P 1
[BERLINGSKE TIDENDE 11 Jun]

FINLAND

Diversified Trade Agreement Signed With PRC P 1
[HUFVUDSTADSBLADET 12 Jun]
Poland's Karas Completes Trade Talks in Helsinki P 2
[HUFVUDSTADSBLADET 13 Jun]

NORWAY

Armed Forces To Buy HAWK's for Airbase Defense P 3
[AFTENPOSTEN 15 Jun]

SWEDEN

New Regulations Issued on Territorial Violations P 3

UNITED KINGDOM

UK Ships To Take 5,000 Prisoners to Argentina Q 1
Argentine Arms Being Examined for Possible Use Q 1
Relief Task Force Leaves for South Atlantic Q 2
Estimate of Destroyed Argentine Aircraft Raised Q 2
[THE DAILY TELEGRAPH 17 Jun]
Admiral Assesses Value of Stanley Harbor as Port Q 3
[THE DAILY TELEGRAPH 17 Jun]
Government's Task To Give Falklands Security Q 4
[THE DAILY TELEGRAPH 16 Jun]

CYPRUS

Rolandhis Returns From Visits Abroad 17 Jun R 1
Kiprianou To Undergo Operation in London 18 Jun R 1
Ceausescu Sends Greeting to Kiprianou R 1
Refugees From Lebanon Allowed Transit Status R 1

GREECE

Athens Spokesman Denies Defense Alert in Aegean S 1
Greek Official on Turkish Air Violations S 1
Papandreou To Pay Official Visit to Bulgaria S 2
Popularity Poll on Papandreou Published [NEWS 17 Jun] S 2

TURKEY

Greek Claims of Airspace Violation Denied T 1
Turkey, Iran, Iraq To Sign Protocol on POW Visits T 1
Evren Urges Turkish Cypriot Unity, Solidarity T 2
Ecevit's Trial Postponed Until 6 July T 2
Military Reports Capture of Leftist Militants T 3
Turkish-Libyan Economic Protocol Signed T 3
IMF Delegation Concludes Talks in Ankara T 3
MILLIYET on Papandreou's Moratorium Suggestion [13 Jun] T 4
Our Radio on Statement by U.S. Ambassador T 5
Briefs: Cotton Exports; Austrian Highway Committee T 5

FRENCH PRESIDENT MEETS WITH PRESS; VIEWS TALKS

AU172033 Vienna Domestic Service in German 1900 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Franz Koessler report on French President Francois Mitterrand's 17 June press conference at Vienna's Imperial Hotel -- recorded]

[Excerpt] Mitterrand apologized for being late to the press conference by pointing to the intensity of the talks which he had conducted up to a few minutes before with Chancellor Kreisky. The French president stated that bilateral topics were primarily involved, the relations between Austria and France which he himself had termed good but not active enough. This is why it was agreed today to convey new incentives to the mixed commission between the two states which already exists but which has been working rather lethargically -- as the French president said. This shall be concretely achieved by dispatching ministers to the commission, that is the French and the Austrian foreign ministers. France will also dispatch its budget minister and Austria will send its trade minister to that commission, and thus this work group shall receive a decisive new impetus.

In addition, the French president announced that he will meet Chancellor Kreisky again in the next few months and that he has invited President Kirchschlaeger to visit France.

Concrete cultural projects already exist between France and Austria: the French-Austrian Institute shall benefit from new promotional measures, be reorganized and devote more attention in the future to economic and East-West problems. There also shall be closer cooperation in the Third World. Properly speaking, these are not so many concrete projects.

Subsequently, there was the international part: It was primarily the problems of the Middle East and East-West relations which were discussed. There exists a joint communique on the first issue, the crisis in Lebanon, which is expected to be made available to the press shortly. The demand underscored in this communique is that the integrity of Lebanon be respected as well as the right of the Palestinians to their existence and to a state of their own, as well as the security of Israel's borders.

As the French president pointed out, the emphasis in East-West relations was mainly on the economic aspect, because Austria, unlike France, is not tied by any military alliance and hence is mainly interested in the economic aspects.

Explains Lebanon Declaration

AU172032 Vienna Domestic Television Service in German 1930 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Report on French President Mitterrand's 17 June activities and press conference at Vienna's Imperial Hotel]

[Excerpt] At his residence in the Imperial Hotel the French president primarily explained to the press the joint Austrian-French declaration on Lebanon. This declaration demands the restoration of the independence and unity of Lebanon and unhindered aid measures to the victims of the most recent events. The withdrawal of all foreign troops is also being requested in the declaration which was formulated by Mitterrand, Kirchschlaeger and Kreisky. Austria and France call for both the recognition of the rights of the Palestinians as well as guarantees for the secure borders of all states of the area including that of Israel. Questioned as to why he thought of Bruno Kreisky's most recent assertion that the Israeli government is semifascist, Mitterrand only stated that Kreisky is free and a master of his own words.

KREISKY SAYS ISRAEL'S PERES IS 'FINISHED'

AU171328 Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 17 Jun 82 p 2

[Text] Paris/Vienna -- Israel is making itself guilty of a policy which can touch off a general war, Chancellor Kreisky declared yesterday in an interview with the French "Europe-1" radio station. At the same time, Kreisky disputed that the Israeli Labor Party had the quality of a Socialist Party in the present situation. "Opposition leader Shim'on Peres is now finished for good. I believe that it is the Socialist International's [SI] duty to state this very frankly," Kreisky declared.

It is not admissible to speak of the suffering of the Jews if at the same time one destroys the opportunities of the Palestinians to come to a country of their own, Kreisky said. The attitude of the Israeli Government is absolutely unacceptable. There would have been many opportunities for preparing a peaceful settlement but "the Israeli Government did not give the moderate Palestinians any chance," the chancellor declared. Austrian Socialist Youth Chairman Josef Cap announced yesterday that his organization would demand in the Socialist Youth International (IUSY) the expulsion of the Israeli Labor Party from the SI. By supporting the Begin government in its aim to exterminate the Palestinians, the Israeli Labor Party has come into conflict with the principles of the SI, Cap declared.

The Austrian CARITAS organization has donated 2 million schillings as immediate aid to war victims in Lebanon. It requests donations to be paid into the Postal Savings Bank account no 7,700,004 and into the accounts of all diocesan CARITAS offices.

Nationalrat Condemns Invasion

AU171145 Vienna ARBEITER-ZEITUNG in German 17 Jun 82 p 2

[Excerpts] Vienna (AZ) -- On Wednesday the Austrian Nationalrat unanimously approved the government's 1981 foreign policy report. It also unanimously adopted a resolution condemning Israel's invasion in Lebanon and demanding the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Lebanon. Nevertheless, the debate in parliament clearly reflected the different positions of the big parties regarding their concepts of Austria's policy of neutrality.

The Austrian People's Party speakers, especially its foreign policy spokesman, Steiner, charged the government and particularly Chancellor Kreisky with pursuing a foreign policy determined by personal prestige considerations and serving purely the interests of the Socialist International. Deputy Blenk went so far as to depict the government's foreign policy as "one-eyed and double-tongued," called the Austrian Socialist Party's position on Latin America "one-sided," and reprimanded Chancellor Kreisky for having criticized U.S. President Reagan in an "unqualified and unstatesmanlike manner."

Foreign Minister Pahr commented on current conflicts. Regarding the Falklands conflict, he said, it remains to be seen how it will affect U.S.-Latin American relations. The Middle East has been further destabilized as a result of the Israeli invasion of Lebanon in violation of international law, and the Iraqi-Iranian war, he said.

FDP TO ENTER INTO COALITION WITH CDU IN HESSE

LD171412 Hamburg DPA in German 1333 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Darmstadt, 17 June (DPA) -- The Hesse FDP said it will enter into a coalition with the CDU in respect of the regional elections on 26 September. The liberals voted in Darmstadt today for the resolution of the regional executive with 169 votes in favor, a narrow majority of the approximately 300 delegates. The vote was preceded by a controversial debate which lasted several hours.

Genscher Views Decision

LD171452 Hamburg DPA in German 1431 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 17 Jun (DPA) -- FDP Federal Chairman Hans-Dietrich Genscher views the decision of the Hesse FDP party congress regarding the formation of a coalition with the CDU during the regional election as a decision based on liberal reasons for Hesse and not against the Bonn coalition. Genscher emphasized in Bonn that the Hesse FDP made its decision independently and was not influenced by anybody. The Hesse FDP will have the full support of the federal party in the regional election campaign.

DIE WELT Comments

DW180921 Bonn DIE WELT in German 18 Jun 82 p 1

[Wilfried Hertz-Eichenrode editorial: "The Switches Are Set"]

[Text] The Hesse FDP decided with 169 against 129 votes in favor to form a coalition with the CDU. This setting of switches in Darmstadt must be viewed with regard to policy on the federal level.

1. Ekkehard Gries is a social liberal by nature, as is Hans-Dietrich Genscher. If he has achieved a Hesse FDP decision in favor of a coalition with the CDU, he must have had good reasons. They are contained in the decline of the SPD.

2. Gries justified the coalition change by saying that only a consistent market economy policy could help overcome the current economic and financial-political problems. The decisions of the Munich SPD congress, however, did not indicate such a market economy orientation. Gries echoed Genscher who had announced a "change" in Bonn.

3. The last Bonn-model coalition exists on a land level in Wiesbaden. The termination of this coalition in Hesse would necessarily have a pilot effect on Bonn.

The Darmstadt decision has a double meaning as a decision in proxy. Gries has made land-level policy on his own, but with regard to federal policy he has been acting in proxy for Genscher. As a partner of the last social-liberal federal land coalition, the Hesse FDP has at the same time programmed Bonn decisions in proxy for FDP federal level policy.

The Darmstadt decision is important for Genscher: The Hesse FDP has formed its opinion in a regular democratic procedure; the coalition decision in favor of the CDU has a democratic legitimacy at least in the federal land Hesse.

The question is whether this decision was made in time. It is possible that everything has come too late for Hesse; if Alfred Dregger should win an absolute majority on 26 September or if the FDP should fail to overcome the 5-percent clause. Both things seem quite possible. Genscher should, therefore, do the inevitable in Bonn prior to the Hesse elections. You can only imagine that the change to another coalition must be made in the struggle for the 1983 federal budget.

AFGHAN RESISTANCE DELEGATION MEETS PARTY LEADERS

LD171438 Hamburg DPA in German 1309 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 17 Jun (DPA) -- In Bonn on Thursday a delegation of the National Unity Front [as received] of Afghanistan met with leading CDU representatives, headed by Party Chairman Helmut Kohl. The foreign affairs spokesman of the CDU/CSU Parliamentary Group, Alois Mertes, told DPA that during the talk the Afghan delegation asked above all for aid for humanitarian projects. During the talk, in which Deputy Chairman of the Parliamentary Group Manfred Woerner also took part, the Afghans reported the unbroken fighting spirit of the Afghan resistance and the devastating situation of the population of the country.

The delegation, which had taken part in the Bundestag's morning session in commemoration of the national uprising in the GDR on 17 June 1953, reported, according to Mertes, that Soviet forces are continuing to intensively fight the resistance groups and are using chemical weapons. The delegation was in Bonn for 3 days at the invitation of the Konrad Adenauer Foundation.

ECONOMICS MINISTER LAMBSDORFF LEAVES FOR GREECE

LD171124 Hamburg DPA in German 1053 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Excerpt] Bonn, 17 Jun (DPA) -- Federal Economics Minister Otto Graf Lambsdorff flew to Athens on Thursday for talks on economic questions and cooperation within the European Community. In the Greek capital the minister will meet, among others, Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou, opposition leader Konstandinos Mitsotakis and Greek Central Bank President Gerasimos Arsenis.

MITTERRAND RETURNS FROM VISIT TO AUSTRIA

LD172312 Paris Domestic Service in French 2200 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] President Francois Mitterrand returned to Paris earlier this evening following a 2-day official visit to Austria. He stressed the similarity of views between France and Austria on the situation in the Middle East. He also stressed the reactivation of French-Austrian relations.

As to the Middle East, a joint statement demanded a cease-fire and the simultaneous withdrawal of both Israeli and foreign armed troops.

Concerning PLO leader Yasir 'Arafat, Mitterrand stated that he had not received from the latter any direct messages but only indirect messages, such as the one received from the secretary-general of the Arab League. The president stressed that 'Arafat could, like anyone else, come to France, but that having discussions was another thing altogether.

HERNU SEES LITTLE PROSPECT OF EUROFORCES

PM171215 Paris LE MONDE in French 16 Jun 82 p 8

[Text] The formation of a militarily credible "European pillar," in other words a joint defense organization proper to the European countries in the Atlantic alliance, alongside the "American pillar," seems difficult to imagine at present.

That is what Defense Minister Charles Hernu told the deputies on the National Assembly Defense Commission whom he addressed at the end of last week.

Questioned by Ives Lancien, RPR deputy for Paris, on the nature of the development of the Atlantic alliance envisaged by Francois Mitterrand and, in particular, on the formation of a European pillar, Mr Hernu replied: "Developing the alliance means redefining the common causes. There is no question of leaving the alliance until other collective security systems emerge to replace it. As for a European pillar, to be militarily credible, it would need a political chief who could decide to use arms within a matter of minutes, and that seems difficult to imagine at present."

Stressing the advantages which the Soviet Union draws from the mobility of its weapons -- the withdrawal of the SS-20 missiles to the other side of the Urals would nonetheless enable them to reach the whole of Western Europe -- and from the size of its territory, Mr Hernu recalled that Moscow's military doctrine is based solely on attack.

"That is why," the defense minister added, "the necessary arms will be developed to ensure that nobody stands to gain from attacking us." French military forces must be directed toward a polyvalent system: "Our troops," Mr Hernu stated, "must, if necessary, be able to be sent to Africa with the necessary equipment and training while also retaining the capability of acting in Central Europe."

The defense minister took the opportunity to stress that he would not be the minister to use French soldiers as "cannon fodder" and that to have well-armed forces it was necessary "to have more equipment and, if necessary, fewer soldiers."

FINANCE MINISTER DEFENDS FRANC DEVALUATION

PM171439 Paris LE MONDE in French 15 Jun 82 p 8

[Philippe Lemaitre dispatch: "Bonn Has Shown Concern for Cooperation With Paris"]

[Excerpts] Brussels -- "The European Monetary System has emerged stronger from the adjustments we have made by joint agreement." Those were the first words spoken by Mr Delors at the end of the meeting held in Brussels on Saturday 12 June by the finance ministers of the nine EEC countries which participate in the European monetary agreement (Britain remains outside).

Was that just a show of optimism? Was it necessary boasting at a difficult time? It was certainly partly that. A devaluation is always a failure, and this is no exception: a 10-percent slide against the mark and the guilder; 18.5 percent against the same currencies if the October 1981 adjustment is added -- this is clearly much more than a warning.

Nonetheless, Mr Delors' positive reaction seems justified. All reports confirm that the meeting went well. It was long because there was a great deal to discuss. The ministers listened to the French minister explain the guidelines of the accompanying policy which his government will implement to ensure that the devaluation is a success. That program was welcomed.

It was then necessary to deliberate on the adjustments which the eight other partners should make if necessary. "Convergence requires efforts on all sides", the French minister commented.

Mr Delors gave two reasons for the government's need to devalue the currency: the legacy from the previous 7-year term and the delay in international recovery. Discharging past liabilities means halting the black tide of unemployment and reviving growth, the French minister explained. During the first phase of the government's economic policy it tried to take the risk of recovery which produced better results in the struggle against unemployment than elsewhere but on the other hand produced a less rapid reduction in inflation.

In addition, Mr Delors added, "Last October, because we wanted to act as good Europeans (in other words because we tried not to embarrass our partners) we tried to limit the franc's fall against the mark to 8.5 percent, whereas the inflation differential left by Mr Giscard d'Estaing's administration was greater."

The second reason is external in nature: The international recovery, so often predicted, has not come. U.S. monetary policy, the dollar's wild behavior and prohibitive interest rates are helping both to delay that recovery and to accentuate currency chaos. What does Mr Delors think of transatlantic cooperation? The reply was cutting: "For some time the Americans have shown extraordinary cynicism. They are going back on agreements reached and taking measures for which they criticize others."

Mr Delors noted with bitterness that the Americans are showing a complete lack of interest in the study, decided at Versailles, on means of promoting better cooperation between the dollar, the European currency unit and the yen. "If people behave in that way, international conferences lose all point," Mr Delors concluded. Versailles was decidedly a sorry affair.

LE MONDE Views EMS

PM171127 Paris LE MONDE in French 15 Jun 82 p 1

[Editorial: "Anchorage in the EMS"]

[Text] The European Monetary System [EMS] has apparently not emerged much weaker from the sixth adjustment of parities since its formation in March 1979 which it has just experienced.

Quite the reverse; the constructive attitude adopted by the EEC finance ministers bears witness to their attachment to a system whose advantages, as experience has shown, go beyond those which might be expected from an ordinary exchange agreement.

There were rumors that the president of the French Republic felt only limited support for a system which constantly exposes his government to parity adjustments whose effect on public opinion and on voters is very likely to be negative. Furthermore that risk is amplified by the mistrust which a leftwing government inspires in those who hold capital.

In the economic sphere a socialist government has to do better than another government to achieve the same results. In those circumstances, would it not be tempting to withdraw the franc from the EMS and return to the discreet fluency of a completely floating exchange rate?

Mr Delors gave a responsible, in other words completely negative, reply to that question. To justify fidelity to the system he recalled that following the franc's removal from the "Snake" -- the EMS' precursor -- in March 1976 the national currency lost 21 percent of its value in less than 1 year. Another observation is that the dollar has appreciated by 44 percent over the past 2 months. "In that climate of monetary upheaval, the EMS has held," the economy minister stressed. "Through adjustments which have certainly been more frequent than in its early days, it has moderated the dollar's disastrous fluctuation."

The Germans have reacted in the same spirit. The general opinion is that Mr Lahnstein, the new finance minister who is very close to the federal chancellor, stood by the French as if it were a crucial matter for him. The reasons which prompted Mr Schmidt and Mr Giscard d'Estaing to create the EMS, despite Bundesbank reservations, remain valid: mistrust of the passing whims of U.S. policy and the need to ensure a minimum of exchange stability among countries which are each other's main commercial partners....

There are now new reasons. Cooperation in the community, especially with regard to Japan and the United States, is only possible if there is a minimum of compatibility between the member countries' economic policies. The French Government, which wants and needs that cooperation, cannot completely turn its back on what is being done in neighboring countries. Among other things that is the significance of the accompanying program: to achieve better cohesion with the partner countries without abandoning the socialist objectives.

The EMS is an exchange system in which the levels of monetary adjustments are debated, and that prohibits competitive devaluations (the example of Belgium in February 1982 shows that consultation effectively limits the danger of extremes). But in addition it is becoming the anchoring point for a concerted economic policy for everybody. If that development is confirmed it will be possible to legitimately agree that the EMS has emerged stronger from the trial.

ISRAELI FOREIGN MINISTER GREETED COOLLY IN PARIS

PM171531 Paris LE MONDE in French 17 Jun 82 p 6

["P.B." report: "Mr Mitterrand Has Confirmed France's Support for the Lebanese Government"]

[Text] Elysee Spokesman Michel Vauzelle refused to describe the tone of the 45-minute meeting which Mr Mitterrand granted to Israeli Foreign Minister Shamir on Tuesday, 15 June. He merely read a text stating that the head of state had "confirmed the solemn appeal launched by France the previous day for an immediate end to the bombings, fighting and the suffering of the Lebanese and Palestinian populations."

At the meeting with Mr Shamir Mr Mitterrand also "reaffirmed the French Government's will to give its support and guarantee to any process which would enable Lebanon's lawful government to rebuild Lebanese integrity, unity and independence." Finally, he reminded him of "the demand for the immediate withdrawal of Israeli military forces from Lebanon -- a demand already made by the Security Council and the Ten."

Did Mr Mitterrand take a very firm line? We can assume that he did judging from the laconic statements made by Mr Shamir. Asked how the meeting had gone when he left the Elysee, he merely replied, "Very well." Shortly afterward at a press conference at the Israeli Embassy, he tried to play down the extent of the differences between "two friendly countries which have differences of opinion but which agree on other problems."

Nonetheless, he refused to specify those different points and, when questioned on his interlocutor's reaction on the subject of the international force in which Israel would like to see France take second place after the United States, Mr Shamir merely said, after a moment's hesitation: "We discussed the matter. The dialogue will continue." On that specific point the Quai d'Orsay recalled that Mr Cheysson had stated in Bordeaux on Monday: "It is much too soon to know whether such a force could fulfill its mandate better than the previous one." The External Relations Ministry spokesman added: "It is therefore clearly much too soon to envisage France's participation in such a force."

The spokesman also pointed out that, during the working session in the morning, before Mr Cheysson left for Riyadh, the French minister had listened to his interlocutor's viewpoint and reminded him of France's position. In particular he stressed that "it was very clear that, without a normal future for the Palestinian people, France thought a lasting peace in the Near East impossible." No bilateral questions were discussed, the spokesman said in conclusion.

Israeli diplomatic circles -- Jerusalem -- are stressing that the mere fact that that visit went ahead is a success. The talks are also described as "polite and correct" which, according to the Jerusalem POST, clearly means that the atmosphere was regarded as "rather cold" in Israel. Nonetheless, Israel appreciated the fact that Mr Mitterrand met Mr Shamir, although that did not seem to be planned, and sees it as a sign of France's will to pursue dialogue despite the differences.

However, the invasion of Lebanon is still arousing intense emotion in France and Europe. Diplomatic circles state that Belgium, acting on the Ten's behalf, presented 10 specific questions on that operation to the Israeli ambassador in Brussels on Monday. In particular the Ten were asking how long Israel intends to stay in Lebanon, what it is going to do with the Palestinian prisoners and what role it accepts for the International Red Cross.

PERTINI RECEIVES IVORY COAST PRESIDENT

AU171535 Rome ANSA in English 1527 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 12 Jun (ANSA) -- President of the Ivory Coast, Felix Houphouet-Boigny, was received by Italian head-of-state Sandro Pertini today at the Quirinale Palace.

Houphouet-Boigny and his wife arrived here last night for a private visit and will be received in the Vatican tomorrow by Pope John Paul II.

PCI OFFICIALS RECEIVE ARGENTINE CP DELEGATION

PM171359 Rome L'UNITA in Italian 15 Jun 82 p 2

[Unattributed report: "Argentine Communist Party Delegation Received at PCI Headquarters"]

[Text] Rome -- Communist Party of Argentina Secretary General Comrade Atos Sava met yesterday at PCI Directorate headquarters with a PCI delegation composed of Directorate member Comrade Paolo Bufalini, Central Committee member and foreign section chief Comrade Antonio Rubbi and foreign section aide Comrade Claudio Bernabucci.

During the cordial conversation Comrade Atos Sava, having thanked the Italian communists for their action of solidarity with the Argentine people's democratic struggle, gave a briefing on the new situation that has come about in Argentina and Latin American following the British-Argentine conflict, characterized by a broad people's mobilization to assert what are considered national rights within the framework of a struggle against all colonialist-type vestiges and for the restoration of democracy in the country.

Comrade Bufalini presented the position of the PCI, which demands an immediate end to the armed conflict and a political solution that will take account of previous UN resolutions, so that a process of real democratization can be begun in Argentina under peaceful conditions, leading to the recognition of human and civil rights and the restoration of democratic freedoms. Last, a renewed commitment was made to further develop the traditional cordial relations between the peoples and parties.

COMMUNIQUE ON ITALIAN-TUNISIAN CP TALKS REPORTED

PM170931 Venice L'UNITA in Italian 14 Jun 82 p 5

[Unattributed report: "PCI-Tunisian Communist Party Joint Communique: Mediterranean Must Be a Region of Peace Again"]

[Text] Tunis -- A PCI delegation headed by Directorate member and International Affairs Department Chief Comrade Gian Carlo Pajetta and composed of foreign section member Comrade Nadia Spano has met over the past few days in Tunis with a Tunisian Communist Party [PCI] delegation led by First Secretary Comrade Mohamed Harmel and composed of Central Committee Secretary Comrade Mohamed Ennafaa and Politburo Member Comrade Abdelmajid Triki.

The PCI delegation took part in a debate with party cadres. The PCI delegation expressed satisfaction that the Italian comrades also had meetings with other Tunisian national forces.

The joint communique issued at the end of the meeting centers on three points and states as follows:

"1 -- During the meeting the two delegations expressed their profound indignation at the aggression perpetrated by the Israeli Army against the Lebanese and Palestinian peoples. They expressed their solidarity with these two peoples and reasserted the need for broad action by all the forces of peace and progress to end the Israeli Government's aggressive policy and the encouragement that this policy draws from U.S. support as well as from the the ambiguous and dangerous attitude of the West European governments.

"They consider that the present dangerous situation," the document continues, "poses the need for the immediate withdrawal of all the forces of aggression and respect for the territorial integrity and independence of the Lebanese state.

"They also expressed their conviction that the only just solution to the Middle East issue depends on the recognition and realization of the Palestinian people's aspirations to create their own independent state.

"The two delegations therefore stressed the anxieties shared by both parties regarding the threats facing the peace and security of the Mediterranean area.

"They declared themselves in favor of a struggle on the part of all the littoral peoples to make this area a zone of peace, the first steps in which could be the denuclearization of the Mediterranean and a commitment to resolve pending issues by negotiation with a view to seeking positive solutions.

"2 -- In a fraternal and open atmosphere," the communique continues, "the two delegations exchanged information and opinions on the situations and problems of their respective countries.

"The PCI delegation expressed its congratulations for the first successes achieved by the PCT and by the national and democratic forces as a whole in the struggle for democratic development and for a policy of economic and social progress.

"It stressed the importance of the extremely positive factor constituted by the PCT's legal activity and the growth of its role in Tunisian society.

"Apart from the specific differences between the two countries, which imply individual stances on the part of each party, and respecting each party's autonomy, the two delegations noted important convergences in the struggle for the negotiated and peaceful solution of all problems and for the freedom and independence of all peoples.

"They are convinced that this struggle needs the constant strengthening of the solidarity and cooperation of all the democratic and peace-loving forces in the world and in the Mediterranean.

"The two delegations," the document continues, "confirmed their respective countries' determination to step up their peoples' struggle in solidarity and to work for the constant improvement of good-neighborly relations between Italy and Tunisia. They are convinced that such relations can and must take the form of better economic cooperation -- especially in the field of fishing -- and in more continuous cultural exchanges.

"3 -- The two delegations," the document concludes, "broached the problems of the workers movement and the liberation movement worldwide and compared positively their respective thoughts and assessments on all these issues. They agreed on the usefulness of continuing to examine the issues with respect to which there is a shared approach, within the framework of their friendly relations."

ANSA REPORTS SLAYING OF PLO MAN IN ROME

AU171517 Rome ANSA in English 1508 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 17 Jun (ANSA) -- The Palestine Liberation Organization's number two man in Italy, (Husein Kamal), was slain in Rome this morning just a few hours after he visited the spot where another PLO militant was cut down by four gunmen.

(Husein Kamal), 33, was blown to bits when his booby-trapped car exploded at 7 GMT today. He had just driven the car out of his garage when a time bomb hidden in the engine went off. A few hours earlier he had gone to the outskirts of the capital with the head of the PLO in Italy, (Niwr Haddad), to see the place where a 32 year-old Lebanese medical student (Nazeyk Matar) had been ambushed last night.

(Kamal) furnished police with information that might be helpful in tracking down (Matar's) killers.

(Kamal) himself, born in Amman, Jordan, and enrolled in the Perugia medical school. [sentence as received]

Israel Blamed

AU171530 Rome ANSA in English 1520 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 17 Jun (ANSA) -- The Palestine Liberation Organization today charged that it was Israeli Premier Menahem Begin's terrorists who killed two PLO militants in Rome within hours of each other.

Lebanese student (Nazeyk Matar) was gunned down around 24 GMT last night and PLO representative (Husein Kamal) was killed when his car blew up this morning at 7 GMT.

A note released here by the PLO office in Italy said that within the framework of the genocide being perpetrated against the Palestinian people, Begin's terrorists a free hand in Rome where they sought to physically annihilate Palestinian representatives. [sentence as received] The PLO called attention to the grave dangers that all Palestinians resident in Italy are subjected to as "Begin's killers" in this country "can count on the support and backing of that terrorist den known as the Israeli Embassy in Rome," the document stated.

Killings Discussed

AU171935 Rome ANSA in English 1910 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Beirut, 17 Jun (ANSA) -- The slaying of two leading Palestinian figures in Rome in the last hours is the signal for a new wave of attacks against Palestine Liberation Organization official abroad and sympathizers, the PLO warned here today.

The "Israeli secret services" killed the two men, a Palestinian source who asked not to be named told ANSA. "Their objective is to break the nerve of the combatants defending Beirut and to provoke a reaction in order to justify a new bloody reprisal." But the official PLO spokesman would say no more than that the Israeli secret service were behind the double homicide, preferring to abstain from further comment.

(Suheil Natur), spokesman for the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, was more explicit. "Israel is profiting from our situation in Lebanon to kill our comrades throughout the world", he told ANSA.

"The names of (Husein Kamal) and (Nazeyk Matar) join those of so many Palestinians assassinated by the Zionist agents, but their death will not halt our march towards the revolution."

Colombo Deplores Killings

AU171955 Rome ANSA in English 1937 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Rome, 17 Jun (ANSA) -- Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo met with a delegation of Arab ambassadors accredited in Rome here this afternoon to voice his "deep deploration and firm condemnation" of the assassination of a Palestine Liberation Organization official and a PLO sympathizer in this capital in the last twenty-four hours.

A Foreign Ministry communique said he assured the diplomats that the Italian police and magistrates would do everything in their power to track down those reponsible for what he decribed as "these disquieting episodes."

"The episodes are the expression of methods of political struggle based on violence, methods which are unacceptable on Italian territory wherever they may come from" Colombo added. He also assured the ambassadors that the Rome government is continuing to follow developments in Lebanon, and in western Beirut particularly, with the closest attention. In other points, he told them that Lebanon was the focus of his meeting with Secretary-of-State Alexander Haig yesterday and that the same problem was under constant examination and discussion among the EEC Ten.

To wind up, he mentioned the Rome government's decision to send emergency aid to Lebanon immediately.

TWO RED BRIGADE MEMBERS ARRESTED IN MILAN

AU161558 Rome ANSA in English 1549 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] Milan, 16 Jun (ANSA) -- Two Red Brigadists belonging to the Walter Alasia column in Milan were arrested here today. They were identified as Francesco Bellosi, 34, a former school teacher, wanted on charges of being an accessory to murder, and Orazio Marzo, 32, a street sweeper, wanted on charges of subversion.

POLICEMEN, PRISONER KILLED IN HIGHWAY ATTACK

NC160922 Paris AFP in English 0913 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] Palermo, Italy, 16 Jun (AFP) -- Four Italian state policemen and a prisoner were killed when assailants fired on their vehicle in Sicily today, as it entered the Palermo-to-Trapani Highway, a reliable source said. A young girl was wounded during the shooting, the source added.

Mafia Boss Ferlito Killed

NC161104 Paris AFP in English 1047 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] Palermo, 16 Jun (AFP) -- A Sicilian mafia boss and three state police escorts were killed today when gunmen blasted their Mercedes during a prison transfer, a reliable source said. The driver of the car was also killed.

Alfio Ferlito, 36, a leading mafia figure in Sicily, appeared to be the latest casualty in continuing clan warfare, as the rented Mercedes which was bearing him to another prison was caught in gunfire at the entrance to the Palermo-to-Trapani highway. Earlier reports said four Italian state police had been killed. Eyewitnesses said the assailants, who escaped capture, were driving a light-colored BMW.

The body of one of the state police was found about 50 metres from the car, indicating Ferlito's escorts had attempted to fight off the attack.

EANES EXPLAINS RESERVATIONS ON GOVERNMENT

PM171523 Lisbon EXPRESSO in Portuguese 12 Jun 82 p 1

["J.J." Interview with Portuguese President Ramalho Eanes -- date and place not specified]

[Text] EXPRESSO: What is the reason for the several days' delay in approving the reshuffle proposed by the prime minister?

Ramalho Eanes: I decided that I needed to gather the necessary information for a correct appraisal of the situation. This reshuffle prompted major doubts in me regarding relations among the institutions and the way in which relations between the government and the president of the republic should be handled. The reshuffle also prompted doubts in me from another viewpoint: I do not believe that it will create better conditions for resolving the needs that are emerging. I wanted to hear the prime minister's explanation of the bases for the government reshuffle. After that I concluded that the proposed reshuffle should be accepted because I did not want my nonacceptance to provide a pretext for people to accuse me of delaying the revision of the constitution.

EXPRESSO: What issues arise with regard to institutional relations between the government and the president of the republic?

Ramalho Eanes: It is a procedural matter. I might even have known that possible changes were being considered in the government team and have been prepared to give a reply when informed of it. But what happened was that these possible changes were never reported to me by the prime minister. I was therefore very surprised when I heard about the government changes from the media.

EXPRESSO: Is it therefore purely a formal matter?

Ramalho Eanes: It is more than a formality, though the procedure was incorrect. I was very surprised because it was not until 1300 Saturday that I received the prime minister's proposal to reshuffle the government, having already seen the cabinet communique on the subject published in the press which, moreover, apparently misinterpreted the communique dismissing and appointing the ministers. I do not believe that there was any ill intent in the way the procedure took place, but the president of the republic cannot be informed of a proposed government reshuffle only after the government has published it in the press.

EXPRESSO: Does the fact that you have accepted the proposed reshuffle imply a strengthening of your political confidence in the prime minister?

Ramalho Eanes: The question of political confidence does not arise. The government and the prime minister have my institutional confidence as long as they remain in power.

EXPRESSO: During your meeting with the prime minister at which the proposed reshuffle was discussed, did you raise any objections to the inclusion of any of the names proposed or the maintenance of any particular ministers, specifically the internal administration minister?

Ramalho Eanes: Such matters concerning the internal administration minister or others were not broached, nor were such persons discussed. I would have acted otherwise had I believed that this reshuffle would meet the country's needs. Personally, I do not believe that it does. If I believed that the reshuffle would resolve anything, obviously I would look at the names proposed by the government.

EXPRESSO: Under what circumstances do you believe a government reshuffle should take place?

Ramalho Eanes: As I said, I believe that at this time a government reshuffle is not in line with the current needs. The right time for a reshuffle would be once the revision of the constitution is complete. With the problems that exist at present, I do not see the need for this reshuffle.

GOVERNMENT TO SEEK GIBRALTAR COMMAND WITHIN NATO

PM170835 Madrid EL PAIS in Spanish 6 Jun 82 p 15

[Soledad Gallego-Diaz dispatch: "Spain Seeks Setting Up of Command Comprising National Territory"]

[Text] Brussels -- Spain seeks the setting up of a fourth command coming directly under the NATO Military Committee and comprising the peninsular territory, the Balearics, the Canary Islands, Ceuta and Melilla and the base of Gibraltar. This will be the proposal put forward by the Spanish negotiators when our country's entry into the Atlantic alliance's military structure begins to be discussed, according to a statement by Defense Minister Alberto Oliart yesterday.

Both Oliart and Foreign Minister Jose Pedro Perez-Llorca maintained that Spain is not as yet part of that military structure (despite the fact that senior NATO officials have asserted the contrary). Oliart said that Spain will soon be appointing its representative on the NATO Military Committee and that he will attend the next meeting of the alliance's Defense Planning Committee, to which France does not belong because it does not form part of the integrated command structure.

According to the defense minister, the setting up of the fourth command (which would be added to the three current commands (SACLANT, SACEUR and CINCCHAN): "is our first priority in NATO." Oliart acknowledged that that command would require making changes in the current structure of SACLANT, and admitted that bilateral talks with Portugal are taking place to that effect.

As regards Gibraltar, Oliart flatly denied that he had accepted a shared Spanish-British command over the base, and explained that in Spanish plans that base would become a NATO base and come exclusively under a Spanish command, coming in turn solely under the Military Committee, which is the alliance's top body from the viewpoint of defense.

Perez-Llorca specified that the issue of Gibraltar will be discussed in Brussels and in bilateral talks with the United Kingdom. He pointed out that the problem as a whole cannot be resolved in the short term. Asked whether it would be possible to achieve command over the base before resolving the problem of sovereignty over the Rock, the minister confined himself to stating that it is a "dynamic problem and that the essential issue is sovereignty." Perez-Llorca acknowledged that the current circumstances (the Malvinas conflict) are not good for the negotiations.

Spain continues to maintain that Ceuta and Melilla fall within the area covered by the Washington treaty and, as such, if the fourth command is set up, would figure within that framework. Perez-Llorca stated that he had immediately contested recent statements by NATO Secretary General Joseph Luns according to which the two cities are outside the area of the treaty. For his part, Oliart maintained that to speak of Ceuta and Melilla is the same as to speak of the Canary Islands, "or of Granada or Malaga," he added hastily. "It is a matter," Perez-Llorca explained, "of two cities which were Spanish even before the Spanish or Moroccan nations were created. It is not a colonial matter, nor do they have anything to do with Gibraltar or the Malvinas. Nobody has ever treated them in international forums as colonies, and they never will be treated in that way."

DENMARK

U.S. RESERVATIONS BLOCKING EEC CHAIRMAN'S VISIT

PM171105 Copenhagen BERLINGSKE TIDENDE in Danish 11 Jun 82 p 5

[Klaud Justesen dispatch]

[Text] Bonn -- Prime Minister Anker Jorgensen admitted yesterday that he very much wants to visit the United States in the next 6 months, while Denmark holds the EEC chairmanship. However, its is extremely doubtful that there will be an invitation. Poweful forces in Washington do not want to see the Danish prime minister there, even though he would be representing the whole EEC.

For the last few years it has been customary for the prime minister and foreign minister from the EEC chairman country to visit Washington. Belgian Prime Minister Martens and Foreign Minister Tindemans did so in February. However, as BERLINGSKE TIDENDE was able to report yesterday, despite considerable efforts there has been no success in obtaining such an invitation for the Danish ministers.

Jorgensen admitted that there has been no invitation, but also said that he had taken no invitiative in that direction. "But we think it important that as EEC chairman we should visit Washington."

High-ranking U.S. diplomatic sources in Bonn, however, told BERLINGSKE TIDENDE that there are circles in Washington which wish to demonstrate that the Danish prime minister's statements on U.S. involvement in El Salvador, for example, have been noted. They consider them unsuitable comments from an ally and take the view that there should be consequences. It is possible that the invitation to the EEC chairman could perhaps be delayed for so long that a new chairman would have taken over at the end of the year.

Jorgensen admitted indirectly that there were problems in relations between the United States and Denmark. "There is no doubt that my statements have led to reactions in Washington," he said. The prime minister described reactions in Denmark as exaggerated and dismissed the suggestion that problems in relations with the United States could influence U.S. relations with the EEC.

Jorgensen also dismissed the suggestion that personal contacts between himself and Ronald Reagan have been affected. "To my great surprise I found myself sitting next to Reagan at lunch. We had a pleasant discussion and spoke about many things. He told me about his past career as an actor and trade union leader. I remarked that that made us colleagues. No, we did not talk about El Salvador, but we did talk about other political topics."

Danish sources have also dismissed the suggestion that there is an automatic invitation for the new EEC chairman. This only happens if there are current EEC-U.S. problems. But there are plenty of these at the moment, and Jorgensen also admitted that the last time he was EEC chairman he did visit Washington.

FINLAND

DIVERSIFIED TRADE AGREEMENT SIGNED WITH PRC

PM170955 Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 12 Jun 82 p 14

[FINSKA NOTISBYRAN report: "Diversified Trade Between Finland and China"]

[Text] From the beginning of next year trade between Finland and China will be more diversified.

This decision was confirmed Friday [11 June] when Finnish Foreign Trade Minister Esko Rekola and Chinese First Deputy Foreign Trade Minister Zheng Tuobin signed a trade agreement for the years 1983-1987.

According to the agreement, trade payments will be made in covertible currencies, which is also a stipulation made by the IMF. China recently joined the IMF.

According to the agreement, Finland will scrap all import restrictions affecting only imports from China. After the first 5-year period the agreement will automatically be revalidated yearly unless it is terminated. Minister Zheng expects the new agreement to create the conditions from an increase in trade in both directions.

According to the agreement, it is possible that Finnish firms will take part in the modernization of seven outdated forestry enterprises in China, it was said.

According to the customs department, trade with China last year totaled 305 million markkaa, of which exports totaled 182 million markkaa.

POLAND'S KARAS COMPLETES TRADE TALKS IN HELSINKI

PM171055 Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 13 Jun 82 p 10

[FINSKA NOTISBYRAN report: "Polish Ministerial Visit -- Poland Offers Finland Projects"]

[Text] Poland is offering Finnish firms the opportunity of taking part in projects which Poland, because of its economic difficulties, has been forced to put on ice, Polish Deputy Foreign Minister Antoni Karas said during a 2-day working visit to Finland.

Karas said that Poland will this year supply the agreed 2.3 million tons of coal to Finland. He also said that the country is prepared to supply more than this amount. Poland is prepared to buy forestry machinery from Finland and is offering as payment around .5 million cubic meters of storm-felled timber.

During Karas's visit there have been discussions of how to stimulate trade between Finland and Poland. In Helsinki he met Foreign Trade Minister Esko Rekola and Industry Minister Esko Ollila as well as Under Secretary of State Ake Wihtol and repesentatives of Finnish industry.

The economic situation in Poland has now taken a turn for the better, even though total production is still falling. The mining industry has succeeded in raising its production figures over last year's levels and from the end of the year all production should once again be increasing, Karas said.

The fact that negotiations about the country's debts have been put on ice has placed Poland in a difficult position, since it is now impossible to reach agreement on repayment timetables. According to Karas Poland will need new Western credits totaling $3 billion this year. He also said that at present the Polish parliament is working on proposed legislation to facilitate foreign investment in Poland.

Karas described his short working visit to Finland as busy and successful. During the negotiations held in Helsinki he presented a list of projects which could interest Finnish firms.

The potential cooperation projects on the list cover around 150 branches of industry, from textiles to automobiles. Karas said that Poland was also interested in increasing its imports from Finland "as soon as we get our economy in a little better shape."

NORWAY

ARMED FORCES TO BUY HAWK'S FOR AIRBASE DEFENSE

PM180811 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 15 Jun 82 p 16

[Knut Falchenberg report]

[Text] The armed forces have made their choice of an anti-aircraft missile. "I have recommended to the Defense Ministry that we acquire the 'improved HAWK' system," armed forces chief Sverre Hamre told AFTENPOSTEN. Only a few weeks before Hamre retires from active service he has reached a decision in the matter which has followed him since the missile project was first mentioned in 1968 in the long-term defense plan.

Hamre was unwilling to say how many missile batteries Norway will acquire to defend important airbases, large areas of land and important targets around the vulnerable airbases. "With the tenders we have received from the Americans it would be most rational and simple to lease the missile systems rather than buy them," Hamre said.

The systems in question come from the U.S. Army, but they have been updated with new technology. Hamre said that the systems could be further developed. "An important factor in the decision has been that the U.S. defense forces have decided to keep their HAWK systems in use. This means that we will be guaranteed necessary supplies and spare parts, and also the possibility of modernization at a later date," Hamre said. He hinted that the cost to Norway would be over 1 billion kroner over the next few years. The missiles would be deployed not this year but "fairly quickly," he said.

[Question] Are changes in the military threat to Norway the reason why we are now opting for a more long-range system like the HAWK rather than a short-range system like the Roland?

[Answer] "During the period in which we have been evaluating anti-aircraft missiles the threat has grown considerably, especially as far as aircraft and their ability to 'deliver' missiles from great distances are concerned," General Hamre said. He said that such a serious choice is never easy, and that he is personally extremely pleased to be able to make such a clear-cut recommendation before he retires as defense chief in the summer.

"I am fully confident that we have found a good solution, and when the missiles are in place we will no longer need to speak of airbase anti-aircraft defenses as a weak point in our defenses. We will be very well served by the HAWK ," Gen Hamre said.

SWEDEN

NEW REGULATIONS ISSUED ON TERRITORIAL VIOLATIONS

LD171406 Stockholm International Service in Swedish 1000 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] The Swedish Armed Forces will have better ways of dealing with gross violations of Swedish territory. The government confirmed today the new regulations proposed by Commander in Chief Lennart Ljung on how the forces should act when Swedish territory is violated. The new regulations, which will come into effect on 1 July 1983, mean, for instance, that a foreign submarine found in inner Swedish waters is to be forced to surface, identified and taken to a special anchorage place. If necessary, armed force will be used. The regulations will also apply to other foreign warships which enter Swedish waters.

UK SHIPS TO TAKE 5,000 PRISONERS TO ARGENTINA

LD181118 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1054 GMT 18 Jun 82

[By Chris Moncrieff, PA chief political correspondent]

[Text] The Red Cross in Geneva today told the British Government that Argentina had cleared the way for the Canberra and Norland to take some 5,000 prisoners to an Argentine port with a guarantee of safe passage.

The two vessels are expected to sail today and more runs are possible. The port has not yet been identified. If a continuous shuttle service between the Falkland Islands and Argentina is maintained then most of the prisoners could be back before the beginning of next week.

The so-called "war cabinet" met at Downing Street this morning to consider this latest development and Argentina's proposal for the use of some of her own ships to aid the evacuation process. But no decision has yet been taken on the issue.

The latest moves are regarded by the British Government as a hopeful sign of the attitude of the new regime in Buenos Aires following the downfall of President Galtieri.

Britain intends to retain a special group of prisoners, largely commandoes and those with specialist skills, until there is a declaration by Argentina of a total cessation of hostilities.

No decision has been reached on where this group, which may number about 1,000, will be kept, but they could be moved to Britain.

However, there is still no sign of a formal declaration ending hostilities from the new regime. Britain would expect a written document signed by those in authority.

Britain has again asked the Swiss Embassy in Buenos Aires, which is attending to British interests in Argentina, to raise this issue again.

Many of the 10,000 prisoners on the Falklands are young conscripts and the government wants them off its hands as soon as possible because of their poor condition after weeks of bitter cold and lack of food.

ARGENTINE ARMS BEING EXAMINED FOR POSSIBLE USE

LD172016 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1929 GMT 17 Jun 82

[By Robert Hutchinson, PA defense correspondent]

[Excerpt] The captured booty of Argentinian aircraft, ammunition and thousands of personal weapons are now being examined to see if they can be used by British forces.

Two Bell helicopters have been proved airworthy and a Chinook helicopter is yet to be examined. The RAF lost a number of Chinooks when the Atlantic Conveyor was hit by an Exocet missile.

If the condition of the military hardware warrants, much will be taken over and shipped back to Britain for use by our armed forces. Both sides in the Falklands conflict used very much the same weapons.

The big fear in London is that the Argentines will give no reply to the suggestion that hostilities generally should be ended.

British ships and forces will have to remain on a high state of vigilance in case of sudden attack by submarine or aircraft. Defence chiefs are said to be very concerned about this.

RELIEF TASK FORCE LEAVES FOR SOUTH ATLANTIC

LD181110 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1040 GMT 18 Jun 82

[By John Vincent, PA staff reporter]

[Text] Five warships were meeting in the English Channel today to form a relief task force bound for the South Atlantic. The group will replace damaged warships currently heading for home after the battle for the Falklands.

The Leander-class frigate Apollo (2,650-tons) slipped out of Devonport with its number painted out. She was being joined by another Devenport based Leander-class frigate, HMS Danae (2,550 tons).

These two were to join up with three warships leaving Portsmouth -- the Type 42 destroyers Birmingham and Southampton and the elderly Rothesay-class frigate Rhyl.

ESTIMATE OF DESTROYED ARGENTINE AIRCRAFT RAISED

PM171423 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 17 Jun 82 p 4

[Air Cdre G.S. Cooper, air correspondent, report: "More Argentine Aircraft Are Found Damaged"]

[Text] Discovery of many wrecked Argentine aircraft at Port Stanley and other landing grounds on the Falklands has raised to over 100 the Defence Ministry's estimate of the number destroyed by the task force.

British losses in action were six Harriers and three army helicopters brought down by fire from the ground. Accidents in the severe operating conditions during sustained periods of intensive flying increased task force losses to 20. These included three more Harriers and eight helicopters.

It is not known how many aircraft Argentina lost in accidents. Nor is it known how many crashed unseen on the way back from the battle area to the mainland.

There were reports from the task force of several aircraft seen leaving in a damanged condition, trailing smoke and "probably destroyed." These have not been included in the claims.

With the addition of one more Mirage claimed in the last few days of the battle, the total number of claims comes to 81, as follows:

Skyhawk	29
Mirage	23
Pucara	9
Helicopters	9
Attack Trainers	5
Light A/C	3
Canberra	2
C-130	1
	81

Included in these figures are 17 aircraft reported earlier to have been hit on the ground. The Defence Ministry's estimate of over 100 aircraft destroyed in total suggests that nearly 40 damaged helicopters and fixed-wing aircraft have been found on the Falklands.

As for the claims of 64 Argentine aircraft shot down, the sudden intensity and speed of near-supersonic air combat tends to confuse eye-witness accounts of crashing aircraft.

Duplication of claims in the Battle of Britain led to three being claimed for every two actually destroyed. But for every Argentine aircraft "over-claimed" at least one was probably lost "unseen" in action or in an accident.

The Defence Ministry is to undertake a detailed inquiry of all intelligence reports collected after each engagement from pilots and gunners. This will not only help to establish a more accurate record of the action that is available from fragmentary news reports, but will analyse the effectiveness of the weapons used.

The aim will be to find out how many Sidewinder, Sea Dart, Seacat, Seawolf, Rapier and Blowpipe missiles were fired, and what percentage hit their targets; how many aircraft were destroyed by Harriers, and how many by missiles or guns.

Air defence tactics will also be studied. The area Defence missile, Sea Dart, is said to have not fulfilled expectations. The study will find out whether this was fair criticism or a result of constraints on the use of Sea Darts in areas where task force aircraft might have been operating.

The Defence Ministry is considerably relieved at not receiving any reports of shooting down of our own aircraft.

ADMIRAL ASSESSES VALUE OF STANLEY HARBOR AS PORT

PM171425 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 17 Jun 82 p 4

[Desmond Wettern, naval correspondent report: "Stanley's Port Value Limited"]

[Text] Adml Sir John Fieldhouse, the C-in-C fleet, disclosed yesterday that the Port Stanley horbour approaches had been mined, but that the senior Argentine naval officer among the prisoners had defined the position of the minefield.

Nevertheless, the value of Port Stanley as a port to keep the men ashore supplied will be limited. The maximum depth of water alongside the jetties is only 15 ft, and there is 30 ft of water in the anchorage.

This would be enough for a frigate, but with the possible exception of some of the chartered ferries, not for many of the merchant ships in the task force.

The variable wind conditions also make the harbour a tricky anchorage, particularly with a southerly wind, as there is little room for a ship to swing at anchor.

Adml Fieldhouse, speaking at his headquarters at Northwood, Middx, said that the two Royal Fleet Auxiliary landing ships, Sir Galahad and Sir Tristram, each 5,674 tons, hit in last week's Argentine air attacks on the landing beach at Bluff Cove, with the loss of 50 men, were still afloat.

The Sir Galahad is a burned-out hulk while the Sir Tristram is serving as an accommodation ship.

Asked what, in the light of experience gained in the attacks on ships of the task force, was being done to improve defences against fire hazards, Adml Fieldhouse confirmed that new-pattern, fire-resistant overalls and emergancy breathing sets were being sent out. Other measures that might be taken would depend on the costings.

On the role of the Royal Navy's nuclear-powered Hunter-killer submarines he said that they were undoubtedly the principal reason why the Argentine Navy had remained "bottled up behind the 12-mile limit."

On future lessons to be learned, he said that new designs for frigates might well be lighter and more manoeuvrable.

Asked for his view on the planned sale of the carrier Invincible to Australia, he said he emphatically believed it was "necessary to keep her, especially after the experience gained in this operation."

GOVERNMENT'S TASK TO GIVE FALKLANDS SECURITY

PM161221 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 16 Jun 82 p 16

[editorial: "A Safe Stronghold"]

[Text] The first response to the news that the Falklands have been repossessed by the forces of the crown must be infinite and inexpressible gratitude for the military skill and bravery which has brought this about. The second must be praise for the political courage, tenacity and intelligence (springing chiefly from the prime minister) which has made this great and glorious victory possible. Throughout the military campaign to retake the Falklands a number of critics of the government tried to use arguments about the islands' future to weaken the British position. In the heat of battle, it would have been foolish and dangerous to have elaborate long-term plans. Simple aims had to be defined and followed through. Now, at last, it is safe to say that they have succeeded, even if Argentina decides to try to maintain hostilities at sea and in the air at the probable cost, among other things, of delaying the return of many of her prisoners. "But what," the critics will ask, "will you now /do/ [slantlines denote boldface as published] with the Falklands?"

The question is wrongly conceived. There does not have to be a grandiose scheme for the islands. Indeed if there were, we could be sure that it would follow the fate of most five-year or development plans and fritter itself out in waste and disappointment as the politicians involved lost interest and the enterprises lost money. But this and future governments do need to be clear about their basic intentions. After all, it was a confusion of intentions which paved the way for the crisis.

The worst basic approach available is the defeatist one. "Defeatist" is not used here as a term of vague abuse, but an exact description of the attitude of mind which has maintained that, whatever Britain does over the Falklands, she will be beaten, if not in battle, then in diplomacy, if not be a sudden coup, then by years of attrition. This view argues that, since Argentina will get the islands sooner or later, rights of sovereignty and/or administration should be handed to her now.

"Magnanimity" is the word used to dignify this approach, but blind pessimism is the phrase which more accurately describes it. If pursued, it would concede the matters for which our soldiers have fought: Aggression would have paid, the islanders would have lost their rights, and the entire British expedition would have been brought to nought.

Fortunately, there is little chance of the present government following this line of advice (even though the Conservative Party has had its share of wobbling on the matter). For Mrs Thatcher and her ministers, the temptation lies, if anything, the other way. It is to dream up an exciting plan designed to make the Falklands into a thrusting success, and so make the expedition look not merely necessary, but productive of a new dawn for the islands. The economic and defensive possibilities of the Falklands are being investigated.

This approach is not completely misguided, but can be exaggerated. The proper aim of the task force was simple and limited: to repel an attack on British people and territory and to restore British administration.

It is true that the expedition has also done wonders for our own estimation of ourselves, and is therefore of huge political importance, but this is not because the Falklands are a very important place. It is because Britain, so long cowed, has been prepared to defend what is rightfully hers. It would be wrong to pretend that the Falklands were ever a jewel in the crown of empire, or will ever be a central part of Britain's economic or strategic interest. We /may/ [slantlines denote boldface as published] find a joint military use for the islands with the United States and others, but we should not look for it at the price of ceding political rights. We should acknowledge that the Falklands have been underexploited economically; but they will never be made into a South Atlantic Hong Kong.

In general terms, the government's task is simple. It merely has to give to the Falklands what they have lacked so damagingly in recent years -- security. If continuing British rule (with the islanders' consent) is assured and, as it was not before, practically supported, other benefits will proceed from that assurance. For this reason, the establishment of an independent state, unless demanded by the islanders, might be a bad idea, since the future will to defend the islands would be sapped if the connection with Britain were weakened. The islands need a garrison large enough to deter further attack. This need not be the vast and impossibly expensive army of the critics' imaginations. With an extended air-strip, reinforcements could be very quickly provided via Ascension Island. Argentina invaded because she was confident that she could do so without British loss of life, and that retaliation was not worth Britain's while. All that has to be ensured is that that calculation cannot be made again.

Proper security would greatly strengthen the Falkland economy. Lord Shackleton is now updating the report he first produced in 1976. Then as now, the islands offered oil and other mineral resources, seaweed and krill, and the agriculture was underdeveloped. Their remoteness and isolation, especially if, as is likely, Argentina refuses to cooperate, will obviously restrict the exploitation of these assets, But an equally severe block in the past was the Foreign Office's opposition to economic growth because it would have been "provocative" to Argentina. A government that seriously guarantees the integrity of the Falklands will find at least some entrepreneurs to use the opportunities. There are work and wealth there for a good many more than 1,000 people. Opportunities should be protected, but not invented. A few Falkland De Loreans would destroy the delicate balance of the islands' economy, and be the surest way of making them thoroughly unpopular at home.

As is common in history, a blunder has provoked a brave and successful reaction. In retaking the Falklands, Britain has acted with skill to defend her land, her people and her honour, and has strengthened herself as a nation. Sensible determination has paid off. The principles for the future governing and defending of the islands should be based on the same firmness and sense. If these qualities are visible to the world, Argentina may nurse a grievance, but she will not foment another attack. The rest of South America will readily resume normal relations with Britain, probably with increased respect. As for the Falklands, they will regain their place in the world -- an obscure and windswept region maybe, but a land secure in what above all else its people want, the right to be British.

ROLANDHIS RETURNS FROM VISITS ABROAD 17 JUN

NC171927 Nicosia Domestic Television Service in Greek 1730 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Foreign Minister Rolandhis returned this afternoon from his visits abroad. Mr Rolandhis had initially gone to Cuba, where he represented Cyprus at the ministerial conference of the Nonaligned Coordinating Bureau. From Havana, the foreign minister went to Athens and participated in President Kiprianou's talks with Greek Prime Minister Papandreou. From Athens, Mr Rolandhis accompanied President Kiprianou on his visits in the United States.

KIPRIANOU TO UNDERGO OPERATION IN LONDON 18 JUN

NC171604 Nicosia Domestic Television Service in English 1540 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] The president of the republic, Mr Kiprianou, today flew from the United States to London where he will attend a ball this evening given by the Cypriot Society of London.

An official announcement says President Kiprianou will enter the hospital tomorrow for an operation on his jaw.

CEAUSESCU SENDS GREETING TO KIPRIANOU

NC171040 Nicosia Press and Information Office in English 17 Jun 82 p 1

[Text] President of the socialist republic of Romania, Nicolae Ceausescu, flying over Cyprus yesterday sent to the president of the republic, Spiro Kiprianou, the following message:

"Flying again over the territory of the Republic of Cyprus, I take special pleasure in addressing you a cordial salute and best wishes for good health and personal happiness and for progress, welfare and peace to the friendly Cyprus people.

"I would like to express my conviction on this occasion too that the good Romanian-Cyprus relations will multilaterally develop and progress in the interest of both peoples and for the benefit of the cause of peace and international collaboration."

REFUGEES FROM LEBANON ALLOWED TRANSIT STATUS

NC181120 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1030 GMT 18 Jun 82

[Text] In Nicosia, the Ministry of Interior announced that the government of the republic, in its effort to give the necessary facilities to individuals who are forced to abandon Lebanon because of the military operations in that country, will allow them to disembark on the republic's soil for the purpose of a transit passage, or a few days' stay, provided these individuals are in possession of valid passports or traveling documents from a country which is prepared to accept them.

ATHENS SPOKESMAN DENIES DEFENSE ALERT IN AEGEAN

NC172144 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 2000 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] The government spokesman in Athens has stated that there is nothing disturbing or extraordinary going on in the Aegean, nor have any emergency measures been adopted nor is there any reason for emergency measures to be adopted. The spokesman added: The usual measures are in force. The spokesman made this statement in reference to reports and rumors about increased preparedness in the Aegean, Turkish submarines, alleged successive meetings at the Pentagon and about an increased alert in the country's defense system.

GREEK OFFICIAL ON TURKISH AIR VIOLATIONS

NC172138 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1830 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] On his own initiative, Turkish Ambassador Alacam visited Deputy Foreign Minister Yiannis Kapsis at 1130 and briefed him on the contents of an announcement that was to be issued in Ankara. According to this announcement:

1. No violation was made of either the 6 or 10 mile limit. Turkish planes flew at a distance of 15 miles from Turkish shores as envisaged by their exercise plan.

2. In a statement he made on 14 June, the Turkish prime minister said that no agreement had been reached on a moratorium, but rather the two sides had expressed their desire to contribute to an improvement in the atmosphere.

3. The statement Papandreou made the day after the NATO meeting in which he alleged that Turkey threatened Greece and that there are no outstanding issues does not permit great optimism for the future.

The deputy foreign minister replied point by point to the Turkish Ambassador. Specifically:

1. He informed him of the evidence in the hands of the National Defense General Staff which documented the provocations, but observed that what was significant was the intention, and that the statement that no violation had been ordered was satisfactory.

2. He precluded the possibility that a misunderstanding may have taken place regarding the moratorium given the fact that before the Atlantic council had convened the issue had been raised by German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt during his meeting with Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou. After Schmidt had been categorically assured by the prime minister that Greece accepted a moratorium, Schmidt hastened to get in touch with Turkish Prime Minister Ulusu, as Schmidt himself had assured his Greek interlocutor. It was on the basis of this prior understanding that the two leaders had spoken at the NATO meeting. And this was what was meant by the desire which had been expressed by both parties for an improvement in the atmosphere between the two countries. After all, such an agreement, with a continuation of the provocations, would be without content.

3. Papandreou did not make a statement the day after the NATO meeting. But on the same day, he briefed reporters on everything he had said at the council. Indeed, speaking before the other 15 NATO leaders the Greek prime minister made it clear that Greece did not consider that there were outstanding issues in the relations between the two countries and did not accept a dialogue under threats. For this reason it had accepted Schmidt's proposal for a moratorium that would lead to detente, an indispensable prerequisite for the start of a dialogue. Regardless of all this, Kapsis stressed to the Turkish ambassador that the essential issue that remains is: Does or doesn't Turkey want a moratorium?

In reply to an observation by Alacam as to the meaning of a moratorium, the Greek deputy foreign minister proposed to him that the moratorium should be defined as follows: avoidance of provocative actions and activities and of hostile and propaganda statements so that an atmosphere of detente can be created in relations between the two countries. Adherence to the moratorium in no way means that the two countries will change their position on any subject. Kapsis also stressed that a moratorium is a prerequisite for the start of a dialogue and not a dialogue for the implementation of a moratorium, given the fact that the definition of the content [of the talks] can be made through diplomatic channels.

Alacam stated that he is not authorized to accept or reject this definition of a moratorium and that he will communicate with his government and then reply. After this, the government spokesman made the following statement.

In its desire to avoid disturbing the atmosphere, the Greek Government will not make any other statement in the expectation of further clarifications from Ankara.

PAPANDREOU TO PAY OFFICIAL VISIT TO BULGARIA

NC171657 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1500 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou will pay an official friendly visit to Bulgaria from 24 to 26 June at the invitation of Todor Zhivkov, chairman of the State Council of the People's Republic of Bulgaria.

POPULARITY POLL ON PAPANDREOU PUBLISHED

NC171501 Athens NEWS in English 17 Jun 82 p 3

[Text] There was a considerable increase between May and April of the popularity of Mr Papandreou. On the contary, the New Democracy Party cannot manage to pull even half of its voters against Papandreou. This was the result of the second Gallup survey conducted for TAKHIDRHOMOS magazine by the Metrix Research Center during period 13-19 May 82 in the Athens and Thessaloniki areas and six other urban centers of the country (Larissa, Agrinion, Patrai, Iraklion, Serrai and Alexandroupolis) with a population of over 10,000. Analytically: One out of two persons (52 percent) approve of the way issues are handled by the prime minister. There is a four point increase in his popularity on the survey conducted last April as compared to the results of last October elections. Those disagreeing barely reach 15 percent. Also it is worthy to note that the percentage of persons who had initially refused to express an opinion declined considerably (from 16 percent to 10 percent) in the age group 35-44.

Question: Would you like to tell us if you approve or disapprove of the way matters are handled by Mr Papandreou?

	May	April	Difference
Approve	52 percent	48 percent	plus 4
Disapprove	15 "	12 "	" 3
Do not know	23 "	24 "	minus 1
Refuse	10 "	16 "	" 6
Total	100 "	100 "

Between the two surveys conducted there was an increase not only in the percentage of youths who approve of the prime minister's handling but also of the higher age groups who belong to high bracket people. For example, in the 17-24 age group the percentage increased from 44 percent to 47 percent, in the 35-44 age group from 44 percent to 53 percent and in the 45-65 age group from 48 percent to 53 percent. In order to draw these conclusions 1386 persons were polled, women and men, age 17 to 64. Random selection was used by the researchers in conducting this survey. Data processing was effected through use of an IBM 370/145.

GREEK CLAIMS OF AIRSPACE VIOLATION DENIED

TA171120 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Turkey has denied Greek allegations that Turkish military planes violated Greek airspace in the Aegean and noted that the real aim of the allegations is to prevent Turkey from using Aegean airspace.

The Greek foreign minister summoned the Turkish ambassador to Athens and claimed that Greek airspace had been [words indistinct] after Turkish planes conducted flights in the international airspace of the Aegean. The Greek foreign minister also claimed that through this action, Turkey also violated the agreement reached between the two countries during the NATO summit meeting in Bonn.

In reply to journalists' questions on this subject, Foreign Ministry Spokesman Ambassador Nazmi Akiman said that in accordance with international law, Turkish planes are entitled to enter Aegean airspace up to 6 miles from Greek shores and that Turkey will exercise this right whenever it deems necessary. Akiman said: However, in accordance with the plan of the exercise held on 15 June, Turkish planes this time only flew 15 miles from Greek shores. We were greatly surprised that despite this, false allegations to the effect that Greek airspace was violated were leveled. This situation has once more demonstrated -- with no room for doubt -- that Greece's real aim consists of preventing Turkey from using the Aegean airspace.

Akiman stated that no agreement was reached between the two countries during the Bonn summit meeting but that the two sides, with the wish to improve relations, created a positive atmosphere conducive to the solution of the problems. He continued: However, the fact that Greek Prime Minister Papandreou noted in his statements immediately after the Bonn meeting that Turkey is threatening Greece and there is no problem to be discussed in the Aegean does not permit us to be optimistic regarding the future. We regret that the atmosphere created in Bonn is damaged as a result of recent Greek accusations that Turkey violated a nonexistent agreement by leveling imaginary claims of airspace violations and the new propaganda campaign launched against Turkey.

TURKEY, IRAN, IRAQ TO SIGN PROTOCOL ON POW VISITS

NC170953 Paris AFP in English 0940 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, 17 Jun (AFP) -- Iran, Iraq and Turkey are about to sign a four-year protocol allowing prisoners of war of the two warring nations to meet with their families in this country, visiting Iranian official Firuz Abadi said here today.

Dr Abadi heads an Iranian delegation of interior and foreign ministry officials and Red Crescent representatives here to finalize arrangements for the meeting between Iraqi and Iranian POWs and their families.

A similar protocol has already been signed with Kuwait, Dr Abadi told newsmen.

According to the protocol, Iranian or Iraqi planes will fly the POWs either to Kuwait or Turkey in groups of 800 a week.

They will spend between four hours and one week with their families before returning to the countries they came from.

EVREN URGES TURKISH CYPRIOTS UNITY, SOLIDARITY

TA171300 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Head of State, Kenan Evren has said that a result in favor of Turkish Cypriots in the intercommunal talks in Cyprus would depend on the unity and solidarity of that community. At 1000, today, Evren received the Turkish Cypriot delegation headed by prime minister Mustafa Cagatay in the Cankaya mansion. In a statement during the visit, Evren said that he was happy to see for the first time in Turkey the Turkish Cypriot prime minister as well as the ministers and the other parliamentarians accompanying him.

Recalling the recent visit paid by Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu to Cyprus, Evren said: This visit of our prime minister to Cyprus has provoked some reaction in certain foreign countries. This was an unjustified reaction. It was only natural that he should visit Cyprus so that he could see how our kinsmen live and examine how best he could extend aid to them.

Pointing out that the continuation of relations between Turkey and the TFSC is necessary for the early solution of existing problems, Evren said: Our concern is that our kinsmen in the TFSC should take their place in Cyprus as soon as possible in accordance with a final solution to be reached there. Intercommunal talks are continuing. It is the wish of all that these talks should be successful. I pray to God that this also should be achieved. However, such a result will depend on the unity and solidarity among our kinsmen in Cyprus. The opposite side is always trying to take advantage of existing rifts. We have experienced such a development in Turkey as well.

Evren said that though it is only natural that divergences of view should exist in a community, these should not cause the division of that community. Evren continued: Were all elements and persons in a community to share the same opinions, I believe it would be a bland community. Various opinions must be expressed so that a synthesis and a result can be reached. However, if such divergences of views cause splits in the community, then this brings about a disaster and hostile factions are created. We are happy to observe that political parties in the TFSC have reached a stage at which they are trying to mend their differences in a bid to reach a result.

In reply, Turkish Cypriot Prime Minister Cagatay said that objections raised to Ulusu's visit to Cyprus were unjust and meaningless, adding that the world public should not take these reactions into consideration. Recalling that relations with Turkey were based on a long-standing and firm basis, Cagatay said that Turkey's support contributed to Turkish Cypriot efforts for the preservation of peace. Cagatay continued: If it appears in the coming days that more efforts are needed in order to ensure union and solidarity in our community, then I can assure you that despite all divergences of view our community will do its best to achieve this result as well. In doing so we are aware of the difficulties we are facing and that Turkey is facing. However, we must do whatever is necessary in order to ensure unity and solidarity in our community.

The visiting Turkish Cypriot delegation was then received by Consultative Assembly Speaker, Prof Sadi Irmak. It was announced that this was a courtesy call. Consultative Assembly Deputy Speakers Vehbi Kitapcigil and Fenni Istimyeli as well as the chairman of the constitution committee, Orhan Aldikacti, were also present in the meeting.

The Turkish Cypriot delegation is scheduled to participate in a session of the Consultative Assembly in the afternoon.

ECEVIT'S TRIAL POSTPONED UNTIL 6 JULY

NC180939 Paris AFP in English 0916 GMT 18 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, Jun 18 (AFP) -- The Ankara military court today adjourned until July 6 former Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit's trial on charges that he violated a martial law decree prohibiting political statements.

The delay was granted to allow Mr Ecevit's lawyers more time to prepare a defense. But the court denied a request for an adjournment to allow introduction of more evidence.

The military prosecutor asked the court for a total of eight months' prison against Mr Ecevit, who was released on June 3 after serving 54 days in prison on charges similar to the ones he now faces.

Mr Ecevit, who led the Republican People's Party before political activity was banned in September, 1980, is charged in connection with two interviews he allegedly gave foreign news organizations.

The first accusation concerns an interview that was aired on February 11 by the Dutch television station NYR, according to the charges.

The second involves a story that appeared in the West German Magazine DER SPIEGEL, which allegedly quoted Mr Ecevit as criticizing the Turkish military regime.

MILITARY REPORTS CAPTURE OF LEFTIST MILITANTS

TA171656 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Summary] The press and public relations office of the Army 9th Corps and Erzurum, Agri, Kars and Artvin Martial Law Command has issued a statement saying that five militants belonging to the illegal Revolutionary Path [Dev Yol] organization have been captured in a series of operations conducted by the security forces within the command region in the last few days. The suspects are charged with committing various terrorist acts.

TURKISH-LIBYAN ECONOMIC PROTOCOL SIGNED

TA171638 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] State and Deputy Prime Minister Turgut Ozal, who has concluded his visit to Libya, has left for Paris where he will attend OECD meetings on 18 June. Ozal this morning headed the Turkish delegation at the last Turkish-Libyan joint economic committee meeting. A protocol envisaging technical, economic and commercial cooperation between the two countries was signed at the end of the meeting. In a statement before his departure from Tripoli, Ozal said that various concrete results were achieved at the meetings he held with Libya. He added that trade and economic relations with Libya will continue to develop.

IMF DELEGATION CONCLUDES TALKS IN ANKARA

TA171705 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] It has been announced that Turkey has, up to the present, made use of loans totaling some $1 billion within the framework of the 3-year agreement it signed with the IMF in 1980. According to a statement issued by the Finance Ministry, talks in connection with the third year of the agreement signed in 1980 have been concluded in Ankara. Also according to the statement, developments in the Turkish economy during last year were reviewed and public financing in the first half of this year, the balance of payments and monetary growth were assessed during the meetings.

The IMF delegation was informed that the economic policies being implemented would be continued. The statement adds that Turkey drew loans amounting to up to $1 billion from the fund's sources up to now and that another $230 million will be drawn by the end of the year. According to the statement, another $220 million will be drawn in the first half of 1983. The 3-year standby [last words in English] agreement signed between Turkey and the IMF in 1980 stipulated that Turkey would receive a loan of $1.5 billion.

MILLIYET ON PAPANDREOU'S MORATORIUM SUGGESTION

NC150824 Istanbul MILLIYET in Turkish 13 Jun 82 pp 1, 9

[Report by Orsan Oymen from Bonn]

[Text] Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou's proposal for a moratorium is interpreted as the start of bargaining and as a "peace offensive" directed at Turkey. Papandreou wants both sides to refrain from inciting public opinion against each other and "to freeze the present status quo in the Aegean during the period of moratorium."

While NATO circles have reacted positively to the first step taken during the Bonn summit toward improving of Turkish-Greek relations, Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou has suggested "a 2-month moratorium at least, if a high-level dialogue is to be commenced."

According to this, Greece will not extend its territorial waters to 12 miles; Turkey will not press for the preservation of airspace over the Greek islands at 6 miles; and both sides will refrain from attitudes and statements which are likely to convey an element of provocation.

The moratorium is taken to mean that both sides will freeze their present attitudes and refrain from making any demands on each other or provoking each other.

Papandreou sees the moratorium as urging Greece "not to exercise its right to extend its territorial waters to 12 miles despite the recent[law of the] sea conference." Moreover, Greece has abandoned demands to NATO and the United States against a Turkish threat.

According to the Greek prime minister, the responsibility undertaken by Turkey is that Turkish aircraft will not, during the moratorium, violate the airspace over the Aegean islands, which Greece has unilaterally extended from 6 to 10 miles.

As Turkey has not, until today, accepted the extension of Greek airspace from 6 to 10 miles, it has carried out flights from time to time on the 6-mile basis and this has led to mutual recriminations.

Papandreou sees the suspension of these flights -- which he considers as a violation -- as an prerequisite during the moratorium in question.

The Greek prime minister has stated that after this moratorium, he will not object to a dialogue, but he suggested that Greece's sovereign rights over the Aegean should not be discussed. In a statement made on his return to Athens from the NATO conference, Papandreou characterized the agreement reached with Turkey on the moratorium and on the need to refrain from provocations as an achievement. The Greek prime minister added that Turkey could not provide assurances on the question of a moratorium. Turkey's attitude toward this matter has not yet been disclosed.

On 5 February, Prime Minister Papandreou made this exclusive statement to MILLIYET regarding the Aegean dispute: "We have absolutely no claim on the sovereign areas of Turkey. Nor do we intend to have such claims in the future. We are trying to protect peace in the Aegean. This is what we have undertaken. If we can guarantee peace in the region, if we can guarantee the security of both nations, we shall be opening the way to a very productive partnership between the two countries. We shall thus jointly reinforce the national independence of both countries. There are many fields where cooperation is possible, but we cannot by any means abandon our sovereign rights in the Aegean. Greece will never claim anything that does not belong to it. But neither will it give away anything that belongs to it."

OUR RADIO ON STATEMENT BY U.S. AMBASSADOR

TA171047 (Clandestine) Our Radio in Turkish to Turkey 0700 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Station Commentary]

[Excerpts] The U.S. ambassador to Ankara, Robert Strausz-Hupe, has made the following statement: We like Turkey very much. Yes, dear listeners, this is what he has said about Turkey. Which aspects of our country does he mean? Is it the scenery of our country and the looks of the people that live in its that he likes? Or are there other reasons for his feelings? It is clear to all that both Strausz-Hupe and the U.S. administrators like Turkey for other reasons. The fact that Turkey agreed recently to the stationing of U.S. Rapid Deployment Forces [RDF] on its soil in addition to the existing U.S. and NATO bases in Turkey has strengthened the sympathy felt by the U.S. administrators for Turkey.

This leads us to make another observation. Since Israel, which is waging a bloody aggression against the Palestinian people and other Arab countries, is the main supporter of the RDF in our region, it follows that despite statements by the military junta to the effect that Turkey wants close ties with the Arab countries, the Turkish and Israeli policies converge at this point.

In his statement, the U.S. ambassador to Ankara praised Turkey's stand toward religious and ethnic minorites in the country. What kind of a stand is this? Intensified pressures on millions of Kurds, tortures and persecutions that have been exercised for years, keeping the population in ignorance and poverty, disregarding the existence of millions of Kurds and exerting efforts to assimilate them by force. This is the stand Strausz-Hupe praises? This stand was adopted not only by the present military junta but by administrations which preceeded it as well.

On the subject of U.S. aid being extended to Turkey, the U.S. ambassador says: We have no legal undertaking to aid Turkey. We extend aid whenever we like. Let us point out that this statement is made at a time when U.S. aid is avidly awaited in Turkey. This statement made by the ambassador of the United States, a country that has extended all its aid against big concessions made by Turkey, might be considered a new blackmail. This statement sounds like the signal of new U.S. pressures.

Let us point out another fact, dear listeners. There are intensified rumors lately that a so-called peace force composed of U.S. as well as NATO troops will be stationed in Lebanon in an area up to 40 km from the Israeli border. It is clear that the U.S. troops participating in this force will belong to the RDF. What other NATO country is there in the area that could send its troops to participate in this force? There is no other country but Turkey. Developments in the future will prove whether there is a connection between the U.S. ambassador's statement that aid to Turkey is in the interests of both countries and the answer to the question on participation in the force.

BRIEFS

COTTON EXPORTS -- Speaking in a meeting in Ankara, Agriculture and Forest Minister Sabahattin Ozbek said that Turkey's income from exports of cotton and cotton yarns reached 620 million in 1981, an increase of $107 million in comparison to the exports of the year before. [Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 15 Jun 82 TA]

AUSTRIAN HIGHWAY COMMITTEE -- Ankara, 15 June (AA) -- The Turkish-Austrian highway transport committee met at the Transport Ministry in Ankara Tuesday. The committee will review carrying, documents, fees and quotas for transit carrying, and recent developments in passenger transport. A protocol is expected to issue Thursday from the talks led by Deputy Undersecretary of Transport Orhan Buldac of Turkey, and chief of the transport department, Dr (Franz Ogen) of the Austrian Foreign Ministry. [Text] [Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1520 GMT 15 Jun 82 TA]

DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 119 21 June 1982

EUROPEAN COMMUNITY

EP Calls for Removal of All Non-Lebanese Troops B 1
EEC Votes To Drop Sanctions Against Argentina B 1

AUSTRIA

French President Continues Vienna Visit [WIENER ZEITUNG 18 Jun] E 1
Criticizes U.S. in Parliament [VOLKSSTIMME 18 Jun] E 1
'Five Points for Peace' [WIENER ZEITUNG 19 Jun] E 1
Kreisky Comments E 2
Cheysson Views Crisis [DIE PRESSE 18 Jun] E 3
Visit Ends E 3

BENELUX

NETHERLANDS

Prime Minister van Agt Addresses UN Session [NRC HANDELSBLAD 16 Jun] F 1

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

U.S. Decision Extending Export Ban Condemned J 1
Government Circles React to USSR Proposal J 1
Bonn Spokesman Discusses Disarmament, MBFR J 2
FDP Spokesman Views Middle East Situation J 2
SPD Leadership Criticizes Hesse FDP Decision J 2
New Intra-German Trade Arrangement Agreed On J 3
Schmidt To Visit the Netherlands 8-9 Jul J 3

FRANCE

Mitterrand Previews Issues of Visit to Spain K 1
Cheysson Rejects Unilateralism in WEU Address [LE MONDE 17 Jun] K 1

PORTUGAL

Socialist Leader Interviewed on Party Infighting [EXPRESSO 12 Jun] M 1

SPAIN

Ministers Postpone Opening of Gibraltar Gate N 1
Press Reflects on Coup Verdicts, Appeal N 1

NORDIC AFFAIRS

FINLAND

CP Chairman Kananoja Leaving Cabinet by Fall P 1
[HELSINGIN SANOMAT 15 Jun]
Polish Leader Addresses Center Party Congress [PAP] P 1
Unidentified Submarine Expelled From Aland Sea P 2

NORWAY

Stray Questions Value of Nordic Zone in UN [AFTENPOSTEN 16 Jun] P 2
New Submarine Contract To Be Negotiated With FRG P 3
[AFTENPOSTEN 12 Jun]

SWEDEN

Falldin Demands Israeli Withdrawal from Lebanon P 4
Navy Buildup Planned To Combat Submarines P 4
[DAGENS NYHETER 12 Jun]

UNITED KINGDOM

Postponement of Gibraltar Border Opening Viewed Q 1
Two Destroyers Leave To Join Task Force Q 2
Task Force Troops Land; Take Back Thule Island Q 2

CYPRUS

Kliridhis Challenges Kiprianou on AKEL Stance R 1
[O FILELEVTHEROS 20 Jun]
ALITHIA on Possible Kiprianou-Papandreou Meeting [20 Jun] R 1
AKEL Leader Leaves for London Visit 19 Jun R 1
[CYPRUS MAIL 20 Jun]
Kiprianou Undergoes Successful Jaw Operation R 2
[CYPRUS MAIL 20 Jun]
Turkish Cypriot Delegation Leaves for Istanbul [Bayrak Radio] R 2
Denktas Urges Islamic World To Help Palestinians [Bayrak Radio] R 2
Israelis Turn Back Ship With Aid to Lebanon R 2
Spokesman on UN Talks, Relations With Egypt R 3
U.S. Marines Allegedly Massing at Cypriot Base R 3
[ELEVTHEROTIPIA 20 Jun]
Briefs: CLP Congress Held R 3

GREECE

Athens Denies State of Alert in Aegean [NEWS 18 Jun] S 1
Foreign Minister Kharalambopoulos Returns 19 Jun S 1
Papandreou Recovers, To Return to Work 21 Jun S 1
Karamanlis Addresses Defense School Graduates S 1
Spokesman on Speech S 2
Briefs: Medical Supplies to Palestinians; S 2
Cooperation With Yugoslavia

TURKEY

PLO Members Said To Take Refuge in Beirut Embassy T 1
[HURRIYET 16 Jun]
Commandos Set Fire to Panamerican Airline Office T 1
Greece's Proposal for Short Moratorium Rejected T 1
[TERCUMAN 16 Jun]
Ozal Notes Results of Paris OECD Talks T 2
Returns From Paris T 2
Jordanian Supplies Minister Arrives for Talks T 3
Begins Ankara Contacts T 3
Highlights of Draft Constitution Outlined T 3
Prosecutor Demands Prison Term for Ecevit T 3
MILLIYET on Turkish Cypriot Visit, RDF [16 Jun] T 4
Court Orders Arrest of Religious Figures T 5
Council of Ministers Bans Publications T 5
Union of Journalists Appeals for Amnesty T 5
Law on Reorganizing Public Establishments Passed T 5

EP CALLS FOR REMOVAL OF ALL NON-LEBANESE TROOPS

NC171250 Paris AFP in English 1227 GMT 17 Jun 82

[Text] Strasbourg, East France, 17 Jun (AFP) -- The European Parliament today called for the withdrawal from Lebanon of "all non-Lebanese armed forces." In a resolution presented by Christian Democrats, Conservatives, Liberals and Gaullists, the European body condemned "at the same time, armed Israeli action on Lebanese territory and any terrorists activity against Israel that preceded" the Israeli invasion.

The text remained vague on the possibility of imposing economic sanctions against Israel, merely expressing "worry over the future of economic and political relations between the European Community and the countries in question," in apparent reference to Israel and Syria. The resolution, adopted by 106 votes with 90 opposed and 13 abstaining, was harshly criticized by Socialist and Communist members.

"The scheduled debate to condemn the Israeli invasion has turned into a condemnation of the Palestinians," said Raymonde Dury, a Socialist from Belgium. Italian Communist Guido Fanti called the Israeli offensive a "blitzkrieg that recalls the Nazi period."

EEC VOTES TO DROP SANCTIONS AGAINST ARGENTINA

NC202144 Paris AFP in English 2133 GMT 20 Jun 82

[Text] Luxembourg, Jun 20 (AFP) -- The 10 members of the European Common Market (EEC) have decided to lift sanctions on Argentina as of tomorrow (Monday), French External Affairs Minister Claude Cheysson announced here tonight. The EEC imposed the sanctions after Argentina's takeover of the Falkland Islands (Malvinas) last April 2.

The decision to lift the sanctions was made here by ministers of the Common Market countries at a meeting on political cooperation, and it will be formalized tomorrow. The EEC Commission will be in charge of applying the decision.

The move to drop the sanctions came from France, West Germany and the Netherlands. British Foreign Secretary Francis Pym had previously [words indistinct] maintenance of the sanctions until the Argentine Government formally ended hostilities with Britain in the South Atlantic. But the EEC ministers considered that some essential elements of United Nations Security Council Resolution 502 had been achieved. That resolution, passed on April 3, called for withdrawal of Argentine troops from the Falklands, a halt to hostilities, and negotiations.

Mr Cheysson said that Mr Pym had confirmed to the other ministers that all of the disputed islands had returned to British control. "So there was no more reason to maintain these sanctions," Mr Cheysson said. "They will be lifted as of Monday." He also expressed the hope that the halt to hostilities could be translated into legal forms. It has been shown that aggression does not pay, he commented.

Mr Cheysson also said that EEC members will maintain their unilateral measures embargoing sales of arms to Argentina until peace is legally restored. The measures suspending sales of arms and spare parts to Buenos Aires were decided on even before the Common Market as a whole decided on economic sanctions on April 10.

The general economic sanctions -- now being lifted -- consisted in barring all Argentine imports by EEC members. Such imports are valued at about two billion dollars a year. The sanctions were renewed twice in May by the majority of EEC members, but Ireland and Italy decided at that time to dissassociate themselves from the other members and to resume control of trade with Argentina.

FRENCH PRESIDENT CONTINUES VIENNA VISIT

AU181425 Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 18 Jun 82 p 1

[Text] On the second day of his official visit to Vienna French President Francois Mitterrand had working talks with Chancellor Kreisky. Moreover, he paid visits to Parliament and to the Vienna City Hall.

According to a French delegation spokesman, at the working talks at the chancellery numerous international problems were discussed, especially questions concerning East-West problems, the North-South dialogue and disarmament questions. There were no communication problems whatever between Mitterrand and Kreisky. On the contrary, they declared their joint political intention to essentially intensify bilateral relations, the spokesman said.

The sides also discussed the development in the Middle East. In this context French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson declared that Israel was pursuing a suicidal policy which could reflect on the Israeli people in the form of the wildest terrorism. No one wants to deny Israel the right to defend itself, but what Israel is doing is creating a drama and one cannot escape the impression that the Israeli leadership has ceased to think clearly. If one considers the position adopted by Shim'on Peres, this also applies to the opposition Labor Party, he said.

In the afternoon President Mitterrand gave a press conference where he expressed himself very favorably on his working talks with Chancellor Kreisky. There was far-reaching consensus between them, he said. The French president announced that he had invited President Rudolf Kirchschlaeger to pay an official visit to France in 1983.

The visit of Mitterrand and his delegation ended yesterday. In the evening the French guests attended a performance of the Vienna state opera. They were due to return to Paris afterwards.

Criticizes U.S. in Parliament

AU181426 Vienna VOLKSSTIMME in German 18 Jun 82 p 4

[Text] On Thursday, the second day of his official visit to Vienna, French President Francois Mitterrand met with leading figures of Parliament and had a political talk with Chancellor Kreisky "on a number of bilateral and international questions -- without any communication problems," as was stated afterwards.

In Parliament Mitterrand stressed France's determination to carry on the struggle for social justice, to break the rhythm of inflation and to maintain that of economic growth. Mitterrand stressed that this was necessary and feasible despite the "egotistical American policy of high interest rates which impedes any initiative."

According to Mitterrand, the bilateral relations between Austria and France must be intensified.

'Five Points for Peace'

AU191253 Vienna WEINER ZEITUNG in German 19 Jun 82 p 2

[Excerpt] The joint declaration signed by Mitterrand, Kirchschlaeger and Kreisky [on 17 June in Vienna] contains the following five points:

1 --We desire that the sovereignty, integrity and unity of Lebanon be de facto restored.

2 -- We demand that Resolutions 508 and 509 of the Security Council concerning compliance with the cease-fire and the withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanese territory be complied with; we also desire the withdrawal of any foreign army from Lebanon unless there is a decision to the contrary by the international community and the consent of the legitimate Government of Lebanon.

3 -- We demand that the protection and the security of the Lebanese population be ensured and that aid can be rendered to the victims of the latest events without impediment.

4 -- We appeal for the recognition of, and respect for, the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people.

5 -- We demand that the internationally recognized borders of all states in the region be respected and guaranteed.

Both governments, the declaration continues, will become active [taetig werden] in conformity with these principles.

Kreisky Comments

AU181005 Vienna Domestic Service in German 0500 GMT 18 Jun 82

[Thomas Fuhrmann report on French President Mitterrand's "30-hour visit" to Austria 16-17 Jun, with recorded excerpt from Chancellor Kreisky statement]

[Excerpt] The most significant aspect of the visit is undoubtedly the joint declaration on Lebanon which surely was not achieved without a lively discussion, a document that was signed by the French president and, on Austria's side, jointly by the president and the chancellor. The sides abstained from issuing a long communique, and Chancellor Kreisky explained this with almost the same words as President Mitterrand at his own press conference:

[Begin Kreisky recording] We do not like long and comprehensive communiques which often list the things that were not negotiated. We said: "Let us concentrate on one issue. It is not possible for the French president and the Austrian president and the Austrian chancellor to meet without putting their entire moral weight -- which we do claim for ourselves -- on the scales." [end recording]

The statement calls for recognition of, and respect for, the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people, and at the same time demands that the internationally recognized borders of all states in the region be respected and guaranteed. Any more specific definitions, such as perhaps a statement that the PLO is the legitimate representative of the Palestinians' rights, or the Palestinians' right to demand a state of their own, have been avoided. Likewise, the term "withdrawal of all foreign armies from Lebanon" permits various interpretations. Does it apply only to the Israelis, to the Israelis and the Syrians, or even to the armed troops of the Palestinian resistance?

Neither Mitterrand nor Kreisky would give any interpretations of this decisive aspect. Kreisky merely said that all foreign armies in Lebanon were meant. And President Mitterrand said in reply to a question about a meeting between him and PLO chief 'Arafat, whom he has never met, that there was no problem in this respect in the relations with the PLO, but as far as the contents [inhalt] are concerned, that was a different matter.

Cheysson Views Crisis

AU181450 Vienna DIE PRESSE in German 18 Jun 82 p 2

[Special DIE PRESSE report by "SMO"]

[Text] Vienna -- The tense situation in the Middle East was the predominant topic of the political talks held by French President Francois Mitterrand and French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson, who accompanied him, with their Austrian interlocutors. Cheysson, who in the past few days has had talks with his counterparts of the United States, the Soviet Union and Israel, as well as with PLO "foreign minister" Qaddumi, called Israel's activities in South Lebanon a "suicidal policy" which threatens to "reflect on the Israeli people in the form of brutal terrorism."

What Israel is doing at present is an "aberration of the mind," he said. The Israeli Government, according to Cheysson, should understand that one cannot simply exterminate a people. Without wanting to deny Israel the right to defend itself, one must condemn Jerusalem's idea that the Palestinian problem can be solved through a military settlement as a "policy without a future." In the opinion of the French foreign minister there are "too many" who are interested in an escalation of terrorism which will almost inevitably be the consequence of Israeli actions in southern Lebanon.

At the same time Cheysson rejected Kreisky's criticism on Wednesday of the Israeli Government, which the Austrian Government chief had referred to as "semi-fascist." Israel is nevertheless a "democratic country," Cheysson declared and pointed out that in France it was impossible and inconceivable to make such comparisons.

Cheysson named three prerequisites for solving the Lebanon crisis: An immediate, comprehensive cease-fire; help for the Palestinian population in southern Lebanon; and withdrawal of the Israelis from southern Lebanon in compliance with the UN Security Council resolution.

Visit Ends

AU180851 Vienna Domestic Service in German 0500 GMT 18 Jun 82

[Text] French President Mitterrand returned shortly after midnight to Paris from his 2-day official visit to Austria. In a joint statement issued at the conclusion of the visit, France and Austria call for the withdrawal of the Israeli forces from Lebanon. Moreover, they demand the restoration of Lebanon's sovereignty and unity. In the declaration both sides also call for the protection of the Lebanese and Palestinian population and for unhindered aid for the victims of this war.

NETHERLANDS

PRIME MINISTER VAN AGT ADDRESSES UN SESSION

PM181437 Rotterdam NRC HANDELSBLAD in Dutch 16 Jun 82 p 3

[Sytze van der Zee dispatch: "Van Agt: Ban Chemical Weapons"]

[Excerpt] New York, 16 Jun -- Netherlands Prime Minister van Agt has appealed for a ban on the stockpiling of neutron bombs and chemical weapons in Europe. At a session of the UN special disarmament session in New York yesterday he said that the government would not tolerate the stockpiling of chemical weapons on Netherlands territory.

Van Agt's remarks were obviously directed at the U.S. Government, which decided recently to begin production of these weapons.

In his speech Van Agt pointed out that arms control and disarmament were urgently necessary not only for security reasons but also for economic reasons. Because of the present world economic situation the arms race must be slowed down so that there are greater possibilities of finding a solution to worldwide social and economic problems.

In his speech the Netherlands prime minister concentrated on four main themes -- nuclear disarmament, a ban on chemical weapons, conventional disarmament and the prevention of an arms race in space. Members of the Netherlands delegation said that the government attaches great importance to the last area because in it there is still the possibility of achieving something. No single country has achieved technical superiority in this field.

Van Agt also appealed for a comprehensive ban on nuclear arms tests and on the production of fissionable material for military purposes. However, the Netherlands prime minister also said that we must be realistic and that nuclear arms would not simply disappear overnight.

In the light of this it is therefore of the greatest importance that a common formula for "negative security guarantees" be worked out. In such a way it would be possible to strengthen the confidence of nonnuclear states that they would not be the victims of or be threatened with nuclear arms.

On the issue of chemical weapons Van Agt remarked that "the alarming reports of the possible use of chemical weapons in Afghanistan and Southeast Asia" amount to a threat of a new arms race in this field and demonstrate the need to reach an agreement as quickly as possible banning these weapons completely.

Van Agt ended his speech with an old proposal put forward by the Netherlands Government 4 years ago at the first UN disarmament conference. The proposal advocates the establishment of an international disarmament organization. This organization would form the operational framework for monitoring international arms limitation agreements, including the verification and investigation of complaints.

U.S. DECISION EXTENDING EXPORT BAN CONDEMNED

LD201328 Hamburg DPA in German 1230 GMT 20 Jun 82

[Excerpt] Washington/Baghdad/Frankfurt, 20 Jun (DPA) -- The intensified economic sanctions against the Soviet Union imposed by U.S. President Ronald Reagan on Friday have met with sharp criticism in the Federal Republic, in Moscow and even among Republican circles in the United States. According to the AEG-Telefunken Company (Frankfurt), extending the embargo to American firms which plan to deliver parts for the European-Soviet gas pipeline deal to their subsidiaries and licensees in third countries endangers several thousand German jobs. Federal Economic Minister Otto Graf Lambsdorff said on Saturday evening during his flight from Athens to Baghdad that the decision is dubious in legal terms and its implementation in practice is questionable [fraglich].

GOVERNMENT CIRCLES REACT TO USSR PROPOSAL

LD181434 Hamburg DPA in German 1246 GMT 18 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 18 Jun (DPA) -- The Soviet offer not to be the first to use nuclear weapons in a war is being viewed with increasing misgivings in Bonn. The Federal Government is of the opinion that a renunciation of force must inseparably include all arms and should not be limited to one type of weapon, nuclear arms in this case, government circles said on Friday.

The misgivings relate to the known Soviet superiority in the area of conventional armed forces. In this connection, Bonn is planning even stronger efforts to gain international acceptance for its own strategy for preventing war.

That is why government circles welcomed the speech by U.S. President Ronald Reagan to the second UN special disarmament session on Thursday, in which Reagan proposed, firstly an international conference on military expenditure and secondly increased transparency [transparenz] with regard to nuclear arms.

These thoughts, which closely align with the position taken by Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt in New York on Monday [14 June], strengthen the trend toward confidence-building measures in the view of Bonn government circles.

For Bonn, the following four categories are especially important:

Balance. This includes the equal balance of forces, which is to be furthered by a Western proposal at the Vienna MBFR talks for an upper limit applying to both East and West.

Confidence building. This is the most important subject of the Madrid CSCE conference, to resume in November, where a clearly defined proposal for a European Disarmament conference with agreement on an area for confidence-building measures from the Atlantic to the Urals is to be discussed.

Transparency. This includes not only furthering transparency and ease of recognition of military measures, but also international registration of military expenditure.

Verification. This most difficult of areas, described thus not only by Bonn experts, includes checking implementation of agreed-upon disarmament. [words indistinct] in Bonn's view, the formula that foresees further on-site controls determined by drawing lots, in addition to inspections on demand, might gain acceptance.

BONN SPOKESMAN DISCUSSES DISARMAMENT, MBFR

LD190844 Hamburg DPA in German 0645 GMT 19 Jun 82

[Text] Stuttgart, 19 Jun (DPA) -- In the words of Deputy Government Spokesman Lothar Ruehl, the Federal Government expects the Soviet Union to take up the Western alliance's offers on arms control and disarmament agreements. At the same time, in a South German Radio interview on Saturday Ruehl expressed the hope that there would be "serious, businesslike and success-oriented negotiations."

The Western alliance has put forward "the broadest-based arms control and disarmament proposal" that its partners have ever addressed to Moscow since NATO came into existence, Ruehl said, assessing the course of the disarmament debate at the United Nations in New York so far.

Above all, Ruehl sees possibilities for concrete progress in the new forthcoming round of European MBFR negotiations in Vienna. NATO wants, as it announced in the 'Bonn Declaration' of 10 June, to use an initiative "to help us get over the stalemate" and achieve the aim of a bilateral reduction to 700,000 troops for each side in Central Europe. This is the first area in which progress should be possible after nearly 9 years of negotiations, Ruehl said.

The interview was supplied in an edited form to DPA in advance.

FDP SPOKESMAN VIEWS MIDDLE EAST SITUATION

LD201218 Hamburg DPA in German 1035 GMT 20 Jun 82

[Text] Bonn, 20 Jun (DPA) -- According to Juergen Moellemann, FDP spokesman on security and foreign affairs, Saudi Arabia expects Western states to exert great pressure on Israel and to make a contribution to a peace settlement in the Middle East. Such an initiative should concentrate on the Saudis' eight-point plan, which was submitted by the then-Crown Prince Fahd. Moellemann told DPA on Sunday that this view was taken by Saudi King Fahd and other politicians in the country with whom he had spoken in Jidda during the weekend.

The FDP politician said that Israel's attack on Lebanon, its extermination campaign against the Palestinians and the outcome of the war between Iran and Iraq could have highly dangerous and destablizing effects precisely for the moderate states in the Middle East. The West must therefore take the initiative, without misplaced consideration for Israel, and intensify its cooperation with the Gulf states in all political areas.

Moellemann also discussed the visit by Libya's head of state Al-Qadhdhafi in Vienna with Austrian Foreign Minister Willibald Pahr. After the talk Moellemann was convinced that it would make sense to invite Al-Qadhdhafi to Bonn in order to achieve intensive cooperation between the two countries and thereby prevent Libya from drawing any closer to the Soviet Union.

During a meeting between Moellemann and Zambian Prime Minister Mundia the latter strongly praised Federal Foreign Minister Genscher's great support for Namibian independence, which was now apparently imminent. It would mean a noticeable relaxation in the situation in southern Africa.

SPD LEADERSHIP CRITICIZES HESSE FDP DECISION

LD181006 Hamburg DPA in German 0906 GMT 18 Jun 82

[Excerpts] Bonn, 18 Jun (DPA) -- The SPD leadership in Bonn has strongly criticized the decision of the Hesse FDP to enter into a coalition with the CDU, but at the same time emphasized its willingness to continue the SDP/FDP coalition in Bonn.

SPD Chairman Willy Brandt accused the liberals in Hesse of a "threadbare and hardly creditable justification" of their decision in favor of CDU leading candidate Alfred Dregger. SPD Federal Business Manager Peter Glotz accused the Hesse FDP of opportunism and weakening the Bonn coalition.

Brandt said that there are no immediate effects in Bonn. The SPD will continue to try to create the prerequisites for the work of the Federal Government to continue. At a press conference in Bonn, specially called for the Hesse FDP decision, Glotz emphasized that the SPD is prepared for a fair continuation of the Bonn coalition and hopes for equal willingness on the part of the Free Democrats. This demands compromises by both government parties on the federal budget. Clearly guarded on the chances of agreement on this question, Glotz merely said that it is "possible" that the government partners will reach a joint decision.

NEW INTRA-GERMAN TRADE ARRANGEMENT AGREED ON

LD181918 Hamburg DPA in German 1606 GMT 18 Jun 82

[Excerpts] Bonn, 18 Jun (DPA) -- The Federal Republic and the GDR have agreed on a new arrangement for interest-free overdraft facilities in intra-German trade, the so-called "swing." Egon Franke, federal minister for intra-German relations, announced in Bonn late this afternoon that the two sides had agreed to gradually reduce the swing from 1983 to 1985 from the current level of 850 million clearing units to 600 million clearing units; 1 clearing unit equals DM1.

According to the agreement now reached the swing is to be reduced from 1 January 1983 by 80 million; from 1 January 1984 by a further 80 million; and from 1 January 1985 by 90 million. The arrangement now agreed corresponds approximately to the average use made of the swing by the GDR during the past years.

For its part the GDR has agreed to make matters easier in intra-German payment transactions. The Ministry for Intra-German relations said that from 1983 to 1985 the GDR is to provide DM60 million a year for noncommercial payments and clearing transactions (blocked account transfer).

In the negotiations the GDR made no concessions about lowering the minimum exchange levy for visitors from the Federal Republic and West Berlin. However, for humanitarian reasons the GDR promised immunity from criminal prosecution to those GDR citizens who left the German Democratic Republic before 1 January 1981 unlawfully, as it was put. The government in East Berlin stated its willingness to dispossess such persons and their children of GDR citizenship and to refrain from criminal prosecution. It was agreed that from 1 July 1982 such persons will have the right to reenter the GDR without negative consequences. According to Federal Minister Franke tens of thousands of people are affected by this concession.

It was also agreed that West Berliners may extend their day visits to the city and the GDR beyond midnight to 0200 hours. The two sides also agreed that the new Berlin highway crossing-point Heiligensee/Stolpe-Dorf in the north of the city will, after completion of the highway to Hamburg in November, will also serve as a pedestrian crossing point for West Berliners.

SCHMIDT TO VISIT THE NETHERLANDS 8-9 JUL

LD211122 Hamburg DPA in German 0948 GMT 21 Jun 82

[Text] The Hague, 21 Jun (DPA) -- Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and his wife are to visit the Netherlands on 8-9 July at the invitation of Prime Minister Andreas van Agt. It is the first official visit by a German chancellor to The Hague since 1964. The program has not yet been completely decided. It will presumably center on talks with Van Agt and other government members and with the leader of the opposition, Joop den Uyl. The visit is to start with a luncheon given by Queen Beatrix.

MITTERRAND PREVIEWS ISSUES OF VISIT TO SPAIN

PA201603 Madrid EFE in Spanish 0847 GMT 20 Jun 82

[Text] Madrid, 20 Jun (EFE) -- French President Francois Mitterrand has stated that his country "has never recognized England's sovereignty over the Malvinas" and does not want to go beyond "fair limits" in its support for England. In an interview published by the Spanish daily EL PAIS on occasion of the official visit that Mitterrand will make to Spain on Tuesday, the French president noted that what happened is that "Great Britain was the victim of an aggression" and France, its ally and friend, "had to be solidarity." "However," he added, "France does not want to go beyond just limits to maintain its influence and its activities in Latin America."

Mitterrand said that he does not believe that the Malvinas crisis was a North-South conflict, even if Latin America feels that way. He also said that "Argentina decided to use arms to solve the difficult matter and has suffered the consequences."

Regarding relations between his country and Spain, Mitterrand mentioned two difficult points: Spain's entry into the EEC and the Basque problem. Mitterrand said: "We can perfectly well accept the hypothesis on Spain's presence in Western Europe and in the Common Market, but economic facts demand discussions of the subject, which should not be announced ahead of time because of its importance." Regarding his position on the incorporation of Spain into the EEC, the French president pointed out that he is "absolutely willing to do something positive," but noted that this "threatens to pose further contradictions in a Europe that has not solved its own problems." Regarding the problems posed by the presence of ETA terrorists in France, Mitterrand said that the Spanish and French police cooperate and denied that there is French complacency concerning terrorist organizations.

CHEYSSON REJECTS UNILATERALISM IN WEU ADDRESS

PM181003 Paris LE MONDE in French 17 Jun 82 p 8

[Text] Echoing the European peoples' "shriek of anguish," Minister of External Relations Cheyyson stated during a speech to the Western European Union [WEU] on Tuesday, 15 June: "It is a good thing that our peoples have been constantly exerting pressure on governments and political and economic forces with a view to a limitation of arms and threats conducive to seeking a balance of forces at the lowest possible level, which is a prerequisite for peace." However, he added, "Nothing would jeopardize peace more seriously than unilateral disarmament and putting our forces in a position of inferiority."

Mr Cheysson emphasized that "it is out of the question to separate Europe's defense and the defense of countries belonging to the Atlantic alliance." "In view of the state of imbalance between forces in Europe," he stated, "such a split would be fatal. There should be no doubt about the connection between defense on the European continent and global defense. Nothing would be more dangerous, until we get closer to a balance of forces on the continent itself.... On the other hand, it is extremely useful that thoughts specific to us (Europeans) be expressed in their diversity."

This task, Mr Cheysson added, devolves on the WEU. This was the first time that a French foreign minister -- Mr Cheysson wanted to show his interest in that organization in this way -- had spoken to the WEU since Foreign Minister Jobert's speech in 1973. On the previous day, the assembly unanimously adopted a motion proposed by Italian Communist Senator Vecchietti, chairman of its General Affairs Committee, "in favor of the WEU's reactivation." Recalling France's suggestions voiced by Mr Lemoine, secretary of state at the Ministry of Defense, the assembly asked the governments concerned for "an in-depth study" with a view to "ascertaining the extent of consensus" with respect to this question. The assembly also asked them to consider "the threats looming over West Europe's security" irrespective of their origin, "the shift in European opinion" in the face of those threats, and "increased cooperation" in the struggle against "international terrorism."

SOCIALIST LEADER INTERVIEWED ON PARTY INFIGHTING

PM181141 Lisbon EXPRESSO in Portuguese 12 Jun 82 pp 1, 4

[Excerpt] EXPRESSO: Is this the first time that there has been such a profound crisis in the Socialist Party [PSP] or, on the contrary, does it always tend to experience the worst of crises?

Jaime Gama: This crisis is not the first, it will not be the last and it is certainly not the worst the PSP has experienced, but it is a major crisis because there are two conflicting options regarding the nature of the party, its strategy and the conception of the PSP's role in a democratic system.

EXPRESSO: Your answer confirms my suspicions. It is the worst crisis.... Are you not trying to play things down on the eve of 13 June [date of scheduled PSP national committee meeting to discuss crisis]?

Jamie Gama: I am not trying to play down the situation, particularly on the eve of the 13th. The substance of the contrasting lines has to do with the political role of the president of the republic and relations between the PSP and the president of the republic. According to some -- the minority of the party -- the president of the republic must be the motive force behind the democratic left, or its symbolic unifier. And the PSP, together with other forces that may emerge, must stand as one of the wings of this political alignment. It is an attempt to make the current president of the republic, with PSP backing, evolve toward an involvement in political life that exceeds his constitutional powers; toward agreement with the PSP to make possible his renewed candidacy and the manifesto of policy intentions that Eanes presented to the voters in his capacity as an independent candidate.

EXPRESSO: What about the others? That is, the....

Jaime Gama: For us it is a matter of stabilizing the democratic system and ensuring, by means of its normal functioning, rotation and an alternative. It is a matter of creating the conditions for the necessary political changes to take place through elections. In short, a PSP which is internally strong, through its social and regional roots, through the plurality of its ideological and political debate and through the wealth of its diverse cultural values, but without any kind of subjection or colonialism by blueprints incompatible with democratic openness.

EXPRESSO: If I am not mistaken the time for negotiation and compromise is over....

Jaime Gama: Despite the need for a thorough internal debate, the PSP cannot have two conflicting policy lines, lest the majority of Portuguese people ask us: "If you cannot govern yourselves, how can you hope to govern the country?"

The PSP's infighting is the factor most damaging to its credibility and to its capacity to establish itself as an alternative. Those who directly or indirectly base their party commitment on false charges of absence of democracy, consistency, competence, honesty and legitimacy on the part of the present PSP leadership would do well to use their political energies to support the general interests of the party in the struggle against its external adversaries.

EXPRESSO: Is a settlement of accounts imminent? Is there not still a hesitation to move away from the compromise that has hitherto existed to more drastic measures?

Jaime Gama: The present party leadership has done its utmost to surmount the consequences of the latest congress and to establish structured and honest cooperation among all currents of the party. The observation that a minority sector refused cooperation -- on the basis of a future failure by the party to grow, to establish an alternative to the present socialist leadership -- means that we must fully exercise the democratic mandate conferred on us by the latest congress. The preparation of an election timetable is at stake, and the PSP cannot embark on it if some of its members are trying to combine their own petty, personal victories with the overall defeat of the party itself.

EXPRESSO: Nothing you have told me is very new. However, there might be some innovations at Largo do Rato [PSP headquarters] tomorrow -- let us say, drastic measures, such as expulsions, disciplinary measures, and so forth.

Jaime Gama: The question of discipline is basically connected with the question of the consistency of a policy line, not with administrative processes. The PSP cannot allow the leader of its parliamentary group to state publicly that his party is always wrong and that it is others that are always right. How would the British react if Prince Andrew spent his time granting interviews criticizing the commanders of the British Fleet and claiming that the Argentines are right? In the same way, we cannot accept members within the PSP -- as in the case of Jose Rabaca -- whose principal political activity is to conduct propaganda for the launching of a presidential party. And what is one to think of members of the party's political commission who failed to dissassociate themselves from the national committee of support for President Eanes' renewed candidacy when it clearly presented itself as the embryo of a party movement competing with the PSP's own area, interests and strategy? What is at stake is the elucidation of a political stance and the need for the entire party to act in the same direction, not in glaringly conflicting directions.

EXPRESSO: This is the message. But how is it to be transformed into practice? In other words, on the basis of what move or moves could things imporve within your party?

Jaime Gama: On the basis of a very clear difinition of the rules at Sunday's national commission meeting -- rules that will be implemented with the utmost steadfastness and with regard to which no extraordinary forms of conduct can be accepted.

EXPRESSO: How is the current opposed to the present leadership actually expressed in the grass roots, the federations and sections and so forth? Does this expression worry you?

Jaime Gama: Within the parliamentary group the proportion is the opposite of the proportion at our latest congress, but throughout the country the federation and grassroots structures and the members understand and accept the clear line laid down by the present majority and the secretary general.

The fact that the minority is not formulating a sufficiently well-founded political line, is replacing cultural and ideological debate with the manipulation of short-term issues (the end of the republican and Socialist front, the federative congress of the democratic left, the appointment of military chiefs and dual responsibilities) and adopting an attitude of uncritical subordination to the current president of the republic -- all this, in my view, has deprived the minority of the dynamism that under other circumstances it could have conferred on the internal life of its party. On the other hand, with regard to the revision of the constitution, there is a pressing need for the minority to strive to distinguish themselves from the political and military sectors that are gambling everything on obstructing it. The excessive growth of party infighting has deprived some of the minority's most capable leaders of the political sensitivity to perceive the party's overall interests and the real solutions demanded by Portuguese life. I regret it.

EXPRESSO: As for regrets, do you not regret or fear that the possible loss of certain figures could have damaging results for your party?

Jaime Gama: I do not believe that there is any question of any resignations from the PSP. But a political force cannot prevent a different option from emerging at any time from the individual approach of each of its members. It is a problem of conscience that must be resolved not by the party but by individuals.

EXPRESSO: That was not exactly what I asked. I spoke to you of a possible impoverishment of your party....

Jaime Gama: The worst impoverishment of the party would result from a paralyzing lack of definition and from internal problems stemming from conflicting wills. The defense of the PSP's political area and the protection of its borders against any direct annexation or indirect invasion constitutes a more valuable asset than any kind of personal prestige. In any case, I am convinced that the adoption of a more vigorous policy by the majority of the PSP is the only way to prevent a process of decline that would eventually lead to even more negative results. Of course, it is not a question of exterminating the minority, demanding a retraction or expelling it from the PSP; it is a question of defining rules of conduct that will make it possible to implement a policy line. In parties, as in nations or in international relations, the rational and self-controlled use of power, force and legitimacy is more favorable to peace, stability and security than permanent indefinition, ultrapacifist complacency and the dilution of one's own ideas by other people's viewpoints.

Conflicts are not avoided by Munich agreements, and peace can only be negotiated by those unafraid to wage war.

MINISTERS POSTPONE OPENING OF GIBRALTAR GATE

LD211024 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1000 GMT 21 Jun 82

[Text] Here is a late dispatch from our special correspondent in Luxembourg, Angel Gomez.

The Spanish foreign minister, Jose Pedro Perez-Llorca, and his British opposite number, Francis Pym, have just issued a statement i which they confirm that opening of the Gibraltar gate will be postponed again. Their joint statement is as follows:

The meeting that was to have taken place between the foreign ministers of Spain and of the United Kingdom in Sintra, Portugal, on 25 and 26 June has been postponed at the suggestion of the Spanish Government.

The second point in the statement is as follows: Both ministers are agreed on keeping open the process that was initiated in the Lisbon declaration of April 1980 and in the spirit of the letters exchanged in London on 8 January 1982. The ministers will maintain personal contacts and also contacts through diplomatic channels. A new date for a meeting will be fixed in due course. This is the joint communique just issued. So the news is that the opening of the Gibraltar gate is again postponed.

PRESS REFLECTS ON COUP VERDICTS APPEAL

PM181849 [Editorial Report] Madrid Spanish-Language papers published 4-5 June 1982 carry editorials commenting on the verdicts announced in the trial of conspirators involved in the 23 February 1981 attempted coup in Spain, and expressing diverse opinion on the legal and wider aspects of the outcome of the trial.

ABC 4 June states on page 14 that it "feels encouraged in finding that its support for any sentence passed by a lawfully constituted court is increased by the significance of a decision which has not only scrupulously fulfilled legal principles but which also has in its historical aspect sufficient capacity to surmount a traumatic chapter in the transition to democracy."

It adds that this decision is "based on a strict legal criterion which has assessed the distinction between the crimes of rebellion and of conspiracy and has carefully weighed the aggravating, extenuating or mitigating circumstances, such as the degrees of assistance in, attempt at or perpetration of the crimes. A consequence of this approach is, on the one hand, the severity of the sentences imposed on the principal defendants, and, on the other, the greater understanding toward both the defendants who took part in the conspiracy but did not go so far as armed rebellion and toward those whom the 'obedience due to their superiors' influenced decisively."

It concludes by citing "three aspirations," which "seem necessary to us": First, "that this page be turned as soon as possible"; second, that the entire country "be able to accept and respect decisions made procedurally by a lawful court"; and, third, "the certainty that the army, which knew how to be loyal on 23 February and sought to be just yesterday, will continue to practice that patriotism with the unemotional acceptance of a sentence which — how can one fail to see it? -- will be painful for some and run counter to the personal ideas of others."

YA 4 June urges on page 3 that justice be allowed "to follow its course to the end." It continues:

"But, moreover, we believe that this is what is most desirable for everybody. Neither the humiliation of 23 February nor, therefore, the punishments imposed must carry over into the future in such a way as to weigh heavily on government decisions or on the Spanish people's necessary confidence. At any event, what cannot be done is to coexist with discord when all efforts by all political conceptions are needed to extricate Spain from the serious decline in confidence which the eight Civil Guard lieutenants who attacked the Cortes building and took part in the intimidation and kidnapping of the nation's government and deputies caused." The paper cited "the gravity of the fact that only 10 of the 21 men convicted in the trial are dismissed from the armed forces. The return to barracks of the 11 rebels favored by the leniency could create the dangerous precedent that in this country a man in uniform can take part actively in a coup, be convicted of that crime and then, after serving a brief sentence of loss of freedom, return to those armed forces which provide him with the means and facilities without which a seditious attempt is inconceivable."

After raising the Spanish Government's decision to appeal against some of the sentences and noting that it rests with parliament to approve legislation "which will make it unrepeatable in the future for people accused of rebellion against the state, even if they are military personnel, not to be tried by the judiciary in the strict sense of the term." It criticizes various strictly judicial aspects of the trial. These include the use of Article 294 of the Code of Military Justice as a mitigating or extenuating factor, "because Article 294 can only be applied to those who lay down their weapons without having use them -- and the submachine guns were fired in the Cortes and used as a means of intimidation in Madrid and in Valencia," and the court's application of the "crime of conspiracy for the crime of rebellion, whose very possibility disappears when the conspirators have succeeded in carrying out the rebellion." It also questions the use of the concept of "due obedience," and continues: "But what is emphatically open to criticism is the acceptance in the sentencing of the idea that the defendants were prompted 'by a belief based on their disinterested, albeit aggravated love of the fatherland.' Apart from the fact that the Supreme Court's jurisprudence has rejected on several occasions the argument that altruistic or patriotic motives can be accepted as extenuating circumstances in crimes against state security, it would be an insult to Spanish democrats' patriotism for somebody to accept that the 23 February rebels could kidnap the nation's representatives using Spain's name as an extenuating or mitigating circumstance in their crime."

FINLAND

CP CHAIRMAN KAJANOJA LEAVING CABINET BY FALL

WA211145 Helsinki HELSINGIN SANOMAT in Finnish 15 Jun 82 p 9

[Text] Communist Party (SKP) Chairman Jouko Kajanoja is leaving the government around the end of August or early September, after the talks on the budget have been completed.

Kajanoja stated his desire to step down from the government as soon as he had been selected as the new SKP chairman at the special party congress, which was held in mid-May.

Apparently, Kajanoja's decision to devote his full time to the chairmanship will be a subject for discussion at the SKP Politburo meeting next Wednesday, and in the meeting of the SKDL [Finnish People's Democratic League] Parliamentary Group and executive board the day after.

The situation of Labor Minister Jouko Kajanoja in the government was already discussed last week in the SKDL Parliamentary Group. The majority then felt that there was no cause for him to leave the government in the middle of summer.

Several Communists defended the need for Kajanoja to keep his seat during the budget talks, since he had led the SKP preparations for "the budget battle."

Although the question of Kajanoja's seat in the ministry was to be decided as early as this week, the question of his successor has not yet been raised. This question will be returned to in August, after talks on the SKP's internal reuniting reach some kind of decisions. The SKP leadership duo of Kajanoja and General Secretary Arvo Aalto have had talks on reuniting the party with the Taistoites [Stalinist faction], but still without results. The Taistoites deserted the party leadership organs after the special party congress.

After an appeal by Kajanoja, the majority group in the party has been ready to give the Taistoites one extra seat on the Politburo as a condition for their coming to an agreement. At the same time, the majority in turn expresses hope that the Taistoites would be willing to take over the ministerial portfolio left vacant by Kajanoja.

Taistoites proposed by the majority as ministerial candidates include members of parliament Irma Rosnell and Marja-Liisa Salminen. Among majority Communist members of parliament leading in consideration for the ministerial post are Helvi Niskanen and Mikko Ekorre. Also mentioned, and having had experience with the Ministry of Labor is Party General Secretary Arvo Aalto, who was minister continuously from summer 1977 until the winter of 1981.

POLISH LEADER ADDRESSES CENTER PARTY CONGRESS

LD192230 Warsaw PAP in English 2000 GMT 19 Jun 82

[Text] Warsaw 19 June (PAP) — The Polish vice-premier and the Peasant Party leader, Roman Malinowski, has told the 59th Finnish Center Party congress that "in the present international situation, we consider the checking of confrontational tendencies, the resumption of dialogue, the restoration of mutual confidence, the universal commitment to implementing the Helsinki peace resolutions and the renunciation of steps that would further complicate the international situation as the matters of key importance."

The vice-premier, who heads a Polish delegation to the congress that opened yesterday in Rovaniemi, northern Finland, said next:

"We cherish deep hope that the next round of the Madrid meeting of the states parties to the CSCE will be held in a constructive atmosphere and will bring decisions useful to detente and peace in Europe.

"We hail the announcement that the United States and the Soviet Union will resume talks on the limitation and reduction of strategic armaments and we hail the successive Soviet initiative that the USSR will not be the first to use nuclear weapons. That initiative is significant for disarmament.

Proceeding to discuss the situation in Poland, the vice-premier said: "We do not deem martial law to be the means to solve all problems and are aware of its restrictionism as the internal situation stabilizes, they are gradually reduced and revoked [sentence as received]. We are speeding up economic, social and political reforms, and we provide comprehensive platforms on which to build national agreement and rebirth."

"Economic and political restrictions applied by the U.S. and some other Western countries do not serve the cause of stability in Poland and effective solution to our problems. A policy of sanctions, the attempts to dictate definite solutions and aggressive propaganda not only delay the normalization of the situation in our country, but they also create an atmosphere of tension and pose a threat to peace. Such actions are also incompatible with the CSCE final act.

"It is not only the Poles that need a strong and stable socialist Poland, which lies in the heart of Europe. This is also an important and necessary condition for further progress of the detente process and for consolidating peace in Europe. All reasonable and realistically-minded forces and states should realize that. The policy of sanctions should be replaced with a policy of assistance, cooperation and understanding.

"[word indistinct] policy of sanctions is in sharp contrast to the assistance and the [words indistinct] of mutual cooperation with the USSR and other socialist countries. It also is in contrast with the stand taken by Finland and a number of other states," Vice-Premier Malinowski said.

UNIDENTIFIED SUBMARINE EXPELLED FROM ALAND SEA

LD181400 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1300 GMT 18 Jun 82

[Text] The coast guard has expelled an unknown submarine from the Aland Sea. According to a statement issued by the border guards today the incident took place on Wednesday afternoon [16 June]. This submarine fled south from the Gulf of Bothnia via Finnish territorial waters. It was not possible to identify the submarine. The patrol boat Kuikka used some scare [depth] charges to expel the submarine.

NORWAY

STRAY QUESTIONS VALUE OF NORDIC ZONE IN UN

PM181445 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 16 Jun 82 p 9

[Lars Hellberg disptach:]

[Text] New York, 15 Jun -- The Norwegian Government has written off the idea of the Nordic area as an isolated nuclear-free zone. In his speech during the second UN special session on disarmament, however, Foreign Minister Svenn Stray stressed that a Northern European zone "could later be an element in an agreement between NATO and the Warsaw Pact which would include further reductions in the nuclear arsenals on both sides."

Stray stressed that Norway is actively seeking membership of the UN Disarmament Committee and also repeated the offer to put the Norwegian Seismic Array (NORSAR) at the UN's disposal as an instrument to monitor a possible future agreement banning all nuclear tests.

According to Stray the establishment of nuclear-free zones on the basis of the individual states in a region could be an important step toward preventing the further spread of nuclear arms. In this respect he was unwilling to exclude the possibility that positive results in the current negotiations on nuclear arms on European soil could also make such a zone in Northern Europe possible.

But he stressed that nuclear-free zones in this part of the world could only be a meaningful step if they contribute to reciprocal, balanced disarmament. And to prevent the use of nuclear arms against such a zone it is the Norwegian view that it is absolutely necessary that existing nuclear arms be dismantled and destroyed, not merely moved to other areas.

Informed sources pointed out that the Norwegian view coincides on all points with the U.S. assertion that it is not enough that -- as President Leonid Brezhnev has proposed on several occasions -- Soviet missiles be withdrawn and deployed behind the Ural Mountains. They would still be able to reach Western Europe.

The Reagan administration has also noted that the Norwegian view of chemical weapons is an indirect, if cautious criticism of the U.S. decision to resume production of such weapons. Thus Stray expressed the hope that the UN special session would give the necessary impetus to efforts to prevent the development, production and stockpiling of chemical weapons as well as those to destroy existing weapons.

It is well known that the Reagan administration has drawn the conclusion from the proof it considers it has that Soviet chemical weapons have been used in Southeast Asia and Afghanistan that it is necessary for the United States to produce new chemical weapons -- not to use them but to reestablish balance. As long as there is no agreement for a ban on chemical weapons in the superpowers' arsenals, the United States takes the view that this is necessary.

Stray also stressed that the peace movement, which is making its presence greatly felt during the special session, deserves the support of world opinion. But, as he pointed out, the campaign must become truly worldwide in character so that there is adequate blance in its appearances in varous political surroundings and in all countries.

NEW SUBMARINE CONTRACT TO BE NEGOTIATED WITH FRG

PM180831 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 12 Jun 82 p 23

[Excerpt] The Norwegian and West German authorities have agreed to renegotiate the submarine agreement entered into in November 1980 but never signed. There will be high-level negotiations for a new text for the agreement, now that the German Navy has scrapped plans to modernize its U-206 submarines with Norwegian direction-finding equipment, Defense Ministry Under Secretary Oddmund Hammerstad told AFTENPOSTEN.

On Thursday [10 June] Hammerstad received his West German counterpart, Dr Klaus Leister, for talks to to clear up the mess. The original agreement was that Norway would build its new submarines at West German shipyards in return for German orders from Norwegian industries. The main profits would have gone to Kongsberg Vapenfabrikk, which was to have supplied a computer-controlled, direction-finding system to modernize the German U-206 submarines. The situation has changed since West Germany cancelled its plans for modernization. But the Germans have said that they are interested in transferring the system to a new submarine class, the 200X, whose construction is planned for the 1990s.

Defense Ministry Administrative Chief Erik Senstad told AFTENSPOSTEN that the agreement now under discussion Norway alone would be responsible for the development of the whole direction-finding system, before West Germany enters the picture with a purchase. According to Senstad, the Bundestag in Bonn has little inclination to grant money for development projects abroad.

The new negotiations mean that Norway will miss deadline -- fixed for 1 July -- for its submarine order from West German shipyards. The German authorities will make sure that this delay does not affect the later construction of Norwegian submarines.

The next round of talks will take place in Bonn on 21 June, and if agreement is reached a draft contract could be presented to the Bundstag as early as September. In Norway, too, the Defense Ministry needs time to clear some formalities, and will probably do so by briefing the Storting Defense Committee about the commitments Norway is making. The submarine project will involve expenditure of 3-4 billion kroner.

SWEDEN

FALLDIN DEMANDS ISRAELI WITHDRAWAL FROM LEBANON

LD161032 Stockholm International Service in Swedish 1000 GMT 16 Jun 82

[Text] Prime Minister Thorbjorn Falldin says in a statement that the Swedish Government condemns Israel's refusal to observe the UN Security Council's unanimous demand for an unconditional and immediate withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanon. Falldin said that Sweden will continue to render all the humanitarian aid possible to the suffering civilian population, and demanded that Israel facilitate all efforts being made to help the injured and to relieve the distress in Lebanon.

NAVY BUILDUP PLANNED TO COMBAT SUBMARINES

PM161129 Stockholm DAGENS NYHETER in Swedish 12 Jun 82 p 5

[Text] For more than a week Swedish defense forces have been searching for a foreign submarine in Swedish waters -- without result.

"We will now build up the navy and invest in special arms," Defense Minister Torsten Gustaffson told Dagens Nyheter. "It is unsatisfactory that we are unable to identify these submarines and that there are obviously countries which do not respect Swedish neutrality," Gustaffson said.

"It is important that other countries should respect our neutrality. Since they are not doing so, we must now build up the navy," he said.

POSTPONEMENT OF GIBRALTAR BORDER OPENING VIEWED

LD211050 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1034 GMT 21 Jun 82

[By Geoff Meade, PA staff reporter in Luxembourg]

[Text] Foreign Secretary Francis Pym today reluctantly agreed to postpone the planned reopening of the border between Spain and Gibraltar after talks with Spanish Foreign Minister Jose Perez-Llorca in Luxembourg. Mr Pym said he agreed to the request for a further delay in the negotiations with Spain and the opening of the border after hearing about Spain's difficulties.

After a private meeting with Mr Perez-Llorca in Luxembourg, Mr Pym told a press conference: "Naturally I am very disappointed at the postponement of the opening of the frontier. I am in touch already with the governor of Gibraltar because there are consequences for them".

Mr Pym said he intended maintaining close contact with Mr Perez-Llorca and to hold another meeting. "I am confident that in due course the frontier will be opened," he said. The foreign secretary declined to say what problems Spain had raised, but said he fully accepted the Spanish Government's reasons for requesting a postponement.

"The events in the Falklands have made this more sensitive than before". "There is no doubt that the events of the last two or three months in the Falklands have affected the Spanish view about Gibraltar, and it is only realistic to take that fully into account."

Now the Falklands had been repossessed, he said, a new stage had been reached and it was "wise and more profitable" to return to the negotiations with the Spanish over Gibraltar later. Mr Pym made it clear there was little option but to agree to Mr Perez-Llorca's request. He said there was a chance that if the meeting had gone ahead it would have broken down in failure and it was better to iron out difficulties first.

Mr Pym emphasised that the question of sovereignty over Gibraltar was not raised at today's meeting, but the two men did discuss the implications of the latest postponement on Spain's application to join the Common Market. Mr Pym said that there was agreeemnt that it would be "inconceivable" for Spain to join the EEC as long as the frontier remained closed.

Spanish accession to the Community would occur in a year or two and before then the border would be opened, he said. Asked if the setback over Gibraltar would colour Britain's attitude towards Spain's EEC application, Mr Pym said: "Certainly not". It was important to understand Spain's problems over Gibraltar. Nevertheless the cancellation of the crucial meeting between Mr Pym and Mr Perez-Llorca next weekend has resulted in a flurry of activity over Gibraltar.

The delay is a big disappointment not only to Mr Pym but also to Gibraltar's governor, Sir Joshua Hassan, who had been hopeful that negotiations with Spain would proceed and the border reopen on time. Mr Pym said today that discussions were now taking place with the Gibraltar government to assess the implications of the delay.

Referring to the planned closure of the Royal Navy dockyard in Gibraltar and the problems it faced, he said: "I have no doubt we will have a meeting quickly between me and the governor of Gibraltar on this."

News of the setback was contained in a brief joint statement issued after today's meeting, which lasted about 45 minutes. It expressed the determination of both sides to continue contact, both personally and through diplomatic channels. A new date for negotiations and reopening of the border would be arranged "in due course", it stated.

TWO DESTROYERS LEAVE TO JOIN TASK FORCE

LD181410 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1302 GMT 18 Jun 82

[Text] The destroyers, Southampton and Birmingham set sail for the Falklands today from Portsmouth. Southampton, on her maiden voyage, and Birmingham were to have been accompanied by the 2,450-tons frigate HMS Rhyl, but she developed engine trouble and her departure was delayed by six hours.

The destroyers, both 3,500 tons, are sister ships of the sunken Sheffield and Coventry. Their job will be to keep open the supply lines between Ascension Island and the task force stationed off the Falklands.

TASK FORCE TROOPS LAND; TAKE BACK THULE ISLAND

LD201842 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1831 GMT 20 Jun 82

[Text] British Falklands troops today grabbed back another South Atlantic island from the Argentinians -- this time without having to fight for it. They swooped in by helicopter on Thule, in the remote South Sandwich Islands, a Falklands dependancy where the Argentines had illegally set up a scientific station.

A short statement from the Ministry of Defence in London announced: "At about 1.30 p.m. London time today, the Argentines on Thule Island, part of the South Sandwich Islands surrendered to British forces. Full details are still awaited, but initial reports suggest that no fighting took place."

The Argentine High Command in Buenos Aires had claimed that two British helicopters machine-gunned the station and landed troops on Thule. It is 450 miles south-east of South Georgia, scene of Britain's first victory in the campaign to win back the Falklands. Ten unarmed scientists on the station were presumed to be prisoners of the British, said the Argentines, after heavily-armed troops surrounded it. They added that the head of the station, called "Corbeta Uruguay", had ordered all communication systems and codes destroyed. But there have been reports that the station might have been manned by up to 70 men, some of them naval personnel.

The Foreign Office said tonight that the Argentines were on Thule Island illegally. They were discovered to be there in 1976, when the Foreign Office protested to the Argentine Government. Several other protests followed to preserve Britain's position in international law.

The Foreign Office denied suggestions that there was a scientific agreement enabling the Argentines to work on Thule Island. A spokesman said there had been discussions about such an agreement, but an agreement was never reached.

Argentina condemned the incident as a "flagrant violation" of the United Nations resolution calling for an end to hostilities in the South Atlantic.

Mr Tam Dalyell, Labour MP for West Lothian, today called on Mrs Thatcher to make a Commons statement tomorrow about the South Sandwich (?action). He said: "This is the first time in history that war has got to Antarctica, and it is absolutely against the spirit of everything the United Nations has asked. It is absolutely asking for trouble to do something which will make the signatories of the Antarctic treaty feel that they are directly involved, and that, of course, includes the Soviet Union".

KLIRIDHIS CHALLENGES KIPRIANOU ON AKEL STANCE

NC201029 Nicosia O FILELEVTHEROS in Greek 20 Jun 82 p 12

[Text] Democratic Rally leader Kliridhis has maintained that "President Kiprianou has deliberately allowed to leak that in case he is reelected he will get rid of AKEL, will abandon the minimum program and will follow Papandreou's policy, thus trying in despair to stop the Democratic Party's [DIKO] draining of its perturbed cadres and followers."

Mr Kliridhis, who was speaking at a women's party gathering in Limassol yesterday, also said:

"In stating that in case he is reelected he will follow Papandreou's policy, Mr Kiprianou gives all voters, irrespective of ideological and party inclinations, the right not to trust his words, promises, agreements or policy.

"By stating the above, Mr Kiprianou also shows that in his efforts to be reelected he has collaborated with AKEL leaders, adopted the minimum program, undermined Papandreou's policy, dynamited Athens-Nicosia relations and created frightful national dangers for Cyprus and the wider interests of Hellenism. He has done all this simply to satisfy his personal ambitions.

"We suspect that Mr Kiprianou will evade comment on our accusations. We challenge him, however, to say directly and explicitly to the people:

"Did he or did he not say that in case he is reelected he will get rid of AKEL, will abandon the minimum program and will follow Papandreou's policy? What is his real intention? If he is reelected, will he continue his cooperation with AKEL and the implementation of the minimum program?

"All Hellenism is awaiting with interest Mr Kiprianou's answers to these questions. But the DIKO and AKEL followers are awaiting the answers with particular interest."

ALITHIA ON POSSIBLE KIPRIANOU-PAPANDREOU MEETING

NC201001 Nicosia ALITHIA in Greek 20 Jun 82 p 10

[Text] The Cyprus Government has no information whatsoever that a Kiprianou-Papandreou meeting has been arranged, as the paper affiliated to the president wrote yesterday. This statement was made yesterday by the government spokesman in reply to a question.

On the contrary, there is information that Mr Kiprianou is asking for such a meeting but that so far there has been no response from Mr Papandreou.

Meanwhile, a meeting will be held in London with AKEL Secretary General Papaioannou where in a partnership "summit conference" the Athens-Nicosia as well as other partnership issues will be discussed.

Meanwhile Mr Kiprianou underwent a successful jaw operation on Friday. However, he is extending his stay in London, waiting for the arranging of a meeting with Mr Papandreou on his way back from London.

AKEL LEADER LEAVES FOR LONDON VISIT 19 JUN

NC200650 Nicosia CYRPUS MAIL In English 20 Jun 82 p 1

[Text] AKEL leader Ezekias Papaioannou left yesterday for London where he will address a Cypriot gathering today at the "Avenita Hall" about the Cyprus presidential elections. Mr Papaioannou is due to return to the island on Tuesday.

KIPRIANOU UNDERGOES SUCCESSFUL JAW OPERATION

NC200730 Nicosia CYPRUS MAIL in English 20 Jun 82 p 1

[Text] President Kiprianou's jaw operation in London has been a successful one, an official statement in Nicosia said yesterday.

According to a report in O KIRIKAS yesterday the operation is for the removal of a "trapped tooth."

TURKISH CYPRIOT DELEGATION LEAVES FOR ISTANBUL

TA201134 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in English to Cyprus 1115 GMT 20 Jun 82

[Text] The Turkish Federated State of Cyprus delegation headed by the prime minister, Mr Cagatay, has continued its contacts in Istanbul. Meanwhile, a technical delegation which will attend the joint economic committee meetings between Turkey and the Federated State has also gone to Istanbul from Nicosia today. The technical delegation will travel to Ankara tomorrow with the minister of trade and tourism, Mr Borman and the minister of industry and cooperatives, Mr Kotak, who are in the delegation accompanying the prime minister. An agreement is expected to be signed at the end of the meetings of the joint economic committee which will mainly discuss trade, tourism, communications and industry. Mr Cagatay and the rest of the delegation accompanying him will return to the Federated State tomorrow.

DENKTAS URGES ISLAMIC WORLD TO HELP PALESTINIANS

TA181306 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 1030 GMT 18 Jun 82

[Text] President Rauf Denktas has said that everyone who claims to be a human being and a Muslim must respond to PLO leader Yasir 'Arafat's call.

In a statement today, Denktas noted that Israel is reinforcing the Christian wing of the Lebanese and carrying out a massacre of the Muslims and demanded that 'Arafat's call must be heeded. Expressing the belief that the United States can stop this massacre, Denktas said: As a human being, as a (?Turk) and as a Muslim, I ask that further shedding of Muslim blood in Lebanon be stopped.

Denktas said that it is seen that those who give 'Arafat the chance to abandon his people and leave Lebanon do not understand the cause of the Palestinian people, their claim to live like human beings and their heart. He reiterated that the Turkish Cypriots support their Palestinian brothers and appealed again for Islamic unity to aid the Palestinians.

The Legislative Assembly meanwhile adopted a resolution unanimously condemning the Israeli attack against Lebanon and the Palestinians.

ISRAELIS TURN BACK SHIP WITH AID TO LEBANON

NC191530 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1500 GMT 19 Jun 82

[Text] An International Red Cross representative in Nicosia has stated that a ship chartered by the Red Cross to carry aid to southern Lebanon has been forced by the Israeli Navy to return to Limassol, from which port she sailed last night. The Israelis intercepted the ship off the coast of Sidon and turned her back, saying it would be very dangerous to advance farther because the sea area near the town is mined.

The ship is carrying 700 tons of foodstuffs, medical supplies, blood plasma, blankets and tents.

International Red Cross officials have stated that air transportation of aid from Larnaca via Damascus and Tel Aviv will continue. A chartered Swiss aircraft has already made some flights.

SPOKESMAN ON UN TALKS, RELATIONS WITH EGYPT

NC211153 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1030 GMT 12 Jun 82

[Text] Asked to state the points which, as was mentioned in an official announcement, call for decisions and which will be studied in Nicosia after consultations have been held in Athens, the government spokesman stated that President of the Republic Kiprianou's talks with UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar are confidential.

Asked whether a meeting will be held between President Kiprianou and Greek Prime Minister Papandreou on 30 June, the spokesman said that for the time being there is nothing to announce on this issue.

Asked what the Cyprus Government's reaction was to a statement by West Germany's minister of national economy, according to which it has been confirmed that West Germany imports citrus fruits from the occupied Cypriot territories, the government spokesman said that the Cyprus Government strongly objects to such an action. In connection with this issue, the spokesman added, the Cyprus Government has protested to the EEC and has started litigation in the courts of foreign countries.

Asked about the issue of Cyprus' relations with Egypt, the government spokesman stated that diplomatic relations between the two countries have not been restored. However, he added, there has been an improvement in relations in general, that is, commercial relations, the air link between the two countries and the level of the diplomats who are accredited to Cyprus and Egypt. These diplomats, the spokesman concluded, are of a higher level than before.

U.S. MARINES ALLEGEDLY MASSING AT CYPRIOT BASE

NC201612 Athens ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 20 Jun 82 p 1

[Excerpt] Nicosia, 20 Jun -- The British base at Akrotiri, Cyprus, is filled with U.S. marines who, according to press reports, were deployed there in the past few days from U.S. bases in Crete and Turkey.

According to the Cypriot press, these U.S. forces are destined for Lebanon, either as "peace forces" or for other operations that the Americans are probably planning to undertake in the area.

According to the same reports, traffic at the British Air Force bases has markedly increased in the past few days. Transport and other types of aircraft are taking off from and landing at these bases transporting and picking up troops and war materiel.

BRIEFS

CLP CONGRESS HELD -- The fifth Communal Liberation Party [CLP] congress was held in Nicosia on 13 June. Party Leader Alpay Durduran was reelected as leader. A decision was also adopted in connection with a meeting to be held in 6 days which will discuss various amendments to the party rules and regulations. [(Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 1530 GMT 13 Jun 82 TA]

ATHENS DENIES STATE OF ALERT IN AEGEAN

NC181432 Athens NEWS in English 18 Jun 82 p 1

[Text] Press Undersecretary Dhimitrios Maroudhas yesterday denied rumors circulating in Athens last evening that Greek Navy and Air Force units in the Aegean have been put on increased alert following the rejection by Turkey of a Greek note of protest over alleged violations of Greek air space by Turkish aircraft earlier this week.

Maroudhas also denied that Turkish submarines had been detected in Greek waters, and that Greece's National Defense Council had been called to a special session to examine the situation in the Aegean.

"No special measures have been taken in the Aegean," Maroudhas said, "and none are intended to be taken, because the situation does not warrant any but the standard level of alertness of Greek forces."

FOREIGN MINISTER KHARALAMBOPOULOS RETURNS 19 JUN

NC191014 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1000 GMT 19 Jun 82

[Excerpt] Foreign Minister Yiannis Kharalambopoulos returned at noon from New York where he represented Greece at the UN special session on disarmament.

PAPANDREOU RECOVERS, TO RETURN TO WORK 21 JUN

NC191914 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1830 GMT 19 Jun 82

[Text] The prime minister has recuperated from a light flu and will return to his duties on Monday.

KARAMANLIS ADDRESSES DEFENSE SCHOOL GRADUATES

NC181915 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1800 GMT 18 Jun 82

[Excerpts] During a ceremony today at the armed forces officers club, President Karamanlis handed diplomas to the graduates of the National Defense School.

Speaking at the ceremony, the president of the republic said: It is with particular pleasure today that I hand diplomas to the graduates of the National Defense School. I say with particular pleasure because the history of this school is linked with my political history. It was established at the time I was a minister of military affairs [stratiotikon] and I inaugurated the school myself in October 1950.

Ever since, despite the adventures it went through at times, our country has made significant progress in all fields. Especially in the defense sector the progress has been so impressive that it was recognized by all. In recent years, particularly, the country has acquired an armed forces that allows the Greek people to feel not only secure but also proud. Of course, in order to utilize this military potential certain basic prerequisites are necessary. The first prerequisite is the protection of our armed forces from political influences and suspicious erosions which are often pursued under the pretext of democratization of the armed forces. The second prereqisite is the existence of a firm and solid domestic front which also presupposes national concord, social cohesion and a healthy economy. Finally, the third prerequisite is the existence of firm diplomatic props because the defense and foreign policies of a country supplement each other. As Mao Zedong has said, war is a bloody policy while diplomacy if a bloodless war.

Consequently, it is necessary that we also understand in this country that the foreign policy of a country, of any country, is defined by its geopolitical position and should never be affected by sentimental or ideological factors.

As I have already said, it follows that the country's defense capability is at a high level; it is in the hands of a capable armed forces which, well armed and free from the factionalisms of the past, guarantee the nation's security and honor.

Of course, these ascertainments are satisfactory. However, we should not be content with them. We have to further strengthen the country's defense capability with continuous sacrifices because the dangers threatening the country may be of a long duration.

Mr Karamanlis concluded: You can also contribute to these efforts through the special knowledge you have acquired. I congratulate you for your progress, with the conviction that you will vindicate the expectations of the state.

The ceremony was also attended by Chamber of Deputies President Ioannis Alevras; Education Minister Elevtherios Verivakis; Finance Minister Manolis Dhrettakis; Deputy National Defense Minister Andonios Dhrosoyiannis; the leaders of the armed forces and security corps, headed by Admiral Deyiannis, chief of the national defense general staff; deputies and other officials.

Spokesman on Speech

NC182204 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1800 GMT 18 Jun 82

[Text] In reply to questions by political editors regarding President Karamanlis' reference to the need to protect the armed forces from influences and erosions, the government spokesman said: It is implicit that the president of the republic wishes to stress what the responsible government has turned into deeds -- namely, the protection of the armed forces from any partisan exploitation under any pretext and by any party.

To another question regarding the part of the president's speech on foreign policy, the government spokesman reminded them that the prime minister has repeatedly stressed that the national interest comes above everything else.

To a last question on what the relations are like between the president of the republic and the prime minister, the government spokesman replied: The harmonious cooperation between the president of the republic and the government on all major issues is commonly sensed.

BRIEFS

MEDICAL SUPPLIES TO PALESTINIANS -- A cargo of 1,700 kilos of medical supplies (?has been shipped) from Ellinikon Airport, via a Syrian Airlines plane, for the Palestinians. The medical supplies were offered by the Greek pharmaceutical industries. [Text] [Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1830 GMT 20 Jun 82 NC]

COOPERATION WITH YUGOSLAVIA -- A Greek-Yugoslav cooperation protocol was signed at the Foreign Ministry today following the conclusion of the work of the 11th mixed Greek-Yugoslav interministerial committee for economic, scientific and technical cooperation The protocol was signed by minister of international economic relations [title as heard] Smole, on the Yugoslav side, and by Deputy Coordination Minister Ioannis Pottakis on the Greek side . [Text] [Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 2000 GMT 19 Jun 82 NC]

PLO MEMBERS SAID TO TAKE REFUGE IN BEIRUT EMBASSY

NC191552 Istanbul HURRIYET in Turkish 16 Jun 82 p 15

[Text] According to information obtained by HURRIYET'S Ankara bureau, contact has been reestablished with our embassy in Beirut after a 40-hour disruption caused by Israel's invasion of Lebanon and the encirclement of Beirut. Meanwhile, according to reports, a considerable number of PLO members have taken refuge in our embassy. However, the circles concerned have neither confirmed nor denied these reports.

Foreign Ministry Spokesman Nazmi Akiman gave this answer to a question regarding the possibility of a change in the balance of power in the Middle East following the Israeli invasion of Lebanon: "Turkey, which is practically in a circle of fire, is watching the developments very carefully. Turkey must be vigilant. We could not get in touch with our Beirut embassy for 40 hours because power was cut. We reestablished contact through the mediation of the Red Cross in Geneva. Last night, the wireless became operative again and we resumed contact with our ambassador. The messages we received today indicate that the morale of both our ambassador and diplomats is high." It has been learned from officials concerned that following the entry of the Israeli forces into one sector of Beirut, some members of the PLO took refuge in our embassy, whose windows were broken. However, the indentity of those who have taken refuge has not yet been determined. Foreign Ministry officials have not yet issued any statement on this subject.

COMMANDOS SET FIRE TO PANAMERICAN AIRLINE OFFICE

NC181751 Paris AFP in English 1741 GMT 18 Jun 82

[Text] Ankara, Jun 18 (AFP) -- A commando set fire to the Panamerican Airlines office here last night in protest against Israel's invasion of Lebanon, reliable sources said today.

There were no casualties. The two men and two women who caused extensive damage to the airline office in downtown Ankara were not identified.

They forced the night watchman at gunpoint to open the doors, set the office on fire and drove off unhampered in a Mercedes car, they said.

PA telephone switchboard, telexes and electronic equipment were completely destroyed by the time firemen arrived on the scene.

GREECE'S PROPOSAL FOR SHORT MORATORIUM REJECTED

NC191522 Istanbul TERCUMAN in Turkish 16 Jun 82 p 3

[Text] Ankara (TERCUMAN) -- It has been learned that Turkey has rejected Greece's proposal for a short moratorium before the resumption of talks between the two states.

According to Ankara, a moratorium in the Aegean would mean the legalization of Greece's 10-mile extension of its airspace. It has been stated that it is out of the question for Turkey to accept the extension of Greek airspace to 10 miles, that is, beyond its territorial waters.

On the other hand, it has been disclosed that Prime Ministers Papandreou and Ulusu had a short conversation during a cocktail party.

In response to a question regarding statements made by Papandreou in the speeches he delivered following his return to Athens to the effect that Prime Minister Ulusu has pledged that Turkey will not engage in any provocations, Foreign Ministry spokesman Ambassador Akiman said: "No detailed talks were held with Prime Minister Papandreou in Bonn. The only point on which the two sides agreed was to stress the desire for the improvement of relations between the two countires. The first step should be the avoidance of speeches that are likely to be misleading and unrealistic.

"Undoubtedly, it is out of the question for Turkey to abandon its views and attitudes. As we understand it, the two sides must at this stage act in such a manner that will be conducive to the improvement of the atmopshere and must explore ways and means of reviving talks."

OZAL NOTES RESULTS OF PARIS OECD TALKS

TA181648 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1400 GMT 18 Jun 82

[MEDITERRANEAN NEWS AGENCY correspondent Haluk Taslikliogiu reports from Paris on the second OECD working group meeting; 18 June -- recorded]

[Text] The special urgent aid program for Turkey started as a political initiative by the United States, Britain, the FRG and France at the Guadeloupe summit held some 4 years ago and continued under OECD corrdination in a bid to solve the bottleneck in the Turkish economy has come to an end. Economic and financial aid to Turkey within the framework of this program will be extended for the last time this year. As of next year, these activities will be carried out within the framework of the OECD consortium in the usual manner, as had been the case previously.

The sides reached a unity of views at the second working group meeting held in Paris with the aim of researching and assessing OECD aid to Turkey. Minister of State and Deputy Prime Minister Turgut Ozal, who arrived in France after concluding his contacts in Libya; the delegation he is heading; OECD Secretary General Emil van Lennep; the representatives of the organization's member countries; and officials from the European Investment Bank, the World Bank and the IMF participated in the meeting, which was held at the OECD headquarters.

Speaking to journalists after the meeting, which lasted for about 3 hours, Ozal said that the OECD urgent aid program to Turkey will end this year. Ozal added that the fact that this program is ending this year meant that it gradually lost its urgency and significance. According to information given by Ozal, a global pledge meeting to be attended by all the OECD member countries will not be held this year. However, it has been decided that all the countries which wish to make an economic and a financial contribution to Turkey for the last time within the framework of the special aid program will inform the OECD secretary general by the end of July of the amount to be extended to Turkey.

Meanwhile, the representatives of the countries who spoke at the second working group meeting, in which the latest situation in the Turkish economy was reviewed, once more praised the success of the economic stabili· program implemented in Turkey.

Returns From Paris

TA192043 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 2000 GMT 19 Jun 82

